THE WORKS OF VILLIAM SHAKS.
The text of the present Edition of Shakspere's Works is mainly that of Delius. Wherever a variant reading is adopted, some good and recognised Shaksperean Critic has been followed. In no case is a new rendering of the text proposed: nor has it been thought necessary to distract the reader's attention by notes or comments. The Glossary, with which is incorporated an index of names, subjects, and first lines (of the Songs and Sonnets), is mainly an abridgment of the Index to Shakspere's Works by Miss Evangeline O'Connor.

THE TEMPEST.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

ALONSO, King of Naples.
SEBASTIAN, his Brother.
PROSPERO, the right Duke of Milan.
ANTONIO, his Brother, the usurping Duke of Milan.
Ferdinand, Son to the King of Naples.
GONZALO, an honest old Counsellor.
ADRIAN,
FRANCISCO, Lords.
CALIBAN, a savage and deformed Slave.
TRINCULO, a Jester.

SCENE.—The Sea, with a Ship; afterwards an Island.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—On a Ship at Sea. A tempestuous noise of Thunder and Lightning heard.

Enter a Ship-master and a Boatswain, severally.

Master. Boatswain!

Boats. Here, master; what cheer?

Mast. Good, speak to the mariners: fall to't, yarely, or we run ourselves aground: bestir, bestir.

Exit.

Enter Mariner.

Boats. Heigh, my hearts! cheerly, cheerly, my hearts! yare, yare. Take in the topsail; tend to the master's whistle. Blow, till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Ferdinand, Gonzalo, and Others.

Alon. Good boatswain, have care. Where's the master? Play the men.

Boats. I pray now, keep below.

Ant. Where is the master, boson?

Boats. Do you not hear him? You mar our labour; keep your cabins; you do assist the storm.

Gon. Nay, good, be patient.

Boats. When the sea is. Hence! What care these roarers for the name of king? To cabin: silence! trouble us not.

Gon. Good, yet remember whom thou hast abroad.

Boats. None that I more love than myself. You are a counsellor; if you can command these elements to silence, and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more; use your authority: if you cannot, give thanks you have lived so long, and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap. Cheerly, good hearts! Out of our way, I say.

Exit.

Gon. I have great comfort from this fellow: methinks he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows. Stand fast, good fate, to his hanging! make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage! If he be not born to be hanged, our case is miserable.

Exeunt.

Re-enter Boatswain.

Boats. Down with the topmast! yare! lower, lower! Bring her to try with main-course.

A cry within.

A plague upon this howling! they are louder than the weather, or our office.

Re-enter Sebastian, Antonio, and Gonzalo.

Yet again! what do you here? Shall we give o'er, and drown? Have you a mind to sink?

Seb. A pox o' your throat, you bawling, blasphemous, incharitable dog!

Boats. Work you, then.

Ant. Hang, cur, hang! you whoreson, insolent noisemaker, we are less afraid to be drowned than thou art.

Gon. I'll warrant him for drowning, though the ship were no stronger than a nutshell, and as leaky as an unstanched wench.

Boats. Lay her a-hold, a-hold! Set her two courses off to sea again; lay her off.

Enter Mariners, wet.

Mar. All lost! to prayers, to prayers! all lost!

Exeunt.

Boats. What! must our mouths be cold?

Gon. The king and prince at prayers! let's assist them,
For our case is as theirs.

Skb. I am out of patience.

Ant. We are merely cheated of our lives by drunkards.
This wide-chapp'd rascal,—would thou might'st lie drowning

The washing of ten tides!

Gon. He'll be hang'd yet,
Though every drop of water swear against it,
And gape at wid'st to glut him.

A confused noise within. Mercy on us!—We split,
Scene II.—The Island: before the cell of Prospero.

Enter Prospero and Miranda.

Pros. If by your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them.
The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch,
   But that the sea, mounting to the welkin’s cheek,
Dashes the fire out. O! I have suffer’d
With those that I saw suffer: a brave vessel,
   Who had no doubt some noble creatures in her,
Dash’d all to pieces. O! the cry did knock Against my very heart. Poor souls, they perish’d.
Had I been any god of power, I would Have sink’d the sea within the earth or ere
It should the good ship so have swallow’d and
The fraughting souls within her.

Pros. Be collected:
   No more amazement. Tell your piteous heart
There’s no harm done.

Mir. O! woe the day.

Pros. No harm.
I have done nothing but in care of thee,
Of thee, my dear one! thee, my daughter! who
   Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing
Of whence I am; nor that I am more better
Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater father.

Pros. More to know

Mir. Did never meddle with my thoughts.

Pros. ’Tis time
I should inform thee further. Lend thy hand
And pluck my magic garment from me. So:
Lays down his mantle.

Lie there, my art. Wipe thou thine eyes; have comfort
The direful spectacle of the wreck, which touch’d
   The very virtue of compassion in thee,
I have with such provision in mine art
So safely order’d, that there is no soul—
No, not so much perdition as an hair
Betid to any creature in the vessel
Which thou heardst cry, which thou saw’st sink.
Sit down;
For thou must now know further.

Pros. You have often
   Begun to tell me what I am, but stopp’d,
And left me to a bootless inquisition,
   Concluding, ‘Stay; not yet.’

Pros. The hour’s now come,
The very minute bids thee ope thine ear;
Obey and be attentive. Canst thou remember
A time before we came unto this cell?
I do not think thou canst, for then thou wast not
Out three years old.

Pros. Certainly, sir, I can.

Pros. By what? by any other house or person?
   Of any thing the image tell me that
Hath kept with thy remembrance.

Mir. ‘Tis far off;
And rather like a dream than an assurance

That my remembrance warrants. Had I not Four or five women once that tended me?

Pros. Thou hadst, and more, Miranda. But how is it
That this lives in thy mind? What seest thou else
In the dark backward and abysm of time?

If thou remember’st aught ere thou cam’st here
How thou cam’st here, thou may’st.

Mir. But that I do not

Pros. Twelve year since, Miranda, twelve year since,
Thy father was the Duke of Milan and
A prince of power.

Mir. Sir, are not you my father?

Pros. Thy mother was a piece of virtue, and
She said thou wast my daughter; and thy father
   Was Duke of Milan, and his only heir
A princess; no worse issued.

Mir. What foul play had we that we came from thence?
Or blessed was’t we did?

Pros. Both, both, my girl: 6
By foul play, as thou say’st, were we heav’d thence;
But blessedly holp hither.

Mir. O! my heart bleeds
To think o’ the teen that I have turn’d you to,
   Which is from my remembrance. Please you, further.

Pros. My brother and thy uncle, call’d Antonio,—
I pray thee, mark me,—that a brother should
   Be so perfidious! he whom next thyself
Of all the world I lov’d, and to him put
   The management of my state; as at that time
   Through all the signories it was the first,
And Prospero the prime duke; being so reputed
In dignity, and for the liberal arts.
Without a parallel: those being all my study,
The government I cast upon my brother,
And to my state grew stranger, being transported
And rapt in secret studies. Thy false uncle—
Dost thou attend me?

Mir. Sir, most heedfully.

Pros. Being once perfected how to grant suits,
   How to deny them, who to advance, and who
To trash for over-topping, new created
The creatures that were mine, I say, or chang’d them,
Or else new form’d them: having both the key
   Of officer and office, set all hearts i’ the state
To what tune pleas’d his ear; that now he was
   The ivy which had hid my princely trunk,
And suck’d my verdure out on’t. Thou attend’st not.

Mir. O good sir! I do.

Pros. I pray thee, mark me.
I thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
   To closeness and the bettering of my mind
   With that which, but by being so retir’d,
   O’er-priz’d all popular rate, in my false brother
   Awak’d an evil nature: and my trust,
   Like a good parent, did beget of him
   A falsehood in its contrary as great
   As my trust was; which had indeed no limit,
A confidence sans bound. He being thus lorded,
   Not only with what my revenue yielded,
   But what my power might else exact, like one
Who having, unto truth, by telling of it,
   Made such a sinner of his memory,
To credit his own lie, he did believe against what should ensue.

M.ri. How came we ashore?

Pros. By Providence divine.

Some food we had and some fresh water that

A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,

Out of his charity, being then appointed

Master of this design, did give us; with

Rich garments, linens, stuffs and necessaries.

Which since have steaded much; so, of his gentleness,

Knowing I lov'd my books, he furnish'd me

From my own library with volumes that

I prize above my dukedom.

M.ri. Would I might

But ever see that man!

Pros. Now I arise.

Resumes his mantle.

Sit still, and hear the last of our sea-sorrow.

Here in this island we arriv'd; and here

Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit

Than other princess' can, that have more time

For vainer hours and tutors not so careful.

M.ri. Heavens thank you for't! And now, I pray you, sir,

For still 'tis beating in my mind, your reason

For raising this sea-storm?

Pros. Know thus far forth.

By accident most strange, bountiful Fortune,

Now my dear lady, hath mine enemies

Brought to this shore; and by my prescience

I find my zenith doth depend upon

A most auspicious star, whose influence

If now I count not but omit, my fortunes

Will ever after droop. Herecease more questions:

Thou art inclin'd to sleep; 'tis a good dulness,

And give it way: I know thou canst not choose.

MIRANDA sleeps.

Come away, servant, come! I am ready now.

Approach, my Ariel: come!

Enter Ariel.

Ari. All hail, great master! grave sir, hail!

I come

To answer thy best pleasure; be't to fly,

To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride

On the curl'd clouds: to thy strong bidding task

Ariel and all his quality.

Pros. Hast thou, spirit,

Perform'd to point the tempest that I bade thee?

Ari. To every article.

I boarded the king's ship; now on the beak,

Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin,

I flam'd amazement: sometimes I'd divide

And burn in many places; on the topmast,

The yards and bowsprit, would I flame distinctly,

Then meet and join. Jove's lightnings, the precursors

O' the dreadful thunder-claps, more momentary

And shouting roaring were not: the fire and cracks

Of sulphurous roaring the most mighty Neptune

Seem to besiege and make his bold waves tremble;

Yes, his dread trident shake.

Pros. My brave spirit!

Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil

Would not infect his reason?

Ari. Not a soul

But felt a fever of the mad and play'd

Some tricks of desperation. All but mariners

Plung'd in the foaming brine and quit the vessel,
Then all a-fire with me: the king's son, Ferdinand,
With hair up-staring, then like reeds, not hair,
Was the first man that leap'd; cried, 'Hell is empty,
And all the devils are here.'

Pros. Why, that's my spirit!

But was not this nigh shore?

Ari. Close by, my master.

Pros. But are they, Ariel, safe?

Ari. Not a hair perish'd:

On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before; and, as thou bad'st me
In troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the isle. 230
The king's son have I landed by himself,
Whom I left cooling of the air with sighs
In an odd angle of the isle and sitting,
His arms in this sad knot.

Pros. Of the king's ship

The mariners, say how thou hast dispos'd,
And all the rest o' the fleet.

Ari. Safely in harbour

Is the king's ship; in the deep nook, where once
Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still- vex'd Bermoothes; there she's hid:
The mariners all under batches stow'd;
Who, with a charm join'd to their suffer'd labour,
I have left asleep; and for the rest o' the fleet
Which I dispers'd, they all have met again
And are upon the Mediterranean flote,
Bound sadly home for Naples,

Supposing that they saw the king's ship wreck'd
And his great person perish.

Pros. Ariel, thy charge:

Exactly is perform'd; but there's more work.

What is the time o' the day?

Ari. Past the mid season.

Pros. At least two glasses. The time 'twixt six and now

Must by us both be spent most preciously.

Ari. Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pains,

Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd me.

Pros. How now? moody?

What is 't thou canst demand?

Ari. My liberty.

Pros. Before the time be out? no more!

Ari. I prithee,

Remember I have done thee worthy service;
Told thee no lies, made thee no mistakes, serv'd
Without or grudge or grumblings. Thou didst promise
To bate me a full year.

Pros. Dost thou forget

From what a torment I did free thee?

Ari. No.

Pros. Thou dost; and think'st it much to tread the oze
Of the salt deep,
To run upon the sharp wind of the north,
To do me business in the veins o' th' earth
When it is bak'd with frost.

Ari. I do not, sir.

Pros. Thou liest, malignant thing! Hast thou forgot
The foul witch Sycorax, who with age and envy
Was grown into a hoop? hast thou forgot her?

Ari. No, sir.

Pros. Thou hast. Where was she born?

speak; tell me.
SCENE II.

THE TEMPEST.

Thou earth, thou! speak.

Cal. Within. There's wood enough within.

Pros. Come forth, I say! there's other business for thee:

Come, thou tortoise! when?

Re-enter Ariel, like a water-nymph.

Fine apparition! My quaint Ariel,
Hark in thine ear.

Ari. My lord, it shall be done. Exit.

Pros. Thou poisonous slave, got by the devil himself
Upon thy wicked dam, come forth!

Enter Caliban.

Cal. As wicked dew as e'er my mother brush'd
With raven's feather from wholsome fen
Drop on you both! a south-west blow on ye
And blister you all o'er!

Pros. For this, be sure, to-night thou shalt have cramps.

Side-stitches that shall pen thy breath up; urchins
Shall forth at vast of night that they may work
All exercise on thee; thou shalt be pinch'd
As thick as honeycomb, each pinch more stinging
Than bees that made them.

Cal. I must eat my dinner.

This island's mine, by Sycorax my mother,
Which thou tak'st from me. When thou cam'st first Thou strok'dst me and mad'st much of me;
would'st give me
Water with berries in it; and teach me how
To name the bigger light, and how the less,
That burn by day and night: and then I lov'd thee
And show'd thee all the qualities o' th' isle,
The fresh springs, brine-pits, barren place and fertile.
Curse be I that did so! All the charms
Of Sycorax, toads, beetles, bats, light on you! 340
Sor for I am all the subjects that you have,
Which first was mine own king: and here you sty me
In this hard rock, while you do keep from me
The rest o' the island.

Pros. Thou most lying slave,
Whom stripes may move, not kindness! I have us'd thee,
Filth as thou art, with human care; and lodg'd thee
In mine own cell, till thou didst seek to violate
The honour of my child.

Cal. O ho! O ho! would it had been done!
Thou didst prevent me; I had peopled else 350
This isle with Calibans.

Pros. Abhorred slave,
Which any print of goodwill wilt not take,
Being capable of all ill! I pitied thee,
Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee
Each hour
One thing or other: when thou didst not, savage,
Know thine own meaning, but would'st gabble like
A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes
With words that made them known; but thy vile race,
Though thou didst learn, had that in't which good natures
Could not abide to be with: therefore wast thou
Deservedly confin'd into this rock,

Who hadst deserv'd more than a prison.

Cal. You taught me language; and my profit on 't
Is, I know how to curse. The red plague rid you
For learning me your language!

Pros. Hag-seed, hence! Fetch us in fuel; and be quick, thou'rt best,
To answer other business. Shrug'st thou, malice? If thou neglect'st, or dost unwillingly
What I command, I'll rack thee with old cramps,
'll all thy bones with aches, make thee roar, 370
That beast shall tremble at thy din.

Cal. No, pray thee.
Aside. I must obey: his art is of such power,
It would control my dam's god, Setebos,
And make a vassal of him.

Pros. So, slave; hence! Exit CALIBAN.

Re-enter Ariel, invisible, playing and singing;

Ferdinand following him.

Ari. Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands:
Curt'ied when you have and kiss'd,—
The wild waves twist,—
Foot it fealty here and there;
And, sweet sprites, the burthen bear. 380
Hark! Hark!

Burthen. Bow, wow.
The watch-dogs bark:

Burthen. Bow, wow.

Hark, hark! I hear
The strain of strutting chantecler
Cry, Cock-a-diddle-dow.

Fer. Where should this music be? 'tis the air or the earth?
It sounds no more; and sure, it waits upon
Some god o' the island. Sitting on a bank, 390
Weeping again the king my father's wreck,
This music crept by me upon the waters,
Allaying both their fury and my passion
With its sweet air: thence I have follow'd it,
Or it hath drawn me rather: but 'tis gone.

No, it begins again.

Ari. Full fathom five thy father lies;
Of his bones are coral made;
Those are pearls that were his eyes:
Nothing of him that doth fade 400
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange.
Sea-nymphs hourly ring his knell:
Burthen. Ding-dong.

Hark! now I hear them,—ding-dong, bell.

Fer. The ditty does remember my drown'd father.
This is no mortal business, nor no sound
That the earth owes. I hear it now above me.

Pros. The fringed curtains of thine eye advance
And say what thou seest yond.

Miv. What is 't? a spirit?
Lord, how it looks about! Believe me, sir, 411
It carries a brave form: but 'tis a spirit.

Pros. No, wench: it eats and sleeps and hath such senses
As we have, such. This gallant which thou seest
Was in the wreck; and but he's something stain'd
With grief that 's beauty's canker, thou might'st
call him
A goodly person. He hath lost his fellows
THE TEMPEST.

[ACT II]

And strays about to find them.

Mir. I might call him

A thing divine, for nothing natural
I ever saw so noble.

Pros. Aside. It goes on, I see, 429
As my soul prompts it. Spirit, fine spirit! I'll free thee
Within two days for this.

Fer. Most sure, the goddess
On whom these airs attend! Vouchsafe my prayer
May know if you remain upon this island,
And that you will some good instruction give
How I may bear me here: my prime request,
Which I do last pronounce, is, O you wonder!
If you be maid or no?

Mir. No wonder, sir;
But certainly a maid.

Fer. My language! heavens!
I am the best of them that speak this speech, 430
Were I but where 'tis spoken.

Pros. How! the best?
What wert thou, if the King of Naples heard thee?
Fer. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders
To hear thee speak of Naples. He does hear me;
And that he does I weep: myself am Naples,
Who with mine eyes, ne'er since at ebb, beheld
The king my father wreck'd.

Mir. Alack! for mercy.

Fer. Yes, faith, and all his lords; the Duke of Milan
And his brave son being twain.

Pros. Aside. The Duke of Milan
And his more braver daughter could control thee,
If now 'were fit to do.' At the first sight 431
They have chang'd eyes: delicate Ariel,
I'll set thee free for this! To FERDINAND.
A word, good sir;
I fear you have done yourself some wrong: a word.

Mir. Why speaks my father so ungently? This
Is the third man that e'er I saw; the first
That e'er I sigh'd for: pity move my father
To be inclin'd my way!

Fer. O! if a virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, I'll make you
The Queen of Naples.

Pros. Aside. They are both in either's powers: but this swift business
I must uneasy make, lest light golden
Make the prize light. To FERDINAND. One word more: I charge thee
That thou attend me. Thou dost here usurp
The name thou ow'st not; and hast put thyself
Upon this island as a spy, to win it
From me, the lord on t.'

Fer. No, as I am a man.

Mir. There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple:
If the ill spirit have so fair a house,
Good things will strive to dwell with 't.

Pros. Follow me.
Speak not for you; he's a traitor. Come. 433
I'll manacle thy neck and feet together;
Sea-water shalt thou drink; thy food shall be
The fresh-brook muscles, wither'd roots and husks
Wherein the acorn cradled. Follow.

Fer. No;

I will resist such entertainment till
Mine enemy has more power.

He draws, and is charmed from moving.

Mir. O dear father
Make not too rash a trial of him, for He's gentle and not fearful.

Pros. What! I say:
My foot my tutor? Put thy sword up, traitor; 47
Who mak'st a show but dar'st not strike, thy conscience
Is so possess'd with guilt: come from thy ward
For I can here disarm thee with this stick
And make thy weapon drop.

Mir. Beseech you, father.
Pros. Hence! hang not on my garments.

Mir. Sir, have pity
I'll be his surety.

Pros. Silence! one word more Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee. What
An advocate for an impostor! hush!
Thou think'st there is no more such shapes as he Having seen but him and Caliban: foolish wench
To that most of men this is a Caliban
And they to him are angels.

Mir. My affections
Are then most humble: I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.

Pros. To FERDINAND. Come on; obey:
Thy nerves are in their infancy again
And have no vigour in them.

Fer. So they are:
My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up.
My father's loss, the weakness which I feel,
The wreck of all my friends, nor this man's threats
To whom I am subdued, but are light to me,
Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this maid: all corners else o' the earth
Let liberty make use of; space enough
Have I in such a prison.

Pros. It works. To FERDINAND. Come of Thou hast done well, fine Ariel! To FERDINAND Follow me.

To ARIEL. Hark what thou else shalt do me.

Mir. Be of comfort
My father's of a better nature, sir,
Than he appears by speech: this is unwonted
Which now came from him.

Pros. Thou shalt be as friends
As mountain winds; but then exactly do
All points of my command.

Ari. To the syllable.

Excun

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Another Part of the Island.

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, GONZALO,
ADRIAN, FRANCISCO, and Others.

Gou. Beseech you, sir, be merry: you have cause
So have we all, of joy; for our escape
Is much beyond our loss. Our hint of woe
Is common: every day some sailor's wife,
The master of some merchant and the merchant
Have just our theme of woe; but for the miracle
I mean our preservation, few in millions
Can speak like us: then wisely, good sir, weig
Our sorrow with our comfort.

Alon. Prithee, peace

Seb. He receives comfort like cold porridge.
THE TEMPEST.

Scene I.

Ant. The visitor will not give him o'er so.

Seb. Look! he's winding up the watch of his wit: by and by it will strike.

Gon. When every grief is entertain'd that's offered, comes to the entertainer—

Seb. A dollar.

Gon. Dolour comes to him, indeed: you have spoken truer than you purposed.

Seb. You have taken it wiser than I meant you should.

Gon. Therefore, my lord,—

Ant. He, what a spendthrift is he of his tongue!

Alon. I prithee, spare.

Seb. Well, I have done. But yet—

Seb. He will be talking.

Ant. Which, of he or Adrian, for a good wager, first begins to crow?

Seb. The old cock.

Ant. The cockerel.

Seb. Done. The wager?

Ant. A laughter.

Seb. A match!

Adv. Though this island seem to be desert—

Seb. Ha, ha, ha! So, you're paid.

Adv. Uninhabitable and almost inaccessible—

Seb. Yet—

Adv. Yet—

Ant. He could not miss it.

Adv. It must needs be of subtle, tender and delicate temperance.

Ant. Temperance was a delicate wench.

Seb. Ay, and a subtle; as he most learnedly delivered.

Adv. The air breathes upon us here most sweetly.

Seb. As if it had lungs, and rotten ones.

Ant. Or as 'twere perfumed by a fen.

Gon. Here is everything advantageous to life.

Ant. True! save means to live.

Seb. Of that there's none, or little.

Gon. How lush and lusty the grass looks! how green!

Ant. The ground indeed is tawny.

Seb. With an eye of green in't.

Ant. He misses not much.

Seb. No; he doth but mistake the truth totally.

Gon. But the rarity of it, is which is indeed almost beyond credit—

Seb. As many vouched rarities are.

Gon. That our garments, being, as they were, drenched in the sea, hold notwithstanding their freshness and glosses, being rather new-dyed than stained with salt water.

Ant. If but one of his pockets could speak, would it not say he lies?

Seb. Ay, or very falsely pocket up his report.

Gon. Methinks our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Afric, at the marriage of the king's fair daughter Claribel to the King of Tunis.

Seb. 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our return.

Adv. Tunis was never graced before with such a paragon to their queen.

Gon. Not since widow Dido's time.

Ant. Widow! a pox o' that! How came that widow in? Widow Dido!

Seb. What if he had said widower Aeneas too?

Gon. This Tunis, sir, was Carthage.

Adv. Carthage?

Gon. I assure you, Carthage.

Ant. His word is more than the miraculous harp.

Seb. He hath raised the wall and houses too.

Ant. What impossible matter will he make easy next?

Seb. I think he will carry this island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an apple.

Ant. And, sowing the kernels of it in the sea, bring forth more islands.

Gon. Ay.

Ant. Why, in good time.

Gon. Sir, we were talking that our garments seem now as fresh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now queen.

Ant. And the rarest that ever came there.

Seb. Bate, I beseech you, widow Dido.

Gon. Is not, sir, my doublet as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean, in a sort.

Ant. That sort was well fished for.

Gon. When I wore it at your daughter's marriage?

Alon. You cram these words into mine ears against the stomach of my sense. Would I had never married my daughter there! for, coming thence, my son is lost; and, in my rate, she too, who is so far from Italy remov'd I ne'er again shall see her. O thou mine heir of Naples and of Milan! what strange fish hath made his meal on thee?

Fran. Sir, he may live.

I saw him beat the surges under him, and ride upon their backs: he trod the water, whose emnity he flung aside, and breathed the surges most swoln that met him: his bold head 'bove the contentious waves he kept, and car'd Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke to the shore, that o'er his wave-worn basis bow'd, as stooping to relieve him. I do not doubt he came alive to land.

Alon. No, no; he's gone.

Seb. Sir, you may thank yourself for this great loss, that would not bless our Europe with your daughter.

But rather lose her to an African; where she at least is banish'd from your eye, who hath cause to wet the grief on.

Alon. Prithee, peace.

Seb. You were kneel'd to and import'n'd otherwise by all of us; and the fair soul herself weigh'd, between loathness and obedience, at which end o' the beam she'd bow. We have lost your son, I fear, for ever; Milan and Naples have more widows in them of this business' making than we bring men to comfort them: the fault's your own.

Alon. So is the dearest of the loss.

Gon. My Lord Sebastian,

The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness
And time to speak it in; you rub the sore,
When you should bring the plaster.
Sb. Very well.
Ant. And most chirurgeonely.
Gon. It is foul weather in us all, good sir,
When you are cloudy.
Sb. Foul weather?
Ant. Very foul.
Gon. Had I plantation of this isle, my lord,—
Ant. He’d sow’t with nettle-seed.
Sb. Or docks, or mallows.
Ant. And were the king on’t, what would I do?
Sb. ’Scape being drunk for want of wine.
Gon. I the commonwealth I would by con-

traries

Execute all things; for no kind of traffic
Would I admit; no name of magistrate;
Letters should not be known; riches, poverty,
And use of service, none; contract, succession,
Bourn, bound of land, tillth, vineyard, none;
No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil;
No occupation, all men idle, all;
And women too, but innocent and pure;
And no sovereignty;—
Sb. Yet he would be king on’t.
Ant. The latter end of his commonwealth forgets the beginning.
Gon. All things in common nature should produce
Without sweat or endeavour: treason, felony,
Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine,
Would I not have; but nature should bring forth,
Of its own kind, all foison, all abundance,
To feed my innocent people.
Sb. No marrying ’mong his subjects?
Ant. None, man; all idle; whores and knaves.
Gon. I would with such perfection govern, sir,
To excel the golden age.
Sb. Save his majesty!
Ant. Long live Gonzalo!
Gon. And,—do you mark me, sir?—
Alon. Prithiee, no more: thou dost talk nothing to me.
Gon. I do well believe your highness; and did it to minister occasion to these gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble lungs that they always use to laugh at nothing.
Ant. ’Twas you we laughed at.
Gon. Who in this kind of merry fooling am nothing to you: so you may continue and laugh at nothing still.
Ant. What a blow was there given!
Sb. An it had not fallen flat-long.
Gon. You are gentlemen of brave mettle; you would lift the moon out of hersphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without changing.

Enter Ariel, invisible; solemn music playing.
Sb. We would so, and then go a-bat-fowling.
Ant. Nay, good my lord, be not angry.
Gon. No, I warrant you; I will not adventure your discretion so weakly. Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy?
Ant. Go sleep, and hear us.

All sleep but Alonso, Sebastian, and Antonio.
Alon. What! all so soon asleep? I wish mine eyes
Would, with themselves, shut up my thoughts:
I find

They are inclin’d to do so.
Sb. Please you, sir,
Do not omit the heavy offer of it:
It seldom visits sorrow; when it doth
It is a comforter.
Ant. We two, my lord,
Will guard your person while you take your rest, and watch your safety.
Alon. Thank you. Wondrous heavy.
A lion. Sleep. Exit Ariel.
Sb. What a strange drowsiness possesses them!
Ant. It is the quality o’ the climate.
Sb. Why

Doth it not then our eyelids sink? I find not Myself dispos’d to sleep.
Ant. Nor I: my spirits are nimble.
They fell together all, as by consent;
They dropp’d, as by a thunder-stroke. What might,
Worthy Sebastian—O! what might—no more:—
And yet methinks I see it in thy face
What thou shouldst be. The occasion speaks thee, and
My strong imagination sees a crown
Dropping upon thy head.
Sb. What! art thou waking?
Ant. Do you not hear me speak?
Sb. I do; and surely
It is a sleepy language, and thou speakest
Out of thy sleep. What is it thou didst say?
This is a strange repose, to be asleep
With eyes wide open; standing, speaking, moving,
And yet so fast asleep.
Ant. Noble Sebastian,
Thou let’st thy fortune sleep,—die rather; wink’st
Whilest thou art waking.
Sb. Thou dost strenue distinctly:
There’s meaning in thy snores.
Ant. I am more serious than my custom: you Must be so too, if heed me; which to do
Trebles thee o’er.
Sb. Well, I am standing water.
Ant. I’ll teach you how to flow.
Sb. Do so: to ebb
Hereditary sloth instructs me.
Ant. O!
If you but know how you the purpose cherish
Whilest you think it! how, in stirring it,
You more invest it! Ebbling men, indeed,
Most often do so near the bottom run
By their own fear or sloth.
Sb. Prithiee, say on.
The setting of thine eye and cheek proclaim
A matter from thee, and a birth indeed
Which thros thee much to yield.
Ant. Thus, sir:
Although this lord of weak remembrance, this,
Who shall be of as little memory
When he is earth’d, hath herealmost persuaded,—
For he’s a spirit of persuasion, only
Professes to persuade,—the king his son’s alive,
’Tis as impossible that he’s undrown’d
As he that sleeps here swims.
Sb. I have no hope
That he’s undrown’d.
Ant. O! out of that ‘no hope’
What great hope have you; no hope that way is Another way so high a hope that even Ambition cannot pierce a wink beyond, ut doubts discovery there. Will you grant with me
hat Ferdinand is drown'd?

Sed. He's gone.

Ant. Then tell me
Who's the next heir of Naples?

Sed. Claribel.

Ant. She that is Queen of Tunis; she that dwells en leagues beyond man's life; she that from Naples
an have no note, unless the sun were post—
h' man i' the moon's too slow—till new-born chins be rough and razorable; she, from whom Veal were sea-swallow'd though somecastagain, and by that destiny to perform an act whereof what's past is prologue, what to come a yours and my discharge.

Sed. What stuff is this! How say you?
is true my brother's daughter's Queen of Tunis;
She is he'ir of Naples; 'twixt which regions
here is some space.

Ant. A space whose every cubit comes so cry out, 'How shall that Claribel
I pleasure us back to Naples? Keep in Tunis, and let Sebastian wake!'—Say this were death that now hath seiz'd them; why, they were no worse than now they are. There be that can rule Naples as well as he that sleeps; lords that can prate as amply and unnecessarily as this Gonzalo; I myself could make a rough as of deep chat. O! that you bore his mind that I do, what a sleep were this or your advancement. Do you understand me?

Sed. Methinks I do.

Ant. And how does your content ender your own good fortune?

Sed. I remember
Sed. I did supplant your brother Prospero.

Ant. True: had look how well my garments sit upon me;
uch farther than before. My brother's servants were then my fellows, now they are my men.

Sed. But, for your conscience—

Ant. Ay, sir; where lies that? if it were a kibe,
I would put me to my slipper; but I feel not this deity in my bosom: twenty consciences, that stand 'twixt me and Milan, candied be they and melt ere they molest! Here lies your brother, so better than the earth he lies upon,
he were that which now he's like, that's dead;
Whom I, with this obdient steel, three inches of it, can lay to bed for ever; whilsts you, doing thus,
to the perpetual winks for eye might put this ancient morsel, this Sir Prudence, who should not impute our course: for all the rest, they'll take suggestion as a cat laps milk;

They'll tell the clock to any business that we say befts the hour.

Sed. Thy case, dear friend,
Shall be my precedent: as thou gott'st Milan,
I'll come by Naples. Draw thy sword:
one stroke
shall free thee from the tribute which thou pay'st;
And I the king shall love thee.

Ant. Draw together;
And when I rear my hand, do you the like,
To fall it on Gonzalo.

Sed. O! but one word.

They talk apart.

Music. Re-enter Ariel, invisible.

Ari. My master through his art foresees the danger
That you, his friend, are in; and sends me forth,
For else his project dies, to keep them living.

Sings in Gonzalo's ear.

While you here do mourning lie,
Open-eyed Conspiracy
His time doth take.
If of life you keep a care,
Shake off slumber and beware:
Awake! awake!

Ant. Then let us both be sudden.

Gon. Now, good angels
Preserve the king.

They wake.

Alon. Why, how now, ho! awake! Why are you drawn?

Wherefore this ghastly looking?

Gon. What's the matter?

Sed. Whilest we stood here securing your repose,
Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellowing
Like bulls, or rather lions: did it not wake you?
It struck mine ear most terribly.

Alon. I heard nothing.
Ant. O! 'twas a din to fright a monster's ear,
To make an earthquake: sure, it was the roar
Of a whole herd of lions.

Alon. Heard you this, Gonzalo?
Gon. Upon mine honour, sir, I heard a hummimg,
And that a strange one too, which did awake me.
I shak'd you, sir, and cried; as mine eyes open'd,
I saw their weapons drawn. There was a noise,
That's verity: 'tis best we stand upon our guard,
Or that we quit this place. Let's draw our weapons.

Alon. Lead off this ground, and let's make further search
For my poor son.

Gon. Heavens keep him from these beasts!
For he is, sure, i't the island.

Alon. Lead away.

Exeunt.

Ari. Prospero my lord shall know what I have done:

So, king, go safely on to seek thy son.

Exit.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Island.

Enter Caliban, with a burden of wood.

A noise of thunder heard.

Cal. All the infections that the sun sucks up
From bags, fans, flats, on Prospero fall and make him
By inch-meal a disease! His spirits hear me,
And yet I must needs curse; but they'll nor pinch,
Fright me with urchin-shows, pitch me! the mire,
Nor lead me, like a firebrand, in the dark
Out of my way, unless he bid 'em; but
For every trifle that they set upon me:
Sometimes like apes, that now and chatter at me
And after bite me, then like hedge-hogs which Lie tumbling in my bare-foot way and mount
Their pricks at my foot-fall; sometime am I
All wound with adders, who with cloven tongues
Do hiss me into madness. Lo, now! lo!
Here comes a spirit of his, and to torment me
For bringing wood in slowly. I'll fall flat;
Perchance he will not mind me.

Enter Trinculo.

Trin. Here's neither bush nor shrub to bear off any weather at all, and another storm brewing; I hear it sing; the wind; yond same black cloud, yond huge one, looks like a foul bombad that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder as it did before, I know not where to hide my head; yond same cloud cannot choose but fall by paifulls. What have we here? a man or a fish?
Dead or alive? A fish: he smails like a fish; a very ancient and fish-like smell; a kind of not of the newest Poor-John. A strange fish! Were I in England now, as once I was, and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver: there would this monster make a man: any strange beast there makes a man. When they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Legged like a man! and his fins like arms! Warm o' my troth! I do now let loose my opinion, hold it no longer; this is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunder-bolt.

Thunder.

Alas! the storm is come again: my best way is to creep under his gaberdine; there is no other shelter hereabout: misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows. I will here shroud till the drags of the storm be past.

Enter STEPHANO, singing: a bottle in his hand.
I shall no more to sea, to sea.
Here shall I die ashore—

This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a man's funeral. Well, here's my comfort.

Drinks.

The master, the swabber, the boatswain and I,
The grooms and his mate

Lov'd Mall, Meg and Marian and Margery,
But none of us car'd for Kate;
For she had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a sailor, 'Gang hang!'

She lov'd not the savour of tar nor of pitch,
Yet a sailor might scratch her where'er she did itch;
Then to sea, boys, and let her go hang.

This is a scurvy tune too; but here's my comfort.

Drinks.

Cal. Do not torment me: O!

Ste. What's the matter? Have we devils here?

Do you put tricks upon us with savages and men of Ind? Ha! I have not 'scape drowning to be afraid now of your four legs; for it hath been said, As proper a man as ever went on four legs cannot make him give ground: and it shall be so again while Stephano breathes at nostrils!

Cal. The spirit torments me: O!

Ste. This is some monster of the isle with four legs, who hath got, as I take it, an ague. Where the devil should he learn our language? I will give him some relief, if it be but for that: if I can recover him and keep him tame and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neath's-leather

Cal. Do not torment me, prithee; I'll bring my wood home faster.

Ste. He's in his fit now and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle: if he have never drunk wine afore it will go near to remove his fit. If I can recover him and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him: he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

Cal. Thou dost me yet but little harm; the wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling: no
Prosper works upon thee.

Ste. Come on your ways; open your mouth;
here is that which will give language to you, as Open your mouth; this will shake your shakin;
I can tell you, and that soundly; you cannot tell who's your friend: open your chaps again

Trin. I should know that voice. It should be —but he is drowned, and these are devils. I defend me.

Ste. Four legs and two voices: a most delicate monster! His forward voice now is to speak well of his friend; his backward voice is to ut-fool speeches and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague.
Come: Amen! I will pour some in thy other mouth.

Trin. Stephano!

Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy!
mercy! This is a devil and no monster: I will leave him; I have no long spoon.

Trin. Stephano! if thou beest Stephano, touch me and speak to me, for I am Trinculo—be no afraid—th' good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth. I'll pul thee by the lesser legs: if any be Trinculo's legs these are they. Thou art very Trinculo indeed! How camest thou to be the siege of this moon-calf? Can he vent Trinculos?

Trin. I took him to be killed with a thunder stroke. But art thou not drowned, Stephano?
I hope now thou art not drowned. Is the storm overblown? I hid me under the dead moon calf's gaberdine for fear of the storm. And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano! two Neapolitans 'scape!

Ste. Prithee, do not turn me about: my stomach is not constant.

Cal. These be fine things an if they be no spires.

That's a brave god and bears celestial liquor:
I will kneel to him.

Ste. How didst thou 'scape? How camest thou hither? Swoe by this bottle how thou camest hither. I escaped upon a butt of sack which the sailors heaved overboard, by this bottle which I made of the bark of a tree with mine own hands since I was cast a-shore.

Cal. I'll swear upon that bottle to be thy true subject, for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here; swear then how thou escapedst.

Trin. Swam a-shore, man, like a duck. I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.

Ste. Here; kiss the book. Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

Trin. O Stephano! hast any more of this? 13

Ste. The whole butt, man: my cellar is in a rock by the sea-side where my wine is hid. How now, moon-calf? how does thine ague?

Cal. Hast thou not dropped from heaven?

Ste. Out o' the moon, I do assure thee: I was the man in the moon, when time was.

Cal. I have seen thee in her, and I do adore thee, my mistress showed me thee and thy dog and thy bush.

Ste. Come, swear to that; kiss the book, and will furnish it anon with new contents: swear.

Trin. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster! I afraid of him! a very weak monster!
THE TEMPEST.

SCENE II.—The moon a most poor credulous monster! Well drawn, monster, in good sooth!

Col. I'll show thee every fertile inch o' the island, and I will kiss thy foot. I prithee, be thy god.

Trin. By this light, a most perfidious and drunken monster! When his god's asleep, he'll rob his bottle.

Col. I'll kiss thy foot: I'll swear myself thy subject.

Ste. Come on then; down, and swear.

Trin. I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster. A most scurvy monster! I could find in my heart to beat him,—

Ste. Come, kiss.

Trin. —but that the poor monster's in drink. An abominable monster!

Col. I'll show thee the best springs; I'll pluck thee berries; I'll fish for thee and get thee wood enough.

A plague upon the tyrant that I serve! I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee, Thou wondrous man.

Trin. A most ridiculous monster, to make a wonder of a poor drunkard!

Col. I prithee, let me bring thee where crabs grow: And I with my long nails will dig thee pig-nuts; Show thee a jay's nest and instruct thee how to pluck the nimble marmoset; I'll bring thee To clustering filberts, and sometimes I'll get thee Young scampions from the rock. Wilt thou go with me?

Ste. I prithee now, lead the way without any more talking. Trinculo, the king and all our company else being drowned, we will inherit here. Here; bear my bottle. Fellow Trinculo, we'll fill him by and by again.

Cal. Sings drunkenly.

Farewell, master; farewell, farewell.

Trin. A howling monster; a drunken monster!

Cal. No more dams I'll make for fish; Nor fetch in fishing At requiring; Nor scrape trencher, nor wash dish; 'Ban, 'Ban, Ca Caliban Has a new master; get a new freedom.

Freedoom, hey-day! hey-day, freedoom! freedoom! hey-day, freedoom! Se. O brave monster! lead the way. Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Before Prospero's cell.

Enter FERDINAND, bearing a log.

Fer. There be some sports are painful, and their labour Delight in them sets off: some kinds of baseness are nobly underwent, and most poor matters Point to rich ends. This my mean task Would be as heavy to me as odious, but The mistress which I serve quickens what's dead And makes my labours pleasures; O, she is Ten times more gentle than her father's crabbed, And he's compos'd of harshness. I must remove Some thousands of these logs and pile them up Upon a sore injunction: my sweet mistress Weeps when she sees me work; and says, such baseness Had never like executor. I forget: But these sweet thoughts do even refresh my labours, Most busiest when I do it.

Enter MIRANDA; and PROSPERO at a distance unseen.

Mir. Alas! now, pray you, Work not so hard: I would the lightning had Burnt up those logs that you are enjou'd to pile. Pray set it down and rest you: when this burns "I'll weep for having wearied you. My father Is hard at study; pray now, rest yourself; He's safe for these three hours.

Fer. O most dear mistress, The sun will set before I shall discharge What I must strive to do.

Mir. If you'll sit down, I'll bear your logs the while. Pray, give me that: I'll carry it to the pile.

Fer. No, precious creature; I had rather crack my sinews, break my back, Than you should such dishonour undergo, While I sit lazy.

Mir. It would become me As well as it does you; and I should do it With much more ease, for my good will is to it, And yours it is against.

Pros. Poor worm! thou art infected: This visitation shows it.

Mir. You look weary.

Fer. No, noble mistress; 'tis fresh morning with me When you are by at night. I do beseech you—Chiefly that I might set it in my prayers—What is your name?

Mir. Miranda—O my father! I have broke your best to say so.

Fer. Admir'd Miranda! Indeed the top of admiration; worth What's dearest to the world! Full many a lady I have eyed with best regard, and many a time The harmony of their tongues hath into bondage Brought my too diligent ear: for several virtues Have I lik'd several women; never any With so full soul but some defect in her Did quarrel with the noblest grace she ow'd And put it to the foil; but you, O you! So perfect and so peerless, are created Of every creature's best.

Mir. I do not know One of my sex; no woman's face remember, Save, from my glass, mine own; nor have I seen More that I may call men than thou, good friend, And my dear father: how features are abroad, I am skill-less of; but, by my modesty, The jewel in my dower, I would not wish Any companion in the world but you; Nor can imagination form a shape, Besides yourself, to like of. But I prattle Something too wildly and my father's precepts I therein do forget.

Fer. I am in my condition A prince, Miranda; I do think, a king; I would, not so! and would no more endure This wooden slavery than to suffer The flesh-fly blow my mouth. Hear my soul speak: The very instant that I saw you did
My heart fly to your service; there resides
To make me slave to it: and for your sake
Am I this patient log-man.

Mir. Do you love me?
Fer. O heaven! O earth! bear witness to this sound,
And crown what I profess with kind event
If I speak true; if hollowly, invert
What best is boded me to mischief! I,
Beyond all limit of what else 'tis the world,
Do love, prize, honour you.

Mir. I am a fool
To weep at what I am glad of.

Fer. My mistress, dearest;
And I thus humble ever.

Mir. My husband then?
Fer. Ay, with a heart as willing
As bondage e'er of freedom: here's my hand.

Mir. And mine, with my heart in't: and now farewell
Till half an hour hence.

Fer. A thousand thousand!

Exeunt Ferdinand and Miranda.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Island.

Enter Caliban with a bottle; Stephano and Trinculo, following.

Ste. Well not me: when the butt is out, we will drink water; not a drop before: therefore bear up, and board 'em. Servant-monster, drink to me.

Trin. Servant-monster! the folly of this isle! They say there's but five upon this isle: we are three of them; if the other two be brained like us, the state totters.

Ste. Drink, servant-monster, when I bid thee:
thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

Trin. Where should they be set else? he were a brave monster indeed, if they were set in his tail.

Ste. My man-monster hath drowned his tongue in sack: for my part, the sea cannot drown me:
I swam ere I could recover the shore, five-and-thirty leagues, off and on, by this light. Thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard.

Trin. Your lieutenant, if you list; he's no standard.

Ste. We'll not run, Monsieur monster.

Trin. Nor go neither; but you'll lie like dogs and yet say nothing neither.

Ste. Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good moon-calf.

Cal. How does thy honour? Let me lick thy shoe. I'll not serve him, he is not valiant.

Trin. Thou liest, most ignorant monster: I am in case to justle a constable. Why, thou deboshed fish thou, was there ever man a coward that hath drunk so much sack as I to-day?
Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish and half a monster?

Cal. Lo, how he mocks me! wilt thou let him,
my lord?

Trin. 'Lord,' quoth he! that a monster should be such a natural!

Cal. Lo, lo, again! bite him to death, I prithee.

Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head; if you prove a mutineer, the next tree!
The poor monster's my subject and he shall not suffer indignity.

Cal. I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be pleased to hearken once again to the suit I made to thee?

Ste. Marry will I; kneel and repeat it; I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter Ariel, invisible.

Cal. As I told thee before, I am subject to a tyrant, a sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me of the island.

Ari. Thou liest.

Cal. Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou;
I would my valiant master would destroy thee:
I do not lie.

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in his tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.

Trin. Why, I said nothing.

Ste. Mum then and no more. To Caliban.

Proceed.

Cal. I say, by sorcery he got this isle;
From me he got it: if thy greatness will,
Revenge it on him, for I know thou dar'st;

But this thing dare not.

Ste. That's most certain.

Cal. Thou shalt be lord of it and I'll serve thee.

Ste. How now shall this be compassed? Canst thou bring me to the party?

Cal. Yea, yea, my lord: I'll yield him thee asleep,
Where thou may'st knock a nail into his head.

Ari. Thou liest; thou canst not.

Cal. What a pied ninny's this! Thou scurvy patch!

I do beseech thee greatness, give him blows.

And take his bottle from him: when that's gone
He shall drink nought but brine; for I'll not show him
Where the quick freshes are.

Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger: interrupt the monster one word further, and, by this hand, I'll turn my mercy out of doors and make a stock-fish of thee.

Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing. I'll

Ste. Didst thou not say he lied?

Ari. Thou liest.

Ste. Do I so? take thou that.

Strikes Trinculo.

As you like this, give me the lie another time.

Trin. I did not give the lie. Out o' your
THE TEMPEST.

Scene II.—Another Part of the Island.

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, GONZALO, ADRIAN, FRANCISCO, and others.

GON. By 'r lakin, I can go no further, sir; My old bones ache: here's a maze trod indeed Through forth-rights and meanders! By your patience, I needs must rest me.

ALON. Old lord, I cannot blame thee, Who am myself attach'd with weariness, To the dulling of my spirits: sit down and rest. Even here I will put off my hope and keep it No longer for my flatterer: he is drown'd. Whom thus we stray to find, and the sea mocks Our frustrate search on land. Well, let him go.

ANTON. Aside to SEBASTIAN. I am right glad that he's so out of hope. Do not, for one repulse, forgo the purpose That you resolv'd to effect.

SEB. Aside to ANTONIO. The next advantage Will we take throughly.

ANTON. Aside to SEBASTIAN. Let it be to-night: For, now they are oppress'd with travel, they Will not, nor cannot, use such vigilance As when they are fresh.

SEB. Aside to ANTONIO. I say, to-night: no more.

Solemn and strange music; and PROSPERO above, invisible. Enter several strange Shapes, bringing in a banquet: they dance about it with gentle actions of salutation; and, inviting the King, etc., to eat, they depart.

ALON. What harmony is this? my good friends, hark!

GON. Marvellous sweet music! Give us kind keepers, heavens! What were these?

SEB. A living drollery. Now I will believe That there are unicorns; that in Arabia There is one tree, the phoenix' throne; one phoenix At this hour reigning there.

ANTON. I'll believe both; And what does else want credit, come to me, And I'll be sworn 'tis true: travellers ne'er did lie, Though fools at home condemn them.

GON. If in Naples I should report this now, would they believe me? If I should say I saw such islanders, For, certes, these are people of the island, Who, though they be of monstrous shape, yet, note,
Their manners are more gentle-kind than of
Our human generation you shall find Many, nay, almost any.
Pros. Aside. Honest lord,
Thou hast said well; for some of you there present
Are worse than devils.
Alon. I cannot too much muse
Such shapes, such gesture and such sound, expressing.
Although they want the use of tongue, a kind
Of excellent dumb discourse.
Pros. Aside. Praise in departing. 40
Fran. They vanish'd strangely.
Seb. No matter, since
They have left their viands behind; for we have stomachs.
Will't please you taste of what is here?
Alon. Not I.
Gon. Faith, sir, you need not fear. When we were boys,
Who would believe that there were mountaineers
Dew-lapp'd like bulls, whose throats had hanging at them
Wallets of flesh? or that there were such men, Whose heads stood in their breasts! which now
we find
Each putter-out of five for one will bring us
Good warrant of.
Alon. I will stand to and feed, 50
Although my last: no matter, since I feel
The best is past. Brother, my lord the duke,
Stand to and do as we.

Thunder and lightning. Enter ARIEL, like a harpy; claps his wings upon the table; and,
with a quaint device, the banquet vanishes.
Ari. You are three men of sin, whom Destiny,
That hath to instrument this lower world
And what is in't, the never-surfeted sea
Hath caus'd to belch up you, and on this island
Where man doth not inhabit; you 'mongst men
Being most unfit to live. I have made you mad;
And even with such-like valor men hang and drown
Their proper selves.
Seeing ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, etc., draw their swords.
You fools! I and my fellows
Are ministers of fate: the elements,
Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well
Wound the loud winds, or with bemock'd-at stabs
Kill the still-closing waters, as diminish
One dowle that's in my plume: my fellow-ministers
Are like invulnerable. If you could hurt,
Your swords are now too massy for your strengths,
And will not be uplifted. But remember,
For that's my business to you, that you three 70
From Milan did supplant good Prospero;
Expos'd unto the sea, which hath requit it,
Him and his innocent child: for which foul deed
The powers, delaying, not forgetting, have Incensed the seashore islands, yea, all the creatures,
Against your peace. Thee of thy son, Alonso,
They have bereft; and do pronounce by me:
Lingerling perdition, worse than any death
Can be at once, shall step by step attend
You and your ways; whose wrathes to guard you from— 80
Which here, in this most desolate isle, else falls

Upon your heads,—is nothing but heart-sorrow
And a clear life ensuing.

He vanishes in thunder: then, to soft music, enter
The shapes again, and dance with mock and moves, and carry out the table.
Pros. Aside. Bravely the figure of this harpy last thou
Perform'd, my Ariel; a grace it had, devouring.
Of my instruction hast thou nothing bated
In what thou hast'd to say: so, with good life
And observation strange, my meaner ministers
Their several kinds have done. My high charms work
And these mine enemies are all knit up
In their distractions: they now are in my power;
And in these fits I leave them, while I visit
Young Ferdinand, whom they suppose is drown'd,
And his and my lov'd darling.
Exit. Gon. I the name of something holy, sir, why stand you
In this strange stare?
Alon. O! it is monstrous! monstrous!
Methought the billows spoke and told me of it:
The winds did sing it to me; and the thunder,
That deep and dreadful organ-pipe, pronounc'd
The name of Prosper: it did bass my trespass.
Therefore my son 't the ooze is bedded; and so
I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded,
And with him there lie mudd'd.
Exit. Seb. But one fiend at a time,
I'll fight their legions o'er.

ACT IV.

Scene I.—Before Prospero's cell.
Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Pros. If I have too anerely punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends; for I
Have given you here a thread of mine own life,
Or that for which I live; whom once again
I tender to thy hand. All thy vexations
Were but my trials of thy love, and thou
Hast strangely stood the test: here, afore Heaven,
I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand!
Do not smile at me that I boast her off,
For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise, 10
And make it halt behind her.

Fer. I do believe it
Against an oracle.

Pros. Then, as my gift and thine own acquisition Worthily purchas'd, take my daughter: but
If thou dost break her virgin-knot before
All sanctimonious ceremonies may
With full and holy rite be minister'd
No sweet aspersions shall the heavens let fall
To make this contract grow; but barren hate,
Sour-eyed disdain and discord shall bestrew 20
The union of your bed with weeds so loathly that you shall hate it both: therefore take heed, s Hymen's lamps shall light you.

Per. As I hope or quiet days, fair issue and long life, 'tis such love as 'tis now,—the murkies den, he most opportune place, the strong'st suggestion or worsest genius can, shall never melt one honour into lust, to take away he edge of that day's celebration then I shall think, or Phebus' steeds are founder'd, r Night kept chain'd below.

Pros. Fairly spoke.

Ari. That would my potent master? here I am.

Pros. Thou and thy manner follows your last service id worthily perform, and I must use you a such another trick. Go bring the rabble, 'er whom I give thee power, here to this place: cite them to quick motion; for I must estow upon the eyes of this young couple one vanity of mine art: it is my promise, nd they expect it from me.

Ari. Presently?

Pros. Ay, with a twink.

Ari. Before you can say 'come' and 'go,' nd breathe twice and cry 'so so,' ach one, tripping on his toe, 'ill be here with mop and mow. o you love me, master? no?

Pros. Dearly, my delicate Ariel. Do not approach ill thou dost hear me call.

Ari. Well, I conceive. Exit.

Pros. Look thou be true. Do not give dalliance o much the rein: the strongest oaks are straw the fire i' the blood. Be more abstemious, else good night your vow.

Per. I warrant you, sir; he white cold virgin snow upon my heart bates the ardour of my liver.

Pros. Well. ow come, my Ariel! bring a corollary, other than want a spirit: appear, and pertly, o tongue! all eyes! be silent. Soft music.

Enter IRIS.

IRIS. Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich leas f wheat, rye, barley, vetches, oats, and peas; hy turfy mountains, where live sibbling sheep, nd flat meads thatch'd with stover, them to keep; hy banks with pioned and twilled brims, thich spongy April at thy best betrims, o make cold nymphs chaste crowns; and thy broom-groves; thine shadow the dismissed bachelor loves, eing lass-lorn; thy pole-clipse vineyard; nd thy sea-marge, sterile, and rocky-hard, threethou thyself dost air;—the queen of the sky, thine watery arch and messenger am I, ids thee leave these, and with her sovereign grace ere on this grass-plot, in this very place, o come and sport: her peacocks fly amain: approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter CERES.

Ceres. Hail, many-colour'd messenger, that ne'er Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter; Who with thy saffron wings upon my flowers Diffuseth honey-drops, refreshing showers; And with each end of thy blue bow best crown My bosky acres and my unshrubb'd down, Rich scar'd to my proud earth; why hath thy queen Summon'd me hither, to this short-grass'd green? Iris. A contract of true love to celebrate, And some donation freely to estate On the bless'd lovers.

Ceres. Tell me, heavenly bow, If Venus or her son, as thou dost know, Do now attend the queen? Since they did plot The means that dusky Dis my daughter got, Her and her blind boy's scandal'd company I have forsworn.

Iris. Of her society Be not afraid: I met her deity Cutting the clouds towards Paphos and her son Dove-drawn with her. Here thought they to have done Some wanton charm upon this man and maid, Whose vows are, that no bed-rite shall be paid Till Hymen's torch be lighted; but in vain, Mars's hot minion is return'd again: Her wansipish-headed son has broke his arrows, Swears he will shoot no more, but play with sparrow, And be a boy right out.

Ceres. Highest queen of state, Great Juno comes; I know her by her gait.

Enter JUNO.

Juno. How does my bounteous sister? Go with me To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be, And honour'd in their issue. They sing.

Honour, riches, marriage-blessing, Long continuance, and increasing, Hourly joys be still upon you! Juno sings her blessings on you.

Ceres. Earth's increase, foison plenty, Barns and garner's never empty; Vines with dust'reng bunches growing; Plants with kindly burden bowing; Spring come to you at the farthest In the very end of harvest! Scarcity and want shall shun you; Ceres' blessing so is on you.

Per. This is a most majestic vision, and Harmonious charmingly. May I be bold To think these spirits?

Pros. Spirits, which by mine art I have from their confines call'd to enact My present fancies.

Per. Let me live here ever: So rare a wonder'd father and a wife Makes this place Paradise. JUNO and CERES whisper; and send IRIS on employment.

Pros. Sweet, now, silence! Juno and Ceres whisper seriously; There's something else to do. Hush, and be mute, Or else our spell is marr'd.
Per. This was well done, my bird; Thy shape invisible retain thou still: The trampetry in my house, go bring it hither, For stale to catch these thieves.

PROSPERO and ARIEL remain, invisible. Enter CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO, all cet.

Cal. Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may not Hear a foot fall; we now are near his cell.

Ste. Monster, your fairy, which you say is harmless fairy, has done little better than play the Jack with us.

Trin. Monster, I do smell all horse-piss, a which my nose is in great indignation.

Ste. So is mine. Do you hear, monster? If should take a dis-pleasure against you, look you, Trin. Thou wert but a lost monster.

Cal. Good my lord, give me thy favour still. Be patient, for the prize I'll bring thee to Shall hoodwink this mischance: therefore speak softly: All's hush'd as midnight yet.

Trin. Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool,— Ste. There is not only disgrace and dishonour in that, monster, but an infinite loss.

Trin. That's more to me than my wetting yet this is your harmless fairy, monster.

Ste. I will fetch off my bottle, though I b'fore ears for my labour.

Cal. Pritical, my king, be quiet. Seest thou here,

This is the mouth o' the cell: no noise, and enter Do that good mischief which may make this islan Thine own for ever, and I, thy Caliban, For aye thy foot-licker.

Ste. Give me thy hand. I do begin to have bloody thoughts.

Trin. O king Stephano! O peer! O worth Stephano! look what a wardrobe here is for thee!

Cal. Let it alone, thou fool: it is but trash.

Trin. O, ho, monster! we know what belongs to a frippery: O king Stephano!

Ste. Put off that gown, Trinculo: by thy hand, I'll have that gown.

Trin. Thy grace shall have it.

Cal. The dropsy drown this fool! what d'you mean

At which, like unback'd colts, they prick'd their ears, Advanc'd their eyelids, lifted up their noses As they smelt music: so I charm'd their ears That calf-like they my lowing follow'd through Tooth'd briers, sharp furnes, tricking goss and thorns, Which enter'd their frail shins: at last I left them In the filthy-mantled pool beyond your cell, There dancing up to the chins, that the foul lake O'erstunk their feet.

Enter certain Nymphs.

You sunburnt sicklemen, of August weary, Come hither from the furrow and be merry. Make holiday: your rye-straw hats put on, And these fresh nymphs encounter every one In country footing.
THE TEMPEST.

To dote thus on such luggage? Let’s alone, and do the murder first: if he awake, from toe to crown he’ll fill our skins with pinches; Make us strange stuff.

Ste. Be you quiet, monster. Mistress line, is not this my jerkin? Now is the jerkin under the line; now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair and prove a bald jerkin.

Trin. Do, do: we steal by line and level, an’t like your grace.

Ste. I thank thee for that jest; here’s a garment for’t: wit shall not go unwarded while I am king of this country. ’Steal by line and level’ is an excellent pass of pate; there’s another garment for’t.

Trin. Monster, come, put some time upon your fingers, and away with the rest.

Cal. I will have none on’t: we shall lose our time, and all be turn’d to barnacles, or to apes with foreheads villanous low.

Ste. Monster, lay-to your fingers: help to bear this away where my hoghead of wine is, or I’ll turn you out of my kingdom. Go to; carry this.

Trin. And this.

Ste. Ay, and this.

A noise of hunters heard. Enter divers Spirits, in shape of hounds, and hunt them about: Prospero and Ariel setting them on.

Pros. Hey, Mountain, hey!

Ari. Silver, there it goes, Silver!

Pros. Fury, Fury! there, Tyrant, there! hark, mark!

CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO are driven out.

Go, charge my goblins that they grind their joints with dry convulsions; shorten up their sinews with aged cramps, and more pinch-spotted make them than pard or cat o’ mountain.

Ari. Hark! they roar.

Pros. Let them be hunted soundly. At this hour

Lie at my mercy all mine enemies:

Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou shalt have the air at freedom: for a little follow, and do me service. Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Before Prospero’s cell.

Enter Prospero in his magic robes; and Ariel.

Pros. Now does my project gather to a head: My charms crack not, my spirits obey, and time goes upright with his carriage. How’s the day? Ari. On the sixth hour; at which time, my lord, you said our work should cease.

Pros. I did say so, When first I rais’d the tempest. Say, my spirit, How fares the king and’s followers?

Ari. Confin’d together in the same fashion as you gave in charge; Just as you left them: all prisoners, sir, In the line-grove which weather-fends your cell; They cannot budge till your release. The king, His brother and yours, abide all three distracted, And the remainder mourning over them. Brimful of sorrow and dismay; but chiefly

Him that you term’d, sir, ‘the good old lord Gonzalo’;

His tears run down his beard, like winter’s drops From caves of reeds. Your charm so strongly works them,

That if you now beheld them, your affections Would become tender.

Pros. Dost thou think so, spirit?

Ari. Mine would, sir, were I human.

Pros. And mine shall. Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling Of their afflictions, and shall not myself, One of their kind, that relish all as sharply, Passion as they, be kindlier mov’d than thou art? Though with their high wrongs I am struck to the quick, Yet with my nobler reason ‘gainst my fury Do I take part. The rarer action is In virtue than in vengeance: they being penitent, The sole drift of my purpose doth extend Not a frown further. Go release them, Ariel: My charms I’ll break, their senses I’ll restore, And they shall be themselves.

Ari. I’ll fetch them, sir. Exit.

Pros. Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves; And ye, that on the sands with printless foot Do chase the ebbing Neptune and do fly him When he comes back; you demi-puppets that By moonshine do the green sour ringlets make, Whereof the even notes; and you whose pastime Is to make midnight mushrooms; that rejoice To hear the solemn curfew; by whose aid, Weak masters though ye be, I have bedim’d the noontides sun, call’d forth the mutinous winds, And ‘twixt the green sea and the azure vault Set roaring war: to the dread rattling thunder Have I given fire and rifted Jove’s stout oak With his own bolt: the strong bas’d promontory Have I made shake; and by the spurs pluck’d up The pine and cedar: graves at my command Have waked their sleepers, oped, and let them forth

By my so potent art. But this rough magic I here abuse; and, when I have requir’d Some heavenly music, which even now I do, To work mine end upon their senses that This airy charm is for, I’ll break my staff, Bury it certain fathom in the earth, And, deeper than did ever plummet sound, I’ll drown my book. Sollem music.

Re-enter Ariel after him, Alonso, with a frantic gesture, attended by Gonzalo; Sebastian and Antonio in like manner, attended by Adrian and Francisco: they all enter the circle which Prospero had made, and there stand charmed, which Prospero observing, speaks.

A sober air and the best comforter
To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains. Now useless, boil’d within thy skull! Therestand, For you are spell-stopp’d.

Holy Gonzalo, honourable man. Mine eyes, even sociable to the show of thine, Fall fellowly drops. The charm dissolves space, And as the morning steals upon the night, Melting the darkness, so their rising senses Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle Their clearer reason. O good Gonzalo! My true preserver, and a loyal sir
To him thou follow'st, I will pay thy graces
Home, both in word and deed. Most cruelly
Didst thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter:
Thy brother was a furtherer in the act;
Thou'rt pinch'd for't now, Sebastian. Flesh and blood,
You, brother mine, that entertain'd ambition,
Expell'd remorse and nature; who, with Sebasti-
Whose inward pinches therefore are most strong,
Would here have kill'd your king; I do forgive
thee,
Unnatural though thou art. Their understanding
Begins to swell, and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shores
That now lie full and muddy. Not one of them
That yet looks on me, or would know me. Ariel,
Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell;
Exit Ariel.
I will disease me, and myself present,
As I was sometime Milan. Quickly, spirit;
Thou shalt ere long be free.

ARIEL re-enters, singing, and helps to attire
PROSPERO.

Where the bee sucks, there suck I:
In a cowslip's bell I lie;
There I couch when owls do cry.
On the bat's back I do fly
After summer merrily.
Merrily, merrily shall I live now
Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.

PROSPERO. Why, that's my dainty Ariel! I shall miss thee;
But yet thou shalt have freedom: so, so, so.
To the king's ship, invisible as thou art;
There shall thou find the mariners asleep
Under the hatches; the master and the boatswain
Being awake, enforce them to this place;
And presently, I prithee.
Ariel. I drink the air before me, and return
Or e'er your pulse twice beat. Exit.
GON. All torment, trouble, wonder and amaze-
Inhabit here: some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearful country!
PROSPERO. Behold, sir king,
The wronged Duke of Milan, Prospero.
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body;
And to thee and thy company I bid
A hearty welcome.
ALON. Wher'e thou be'st he or no,
Or some enchanted trifle to abuse me,
As late I have been, I not know: thy pulse
Beats as of flesh and blood; and, since I saw thee,
The affliction of my mind amends, with which,
I fear, a madness held me. This must crave,
An if this be at all, a most strange story.
The dukedom I resign, and do entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs. But how should
PROSPERO
Be living and be here?
PROSPERO. First, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honour cannot
Be measur'd or confin'd.
GON. Whether this be
Or be not, I'll not swear.
PROSPERO. You do yet taste
Some subtleties o' the isle, that will not let you Believe things certain. Welcome! my friends all.
ASIDE TO SEBASTIAN AND ANTONIO. But you,
In brace of lords, were I so minded,
I here could pluck his highness' frown upon you
And justify you traitors: at this time
I will tell no tales.

SCH. ASIDE. The devil speaks in him.
PROSPERO. No.
For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother
Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
Thy rankest fault; all of them; and require
My dukedom of thee, which perchance, I know,
Thou must restore.
ALON. If thou be'st Prospero,
Give us particulars of thy preservation;
How thou hast met us here, who three hours
Since Were wreck'd upon this shore; where I have lost—
How sharp the point of this remembrance is!—
My dear son Ferdinand.
PROSPERO. I am woe for't, sir.
ALON. Irreparable is the loss, and patience
Says it is past her cure.
PROSPERO. I rather think
You have not sought her help; of whose soft grace
For the like loss I have her sovereign aid,
And rest myself content.
ALON. You the like loss?
PROSPERO. As great to me, as late; and, supportable
To make the dear loss, have I means much weaker
Than you may call to comfort you, for I
Have lost my daughter.
ALON. A daughter?
O heavens! that they were living both in Naples,
The King and queen there! that they were, I wish Myself were muddled in that oozy bed
Where my son lies. When did you lose your daughter?
PROSPERO. In this last tempest. I perceive, these lords,
At this encounter do so much admire
That they devour their reason, and scarce think
Their eyes do offices of truth, their words
Are natural breath: but, howsoe'er you have Been justled from your senses, know for certain
That I am Prospero and that very duke Which was thrust forth of Milan; who most strangely
Upon this shore, where you were wreck'd, was landed,
To be the lord on't. No more yet of this;
For 'tis a chronicle of day by day,
Not a relation for a breakfast nor Bestitting this first meeting. Welcome, sir;
This cell's my court: here have I few attendants
And subjects none abroad: pray you, look in.
My dukedom since you have given me again,
I will requite you with as good a thing;
At least bring forth a wonder, to content ye
As much as me my dukedom.

The entrance of the cell opens, and discovers FER-DINAND AND MIRANDA playing at chess.
MIR. Sweet lord, you play me false.
FER. No, my dearest love,
I would not for the world.
MIR. Yes, for a score of kingdoms you should wrangle,
And I would call it fair play.
Alon. If this prove
A vision of the island, one dear son
Shall I twice lose.

Seb. A most high miracle! Fer. Though the seas threaten, they are merciful:
I have curs’d them without cause.
Ferdinand kneels to ALONZO.
Alon. Now all the blessings
Of a glad father compass thee about! 180
Aris, and say how thou cam’st here.

Mir. O wonder! How many goodly creatures are there here!
How beauteous mankind is! O brave new world,
That has such people in’t!

Pros. What is this maid with whom thou wast at play?
Your eldest acquaintance cannot be three hours:
Is she the goddess that hath sever’d us,
And brought us thus together?

Fer. Sir, she is mortal;
But by immortal Providence she’s mine:
I chose her when I could not ask my father
For his advice, nor thought I had one. She Is daughter to this famous Duke of Milan,
Of whom so often I have heard renown,
But never saw before; of whom I have Receiv’d a second life; and second father
This lady makes him to me.

Alon. I am hers.
But O! how oddly will it sound that I
Must ask my child forgiveness.

Pros. There, sir, stop:
Let us not burden our remembrance
With a heaviness that’s gone.

Gon. I have inly wept, 200
Or should have spoke ere this. Look down, you gods,
And on this couple drop a blessed crown!
For it is you that hath found forth the way
Which brought us hither.

Alon. I say amen, Gonzalo.

Gon. Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issue
Should become kings of Naples? O! rejoice
Beyond a common joy, and set it down
With gold on lasting pillars. In one voyage
Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis,
And Ferdinand, her brother, found a wife 210
Where he himself was lost; Prospero his dukedom
In a poor isle; and all of us ourselves
When no man was his own.

Alon. To FERDINAND and MIRANDA. Give me your hands:
Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart
That doth not wish you joy!

Gon. Be it so: Amen.

Re-enter ARIEL, with the Master and BOATSAIN amazement following.

O look, sir! look, sir! here is more of us,
I prophesied, if a gallow were on land.
This fellow could not drown. Now, blasphemy,
That swear’d grace o’erboard, not an oath on shore!
Hast thou no mouth by land? What is the news?

Boats. The best news is that we have safely found

Our king and company: the next, our ship,
Which but three glasses since we gave out split,
Is tight and yare and bravely rigg’d as when
We first put out to sea.

Ari. Aside to PROSPERO. Sir, all this service
Have I done since I went.

Pros. Aside to ARIEL. My tricksy spirit!

Alon. These are not natural events; they strengthen
From strange to stranger. Say, how came you hither?

Boats. If I did think, sir, I were well awake,
I’d strive to tell you. We were dead of sleep, 220
And, how we know not, all clapp’d under hatches;
Where, but even now, with strange and several noises
Of roaring, shrieking, howling, jingling chains,
And most diversity of sounds, all horrible,
We were awak’d; straightway, at liberty:
Where we, in all her trim, freshly beheld
Our royal, good and gallant ship; our master
Capering to eye her: on a trice, so please you,
Even in a dream, were we divided from them,
And were brought moaning hither.

Ari. Aside to PROSPERO. Was’t well done?

Pros. Aside to ARIEL. Bravely, my diligence!
Thou shalt be free.

Alon. This is as strange a maze as c’er men trod;
And there is in this business more than nature
Was ever conduct of: some oracle
Must rectify our knowledge.

Pros. Sir, my liege,
Do not infest your mind with beating on
The strangeness of this business: at pick’d leisure
Which shall be shortly, single I’ll resolve you,
Which to you shall seem probable, of every
These happen’d accidents; till when, be cheerful
And think of each thing well. Aside to ARIEL.

Come hither, spirit:

Set Caliban and his companions free:
Untie the spell. 231

Exit ARIEL.

How fares my gracious sir?
There are yet missing of your company,
Some few odd lads that you remember not.

Re-enter ARIEL, driving in CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO, in their stolen apparel.

Ste. Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself, for all is but fortune. Coragio! bully-monster, coragio!

Trin. If these be true spies which I wear in my head, here’s a goodly sight.

Cal. O Setebos! these be brave spirits indeed.
How fine my master is! I am afraid
He will chastise me.

Seb. Ha, ha!

What things are these, my lord Antonio?

Will money buy them?

Ant. Very like: one of them
Is a plain fish, and, no doubt, marketable.

Pros. Mark but the badges of these men, my lords,
Then say if they be true. This misshapen knife,
His mother was a witch; and one so strong
That could control the moon, make flows and ebb’s,

And deal in her command without her power.

These three have rob’d me; and this demi-devil,
For he’s a bastard one, had plotted with them
To take my life: two of these fellows you
THE TEMPEST.

[ACT 7, 3]

Must know and own; this thing of darkness I Acknowledge mine.

Cal. I shall be pinch’d to death.

Alon. Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler?

Seb. He is drunk now: where had he wine?

Alon. And Trinculo is reeling ripe: where should they
Find this grand liquor that hath gilded ’em? How cam’st thou in this pickle?

Trin. I have been in such a pickle since I saw you last that, I fear me, will never out of my bones: I shall not fear fly-blowing.

Seb. Why, how now, Stephano?

Ste. O! touch me not: I am not Stephano, but a cramp.

Pros. You’d be king o’ the isle, sirrah?

Ste. I should have been a sore one then.

Alon. Pointing to CALIBAN. This is a strange thing as e’er I look’d on.

Pros. He is as disproportion’d in his manners
As in his shape. Go, sirrah, to my cell;
Take with you your companions: as you look
To have my pardon, trim it handsomely.

Cal. Ay, that I will; and I’ll be wise hereafter
And seek for grace. What a thrice-double ass
Was I, to take this drunkard for a god,
And worship this dull fool!

Pros. Go to; away!

Alon. Hence, and bestow your luggage where you found it.

Seb. Or stole it, rather.

Exeunt CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO.

Pros. Sir, I invite your highness and your train
To my poor cell, where you shall take your rest
For this one night; which, part of it, I’ll waste
With such discourse as, I don’t doubt, shall make it Go quick away; the story of my life
And the particular accidents gone by Since I came to this isle: and in the morn,

I’ll bring you to your ship and so to Naples,
Where I have hope to see the nuptial
Of these our dear-beloved solemnized:
And thence retire me to my Milan, where Every third thought shall be my grave.

Alon. I long
To hear the story of your life, which must Take the ear strangely.

Pros. I’ll deliver all;
And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales
And sail so expeditions that shall catch Your royal fleet far off. Aside to ARIEL. My Ariel, chick,
That is thy charge; then to the elements
Be free, and fare thou well! Please you, draw near.

Exeunt.

EPILOGUE

spoken by PROSPERO.

Now my charms are all o’erthrown,
And what strength I have ’s mine own;
Which is most faint: now, ’tis true,
I must be here confin’d by you,
Or sent to Naples. Let me not,
Since I have my dukedom got
And pardon’d the deceiver, dwell
In this bare island by your spell:
But release me from my bands
With the help of your good hands.
Gentle breath of yours my sails
Must fill, or else my project fails,
Which was to please. Now I want
 Spirits to enforce, art to enchant;
And my ending is despair,
Unless I be relief’d by prayer,
Which pierces so that it assaults
Mercy itself and frees all faults.
As you from crimes would pardon’d be,
Let your indulgence set me free.

SCENE.—Sometimes in Verona, sometimes in Milan, and on the frontiers of Mantua.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Verona: an open Place.

Enter Valentine and Proteus.

Val. Cease to persuade, my loving Proteus: one-keeping youth have ever homely wits. Here's not affection chains thy tender days o the sweet glances of thy honour'd love, rather would entreat thy company to see the wonders of the world abroad, ban, living dully sluggardiz'd at home, hear out thy youth with shapeless idleness. Is since thou lov'st, love still and thrive therein, even as I would when I to love begin. Pro. Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine, adieu! Blinkest thy Proteus, when thou haply seest one rare note-worthy object in thy travel: Wish me partaker in thy happiness when thou dost meet good hap; and in thy danger, ever danger do environ thee, commend thy grievance to my holy prayers, or I will be thy bondsman, Valentine.

Val. That's on some story of deep love, few young Leander cross'd the Hellespont. 22

Pro. That's a deep story of a deeper love, for he was more than over shoes in love. Val. Tis true; for you are over boots in love, nd yet you never swum the Hellespont.

Pro. Over the boots? may, give me not the boots. Val. No, I will not, for it boots thee not.

Pro. What? Val. To be in love, where scorn is bought with groans; joy looks with heart-sore sighs; one fading moment's mirth
With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights: haply won, perhaps a hapless gain; lost, why then a grieveous labour wound: however, but a folly bought with wit, else a wit by folly vanished.

Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me fool. Val. So, by your circumstance, I fear you'll prove.

Pro. 'Tis love you evil at: I am not Love. Val. Love is your master, for he masters you; And he that is so yoked by a fool, Methinks, should not be chronicled for wise.

Pro. Yet writers say, as in the sweetest bud The eating canker dwells, so eating love Inhabits in the finest wits of all.

Val. And writers say, as the most forward bud Is eaten by the canker ere it blow, Even so by love the young and tender wit Is turn'd to folly; blasting in the bud, Losing his verdure even in the prime, And all the fair effects of future hopes, But wherefore waste I time to counsel thee That art a votary to fond desire? Once more adieu! My father at the road Expects my coming, there to see me shipp'd.

Pro. And this will I bring thee, Valentine. Val. Sweet Proteus, no; now let us take our leave.

To Milan let me hear from thee by letters Of thy success in love, and what news else Betideth here in absence of thy friend; And I likewise will visit thee with mine.

Pro. All happiness be chance to thee in Milan! Val. As much to you at home! and so, farewell. Exit.

Pro. He after honour hunts, I after love: He leaves his friends to dignify them more; I leave myself, my friends and all, for love. Thou, Julia, thou hast metamorphos'd me; Made me neglect my studies, lose my time, War with good counsel, set the world at nought, Made wit with musing weak, heart sick with thought.

Enter Speed.

Speed. Sir Proteus, save you! Saw you my master?

Pro. But now he parted hence to embark for Milan.
Pro. Why? Could'st thou perceive so much from her?

Speed. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her; no, not so much as a ducat for delivering your letter. And being so hard to me that brought your mind, I fear she'll prove as hard to you in telling your mind. Give her no token but stones, for she's as hard as steel.

Pro. What! said she nothing?

Speed. No, not so much as 'Take this for thy pains.' To testify your bounty, I thank you, you have testerned me; in requital whereof, henceforth carry your letters yourself. And so, sir, I'll commend you to my master.

Pro. Go, go, be gone, to save your ship from wreck,
Which cannot perish, having thee aboard,
Being destin'd to a drier death on shore.

Exit Speed.

I must go send some better messenger:
I fear my Julia would not deign my lines,
Receiving them from such a worthless post.

Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. JULIA'S GARDEN.

Enter JULIA and LUCETTA.

Jul. But say, Lucetta, now we are alone,
Would'st thou then counsel me to fall in love?

Luc. Ay, madam, so you stumble not unhack-fully.

Jul. Of all the fair resort of gentlemen
That every day with parle encounter me,
In thy opinion which is worthiest love?

Luc. Please you repeat their names, I'll show my mind
According to my shallow simple skill.

Jul. What think'st thou of the fair Sir Eglamour?

Luc. As of a knight well-spoken, neat and fine
But, were I you, he never should be mine.

Jul. What think'st thou of the rich Mercatio?

Luc. Well of his wealth; but of himself, so so.

Jul. What think'st thou of the gentle Proteus?

Luc. Lord, Lord! to see what folly reigns in us!

Jul. How now! what means this passion at his name?

Luc. Pardon, dear madam: 'tis a passing shame
That I, unworthy body as I am,
Should censure thus on lovely gentlemen.

Jul. Why not on Proteus, as of all the rest?

Luc. Then thus,—of many good I think him best.

Jul. Your reason?

Luc. I have no other but a woman's reason:
I think him so because I think him so.

Jul. And would'st thou have me cast my love on him?

Luc. Ay, if you thought your love not cast away.

Jul. Why, he of all the rest hath never mov'd me

Luc. Yet he of all the rest, I think, best loves ye.

Jul. His little speaking shows his love but small

Luc. Fire that's closest kept burns most of all.

Jul. They do not love that do not show their love.

Luc. O! they love least that let men know their love.

Jul. I would I knew his mind.

Luc. Peruse this paper, madam.
"The Two Gentlemen of Verona"

Jul. 'To Julia,' Say, from whom?
Luc. That the contents will show.
Jul. Say, say, who gave it thee?
Luc. Sir Valentine's page; and sent, I think, from Proteus.

He would have given it you, but I, being in the way,

Did in your name receive it; pardon the fault,
I pray.

Jul. Now, by my modesty, a goodly broker!
Are you presume to harbour wanton lines? 40
'0 whisper and conspire against my youth!
Now, trust me, 'tis an office of great worth
And you an officer fit for the place.
Here, take the paper: see it be return'd;
Or else return no more into my sight.

Luc. To plead for love deserves more fee than hate.
Jul. Will ye be gone?

Luc. That you may ruminate. Exit.
Jul. And yet I would I had o'erlook'd the letter:
't were a shame to call her back again
And pray her to a fault for which I chid her.
What fool is she, that knows I am a maid,
And would not force the letter to my view!
Since maids, in modesty, say 'No' to that
Which they would have the profferer construe 'Ay.'
Lie, lie! How cowardly is this foolish love
That, like a testy babe, will scratch the nurse
And presently all humbled kiss the rod.
How curiously I chid Lucentia hence,
And willingly I would have had her here:
How angrily I taught my brow to frown,
When inward joy enforce my heart to smile.
My penance is, to call Lucentia back
And ask remission for my folly past.

What ho! Lucentia!

Re-enter Lucentia.

Luc. What would your ladyship?
Jul. Is it near dinner-time?

Luc. I would it were;
That you might kill your stomach on your meat
And not upon your maid.

Jul. What is 't that you took up so gingerly?

Luc. Nothing.
Jul. Why didst thou stoop then?

Luc. To take a paper up
That I let fall.

Jul. And is that paper nothing?

Luc. Nothing concerning me.
Jul. Then let it lie for those that it concerns.
Luc. Madam, it will not lie where it concerns,
Unless it have a false interpreter.

Jul. Some love of yours hath writ to you in rime:

Luc. That I might sing it, madam, to a tune:
Give me a note: your ladyship can set.

Jul. As little by such toys as may be possible:
Best sing it to the tune of 'Light o' love.'

Luc. It is too heavy for so light a tune.

Jul. Heavy! believe it hath some burthen then?
Luc. Ay; and melodious were it, would you Sing it.

Jul. And why not you?

Luc. I cannot reach so high.

Jul. Let's see your song. How now, minion!
Luc. Keep tune there still, so you will sing it out:

And yet methinks I do not like this tune.

Jul. You do not?

Luc. No, madam; it is too sharp.

Jul. You, minion, are too saucy.

Luc. Nay, now you are too flat
And mar the concord with too harsh a descant:
There wanteth but a mean to fill your song.
Jul. The means is drown'd with your unruly bass.
Luc. Indeed, I bid the base for Proteus.
Jul. This babble shall not henceforth trouble me.

Here is a coil with protestation! Tears the letter.
Go get you gone, and let the papers lie:
You would be fingering them, to anger me.

Luc. She makes it strange, but she would be best pleas'd
To be so anger'd with another letter.

Exit.

Jul. Nay, would I were so anger'd with the same!

O hateful hands, to tear such loving words!
Injuries, wasps, to feed on such sweet honey,
And kill the bees that yield it with your stings!
I'll kiss each several paper for amends.

Look, here is writ 'kind Julia.' Unkind Julia!
As in revenge of thy ingratitude,
I throw thy name against the bruising stones,
Trampling contemptuously on thy disdain.
And here is writ 'love-wounded Proteus.'

Poor wounded name! my bosom as a bed
Shall lodge thee till thy wound be throughly heal'd;
And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss.
But twice or thrice was 'Proteus' written down:
Be calm, good wind, blow not a word away
Till I have found each letter in the letter.

Except mine own name; that some whirlwind bear
Unto a ragged, fearful-hanging rock,
And throw it thence into the raging sea!
Lo! here in one line is his name twice writ,
'Poor forlorn Proteus, passionate Proteus,'
To the sweet Julia: that I'll tear away;
And yet I will not, sith so prettily
He couples it to his complaining names.
Thus will I fold them one upon another:
Now kiss, embrace, contend, do what you will.

Re-enter Lucentia.

Luc. Madam,
Dinner is ready, and your father stays.
JUL. Well, let us go.

Luc. What! shall these papers lie like tell-tales here?

Jul. If you respect them, best to take them up.

Luc. Nay, I was taken up for laying them down;
Yet here they shall not lie, for catching cold.
Jul. I see you have a month's mind to them.

Luc. Ay, madam, you may say what sights you see;
I see things too, although you judge I wink.

Jul. Come, come; will't please you go?

Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same. A Room in Antonio's House.

Enter Antonio and Panthino.

Ant. Tell me, Panthino, what sad talk was that Wherewith my brother held you in the cloister?

Pant. Twas of his nephew Proteus, your son.
Ant. Why, what of him?

Pant. He wonder'd that your lordship
Would suffer him to spend his youth at home,
While other men, of slender reputation,
Put forth their sons to seek preferment out:
Some to the wars, to try their fortune there;
Some to discover islands far away;
Some to the studious universities.
For any or for all these exercises
He said that Proteus your son was meet,
And did request me to importune you
To let him spend his time no more at home,
Which would be great impeachments to his age,
In having known no travel in his youth.

Ant. Nor need'st thou much importune me to that Whereon this month I have been hammering.
I have consider'd well his loss of time
And how he cannot be a perfect man,
Not being tried and tutor'd in the world:
Experience is by industry achiev'd
And perfected by the swift course of time.
Then tell me, whither were I best to send him?
Pant. I think your lordship is not ignorant
How his companion, youthful Valentine,
Attends the emperor in his royal court.

Ant. I know it well.
Pant. Twere good, I think, your lordship send him thither.
There shall he practise tilts and tournaments,
Hear sweet discourse, converse with noblemen,
And be in eye of every exercise
Worthy his youth and nobleness of birth.

Ant. I like thy counsel; well hast thou advis'd;
And that thou may'st perceive how well I like it
The execution of it shall make known,
Even with the speediest expedition
I will dispatch him to the emperor's court.
Pant. To-morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonso
With other gentlemen of good esteem
Are journeying to salute the emperor
And to commend their service to his will.

Ant. Good company; with them shall Proteus go:
And in good time. Now will we break with him.

Enter Proteus.

Pro. Sweet love! sweet lines! sweet life!
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart;
Here is her oath for love, her honour's pawn.
O! that our fathers would applaud our loves,
To seal our happiness with their consents.
O heavenly Julia!

Ant. How now! what letter are you reading there?
Pro. May't please your lordship, 'tis a word or two
Of commendations sent from Valentine,
Deliver'd by a friend that came from him.

Ant. Lend me the letter; let me see what news.
Pro. There is no news, my lord, but that he writes
How happily he lives, how well belov'd
And daily grace'd by the emperor;
Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.

Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish?
Pro. As one relying on your lordship's will
And not depending on his friendly wish.

Ant. My will is something sorted with his wish,
Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed,
For what I will, I will, and there an end.
I am resolv'd that thou shalt spend some time
With Valentinus in the emperor's court:
What maintenance he from his friends receives,
Like exhibition thou shalt have from me.

To-morrow be in readiness to go:

Excuse it not, for I am peremptory.

Pro. My lord, I cannot be so soon provided:
Please you, deliberate a day or two.

Ant. Look, what thou want'st shall be sent after thee:
No more of stay; to-morrow thou must go.
Come on, Panthino: you shall be employ'd
To hasten on his expedition.

Exeunt Antonio and Panthino.

Pro. Thus have I shunned the fire for fear of burning,
And drench'd me in the sea, where I am drown'd.
I fear'd to show my father Julia's letter,
Lest he should take exceptions to my love;
And with the vantage of mine own excuse
Hath he excepted most against my love.
O! how this spring of love resembleth
The uncertain glory of an April day,
Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away.

Re-enter Panthino.

Pant. Sir Proteus, your father calls for you:
He is in haste; therefore, I pray you, go.

Pro. Why, this it is: my heart accords thereto,
And yet a thousand times it answers
'No.'

Exeunt. 94

ACT II.

Enter Valentine and Speed.

Speed. Sir, your glove.

Val. Not mine; my gloves are on.

Speed. Why, then this may be yours, for this is but one.

Val. Ha! let me see: ay, give it me, it's mine;
Sweet ornament that decks a thing divine!
Ah Silvia! Silvia!

Speed. Madam Silvia! Madam Silvia!

Val. How now, sirrah?

Speed. She is not within hearing, sir.

Val. Why, sir, who bade you call her?

Speed. Your worship, sir; or else I mistook.

Val. Well, you'll still be too forward.

Speed. And yet I was last chidden for being too slow.

Val. Go to, sir. Tell me, do you know Madam Silvia?

Speed. She that your worship loves?

Val. Why, how know you that I am in love?

Speed. Marry, by these special marks. First, you have learned, like Sir Proteus, to wreath your arms, like a malecontent; to relish a lovesong like a robin-redbreast; to walk alone, like one that had the pestilence; to sigh like a school-boy that had lost his A B C; to weep, like a young wench that had buried her grandam; to fast, like one that takes diet; to watch, like one that fears robbing; to speak puling, like a beggar at Hallowmas. You were wont, when you laughed, to crow like a cock; when you walked, to walk like one of the lions; when you fasted, it was presently after dinner; when you Enter Silvia.

Val. Madam and mistress, a thousand good-mornings.

Speed. Aside. O! give ye good even: here's a million of manners.

Sil. Sir Valentine and servant, to you two thousand.

Speed. Aside. He should give her interest, and she gives it him.

Val. As you enjoin'd me, I have writ your letter Unto the secret nameless friend of yours Which I was much unwilling to proceed in But for my duty to your ladyship.

Sil. I thank you, gentle servant. 'Tis very clerkly done.

Val. Now trust me, madam, it came hardly off; For being ignorant to whom it goes I writ at random, very doubtfully.

Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much pains?

Val. No, madam: so it steal you, I will write, Please you command, a thousand times as much. And yet—

Sil. A pretty period! Well, I guess the sequel; And yet I will not name it; and yet I care not; And yet take this again; and yet I thank you, Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.

Speed. Aside. And yet you will; and yet another yet.

Val. What means your ladyship? do you not like it?

Sil. Yes, yes: the lines are very quaintly writ, But since unwillingly, take them again. Nay, take them.

Val. Madam, they are for you.

Sil. Ay, ay; you writ them, sir, at my request, But I will none of them; they are for you. I would have had them writ more movingly.

Val. Please you, I'll write your ladyship another.

Sil. And when it's writ, for my sake read it over: And if it please you, so; if not, why, so.

Val. If it please me, madam, what then?

Sil. Why, if it please you, take it for your labour: And so good morrow, servant. Exit.

Speed. O jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible, As a nose on a man's face, or a weathercock on a steeple!

My master suing to her, and she hath taught her suitor, He being her pupil, to become her tutor.

O excellent device! was there ever heard a better, That my master, being scribe, to himself should write the letter?

Val. How now, sir! what are you reasoning with yourself?

Speed. Nay, I was ruminating: 'tis you that have the reason.

Val. To do what?

Speed. To be a spokesman from Madam Silvia. Val. To whom?

Speed. To yourself. Why, she woos you by a figure?

Val. What figure?

Speed. By a letter, I should say.

Val. Why, she hath not writ to me?

Speed. What need she, when she hath made you write to yourself? Why, do you not perceive the jest?

Val. No, believe me.

Speed. No believing you, indeed, sir: but did you perceive her earnest?

Val. She gave me none, except an angry word.

Speed. Why, she hath given you a letter.

Val. That's the letter I write to her friend.

Speed. And that letter hath she delivered, and there an end.

Val. I would it were no worse.

Speed. I'll warrant you, 'tis as well:
For often have you writ to her, and she, in modesty,
Or else for want of idle time, could not again reply:
Or fearing else some messenger that might her mind discover,
Herself hath taught her love himself to write unto her lover.
All this I speak in print, for in print I found it.
Why muse you, sir? 'tis dinner-time.

Val. I have dined.

Speed. Ay, but hearken, sir: though the chameleon Love can feed on the air, I am one that am nourished by my virtues and would fain have meat. O! be not like your mistress: be moved, be moved.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Verona. A Room in JULIA'S House.

Enter Proteus and Julia.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia.

Jul. I must, where is no remedy.

Pro. When possibly I can, I will return.

Jul. If you turn not, you will return the sooner.

Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's sake.

Giving a ring.

Pro. Why, then we'll make exchange: here, take you this.

Jul. And seal the bargain with a holy kiss.

Pro. Here is my hand for my true constancy;
And when that hour overslips me in the day,
Wherein I sigh not, Julia, for thy sake,
The next ensuing hour some foul mischance
Torment me for my love's forgetfulness!
My father stays my coming; answer not.
The tide is now: nay, not thy tide of tears;
That tide will stay me longer than I should.
Julia, farewell.

Exit JULIA.

What! gone without a word?
Ay, so true love should do: it cannot speak;
For truth hath better deeds than words to grace it.

Enter PANTHINO.

Pant. Sir Proteus, you are stay'd for.

Pro. Go; I come, I come.

Ah! this parting strikes poor lovers dumb.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter Launce, leading a dog.

Launce. Nay, 'twill be this hour ere I have done weeping: all the kind of the Launcest have this very fault. I have received my proportion, like the prodigions son, and am going with Sir Proteus to the imperial's court. I think Crab my dog be the sorest-natured dog that lives: my mother weeping, my father wailing, my sister crying, our maid howling, our cat wringing his hands, and all our house in a great perplexity yet did not this cruel-hearted cur shed one tear. He is a stone, a very pebble, and has not more pity in him than a dog; a Jew would have wept to have seen our parting: why, my grandam having no eyes, look you, wept herself blind in my parting. Nay, I'll show you the manner of it. This shoe is my father; no, this left shoe is my father; nay, that cannot be so neither: yes, so is it; so is it; hath the worse sole. This shoe with the hole in it, is my mother, and this my father. A vengeance on 't! there 'tis: now, sir, this staff is my sister; for, look you, she is a white as a lily and as small as a wand: this is Nan, our maid: I am the dog; no, the dog himself, and I am the dog; O! the dog is me and I am myself: ay, so, so. Now come I to my father; 'Father, your blessing': now should no shoe speak a word for weeping: now should I kiss my father; well, he weeps on. Now come I to my mother; O! that she could speak no like a wood woman. Well, I kiss her; why there 'tis; here's my mother's breath up and down. Now come I to my sister; mark thon man she makes: now the dog all this while sheds not a tear nor speaks a word; but see how I lay the dust with my tears.

Enter PANTHINO.

Pant. Launce, away, away, abroad! thy mate is shipped, and thou art to post after with care.

What's the matter? why weephest thou, man?

Away, ass! you'll lose the tide if you tarry an longer.

Launce. It is no matter if the tied were lost for it is the unkindest tied that ever any man tied.

Pant. What's the unkindest tide?

Launce. Why, he that's tied here, Crab, my dog.

Pant. Tut man, I mean thou 'lt lose the flood and, in losing the flood, lose thy voyage; and in losing thy voyage, lose thy master; and, in losing thy master, lose thy service; and, in losing thy service,—Why dost thou stop my mouth?

Launce. For fear thou 'sh't lose thy tongue

Pant. Where should I lose my tongue?

Launce. In thy tale.

Pant. In thy tale!

Launce. Lose the tide, and the voyage, and thy master, and the service, and the tied! Why man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears; if the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighs.

Pant. Come, come away, man; I was sent for to call thee.

Launce. Sir, call me what thou dar'st.

Pant. Wilt thou go?

Launce. Well, I will go.

Exeunt.

Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, and Speed.

Sld. Servant!

Val. Mistress?

Speed. Master, Sir Thurio frowns on you

Val. Ay, boy, it is for love.

Speed. Not of you.
Scene IV.

The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Val. Of my mistress then.

Speed. 'Twere good you knocked him.

Sil. Servant, you are sad.

Val. Indeed, madam, I seem so.

Thu. Seem you that you are not?

Val. Haply I do.

Thu. So do counterfeits.

Val. So do you.

Thu. What seem I that I am not?

Val. Wise.

Thu. What instance of the contrary?

Val. Your folly.

Thu. And how quote you my folly?

Val. I quote it in your jerkin.

Thu. My jerkin is a doublet.

Val. Well, then, I'll double your folly.

Thu. How?

Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio? do you change colour?

Val. Give him leave, madam: he is a kind of chameleon.

Thu. That hath more mind to feed on your blood than live in your air.

Val. You have said, sir.

Thu. Ay, sir, and done too, for this time.

Val. I know it well, sir: you always end ere you begin.

Sil. A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and quickly shot off.

Val. 'Tis indeed, madam; we thank the giver.

Sil. Who is that, servant?

Val. Yourself, sweet lady; for you gave the fire. Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your ladyship's looks, and spends what he borrows kindly in your company.

Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt.

Val. I know it well, sir: you have an exchequer of words, and, I think, no other treasure to give your followers; for it appears by their bare liveries that they live by your bare words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more. Here comes my father.

Enter Proteus.

Duke. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard beset. Sir Valentine, your father's in good health: What say you to a letter from your friends—Of much good news?

Val. My lord, I will be thankful To any happy messenger from thence.

Duke. Know you Don Antonio, your countryman?

Val. Ay, my good lord; I know the gentleman To be of worth and worthy estimation, And not without desert so well reputed.

Duke. Hath he not a son?

Val. Ay, my good lord; a son that well deserves The honour and regard of such a father.

Duke. You know him well?

Val. I know him as myself; for from our infancy We have convers'd and spent our hours together: And though myself have been an idle truant, Omitting the sweet benefit of time To clothe mine age with angel-like perfection, Yet hath Sir Proteus, for that's his name, Made use and fair advantage of his days: His years but young, but his experience old; His head unmellow'd, but his judgment ripe; And, in a word, for far behind his worth Come all the praises that I now bestow, He is complete in feature and in mind With all good grace to grace a gentleman.

Duke. Beshrew me, sir, but if hemake this good, He is as worthy for an empress' love As meet to be an emperor's counsellor. Well, sir, this gentleman is come to me With commendation from great potentates; And here he means to spend his time awhile. I think 'tis no unwelcome news to you.

Val. Should I have wish'd a thing, it had been he,

Duke. Welcome him then according to his worth.

Silvia, I speak to you; and you, Sir Thurio: For Valentine, I need not cite him to it. I'll send him hither to you presently.

Exit.

Val. This is the gentleman I told your ladyship Had come along with me, but that his mistress Did hold his eyes lock'd in her crystal looks.

Sil. Belike that now she hath enfranchis'd them Upon some other pawn for fealty.

Val. Nay, sure, I think she holds them prisoners still.

Sil. Nay, then he should be blind; and, being blind, How could he see his way to seek out you?

Val. Why, lady, Love hath twenty pair of eyes.

Thu. They say that Love hath not an eye at all.

Val. To see such lovers, Thurio, as yourself: Upon a homely object Love can wink.

Enter Proteus.

Sil. Have done, have done. Here comes the gentleman.

Val. Welcome, dear Proteus! Mistress, I beseech you, Confirm his welcome with some special favour.

Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither. If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from.

Val. Mistress, it is. Sweet lady, entertain him To be my fellow-servant to your ladyship.

Sil. Too low a mistress for so high a servant.

Pro. Not so, sweet lady; but too mean a servant To have a look of such a worthy mistress.

Val. Leave off discourse of disability. Sweet lady, entertain him for your servant. My duty will I boast of, nothing else.

Sil. And duty never yet did want his meed. Servant, you are welcome to a worthless mistress.

Pro. I'll die on him that says so but yourself. Sil. That you are welcome?

Pro. That you are worthless.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, my lord your father would speak with you.

Sil. I wait upon his pleasure. Exit Servant.

Come, Sir Thurio. Go with me. Once more, new servant, welcome: I'll leave you to confer of home-affairs; When you have done, we look to hear from you.

Pro. We'll both attend upon your ladyship, Val. Exeunt SILVIA, THURIO, and SPEED.

Val. Now, tell me, how do all from whence you came?

Pro. Your friends are well and have them much commended.

Val. And how do yours?
THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

Act II.

Pro. I left them all in health.
Val. How does your lady, and how thrives your love?
Pro. My tales of love were wont to weary you; I know you joy not in a love-discourse.
Val. Ay, Proteus, but that life is alter'd now: I have done penance for contemning love; Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd me With bitter fasts, with penitential groans, With nightly tears and daily heart-sore sighs; For in revenge of my contempt of love, Love hath chas'd sleep from my enthralled eyes, And made them watchers of mine own heart's sorrow.
O gentle Proteus! Love's a mighty lord, And hath so humbled me as I confess There is no woe to his correction, Nor to his service no such joy on earth. Now no discourse, except it be of love; Now can I break my fast, dine, sup and sleep. Upon the very named of love.
Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye. Was this the idol that you worship so?
Val. Even she; and is she not a heavenly saint? Pro. No; but she is an earthly paragon. Val. Call her divine.
Pro. I will not flatter her. Val. O! flatter me, for love delights in praises. Pro. When I was sick you gave me bitter pills, And I must minister the like to you. Val. Then speak the truth by her: if not divine, Yet let her be a principality, Sovereign to all the creatures on the earth. Pro. Except my mistress.
Val. Sweet, except not any, Except thou wilt except against my love. Pro. Have I not reason to prefer mine own? Val. And I will help thee to prefer her too: She shall be dignified with this high honour,— To bear my lady's train, lest the base earth Should from her vesture chance to steal a kiss, And, of so great a favour growing proud, Disdain to root the summer-swelling flower, And make rough winter everlasting.
Pro. Why, Valentine, what bragging is this? Val. Pardon me, Proteus: all I can is nothing To her whose worth makes other worthless nothing. She is alone.
Pro. Then let her alone. Val. Not for the world. Why, man, she is mine own, And I as rich in having such a jewel As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl, The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold. Forgive me that I do not dream on thee, Because thou seest me dote upon my love. My foolish rival, that her father likes Only for his possessions are so huge, Is gone with her along, and I must after, For love, thou know'st, is full of jealousy.
Pro. But she loves you?
Val. Ay, and we are betroth'd; nay, more, our marriage-hour, With all the cunning manner of our flight, Determin'd of: how I must climb her window, The ladder made of cords, and all the means Plotted and 'greed on for my happiness. Good Proteus, go with me to my chamber, In these affairs to aid me with thy counsel.
Pro. Go on before; I shall enquire you forth.
I must unto the road, to disembark Some necessaries that I needs must use, And then I'll presently attend you.
Val. Will you make haste?
Pro. I will. Exit Valentine.
Even as one heat another heat expels, Or as one nail by strength drives out another, So the remembrance of my former love Is by a newer object quite forgotten. Is it mine eye, or Valentine's praise, Her true perfection, or my false transgression, That makes me reasonless to reason thus? She's fair, and so is Julia that I love,— That I did love, for now my love is thaw'd, Which, like a waxen image 'gainst a fire, Bears no impression of the thing it was. Methinks my zeal to Valentine is cold, And that I love him not as I was wont: O! but I love his lady too much; And that's the reason I love him so little. How shall I dote on her with more advice, That thus without advice begin to love her? 'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld, And that hath dazzled my reason's light; But when I look on her perfections, There is no reason but I shall be blind. If I can check my erring love, I will; If not, to compass her I'll use my skill. Exit.

Scene V.—The Same. A Street.

Enter Speed and Launce.

Launce. Launce! by mine honesty, welcome to Milan!

Speed. Forswear not thyself, sweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this always, that a man is never undone till he be hanged; nor never welcome to a place till some certain shot be paid and the hostess say, 'Welcome!'

Speed. Come on, you madcap, I'll to the alehouse with you presently; where, for one shot of five pence, thou shalt have five thousand comes. But, sirrah, how did thy master part with Madam Julia?

Launce. Marry, after they closed in earnest, they parted very fairly in jest.

Speed. But shall she marry him?

Launce. No.

Speed. How then? Shall he marry her?

Launce. No, neither.

Speed. What, are they broken?

Launce. No, they are both as whole as a fish.

Speed. Why then, how stands the matter with them?

Launce. Marry, thus: when it stands well with him, it stands well with her.

Speed. What an ass art thou! I understand thee not.

Launce. What a block art thou, that thou canst not! My staff understands me.

Speed. What thou sayest?

Launce. Why, and what I do too; look thee, I'll but lean, and my staff understands me.

Speed. It stands under thee, indeed.

Launce. Why, stand-under and under stand is all one.

Speed. But tell me true, will't be a match?

Launce. Ask my dog: if he say ay, it will; if he say no, it will; if he shake his tail and say nothing, it will.
Speed. The conclusion is then that it will.
Launce. Thou shalt never get such a secret of me but by a parable. 41
Speed. 'Tis well that I get it so. But, Launce, how sayest thou, that my master is become a stable lover?
Launce. I never knew him otherwise.
Speed. Than how?
Launce. A notable lubber, as thou reportest im to be.
Speed. Why, thou whoreson ass, thou mis-est me. 50
Launce. Why, fool, I meant not thee; I meant my master.
Speed. I tell thee, my master is become a hot-er.
Laurence. Why, I tell thee, I care not though he urn himself in love. If thou wilt go with me the alehouse, so; if not, thou art an Hebrew, and not worth the name of a Christian.
Speed. Why?
Launce. Because thou hast not so much charity thee as to go to the ale with a Christian.
'lt thou go? 62
Speed. At thy service.

Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—Verona. A Room in JulIa's House.

Enter JULIA and LUCETTA.

Jul. Counsel, Lucetta: gentle girl, assist me;
And e'en in kind love I do conjure thee,
Who art the table wherein all my thoughts
Are visibly character'd and engrav'd,
To lesson me and tell me some good mean
How, with my honour, I may undertake
A journey to my loving Proteus.
Luc. Alas! the way is wearisome and long.
Jul. A true-devoted pilgrim is not weary
To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps; 10
Much less shall she that hath Love's wings to fly,
And when the flight is made to one so dear,
Of such divine perfection, as Sir Proteus,
Luc. Better forbear till Proteus make return.
Jul. O! know'st thou not his looks are my soul's food?
Pity the dearth that I have pined in,
By longing for that food so long a time.
Didst thou but know the inly touch of love,
Thou would'st as soon go kindle fire with snow
As seek to quench the fire of love with words. 20
Luc. I do not seek to quench your love's hotfire,
But qualify the fire's extreme rage,
Lest it should burn above the bounds of reason.
Jul. The more thou dam'st it up the more it burns.
The current that with gentle murmur glides,
Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently doth rage:
But when his fair course is not hindered,
He makes sweet music with the enamelled stones,
Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
He overtakeith in his pilgrimage;
And so by many winding nooks he strays
With willing sport to the wild ocean.
Then let me go and hinder not my course.
I'll be as patient as a gentle stream
And make a pastime of each weary step,
Till the last step have brought me to my love;
And there I'll rest, as after much turmoil
A blessed soul doth in Elysium.
Luc. But in what habit will you go along?
Jul. Not like a woman; for I would prevent
The loose encounters of lascivious men.
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds
As may beseech some well-reputed page.
Luc. Why, then your ladyship must cut your hair.
Jul. No, girl; I'll knit it up in silken strings
With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots:
To be fantastic may become a youth
Of greater time than I shall show to be.
Luc. What fashion, madam, shall I make your breeches?
Jul. That fits as well as, 'Tell me, good my lord,
What compass will you wear your farthingale?'
Why, even what fashion thou best lik'est, Lucetta.
Luc. You must needs have them with a cod-piece, madam.
Jul. Out, out, Lucetta! that will be ill-favour'd.
Luc. A round lose, madam, now's not worth a pin,
Unless you have a cod-piece to stick pins on.
Jul. Lucetta, as thou lovest me, let me have
What thou think'st meet and is most mannerly.
But tell me, wench, how will the world repute me
For undertaking so unstaied a journey? 62
I fear me, it will make me scandalis'd.
Luc. If you think so, then stay at home and go not.
Jul. Nay, that I will not.
Luc. Then never dream on infamy, but go.
If Proteus like your journey when you come,
No matter who 's pleas'd when you are gone.
I fear me, he will scarce be pleas'd withal.
Jul. That is the least, Lucetta, of my fear. 70
A thousand oaths, an ocean of his tears
And instances of infinite of love
Warrant me welcome to my Proteus.
Luc. All these are servants to deceitful men,
Jul. Base men, that use them to so base effect;
But truer stars did govern Proteus' birth:
His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles,
His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate,
His tears pure messengers sent from his heart,
His heart as far from fraud as heaven from earth.
Luc. Pray heaven he prove so when you come to him! 82
Jul. Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that wrong,
To bear a hard opinion of his truth:
Only deserve my love by loving him,
And presently go with me to my chamber,
To take a note of what I stand in need of
To furnish me upon my longing journey.
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,
My goods, my lands, my reputation; 90
Only, in lien thereof, dispatch me hence.
Come, answer not, but to it presently!
I am impatient of my tardiance.

Exit.

ACT III.

Enter DUKE, THURIO, and PROTEUS.

Duke. Sir Thurio, give us leave, I pray, awhile:
We have some secrets to confer about.

Exit Thurio.

Now, tell me, Proteus, what's your will with me?

Pro. My gracious lord, that which I would discover
The law of friendship bids me to conceal;
But when I call to mind your gracious favours
Done to me, undeserving as I am.
My duty pricks me on to utter that,
Which else no worldly good should draw from me.
Know, worthy prince, Sir Valentine, my friend, 99
This night intends to steal away your daughter:
Myself am one made privy to the plot;
I know you have determined to bestow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates;
And should she thus be stolen away from you
It would be much vexation to your age.
Thus, for my duty's sake, I rather chose
To cross my friend in his intended drift,
Than, by concealing it, heap on your head
A pack of sorrows which would press you down,
Being unprevented, to your timeless grave. 21

Duke. Proteus, I thank thee for thine honest care,
Which to requite, command me while I live.
This love of theirs myself have often seen,
Haply when they have judged me fast asleep,
And oftentimes have purpos'd to forbid
Sir Valentine her company and my court;
But fearing less my jealous aim might err
And so unworthily disgrace the man,
A rashness that I ever yet have shunn'd,
I gave him gentle looks, thereby to find
That which thyself hast now disclos'd to me.
And, that thou may'st perceive my fear of this,
Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested,
I nightly lodge her in an upper tower,
The key whereof myself have ever kept;
And thence she cannot be convey'd away.

Pro. Know, noble lord, they have devis'd a mean
How he her chamber-window will ascend
And with a corded ladder fetch her down:
For which the youthful lover now is gone
And this way comes he with it presently;
Where, if it please you, you may intercept him.
But, good my lord, do it so cunningly
That my discovery be not aimed at;
For love of you, not hate unto my friend,
Hath made me publisher of this pretence.

Duke. Upon mine honour, he shall never know
That I had any light from thee of this.

Pro. Adieu, my lord: Sir Valentine is coming.

Exit.

Enter VALENTINE.

Duke. Sir Valentine, whither away so fast? 81
Val. Please it your grace, there is a messenger
That stays to bear my letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.

Duke. Be they of much import?
Val. The tenour of them doth but signify
My health and happy being at your court.

Duke. Nay then, no matter: stay with me awhile,
I am to break with thee of some affairs
That touch me near, wherein thou must be secret,
'Tis not unknown to thee that I have sought 85
To match my friend Sir Thurio to my daughter,
Val. I know it well, my lord; and sure, the match
Wererich and honourable; besides, the gentleman
Is full of virtue, bounty, worth and qualities
Beseeming such a wife as your fair daughter.
Cannot your grace win her to fancy him?

Duke. No, trust me: she is peevish, sullen,
Froward,
Proud, disobedient, stubborn, lacking duty;
Neither regarding that she is my child, 70
Nor fearing me as if I were her father:
And, may I say to thee, this pride of hers,
Upon advice, hath drawn my love from her;
And, where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should have been cherish'd by her childlike duty,
I now am full resolv'd to take a wife
And turn her out to who will take her in;
Then let her beauty be her wedding-dower;
For me and my possessions she e'teens not.
Val. What would your grace have me to do in this? 80

Duke. There is a lady of Verona here,
Whom I affect; but she is nice and coy
And nought esteem's my aged eloquence;
Now therefore would I have thee to my tutor,
THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

Val. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words, numb jewels often in their silent kind fore more words do move a woman's mind.
Duke. But she did scorn a present that I sent her.
Val. A woman sometimes scorns what best contents her.
end her another; never give her o'er,
or scorn at first makes after-love the more.
I she do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,
at rather to beget more love in you;
I she do chide, 'tis not to have you gone;
'or why, the fools are mad if left alone.
ake no repulse, whatever she doth say;
'or 'get you gone,' she doth not mean 'away!'
latter and praise, commend, extol their graces;
ough he'er so black, say they have angels' faces,
at man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
with his tongue he cannot win a woman.
Duke. But she I mean is promis'd by her friends into a youthful gentleman of worth, left severely from resort of men,
hat no man hath access by day to her.
Val. Why then, I would resort to her by night.
Duke. Ay, but the doors be lock'd and keys kept safe,
hat no man hath recourse to her by night.
Val. What lets but one may enter at her window?
Duke. Her chamber's aloft, far from the ground, ld built so shelving that one cannot climb it without apparent hazard of his life.
Val. Why then, a ladder quaintly made of cords, ast up, with a pair of anchoring hooks,
could serve to scale another Hero's tower,
bold Leander would adventure it.
Duke. Now, as thou art a gentleman of blood,
ise me where I may have such a ladder.
Val. When would you use it? pray, sir, tell me that.
Duke. This very night; for Love is like a child, ong for everything that he can come by.
Val. By seven o'clock I'll get you such a ladder.
Duke. But hark thee; I will go to her alone:
shall I best convey the ladder thither?
Val. It will be light, my lord, that you may bear it nder a cloak that is of any length.
Duke. A cloak as long as thine will serve the turn?
Val. Ay, my good lord.
Duke. Then let me see thy cloak:
ll get me one of such another length.
Val. Why, any cloak will serve the turn, my lord,
Duke. How shall I fashion me to wear a cloak?
pray thee, let me feel thy cloak upon me.
hat letter is this same? What's here? To Silvia!
ud here an engine fit for my proceeding!
ll be so bold to break the seal for once.
y thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly;
And slaves they are to me that send them flying,
ould their master come and go as lightly,
Himself would lodge where senseless they are lying.
y herd thoughts in thy pure bosom rest them;
While I, their king, that hither them importune, curse the grace that with such grace hath bless'd
Because myself do want my servants' fortune:
I curse myself, for they are sent by me,
That they should harbour where their lord would be.
What's here?
Silvia, this night I will enfranchise thee.
'Tis so; and here's the ladder for the purpose.
Why, Phaethon, for thou art Merops' son,
Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car
And with thy daring fully burn the world?
Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine on thee?
Go, base intruder! overweening slave!
Bestow thy fawning smiles on equal mates,
And think my patience, more than thy desert,
Is privilege for thy departure hence.
Thank me for this more than for all the favours
Which all too much I have bestow'd on thee:
But if thou linger in my territories
Longer than swiftest expedition
Will give thee time to leave our royal court,
By heaven! my wrath shall far exceed the love
I ever bore my daughter or thyself.
Begone! I will not hear thy vain excuse;
But, as thou lovest thy life, make speed from hence.
Exit.

Val. And why not death rather than living perturmain?
To die is to be banish'd from myself;
And Silvia is myself; banish'd from her
Is self from self; a deadly banishment!
What light is light, if Silvia be not seen?
What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by?
Unless it be to think that she is by
And feed upon the shadow of perfection.
Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no music in the nightingale;
Unless I look on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to look upon.
She is my essence; and I leave to be,
If I be not by her fair influence
Foster'd, illumined, cherish'd, kept alive.
I fly not death, to fly is deadly doom;
Tarry I here, I but attend on death;
But, fly I hence, I fly away from life.

Enter Proteus and Launce.
Pro. Run boy; run, run, and seek him out.
Launce. Soho! soho!
Pro. What seest thou?
Launce. Him we go to find: there's not a hair on's head but 'tis a Valentine.
Pro. Valentine?
Val. No.
Pro. Who then? his spirit?
Val. Neither.
Pro. What then?
Val. Nothing.
Launce. Can nothing speak? Master, shall I strike?
Pro. Who would'st thou strike?
Launce. Nothing.
Pro. Villain, forbear.
Launce. Why sir, I'll strike nothing: I pray you—Pro. Sirrah, I say, forbear. Friend Valentine, a word.
Val. My ears are stopp'd and cannot hear good news,
So much of bad already hath possess'd them.
Pro. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine,
For they are harsh, untuneable and bad. 210
Val. Is Silvia dead?
Pro. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Silvia!
Hath she forsworn me?
Pro. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn me!
What is your news?
Launce. Sir, there is a proclamation that you are vanished.
Pro. That thou art banished: O that's the news.
From hence, from Silvia, and from me thy friend.
Val. O! I have fed upon this woe already,
And now excess of it will make me surfeit.
Doth Silvia know that I am banished?
Pro. Ay, ay; and she hath offer'd to the doom—
Which, unrevers'd, stands in effectual force—
A sea of melting pearl, which some call tears:
Those at her father's churlish feet she tender'd;
With them, upon her knees, her humble self;
Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became them
As if but now they waxed pale for woe:
But neither bended knees, pure hands held up,
Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding tears,
Could penetrate her uncompassionate sire;
But Valentine, if he be ta'en, must die.
Besides, her intercession chatt'd him so,
When she for thy repeal was supplicant,
That to close prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of bribing there.
Val. No more; unless the next word that thou speak'st
Have some malignant power upon my life:
If so, I pray thee, breathe it in mine ear,
As ending anthem of my endless doleour.
Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not help,
And stay thy help for that thou lament'st.
Time is the nurse and breeder of all good
Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love;
Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life.
Hope is a lover's staff; walk hence with that
And manage it against despairing thoughts. 230
Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence;
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd
Even in the milk-white bosom of thy love.
The time now serves not to expostulate:
Come, I'll convey thee through the city-gate,
And, ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concern thy love-affairs.
As thou lov'st Silvia, though not for thyself,
Regard thy danger, and along with me!
Val. I pray thee, Launce, an if thou seest my boy,
Bid him make haste and meet me at the North-gate.
Val. O my dear Silvia! hapless Valentine!
Exit VALENTINE and PROTEUS.
Laurence. I am but a fool, look you, and yet I have the wit to think my master is a kind of a knave; but that's all one, if he be but one knave.
He lives not now that knows me to be in love:
yet I am in love; but a team of horse shall not pluck that from me, nor who 'tis I love; and yet 'tis a woman; but what woman, I will not tell myself; and yet 'tis a milkmaid; yet 'tis not a maid, for she hath had gossips; yet 'tis a maid, for she is her master's maid, and serves for wages. She hath more qualities than a water-spaniel, which is much in a bare Christian.

Pulling out a paper.
Here is the cate-loc of her conditions. Imprimis,
She can fetch and carry. Why, a horse can do more: ay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry; therefore is she better than a jade. Item, She can milk; look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

Enter Speed.
Speed. How now, Signior Launce! what news with your mastership?
Launce. With my master's ship? why, it is at sea.
Speed. Well, your old vice still; mistake the word. What news, then, in your paper?
Launce. The blackest news that ever thon heardest.
Speed. Why, man, how black?
Launce. Why, as black as ink.
Speed. Let me read them.
Launce. Fie on thee, jolthead! thou canst not read.
Speed. Thou liest; I can.
Launce. I will try thee. Tell me this: who begot thee?
Speed. Marry, the son of my grandfather.
Launce. O illiterate loiterer! it was the son of thy grandmother. This proves that thou canst not read.
Speed. Come, fool, come: try me in thy paper.
Launce. There, and Saint Nicholas be thy speed!
Speed. Imprimis. She can milk.
Launce. Ay, that she can.
Speed. Item, She brews good ale.
Launce. And thereof comes the proverb: 'Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale.'
Speed. Item, She can knit.
Launce. That's as much as to say, Can she so?
Speed. Item, She can spin.
Launce. What need a man care for a stock with a wench, when she can knit him a stock?
Speed. Item, She can wash and scour.
Launce. A special virtue; for then she need not be washed and scour'd.
Speed. Item, She can spin.
Launce. Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.
Speed. Item, She hath many nameless virtues.
Launce. That's as much as to say, bastard virtues; that, indeed, know not their fathers, and therefore have no names.
Speed. Here follow her vices.
Launce. Close at the heels of her virtues. Speed. Item, She is not to be kissed fastening, in respect of her breath.
Launce. Well, that fault may be mended with a breakfast. Read on.
Speed. Item, She hath a sweet mouth.
Launce. That makes amends for her sour breath.
Speed. Item, She doth talk in her sleep.
Launce. It's no matter for that, so she sleeps not in her talk.
Speed. Item, She is slow in words.
Launce. O villain, that set this down among her vices! To be slow in words is a woman's
THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

How now, Sir Proteus! Is your countryman According to our proclamation gone?

Pro. Gone, my good lord.

Duke. My daughter takes his going grievously.

Pro. A little time, my lord, will kill that grief.

Duke. So I believe; but Thurio thinks not so.

Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee. For thou hast shown some sign of good desert, Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Pro. Longer than I prove loyal to your grace Let me not live to look upon your grace. 21

Duke. Thou know'st how willingly I would effect The match between Sir Thurio and my daughter, Pro. I do, my lord.

Duke. And also, I think, thou art not ignorant How she opposes her against my will.

Pro. She did, my lord, when Valentine was here.

Duke. Ay, and perversely she perseveres so. What might we do to make the girl forget The love of Valentine, and love Sir Thurio? 30

Pro. The best way is to slander Valentine With falsehood, cowardice and poor descent, Three things that women highly hold in hate. Duke. Ay, but she'll think that it is spoken in hate. Pro. Ay, if his enemy deliver it:

Therefore I must with circumstance be spoken By one whom she esteemeth as his friend. Duke. Then you must undertake to slander him. Pro. And that, my lord, I shall be loath to do:

'Tis an ill office for a gentleman, Especially against his very friend. Duke. Where your good word cannot advantage him, Your slander never can endanger him:

Therefore the office is indifferent, Being entertained to it by your friend.

Pro. You have prevail'd, my lord. If I can do it By aught that I can speak in his displeasure, She shall not long continue love to him. But say this weed her love from Valentine. It follows not that she will love Sir Thurio. 50

Thu. Therefore, as you unwind her love from him, Lest it should ravel and be good to none, You must provide to bottom it on me; Which must be done by praising me as much As you in worth displease Sir Valentine. Duke. And, Proteus, we dare trust you in this kind, Because we know, on Valentine's report, You are already Love's firm votary And cannot soon revolt and change your mind. Upon this warrant shall you have access Where you with Silvia may confer at large; For she is lumpish, heavy, melancholy, And, for your friend's sake, will be glad of you; Where you may temper her by your persuasion To hate young Valentine and love my friend. Pro. As much as I can do I will effect. But you, Sir Thurio, are not sharp enough; You must lay lime to tangle her desires By unlawful sonnets, whose composed rimes Should be full-fraught with serviceable vows. 70

Duke. Ay.

Much is the force of heaven-born poesy.

Pro. Say that upon the altar of her beauty You sacrifice your tears, your sighs, your heart. C
Write till your ink be dry, and with your tears
Moist it again, and frame some feeling line
That may discover such integrity:
For Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews,
Whose golden touch could soften steel and stones,
Make tigers tame and huge leviathans
Forsake unsounded deeps to dance on sands.
After your dire-lamenting elegies,
Visit by night your lady's chamber-window
With some sweet concert: to their instruments
Tame a deploring dump; the night's dead silence
Will well become such sweet-complaining grievance.
This, or else nothing, will inherit her.
_Duke._ This discipline shows thon hast been in love.
_Tr. And thy advice this night I'll put in practice.
Therefore, sweet Proteus, my direction-giver,
Let us into the city presently.
To sort some gentlemen well skill'd in music.
I have a sonnet that will serve the turn
To give the onset to thy good advice.
_Duke._ About it, gentlemen!
_Pro._ We'll wait upon your grace till after supper.
And afterward determine our proceedings.
_Duke._ Even now about it! I will pardon you.
_Exeunt._

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A _Forest_, between Milan and Verona.
_Enter certain Outlaws._

_First Out._ Fellows, stand fast; I see a passenger.

_Second Out._ If there be ten, shrink not, but down with 'em.

_Enter Valentine and Speed._

_Third Out._ Stand, sir, and throw us that you have about you;
If not, we'll make you sit and rifle you.
_Speed._ Sir, we are undone; these are the villains
That all the travellers do fear so much.
_Val._ My friends,—
_First Out._ That's not so, sir: we are your enemies.

_Second Out._ Peace! we'll hear him.
_Third Out._ Ay, by my beard, will we, for he's a proper man.
_Val._ Then know that I have little wealth to lose.
A man I am cross'd with adversity;
My riches are these poor habitments,
Of which if you should here disfurnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I have.

_Second Out._ Whither travel you?
_Val._ To Verona.
_First Out._ Whence came you?
_Val._ From Milan.

_Second Out._ Have you long sojourned there?
_Val._ Some sixteen months; and longer might have stay'd,
If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.

_First Out._ What! were you banish'd thence?
_Val._ I was.

_Second Out._ For what offence?
_Val._ For that which now torments me to rehearse.
I kill'd a man, whose death I much repent;
But yet I slew him manfully in fight,
Without false vantage or base treachery.

_First Out._ Why, ne'er repent it, if it were done so.
But were you banish'd for so small a fault?
_Val._ I was, and held me glad of such a doom

_Second Out._ Have you the tongues?
_Val._ My youthful travel therein made me
happy,
Or else I often had been miserable.

_Third Out._ By the bare scalp of Robin Hood's fat friar,
This fellow were a king for our wild faction!

_First Out._ We'll have him. Sirs, a word.
_Speed._ Master, be one of them: It's an honour able kind of thievry.
_Val._ Peace, villain!

_Second Out._ Tell us this: have you any thing to take to?
_Val._ Nothing but my fortune.

_Third Out._ Know then, that some of us are
gentlemen,
Such as the fury of ungovern'd youth
Thrusts in the company of awful men:
Myself was from Verona banished
For practising to steal away a lady,
An heir, and near allied unto the duke.

_Second Out._ And I from Mantua, for a gentle man,
Who, in my mood, I stabb'd unto the heart.

_First Out._ And I for such like petty crimes a these.
But to the purpose: for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawless lives;
And partly, seeing you are beautified
With goodly shape, and by your own report
A linguist and a man of such perfection
As we do in our quality much want—

_Second Out._ Indeed, because you are a banish'd
man,
Therefore, above the rest, we parley to you.
Are you content to be our general?
To make a virtue of necessity
And live, as we do, in this wilderness?

_Third Out._ What say'st thou? wilt thou be of our consort?
Say 'ay,' and be the captain of us all.
We'll do thee homage and be ruled by thee,
Love thee as our commander and our king.

_First Out._ But if thou scorn our courtesy thou diest.

_Second Out._ Thou shalt not live to brag what we have offer'd.
_Val._ I take your offer and will live with you.
Provided that you do no outrages
On silly women or poor passengers.

_Third Out._ No; we detest such vile, base practices.
Come, go with us: we'll bring thee to our crew
And show thee all the treasure we have got,
Which, with ourselves, all rest at thy dispose.

_Exeunt._

SCENE II.—Milan. The Court of the DUKE'S _Palace._

_Enter Proteus._

_Pro._ Already have I been false to Valentine,
And now I must be as unjust to Thurio.
Under the colour of commending him,
Enter THURIO, and Musicians.

Thu. How now, Sir Proteus! are you crept before us?
Pro. Ay, gentle Thurio; for you know that love
Will creep in service where it cannot go.
Thu. Ay; but I hope, sir, that you love not here.
Pro. Sir, but I do; or else I would be hence.
Thu. Who? Silvia?
Pro. Ay, Silvia, for your sake.
Thu. I thank you for your own. Now, gentlemen,
let's time, and to it lustily awhile.

Enter Host and JULIA, behind; JULIA in boy's clothes.

Host. Now, my young guest, methinks you're likeyholy; I pray you, why is it?
Jul. Marry, mine host, because I cannot be erry.
Host. Come, we'll have you merry. I'll bring 'run where you shall hear music and see the gentleman that you asked for.
Jul. But shall I hear him speak?
Host. Ay, that you shall.
Jul. That will be music.
Music plays.

[Enter Host with JULIA, as above.]

Jul. Is he among these?
Host. Ay; but peace! let's hear 'em.

Song.

Who is Silvia? what is she,
That all our swains commend her?
Holy, fair and wise is she;
The heaven such grace did lend her,
That she might admired be.

Is she kind as she is fair?
For beauty lives with kindness:
Love doth to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindness;
And, being help'd, inhabits there.

Then to Silvia let us sing,
That Silvia is excelling;
She excels each mortal thing
Upon the dull earth dwelling;
To her let us garlands bring.

Host. How now! are you sadder than you were before? How do you, man? the music likes on not.
Jul. You mistake; the musician likes me not.
Host. Why, my pretty youth?
Jul. He plays false, father.
Host. How? out of tune on the strings?

Jul. Not so; but yet so false that he grieves my very heart-strings.
Host. You have a quick ear.
Jul. Ay; I would I were deaf; it makes me have a slow heart.
Host. I perceive you delight not in music.
Jul. Not a whit, when it jars so.
Host. Hark! what fine change is in the music.
Jul. Ay, that change is the spite.
Host. You would have them always play but one thing?
Jul. I would always have one play but one thing.

But, host, doth this Sir Proteus that we talk on Often resort unto this gentlewoman?
Host. I tell you what Launce, his man, told me: he loved her out of all nick.
Jul. Where is Launce?
Host. Gone to seek his dog; which to-morrow, by his master's command, he must carry for a present to his lady.
Pro. Sir Thurio, fear not you; I will so plead
That you shall say my courting drift excels.
Thu. Where meet we?
Pro. At Saint Gregory's well.
Thu. Farewell.

Exeunt Thurio and Musicians.

Enter SILVIA above, at her window.

Pro. Madam, good even to your ladyship.
Sil. I thank you for your music, gentlemen.
Who is that that spake?
Pro. One, lady, if you knew his pure heart's truth,
You would quickly learn to know him by his voice.
Sil. Sir Proteus, as I take it.
Pro. Sir Proteus, gentle lady, and your servant.
Sil. What is your will?
Pro. That I may compass yours.
Sil. You have your wish; my will is even this:
That presently you lie you home to bed.
Thou subtle, perjur'd, false, disloyal man!
Think'st thou I am so shallow, so conceitless,
To be seduced by thy flattery,
That hast deceiv'd so many with thy vows?
Return, return, and make thy love amends.
For me, by this pale queen of night I swear,
I am so far from granting thy request
That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit,
And by and by intend to chide myself
Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.
Pro. I grant, sweet love, that I did love a lady;
But she is dead.
Jul. Aside. 'Twere false, if I should speak it;
For I am sure she is not buried.
Sil. Say that she be; yet Valentine thy friend
Survives; to whom, thyself art witness,
I am betroth'd; and art thou not ashamed
To wrong him with thy importunity?
Pro. I likewise hear that Valentine is dead.
Sil. And so suppose am I; for in his grave
Assure thyself my love is buried.
Pro. Sweet lady, let me rake it from the earth.
Sil. Go to thy lady's grave and call hers thence;
Or, at the least, in hers sepulchre thine.
Jul. Aside. He heard not that.
Pro. Madam, if your heart be so obdurate,
Vouchsafe me yet your picture for my love,
The picture that is hanging in your chamber:
To that I’ll speak, to that I’ll sigh and weep;
For since the substance of your perfect self
Is else devoted, I am but a shadow,
And to your shadow will I make true love.

Jul. Aside. If 'twere a substance, you would,
sure, deceive it,
And make it but a shadow, as I am.

Sil. I am very loath to be your idol, sir;
But since your falsehood shall become you well
To worship shadows and adore false shapes, 131
Send to me in the morning and I'll send it.
And so, good rest.

Pro. As wretches have o’ernight
That wait for execution in the morn.

Exeunt Proteus and Silvia.

Jul. Host, will you go?

Host. By my halidom, I was fast asleep.

Jul. Pray you, where lies Sir Proteus?

Host. Marry, at my house. Trust me, I think
'tis almost day.

Jul. Not so; but it hath been the longest night
That e'er I watch’d and the most heaviest. 14

Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Same.

Enter Eglamour.

Egl. This is the hour that Madam Silvia
Entreated me to call and know her mind:
There's some great matter she'd employ me in;
Madam, madam!

Enter Silvia above, at her window.

Sil. Who calls?

Egl. Your servant and your friend;
One that attends your ladyship's command.

Sil. Sir Eglamour, a thousand times good morrow.

Egl. As many, worthy lady, to yourself.

According to your ladyship's impose,
I am thus early come to know what service
It is your pleasure to command me in. 10

Sil. O Eglamour, thou art a gentleman,
Think not I flatter, for I swear I do not,
Valiant, wise, remorseful, well accomplish'd,
Thou art not ignorant what dear good will
I bear unto the banish'd Valentine,
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vain Thurio, whom my very soul abhors.
Thyself hast lov'd; and I have heard thee say
No grief did ever come so near thy heart
As when thy lady and thy true love died.
Upon whose grave thou vow'dst pure chastity.
Sir Eglamour, I would to Valentine,
To Mantua, where I hear he makes abode;
And, for the ways are dangerous to pass,
I do desire thy worthy company,
Upon whose faith and honour I repose.
Urge not my father's anger, Eglamour,
But think upon my grief, a lady's grief,
And on the justice of my flying hence,
To keep me from a most unholy match,
Which heaven and fortune still rewards with plagues.
I do desire thee, even from a heart
As full of sorrows as the sea of sands,
To bear me company and go with me:
If not, to hide what I have said to thee,
That I may venture to depart alone.

Egl. Madam, I pity much your grievances;
Which since I know they virtuously are plac'd,
I give consent to go along with you,
Recking as little what betideth me
As much I wish all good befortune you.
When will you go?

Sil. This evening coming.

Egl. Where shall I meet you?

Sil. At Friar Patrick's cell.

Where I intend holy confession.

Egl. I will not fail your ladyship.

Good morrow, gentle lady.

Sil. Good morrow, kind Sir Eglamour.

Exeunt.

Scene IV.—The Same.

Enter Launce, with his Dog.

Launce. When a man's servant shall play the her with him, look you, it goes hard: one that I brought up of a puppy; one that I saved from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went to it. I have taught him, even as one would say precisely, 'thus would teach a dog.' I was sent to deliver him as a present to Mistress Silvia from my master and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber but he steps me to her treacher and steals his cape's leg. 'Oh! 'tis a foul thing when a cu cannot keep himself in all companies. I would have, as one should say, one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit than he, to take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily he had been hanged for 't: sure as I live he had suffered for 't: you shall judge. He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentlemanlike dogs under the duke's table.
he had not been there—bless the mark—a piss while, but all the chamber smell him. 'Out with the dog!' says one; 'what cur is that?
says another; 'whip him out,' says the third;
'hang him up,' says the duke. I, having been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab, and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogs: 'Friend,' quoth I, 'you mean to whip the dog?' 'Ay, marry, do I,' quoth he, 'You do him the more wrong,' quoth I; 'twas I did the thing you wot of.' He makes me no more ado, but whips me out of the chamber. How many masters would do this for his servant? Nay, I'll be sworn, I have sat in the stocks for pu dlings he hath stolen, otherwise he had been executed; I have stood on the pillory for geese
he hath killed, otherwise he had suffered for't;
thou thinknest not of this now. Nay, I remem ber the trick you served me when I took my leave of Madam Silvia. Did not I bid thee still mark me and do as I do? When didst thou see me heave up my leg and make water against a gentlewoman's farthingale? Didst thou ever see me do such a trick?

Enter Proteus and Julia.

Pro. Sebastian is thy name? I like thee well.
And will employ thee in some service presently.

Jul. In what you please: I will do what I can.

Pro. I hope thou wilt. How now, thou whore son peasant!

Where have you been these two days loitering?

Launce. Marry, sir, I carried Mistress Silvia
the dog you bade me.

Pro. And what says she to my little jewel?
Launce. Marry, she says your dog was a cur, and tells you currish thanks is good enough for such a present.

Pro. But she received my dog?

Launce. No, indeed, did she not. Here have I brought him back again.

Pro. What didst thou offer her this from me?

Launce. Ay, sir; the other squirrel was stolen from me by the hangman boys in the marketplace; and then I offered her mine own, who is a dog as big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.

Pro. Go get thee hence, and find my dog again, or never return again into my sight.

Away! I say! stay'st thou to vex me here? A slave that still an end turns to shame.

Exit LAUNCE.

Sebastian. I have entertained thee.

Party that I have need of such a youth

That can with some discretion do my business,
For 'tis no trusting to a grand foolish lout;
But chiefly for thy face and thy behaviour,
Which, if my augury deceive me not,
Witness good bringing up, fortune, and truth:
Therefore know thou, for this I entertain thee.
Go presently and take this ring with thee:
Deliver it to Madam Silvia.

She lovéd me well deliver'd it to me.

Jul. It seems you lov'd not her, to leave her token.

She's dead, belike?

Pro. Not so; I think she lives.

Jul. Alas!

Pro. Why dost thou cry 'alas'?

Jul. I cannot choose but pity her.

Pro. Wherefore should'st thou pity her?

Jul. Because methinks that she lov'd you as well

As you do love your lady Silvia,

The dreams on him that has forgot her love;
You dote on her that cares not for your love.
Tis pity love should be so contrary;
And thinking on it makes me cry 'alas!'

Pro. Well, give her that ring and therewithal

This letter: that's her chamber. Tell my lady,
I claim the promise for her heavenly picture.
Your message done, lie home unto my chamber,
Where thou shalt find me sad and solitary. Exit.

Jul. How many women would do such a message?

Alas! poor Proteus, thou hast entertain'd
A fox to be the shepherd of thy lambs.
Alas! poor fool, why do I pity him
That with his very heart desipeth me?
Because he loves her, he despiseth me;
Because I love him, I must pity him.
This ring I gave him when he parted from me,
To bind him to remember my good will;
And now am I, unhappy messenger,
To plead for that which I would not obtain,
To carry that which I would have refus'd,
To praise his faith which I would have disprais'd.
I am my master's true-confirmed love,
But cannot be true servant to my master.

Unless I prove false traitor to myself.
Yet will I woo for him; but yet so coldly
As, heaven it knows, I would not have him speed.
THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA. [ACT V.

ACT V.

Enter EGLAMOUR.

Egl. The sun begins to gild the western sky, and now it is about the very hour that Silvia and Friar Patrick's cell should meet me. She will not fail; for lovers break not hours. Unless it be to come before their time, so much they spur their expedition.

Enter SILVIA.

See where she comes. Lady, a happy evening!
Sil. Amen, amen! go on, good Eglamour, out at the postern by the abbey-wall. I fear I am attended by some spies.
Egl. Fear not: the forest is not three leagues off; if we recover that, we are sure enough.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter THURIO, PROTEUS, and JULIET.

Thu. Sir Proteus, what says Silvia to my suit?
Pro. Oh, sir, I find her milder than she was, and yet she takes exceptions at your person.
Thu. What! that my leg is too long?
Pro. No, that it is too little.
Thu. I'll wear a boot to make it somewhat rounder.
Jul. Aside. But love will not be spurr'd to what it loathes.
Thu. What says she to my face?

Pro. She says it is a fair one.
Thu. Nay then, the wanton lies; my face is black.
Pro. But pearls are fair, and the old saying is, 'Black men are pearls in beautious ladies' eyes.'
Jul. Aside. 'Tis true, such pearls as put out ladies' eyes;
For I had rather wink than look on them.
Thu. How likes she my discourse?
Pro. Ill, when you talk of war.
Thu. But well, when I discourse of love and peace?
Thu. What says she to my valour?
Pro. O, sir, she makes no doubt of that.
Jul. Aside. She needs not, when she knows it cowardice.
Thu. What says she to my birth?
Pro. That you are well deriv'd.
Jul. Aside. True; from a gentleman to a fool.
Thu. Considers she my possessions?
Pro. O, ay; and pities them.
Thu. Wherefore?
Jul. Aside. That such an ass should own them.
Pro. That they are out by lease.
Jul. Here comes the duke.

Enter DUKE.

Duke. Hownow, Sir Proteus! hownow, Thurio! Which of you saw Sir Eglamour of late?
Thu. Not I.
Pro. Nor I.
Duke. Saw you my daughter?
Pro. Neither.
Duke. Why then, she's fled unto that peasant Valentine, and Eglamour is in her company. 'Tis true; for Friar Laurence met them both, as he in penance wander'd through the forest: so him he knew well, and guessed that it was she. But, being mask'd, he was not sure of it; besides, she did intend confession at Patrick's cell this even, and there she was not these likelihoods confirm her flight from hence therefore, I pray you, stand not to discourse, but mount you presently and meet with me upon the rising of the mountain-foot, that leads toward Mantua, whither they are fled, dispatch, sweet gentlemen, and follow me.

Exeunt.

Thu. Why, this it is to be a peevish girl, that flies her fortune when it follows her. I'll after, more to be reveng'd on Eglamour than for the love of reckless Silvia.

Exeunt.

Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love than hate of Eglamour that goes with her.

Exeunt.

Jul. And I will follow, more to cross that love than hate for Silvia that is gone for love.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Forest.

Enter SILVIA and OUTLAW.

First Out. Come, come.
Be patient; we must bring you to our captain.
Sil. A thousand more misanthropies than this or have learn'd me how to break this patiently.
Second Out. Come, bring her away.
First Out. Where is the gentleman that we with her?
THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

SCENE III.]

Third Out. Being nimble-footed, he hath outrun us; but Mores and Valerius follow him. Go thou with her to the west end of the wood; there is our captain. We'll follow him that's fled:
The thicket is betest; he cannot 'scape.
First Out. Come, I must bring you to our captain's cave. Fear not; he bears an honourable mind, and will not use a woman lawlessly.
Sil. O Valentine! this I endure for thee.

Execut.

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter Valentine.

Val. How use doth breed a habit in a man! This shadowy desert, unfrequented woods, I better brook than flourishing peopled towns. Here can I sit alone, unseen of any, and to the nightingale's complaining notes Tune my distresses and record my woes. O thou that dost inhabit in my breast, Leave not the mansion so scantless, lest, growing ruinous, the building fall, and leave no memory of what it was! Repair me with thy presence, Silvia! Thou gentle nymph, cherish thy forlorn swain! What halloing and what stir is this to-day? These are my mates, that make their wills their law, Have some unhappy passenger in chase. They love me well; yet I have much to do To keep them from uncivil outrages. Withdraw thee, Valentine: who's this comes here? Steps aside.

Enter Proteus, Silvia, and Julia.

Pro. Madam, this service I have done for you, though you respect not aught your servant doth, to hazard life and rescue you from him that would have forc'd your honour and your love. Vouchsafe me, for my need, but one fair look; A smaller boon than this I cannot beg, And less than this, I am sure, you cannot give. Val. How like a dream is this I see and hear! Love, lend me patience to forbear awhile. Sil. O miserable, unhappy that I am! Pro. Unhappy were you, madam, ere I came; But by my coming I have made you happy. Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most unhappy. Jul. Aside. And me, when he approacheth to your presence.

Sil. Had I been seiz'd by a hungry lion, I would have been a breakfast to the beast, rather than have false Proteus rescue me. O! heaven be judge how I love Valentine, whose life's as tender to me as my soul, and full as much, for more there cannot be, I do detest false perjur'd Proteus. Therefore be gone, solicit me no more. Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to death, Would I not undergo for one calm look! O! this the curse in love, and still approv'd, when women cannot love where they're belov'd. Sil. When Proteus cannot love where he's belov'd.

Read over Julia's heart, thy first best love, For whose dear sake thou didst then rend thy faith Into a thousand oaths; and all those oaths Descended into perjury to love me. Thou hast no faith left now, unless thou'ist true. And that's far worse than none: better have none Than plural faith which is too much by one. Thou counterfeit to thy true friend!

Pro. In love Who respects friend?

Sil. All men but Proteus. Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words Can no way change you to a milder form, I'll woo you like a soldier, at arms' end, And love you 'gainst the nature of love,—force you.

Sil. O heaven! Pro. I'll force thee yield to my desire. Val. Ruffian, let go that rude uncivil touch; Thou friend of an ill fashion!

Pro. Valentine! Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love, For such is a friend now; treacherous man! Thou hast beguil'd my hopes; nought but mine eye Could have persuaded me. Now I dare not say I have one friend alive: thou would'st disprove me.

Who should be trusted now, when one's right hand Is perjur'd to the bosom? Proteus, I am sorry I must never trust thee more, But count the world a stranger for thy sake. The private wound is deepest. O time most accust! 'Mongst all foes that a friend should be the worst! Pro. My shame and guilt confounds me. Forgive me, Valentine. If hearty sorrow Be a sufficient ransom for offence, I tender't here: I do as truly suffer As e'er I did commit.

Val. Then I am paid.

And once again I do receive thee honest. Who by repentance is not satisfied Is nor of heaven nor earth; for these are pleas'd, By penitence the Eternal's wrath appeas'd; and, that my love may appear plain and free, All that was mine in Silvia I give thee.

Jul. O me unhappy! Sceons.

Pro. Look to the boy.

Val. Why, boy! why, wag! how now! what is the matter?

Look up; speak.

Jul. O good sir, my master charg'd me To deliver a ring to Madam Silvia, Which, out of my neglect, was never done.

Pro. Where is that ring, boy?

Jul. Here 'tis: this is it.

Pro. How! let me see. Why, this is the ring I gave to Julia.

Jul. O! cry you mercy, sir; I have mistook: This is the ring you sent to Silvia.

Pro. But how canst thou by this ring? At my depart I gave this unto Julia.

Jul. And Julia herself did give it me: And Julia herself hath brought it hither.

Pro. How! Julia!

Jul. Behold her that gave him to all thy caths,
And entertain'd them deeply in her heart: 161
How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the root!
O Proteus! let this habit make thee blush:
Be thou ashamed that I have took upon me
Such an immodest aimment; if shame live
In a disguise of love:
It is the lesser blot, modesty finds,
Women to change their shapes than men their minds.

Pro. Than men their minds! 'tis true. O heaven! were man
But constant, he were perfect: that one error Fills him with faults; makes him run through all the sins:
Inconstancy falls off ere it begins.
What is in Silvia's face, but I may spy
More fresh in Julia's with a constant eye?
Val. Come, come, a hand from either.
Let me be blest to make this happy close:
'Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.

Pro. Bear witness, heaven, I have my wish for ever.

Jul. And I mine.

Enter Outlaws, with Duke and Thurio.

Out. A prize! a prize! a prize!
Val. Forbear: forbear, I say; it is my lord the duke.
Your grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd,
Banished Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine!
Thur. Yonder is Silvia; and Silvia's mine.
Val. Thurio, give back, or else embrace thy death;
Come not within the measure of my wrath;
Do not name Silvia thine; if once again,
Verona shall not hold thee. Here she stands;
Take but possession of her with a touch;
I dare thee but to breathe upon my love.

Thur. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I.
I hold him but a fool that will endanger
His body for a girl that loves him not:
I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.

Duke. The more degenerate and base art thou,
To make such means for her as thou hast done,
And leave her on such slight conditions.
Now, by the honour of my ancestry,
I do applaud thy spirit, Valentine,
And think thee worthy of an empress' love.

Know then, I here forget all former grudges,
Cancel all grudge, repeal thee home again,
Plead a new state in thy unrival'd merit,
To which I thus subscribe: Sir Valentine,
Thou art a gentleman and well deriv'd;
Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserv'd her.

Val. I thank your grace; the gift hath made me happy,
I now beseech you, for your daughter's sake,
To grant one boon that I shall ask of you.

Duke. I grant it for thine own, what'er it be

Val. These banish'd men that I have kept withal
Are men endued with worthy qualities:
Forgive them what they have committed here,
And let them be recall'd from their exile.
They are reformed, civil, full of good,
And fit for great employment, worthy lord,

Duke. Thou hast prevail'd; I pardon them and thee:
Dispose of them as thou know'st their deserts.

Val. And as we walk along, I dare be bold
With our discourse to make your grace to smile
What think you of this page, my lord?

Duke. I think the boy hath grace in him: he blushed.

Val. I warrant you, my lord, more grace than boy.

Duke. What mean you by that saying?

Val. Please you, I'll tell you as we pass along
That you will wonder what hath fortun'd

Come, Proteus; 'tis your pencease but to hear
The story of your loves discovered:
That done, our day of marriage shall be yours;
One feast, one house, one mutual happiness.

ACT I.

Enter Justice Shallow, Slender, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Shal. Sir Hugh, persuade me not; I will make a Star-chamber matter of it; if he were twenty Sir John Falstaffs he shall not abuse Robert Shallow, esquire.

Slender. In the county of Gloster, justice of peace, and coroner.

Shal. Ay, cousin Slender, and cust-ulorum.

Slender. Barn, Master person; who writes himself armiger, in any bill, warrant, quittance, or obligation, armiger.

Shal. Ay, that I do; and have done any time these three hundred years.

Slender. All his successors gone before him hath done't; and all his ancestors that come after him may: they may give the dozen white laces in their coat.

Shal. It is an old coat.

Evans. The dozen white louses do become an old coat well; it agrees well, passant; it is a familiar beast to man, and signifies love.

Shal. The lace is the fresh fish; the salt fish is an old coat.

Slender. I may quarter, coz.

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Evans. It is marring indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Evans. Yes, py'r lady; if he has a quarter of your coat, there is but three skirts for yourself, in my simple conjectures: but that is all one. If Sir John Falstaff have committed disparagements unto you, I am of the church, and will be glad to do my penance to make atonements and compromises between you.

Shal. The Council shall hear it; it is a riot.

Evans. It is not meet the Council hear a riot; there is no fear of Got in a riot. The Council, look you, shall desire to hear the fear of Got, and not to hear a riot; take your vizaments in that.

Shal. Ha! o' my life, if I were young again, the sword should end it.

Evans. It is petter that friends is the sword, and end it; and there is also another device in my prain, which peradventure prings gout discretions with it. There is Anne Page, which is daughter to Master George Page, which is pretty virginity.

Slender. Mistress Anne Page? She has brown hair, and speaks small like a woman.

Evans. It is that fery person for all the oord, as just as you will desire; and seven hundred pounds of moneys, and gold and silver, is her grandsire upon his death's-bed.—Got deliver to a joyful resurrections!—give, when she is able to overtake seventeen years old. It were a goot motion if we leave our pribles and prabbles, and desire a marriage between Master Abraham and Mistress Anne Page.

Shal. Did her grandsire leave her seven hundred pound?

Evans. Ay, and her father is make her a petter penny.

Shal. I know the young gentlewoman; she has good gifts.

Evans. Seven hundred pounds and possiabilities is goot gifts.

Shal. Well, let us see honest Master Page. Is Falstaff there?

Evans. Shall I tell you a lie? I do despise a liar as I do despise one that is false; or as I despise one that is not true. The knight, Sir John, is there; and, I peseceh you, pe ruled by your well-willers. I will peat the door for Master Page.

Knock. What hoa! Got pless your house here!

Page. Within. Who's there?

Evans. Here is Got's plessing, and your friend, and Justice Shallow; and here young Master Slender, that peradventures shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.
Enter Page.

Page. I am glad to see your worshipships well. I thank you for my venison, Master Shallow.

Shal. Master Page, I am glad to see you: much good do you your good heart! I wished your venison better; it was ill-killed. How doth good Mistress Page? and I thank you always with my heart, la! with my heart.

Page. Sir, I thank you.

Shal. Sir, I thank you; by yea and no, I do so Page. I am glad to see you, good Master Slender.

Slen. How does your fallow greyhound, sir? I heard say he was outrun on Cotsall.

Page. It could not be judged, sir.

Slen. You'll not confess, you'll not confess.

Shal. That he will not. 'Tis your fault, 'tis your fault. 'Tis a good dog.

Shal. Sir, he's a good dog, and a fair dog; can there be more said? he is good and fair. Is Sir John Falstaff here?

Page. Sir, he is within; and I would I could do a good office between you.

Evans. It is spoken a Christians ought to speak.

Shal. He hath wronged me, Master Page.

Page. Sir, he doth in some sort confess it.

Shal. If it be confessed, it is not redressed: is not that so, Master Page? He hath wronged me; indeed he hath; at a word, he hath, believe me: Robert Shallow, esquire, saith, he is wronged.

Page. Here comes Sir John.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol.

Fal. Now, Master Shallow, you'll complain of me to the king?

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men, killed my deer, and broke open my lodge.

Fal. But not kissed your keeper's daughter?

Shal. Tut, a pin! this shall be answered.

Fal. I will answer it straight: I have done all this. That is now answered.

Shal. The Council shall know this.

Fal. "I were better for you if it were known in counsel; you'll be laughed at.

Evans. Pauea verba, Sir John; goot worts.

Fal. Good worts! good cabbage. Slender, I broke your head: what matter have you against me?

Slender. Marry, sir, I have matter in my head against you; and against your cony-catchers rascals, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol. They carried me to the tavern, and made me drunk, and afterwards picked my pocket.

Bardolph. You Banbury cheese!

Slender. Ay, it is no matter.

Pistol. How now, Mephostophilus!

Nym. Sliice, I say! paeoa, paeoa; slice! that's my humour.

Slender. Where's Simple, my man? can you tell, cousin?

Evans. Peace! I pray you. Now let us understand: there is three umpires in this matter, as I understand; that is, Master Page, fidelicet Master Page; and there is myself, fidelicet myself; and the three party is, lastly and finally, mine host of the Garter.

Page. We three, to hear it and end it between them.

Evans. Fory good: I will make a brief of it in my note-book; and we will afterwards ork upon the cause with as great discreetly as we can.

Fal. Pistol!

Pistol. He hears with ears.

Evans. The tevil and his tam! what phrase is this, 'He hears with ear'? Why, it is affectations.

Fal. Pistol, did you pick Master Slender's purse?

Slender. Ay, by these gloves, did he, or I would I might never come in mine own great chamber again else, of seven groats in mill-sixpences, and two Edward shovel-boards, that cost me two shilling and two pence a-piece of Yeard Miller, by these gloves.

Fal. Is this true, Pistol?

Evans. No; it is false, if it is a pick-purse.

Pistol. Ha, thou mountain-foreigner! Sir John and master mine,

I combate challenge of this latten bilbo:

Word of denial in thy labras here!

Word of denial: froth and scum, thou liest! 17

Slender. By these gloves, then, 'twas he.

Nym. Be advised, sir, and pass good humours. I will say 'marry trap' with you, if you run the nut-book's humour on me: that is the very note of it.

Slender. By this bat, then, he in the red face had it; for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an ass.

Fal. What say you, Scarlet and John? 18

Bardolph. Why, sir, for my part, I say the gentle man had drunk himself out of his five sentences.

Evans. It is his five senses: fie, what the ignorance is!

Bardolph. And being sap, sir, was, as they say cashiered; and so conclusions passed the cares.

Slender. Ay, you spake in Latin then too; but 'tis no matter. I'll ne'er be drunk whilst I live again, but in honest, civil, godly company, for this trick; if I be drunk, I'll be drunk with those that have the fear of God, and not will drunken knaves.

Evans. So Get u'dge me, that is a virtuous mind.

Fal. You hear all these matters denied, gentle men; you hear it.

Page. Nay, daughter, carry the wine in we'll drink within.

Exit Anne Page.

Slender. O heaven! this is Mistress Anne Page.

Page. How now, Mistress Ford?

Fal. Mistress Ford, by my troth, you are very well met: by your leave, good mistress.

Kissing her.

Page. Wife, bid these gentlemen welcome. Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner come, gentlemen, I hope we shall drink down all unkindness.

Exeunt all but Shallow, Slender and Evans.

Slender. I had rather than forty shillings I had my Book of Songs and Sonnets here.
THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Scene I.

Enter Simple.

How now, Simple! where have you been? I must wait on myself, must I? You have not the Book of Riddles about you, have you?

Sim. Book of Riddles! why, did you not lend it to Alice Shortenke upon All-hallowmas last, a fortnight afore Michaelmas?

Shal. Come, coz; come, coz; we stay for you. A word with you, coz; marry, this, coz: there is, as 'twere, a tender, a kind of tender, made afar off by Sir Hugh here: do you understand me?

Slen. Ay, sir, you shall find me reasonable: if it be so, I shall do that is that reason.

Shal. Nay, but understand me.

Slen. So I do, sir.

Evans. Give ear to his motions, Master Slender.

I will description the matter to you, if you pe capacity of it.

Slen. Nay, I will do as my cousin Slender says. I pray you pardon me; he's a justice of peace in his country, simple though I stand here.

Evans. But that is not the question; the question is concerning your marriage.

Shal. Ay, there's the point, sir.

Evans. Marry, is it, the very point of it; to Mistress Anne Page.

Slen. Why, if it be so, I will marry her upon any reasonable demands.

Evans. But can you affection the 'oman? Let us command to know that of your mouth or of your lips; for divers philosophers hold that the lips is parcel of the mouth: therefore, precisely, can you carry your good will to the maid?

Shal. Cousin Abraham Slender, can you love her?

Slen. I hope, sir, I will do as it shall become one that would do reason.

Evans. But can you affection the 'oman? Let us command to know that of your mouth or of your lips; for divers philosophers hold that the lips is parcel of the mouth: therefore, precisely, can you carry your good will to the maid?

Shal. That you must. Will you, upon good dowry, marry her?

Slen. I will do a greater thing than that, upon your request, cousin, in any reason.

Shal. Nay, conceive me, conceive me, sweet coz; what I do is to please you, coz. Can you love the maid?

Slen. I will marry her, sir, at your request; but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance, when we are married and have more occasion to know one another: I hope, upon familiarity will grow more contempt: but if you say, 'Marry her,' I will marry her; that I am freely dissolved, and disolutely.

Evans. It is a very discretion answer; save the fall is in the ort 'disolutely': the ort is, according to our meaning, 'resolutely.' His meaning is good.

Shal. Ay, I think my cousin meant well.

Slen. Ay, or else I would I might be hanged, la!

Re-enter Anne Page.

Shal. Here comes fair Mistress Anne. Would I were young for your sake, Mistress Anne!

Anne. The dinner is on the table; my father desires your worship's company.

Shal. I will wait on him, fair Mistress Anne.

Evans. Od's plessed will! I will not be absence at the grace.

Exeunt Shallow and Evans.

Anne. Will 't please your worship to come in, sir?

Slen. No, I thank you, forsooth, heartily; I am very well.

Anne. The dinner attends you, sir.

Slen. I am not a hungry, I thank you, forsooth. Go, sirrah, for all you are my man, go wait upon my cousin Shallow.

Exit Simple.

A justice of peace sometime may be beholding to his friend for a man. I keep but three men and a boy yet, till my mother be dead; but what though? yet I live like a poor gentleman born.

Anne. I may not go in without your worship: they will not sit till you come.

Slen. I' faith, I'll eat nothing; I thank you as much as though I did.

Anne. I pray you, sir, walk in.

Slen. I had rather walk here, I thank you. I bruised my shin th' other day with playing at sword and dagger with a master of fence; three veneyes for a dish of stewed prunes; and, by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meat since. Why do your dogs bark so? be there bears in the town?

Anne. I think there are, sir; I heard them talked of.

Slen. I love the sport well; but I shall as soon quarrel at it as any man in England. You are afraid, if you see the bear loose, are you not?

Anne. Ay, indeed, sir.

Slen. That's meat and drink to me, now: I have seen Sackerson loose twenty times, and have taken him by the chain; but, I warrant you, the women have so cried and shrieked at it, that it passed: but women, indeed, cannot abide 'em; they are very ill-favoured rough things.

Re-enter Page.

Page. Come, gentle Master Slender, come; we stay for you.

Slen. I'll eat nothing, I thank you, sir.

Page. By cock and pie, you shall not choose, sir! Come, come.

Slen. Nay, pray you, lead the way.

Slen. Mistress Anne, yourself shall go first.

Anne. Not I, sir; pray you, keep on.

Slen. Truly, I will not go first: truly, la! I will not do you that wrong.

Anne. I pray you, sir.

Slen. I'll rather be unmannerly than troublesome. You do yourself wrong, indeed, la!

Scene II.—The Same.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Simple.

Evans. Go your ways, and ask of Doctor Caius' house, which is the way; and there dwells one Mistress Quickly, which is in the manner of his nurse, or his dry nurse, or his cook, or his laundry, his washer, and his wringer.

Sim. Well, sir.

Evans. Nay, it is petter yet. Give her this letter; for it is a 'oman that altogether's acquaintance with Mistress Anne Page: and the letter is, to desire and require her to solicit your master's desires to Mistress Anne Page. I pray
THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

[ACT I.]

SCENE III.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff, Host, Bardolph, Nym, Pistol, and Robin.

Fal. Mine host of the Garter!

Host. What says my bully-ruok? Speak scholarly and wisely.

Fal. Truly, mine host, I must turn away some of my followers.

Host. Discard, bully Hercules; cashier: let them wag: trot, trot.

Fal. I sit at ten pounds a week.

Host. Thou'rt an emperor, Caesar, Kears, and Pheazar. I will entertain Bardolph: he shall draw, he shall tap: said I well, bully Hector? n

Fal. Do so, good mine host.

Host. I have spoken; let him follow. To Bard.

Let me see thee froth and lime: I am at a word; follow. Exit. Bard.

Bard. It is a life that I have desired. I will thrive.

Exit. 20

Pist. O base Hungarian wight! wilt thou the spigot wield?

Nym. He was gotten in drink; is not the humour conceited?

Fal. I am glad I am so acquit of this tinder-box: his thefts were too open; his filing was like an unskilful singer, he kept not time.

Nym. The good humour is to steal at a mimin's rest.

Pist. 'Convey,' the wise it call. 'Steal'? fo! a fico for the phrase!

Fal. Well, sirs, I am almost out at heels.

Pist. Why, then let kibes ensue.

Fal. There is no remedy; I must cony-catch, I must shift.

Pist. Young ravens must have food.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this town?

Pist. I ken the wight: he is of substance good.

Fal. My honest lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Pist. Two yards, and more.

Fal. No quips now, Pistol! Indeed, I am in the waist two yards about; but I am now about no waste; I am about thrift. Briefly, I do mean to make love to Ford's wife: I spy entertainment in her; she discourses, she carves, she gives the leer of invitation: I can construe the action of her familiar style; and the hardest voice of her behaviour, to be English rightly, is, 'I am Sir John Falstaff.'

Pist. He hath studied her well, and translated her well, out of honesty into English.

Nym. The anchor is deep: will that humour pass?

Fal. Now, the report goes she has all the rule of her husband's purse; he hath a legion of angels.

Pist. As many devils entertain, and 'To her, boy,' say I.

Nym. The humour rises; it is good: humour me the angels.

Fal. I have writ me here a letter to her; and here another to Page's wife, who even now gave me good eyes too, examined my parts with most judicious celliades: sometimes the beam of her view gilded my foot, sometimes my portly belly.

Pist. Then did the sun on dunghill shine.

Nym. I thank thee for that humour.

Fal. O! she did so course o'er my exteriors with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scourch me up like a burning-glass. Here's another letter to her: she bears the purse too; she is a region in Giana, all gold and bounty. I will be chent to them both, and they shall be exchequers to me: they shall be my East and West Indies, and I will trade to them both. Go bear thou this letter to Mistress Page; and thou this to Mistress Ford. We will thrive, lads, we will thrive.

Pist. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become, 80

And by my side wear steel? then, Lucifer take all! Nym. I will run no base humour: here, take the humour-letter. I will keep the humour of reputation.

Fal. To Robin. Hold, sirrah, bear you these letters tightly:

Sail like my pinnace to these golden shores.

Rogues, hence! avant! vanish like hailstones, go;

Trudge, plod away o' the hoof; seek shelter, pack!

Falstaff will learn the humour of the age,

French thrill, you rogues: myself and skirted page. Exit Falstaff and Robin.

Nym. I have operations which be humours of revenge.

Pist. Wilt thou revenge?

Nym. By welkin and her star!

Pist. With wit or steel?

Nym. With both the humours, I:

I will discuss the humour of this love to Page.

Pist. And I to Ford shall eke unfold

How Falstaff, varlet vile,

His dove will prove, his gold will hold,

And his soft couch defile.

Nym. My humour shall not cool: I will incense Page to deal with poison; I will possess him with yellowness, for the revolt of mien is dangerous: that is my true humour.

Pist. Thou art the Mars of malecontents: I second thee; troop on. Exit.

Scene IV.—A Room in Doctor Caius's House.

Enter Mistress Quickly, Simple, and Rugby.

Quick. What, John Rugby! I pray thee, go to the casement, and see if you can see my master, Master Doctor Caius, coming: if he do, i' faith, and find anybody in the house, here will be an old abusing of God's patience and the king's English.

Rug. I'll go watch.

Quick. Go; and we'll have a posset for't soon at night, i' faith, at the latter end of a sea-coal fire. Exit Rugby.

An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withal; and, I warrant you, no tall-tale, nor no breed-bate: his worst fault is, that he is given to prayer; he is something peevish that way, but nobody but has his fault;
but let that pass. Peter Simple you say your name is?

Sim. Ay, for fault of a better.
Quick. And Master Slender’s your master?
Sim. Ay, forsooth.
Quick. Does he not wear a great round beard, like a grover’s paring-knife?
Sim. No, forsooth: he hath but a little wee face, with a little yellow beard, a Cain-coloured beard.
Quick. A softly-sprighted man, is he not?
Sim. Ay, forsooth; but he is as tall a man of his hands as any is between this and his head: he hath fought with a warrenner.
Quick. How say you? O! I should remember him: does he not hold up his head, as it were, and strut in his gait?
Sim. Yes, indeed, does he.
Quick. Well, heaven send Anne Page no worse fortune! Tell Master Parson Evans I will do what I can for your master: Anne is a good girl, and I wish—

Re-enter Rugby.

Rug. Out, alas! here comes my master.
Quick. We shall all be shent. Run in here, good young man; go into this closet.

Shuts SIMPLE in the closet.
He will not stay long. What, John Rugby! John, what, John, I say! Go, John, go inquire for my master; I doubt he be not well, that he comes not home.

And down, down, adown-a, etc.

Enter Doctor Caius.

Caius. Vat is you sing? I do not like dese toys. Pray you, go and vetch me in my closet an boiler vert, a box, a green-a box: do intend vat I speak? a green-a box.
Quick. Ay, forsooth; I’ll fetch it you. Aéide. I am glad he went not in himself: if he had found the young man he would have been horn-mad. a Caius. Pe, fe, fe, fe: ma foi, il fait fort chaud. Je m’en vais a la cour,—la grande affaire.
Quick. Is this, sir?
Caius. Ouy; maties le au mon pocket; dépechez, quickly. Vere is dat knife Rugby?
Quick. What, John Rugby! John!
Rug. Here, sir.
Caius. You is John Rugby, and you is Jack Rugby: come, take-a your rapier, and come after my heel to de court. a Rug. ’Tis ready, sir, here in the porch.
Caius. By my troth, Iarry too long. Od’s me! Quay jàbile! dere is some simples in my closet, dat I will not for the world I shall leave behind.
Quick. Ay me! he’ll find the young man there, and be mad.
Caius. O diable! diable! vat is in my closet? Villain! Arrow! Pulling SIMPLEx out.
Rugby, my rapier!
Quick. Good master, be content.
Caius. Vefore therefore shall I be content-a?
Quick. The young man is an honest man.
Caius. Vat shall he honest man do in my closet? dere is no honest man dat shall come in my closet.
Quick. I beseech you, be not so phlegmatic; hear the truth of it: he came of an errand to me from Parson Hugh.

Caius. Vell.
Sim. Ay, forsooth, to desire her to—
Quick. Peace, I pray you.
Caius. Peace-a your tongue! Speak-a your tale.

Sim. To desire this honest gentlewoman, your maid, to speak a good word to Mistress Anne Page for my master in the way of marriage.
Quick. This is all, indeed, la! but I’ll ne’er put my finger in the fire, and need not.
Caius. Sir Hugh send-a you?—Rugby, ballez me some paper: tarry you a little a while.

 Writers.
Quick. I am glad he is so quiet: if he had been throughly moved, you should have heard him so loud and so melancholy. But notwithstanding, man, I’ll do your master what good I can: and the very yea and the no is, the French doctor, my master,—I may call him my master, look you, for I keep his house; and I wash, wring, brew, bake, scour, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all myself.
Sim. ’Tis a great charge to come under one body’s hand.

Quick. Are you avised o’ that? you shall find it a great charge: and to be up early and down late; but notwithstanding, to tell you in your ear, I would have no words of it, my master himself is in love with Mistress Anne Page: but notwithstanding that, I know Anne’s mind, that’s neither here nor there.
Caius. You jack-nape, give-a dis letter to Sir Hugh; by gar, it is a challenge: I vill cut his trat in de Park; and I vill teach a scurvy jack-a-nape priest to meddle or make. You may be gone; it is not good you tarry here: by gar, I vill cut all his two stones; by gar, he shall not have a stone to trow at his dog. Exit SIMPLE.
Quick. Alas! he speaks but for his friend.
Caius. It is no matter-a vor dat; do not you tell-a me dat I shall have Anne Page for myself? By gar, I vill kill de Jack priest; and I have appointed mine host de de Jartiere to measure our weapon. By gar, I vill myself have Anne Page.
Quick. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well. We must give folks leave to prate: what, the good-jer!
Caius. Rugby, come to the court vit me. By gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door. Follow my heels, Rugby.
Exeunt Caius and Rugby.
Quick. You shall have An fool’s-head of your own. No, I know Anne’s mind for that: never a woman in Windsor knows more of Anne’s mind than I do, nor can do more than I do with her, I thank heaven.
Fent. Within. Who’s within there? ho!
Quick. Who’s there, I trow? Come near the house, I pray you.

Enter Fenton.

Fent. How now, good woman! how dost thou?
Quick. The better that it pleases your good worship to ask.
Fent. What news? how does pretty Mistress Anne?
Quick. In truth, sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle; and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way; I praise heaven for it.
Mrs. Page. And, trust me, I was coming to you. You look very ill.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I'll ne'er believe that: I have to show to the contrary. O Mistress Page! give me some counsel.

Mrs. Page. What's the matter, woman?

Mrs. Ford. O woman! if it were not for one trifling respect, I could come to such honour.

Mrs. Page. Hang the trifle, woman; take the honour. What is it? dispense with trifles; what is it?

Mrs. Ford. If I would but go to hell for an eternal moment or so, I could be knighted.

Mrs. Page. What? thou liest! Sir Alice Ford! These knights will hack; and so thou shouldest not alter the article of thy gentry.

Mrs. Ford. We burn daylight: here, read; perceive how I might be knighted. I shall think the worse of fat men as long as I have an eye to make difference of men's liking: and yet he would not swear; praised women's modesty and gave such orderly and well-behaved reproofs all uncomeliness, that I would have sworn his disposition would have gone to the truth of his words; but they do no more adhere and keep place together than the Hundredth Psalm to the tune of 'Green Sleeves.' What tempest, I threw this whale, with so many tuns of oil in his belly, ashore at Windsor? How shall I be revenged on him? I think the best way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fiend of lust had melted him in his own grease. Did you ever hear the like?

Mrs. Page. Letter for letter, but that the name of Page and Ford differs! To thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, here's the twin brother of thy letter: but let thine inherit first for I protest, mine never shall. I warrant, hath a thousand of these letters, writ with blank space for different names, sure more, and these are of the second edition. He will print them out of doubt; for he cares not what he puts into the press, when he would put not two: I had rather be a giantess, and lie under Mount Pelion. Well I will find you twenty lascivious turtles ere on chaste man.

Mrs. Ford. Why, this is the very same; the very words. What doth he think of us?

Mrs. Page. Nay, I know not: it makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own honesty. I'll entertain myself like one that I am not acquainted withal; for, sure, unless he know some strain in me, that I know not myself, he would never have bearded me in this fury.

Mrs. Ford. Boarding call you it? I'll be sure to keep him above deck.

Mrs. Page. So will I: if he come under my hatchets, I'll never to sea again. Let's be revenged on him: let's appoint him a meeting give him a show of comfort in his suit, and lend him on with a fine-bated delay, till he hat pawned his horses to mine host of the Garder.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I will consent to act an villainy again him, that may not sully the char- ness of our honesty. O! that my husband say this letter; it would give eternal food to his jealousy.
THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Mrs. Page. Why, look where he comes; and my good man too: he’s as far from jealously as I am from giving him cause; and that I hope is an unmeasurable distance.

Mrs. Ford. You are the happier woman.

Mrs. Page. Let’s consult together against this greasy knight. Come hither. They retire. 110

Enter Ford, Pistol, Page, and Nym.

Ford. Well, I hope it be not so.

Pist. Hope is a curtail dog in some affairs: Sir John affects thy wife.

Ford. Why, sir, my wife is not young.

Pist. He woos both high and low, both rich and poor.

Both young and old, one with another. Ford. He loves the gallimarty: Ford, perpend.

Ford. Love my wife!

Pist. With liver burning hot: prevent, or go thou.

Like Sir Actaeon, with Ringwood at thy heels. O! odious is the name. 122

Ford. What name, sir?

Pist. The horn, I say. Farewell.

Take heed; have open eye, for thieves do foot by night:

Take heed, ere summer comes or cuckoo-birds do sing.

Away, Sir Corporal Nym!

Believe it, Page; he speaks sense. Exit Ford. Ford. I will be patient: I will find out this. Nym. To Page. And this is true; I like not the humour of lying. He hath wronged me in some humours: I shoulđ have borne the humoured letter to her; but I have a sword and it shall bite upon my necessity. He loves your wife; there’s the short and the long. My name is Corporal Nym: I speak, and I avouch ’tis true: my name is Nym, and Falstaff loves your wife. Adieu. I love not the humour of bread and cheese; and there’s the humour of it. Adieu. Exit Page.

Page. ‘The humour of it,’ quoth a! ’s here’s a fellow frights humour out of his wits.

Ford. I will seek out Falstaff.

Page. I never heard such a drawing, affecting orage.

Ford. If I do find it: well.

Page. I will not believe such a Catalaian, though the priest o’ the town commanded him for a rue man.

Ford. ’Twas a good sensible fellow: well.

Page. How now, Meg!

Ford. I melancholy! I am not melancholy.

Get you home, go.

Mrs. Ford. Faith, thou hast some crotchets in thy head now. Will you go, Mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. Have with you. You’ll come to dinner, George? Adieu to Mistress Ford. Look who comes wonder; she shall be our messenger to this paltry knight.

Mrs. Ford. Trust me, I thought on her; she’ll fit it.

Enter Mistress Quickly.

Mrs. Page. You are come to see my daughter Anne?
the heart, Master Page; 'tis here, 'tis here. I have seen the time with my long sword I would have made you four tall fellows skip like rats. 22: Host. Here, boys, here, here! shall we wag? Page. Have with you. I had rather hear them scold than fight.

Exit Host, SHALLOW, and PAGE.

Ford. Though Page be a secure fool, and stands so firmly on his wife's frailty, yet I cannot put off my opinion so easily. She was in his company at Page's house, and what they made there, I know not. Well, I will look further into't; and I have a disguise to sound Falstaff. If I find her honest, I lose not my labour; if she be otherwise, 'tis labour well bestowed.

Exit.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter FALSTAFF and PISTOL.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Pist. Why, then the world's mine oyster, Which I with sword will open.

Fal. Not a penny. I have been content, sir, you should lay my countenance to pawn: I have grated upon my good friends for three reprieves for you and your coach-fellow Nywm; or else you had looked through the grate, like a geminy of baboons. I am damned in hell for swearing to gentlemen my friends, you were good soldiers and tall fellows; and when Mistress Bridget lost the handle of her fan, I took't upon mine honour than hadst it not.

Pist. Didst thou not share? hadst thou not fifteen pence?

Fal. Reason, you rogue, reason: thinkest thou I'll endanger my soul gratis? At a word, hang no more about me, I am no gibbet for you: go; a short knife and a throng! to your manor of Pickthatch! go. You'll not bear a letter for me, you rogue! you stand upon your honour! Why, thou unconfinable baseness, it is as much as I can do to keep the terms of my honour precise. I, I, I myself sometimes, leaving the fear of God on the left hand and hiding mine honour in my necessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge and to lurch; and yet you, rogue, will ensonce your rags, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases, and your bold-beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour! You will not do it, you. 20

Pist. I do relent: what would thou more of man?

Enter ROBIN.

Rob. Sir, here's a woman would speak with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY.

Quick. Give your worship good morrow.

Fal. Good morrow, good wife.

Quick. Not so, an't please your worship. Fal. Good maid, then.

Quick. I'll be sworn, 40

As my mother was, the first hour I was born.

Fal. I do believe the swearer. What with me?

Quick. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word or two?

Fal. Two thousand, fair woman; and I'll vouchsafe thee the hearing.

Quick. There is one Mistress Ford, sir: I pray, come a little nearer this ways: I myself dwell with Master Doctor Caius.

Fal. Well, on: Mistress Ford, you say,—

Quick. Your worship says very true: I pray your worship, come a little nearer this ways.

Fal. I warrant thee, nobody hears: mine own people, mine own people.

Quick. Are they so? God bless them, and make them his servants!

Fal. Well: Mistress Ford; what of her?

Quick. Why, sir, she's a good creature. Lord! Lord! your worship's a wanton! well, heaven forgive you and all of us, I pray!

Fal. Mistress Ford; come, Mistress Ford,—

Quick. Marry, this is the short and the long of it. You have brought her into such a canaries as 'tis wonderful: the best courtier of them all when the court lay at Windsor, could never have brought her to such a canary; yet there had been knights, and lords, and gentlemen, with their coaches, I warrant you, coach after coach letter after letter, gift after gift; smelling so sweetly, all musk, and so rushing, I warrant you, in silk and gold; and in such allian terms; and in such wine and sugar of the best and the fairest, that would have won any man's heart; and, I warrant you, they could never get an eye-wink of her. I had myse twenty angels given me this morning; but defy all angels, in any such sort, as they say but in the way of honesty: and, I warrant you they could never get her so much as sip on a cup with the proudest of them all; and yet there had been earls, nay, which is more, pensioners; but I warrant you, all is one with her.

Fal. But what says she to me? be brief, my good she-Mercury.

Quick. Marry, she hath received your letter, fo the which she thanks you a thousand times; and she gives you to notify that her husband will be absence from his house between ten and eleven.

Fal. Ten and eleven?

Quick. Ay, forsooth; and then you may come and see the picture, says, that you wot of Master Ford, her husband, will be from home. Alas! the sweet woman leads an ill life with him; he's a very jealous man; she leads a very frampold life with him, good heart.

Fal. Ten and eleven. Woman, commend me to her; I will not fail her.

Quick. Why, you say well. But I have another messenger to your worship: Mistress Page hath her hearty commendations to you too; and he tell you in your ear, she's as:artuous a civic modest wife, and one, I tell you, that will no miss you morning nor evening prayer, as any in Windsor, whose'er be the other; and she bad me tell your worship that her husband is seldom from home; but she hopes there will come time. She never knew a woman so dote upon man: surely, I think you have charms, la; yes in truth.

Fal. Not I, I assure thee; setting the attraction of my good parts aside, I have no othe charms.

Quick. Blessing on your heart for't!

Fal. But, I pray thee, tell me this: has Ford's wife and Page's wife acquainted each other how they love me?
Quick. That were a jest indeed! they have not so little grace, I hope; that were a trick indeed! But Mistress Page would desire you to send her your little page, of all loves; her husband has a marvellous infection to the little page; and truly Master Page is an honest man. Never a wife in Windsor leads a better life than she does: do what she will, say what she will, take all, pay all, go to bed when she lists, rise when she list, all is as she will; and, truly she deserves it; for if there be a kind woman in Windsor, she is one. You must send her your page; no remedy.

Fal. Why, I will. 139

Quick. Nay, but do so, then: and, look you, he may come and go between you both; and in my case have a nay-word, that you may know me another's mind, and the boy never need to understand anything: for 'tis not good that children should know any wickedness; old 'folk, you know, have discretion, as they say, and know the world.

Fal. Fare thee well; commend me to them both. There's my purse; I am yet thy debtor. Boy, go along with this woman. 140

Exit Mistress QUICKLY and ROBIN. This news distracts me.

Pist. This punk is one of Cupid's carriers, Clap on more sails; pursue; up with your fights: fire live! She is my prize, or ocean whelm them all! 141

Exit.

Fal. Sayest thou so, old Jack? go thy ways; I'll make more of thy old body than I have done. Will they yet look after thee? Wilt thou, after he expense of so much money, be now a gainer? Good body, I thank thee; let them say 'tis grossly done; so if be fairly done, no matter. 150

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. Sir John, there's one Master Brook below will fain speak with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath sent your worship morning's draught of sack.

Fal. Brook is his name?

Bard. Ay, sir.

Fal. Call him in. 142

Exit BARDOLPH.

Such Brooks are welcome to me, that o'erflow such liquor. Ah, ha! Mistress Ford and Mistress Page, have I uncompassed you? go to; via! 143

Re-enter BARDOLPH, with FORD disguised.

Ford. Bless you, sir.

Fal. And you, sir; would you speak with me?

Ford. I make bold to press with so little preparation upon you.

Fal. You're welcome. What's your will? give us leave, drawer. 144

Exit BARDOLPH.

Ford. Sir, I am a gentleman that have spent much: my name is Brook.

Fal. Good Master Brook, I desire more acquaintance of you. 150

Ford. Good Sir John, I sue for yours; not to harge you; for I must let you understand I hink myself in better plight for a lender than for are; the which hath something emboldened me to this unseasoned intrusion, for they say, if mone go before, all ways do lie open.

Fal. Money is a good soldier, sir, and will on.

Ford. Troth, and I have a bag of money here doubles me: if you will help to bear it, Sir John, take all, or half, for easing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deserve to be your porter.

Ford. I will tell you, sir, if you will give me the hearing.

Fal. Speak, good Master Brook; I shall be glad to be your servant.

Ford. Sir, I hear you are a scholar,—I will be brief with you,—and you have been a man long known to me, though I had never so good means, as desire, to make myself acquainted with you. I shall discover a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine own imperfection; but, good Sir John, as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the register of your own, that I may pass with a reproof the easier, sith you yourself know how easy it is to be such an offender.

Fal. Very well, sir; proceed.

Ford. There is a gentlewoman in this town; her husband's name is Ford. 29

Fal. Well, sir.

Ford. I have long loved her, and, I protest to you, bestowed much on her; followed her with a doting observance; engrossed opportunities to meet her; feed'd every slight occasion that could but niggardly give me sight of her; not only bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many to know what she would have given. Briefly, I have pursued her as love hath pursued me, which hath been on the wing of all occasions: but whatsoever I have merited, either in my mind or in my means, meed, I am sure, I have received none, unless experience be a jewel that I have purchased at an infinite rate, and that hath taught me to say this:

Love like a shadow flies when substance love pursues;

Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues.

Fal. Have you received no promise of satisfaction at her hands?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Have you importuned her to such a purpose?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Of what quality was your love then?

Ford. Like a fair house built upon another man's ground; so that I have lost my edifice by mistake the place where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpose have you unfolded this to me?

Ford. When I have told you that, I have told you all. Some say, that though she appear honest to me, yet in other places she enlarge her merit so far that there is shrewd construction made of her. Now, Sir John, here is the heart of my purpose: you are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admissance, authentic in your place and person, generally allowed for your many warlike, courtly, and learned preparations. 240

Fal. O! sir.

Ford. Believe it, for you know it. There is money; spend it, spend it; spend more; spend all I have; only give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Ford's wife: use your art of wooing, win her to consent to you; if any man may, you may as soon as any.
Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection, that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks you prescribe to yourself very preposterously.

Ford. O, understand my drift. She dwells so secretly on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not present itself: she is too bright to be looked against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand, my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves; I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage-vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too strongly embattled against me. What say you to't, Sir John?

Fal. Master Brook, I will first make bold with your money; next, give me your hand; and last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Ford's wife.

Ford. O good sir!

Fal. I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money, Sir John; you shall want none.

Fal. Want no Mistress Ford, Master Brook; you shall want none. I shall be with her, I may tell you, by her own appointment; even as you came in to me, her assistant or go-between parted from me: I say I shall be with her between ten and eleven; for at that time the jealous rascally knave her husband will be forth. Come you to me at night; you shall know how I speed.

Ford. I am best in your acquaintance. Do you know Ford, sir?

Fal. Hang him, poor cuckoldly knave! I know him not. Yet I wrong him to call him poor: they say the jealous wittol knave hath masses of money, for the which his wife seems to me well-favoured. I will use her as the key of the cuckoldly rogue's coffer, and there's my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir, that you might avoid him if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, the mechanical salt-butter rogue! I will stare him out of his wits; I will save him with my cudgel: it shall hang like a meteor o'er the cuckold's horns. Master Brook, thou shalt know I will predominate over the peasant, and thou shalt lie with his wife. Come to me soon at night. Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his style; thou, Master Brook, know him for a knave and cuckold. Come to me soon at night.

Ford. What a damned Epicurean rascal is this! My heart is ready to crack with impatience. Who says this is imprudent jealousy? my wife hath sent to him, the hour is fixed, the match is made. Would any man have thought this? See the hell of having a false woman! My bed shall be abused, my coffers ransacked, my reputation gnawed at; and I shall not only receive this villainous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abominable terms, and by him that does me this wrong. Terms! Names! Amonion sounds well; Lucifier, well; Barbarison, well; yet they are devils' additions, the names of fiends: but Cuckold! Wittol-cuckold! the devil himself hath not such a name. Page is an ass, a secure ass; he will trust his wife, he will not be jealous: I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, Parson Hugh the Welshman with my cheese, an Irishman with my aqua-vite bottle, or a thief to walk my ambling gelding, than my wife with herself: then she plots, then she ruminates, then she devises; and what they think in their hearts they may effect, they will break their hearts but they will effect. God be praised for my jealousy! Eleven o'clock the hour: I will prevent this, detect my wife, be revenged on Falstaff, and laugh at Page. I will about it; better three hours too soon than a minute too late. Fie, fie, fie! cuckold! cuckold! cuckold!

Exit. 329

Page. Master Shallow, you have yourself been a great fighter, though now a man of peace.

Shal. Bodkins, Master Page, though I now be old and of the peace, if I see a sword out my finger itches to make one. Though we are justices and doctors and churchmen, Master Page, we have some salt of our youth in us we are the sons of women, Master Page.

Page. 'Tis true, Master Shallow.

Shal. It will be found so, Master Page. Maste
THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home. I am sworn of the peace: you have showed yourself a wise physician, and Sir Hugh hath shown himself a wise and patient churchman. You must go with me, Master doctor.

Shal. We will do it.

Caius. By gar, 'tis good; vell said.

Caius. Come at my heels, Jack Rugby.

Execute.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Field near Frogmore.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans and Simple.

Evans. I pray you now, good Master Slender's servingman, and friend Simple by your name, which way have you looked for Master Caius, that calls himself doctor of physiose?

Sim. Marry, sir, the pity-ward, the park-ward, every way; old Windsor way, and every way but the town way.

Evans. I most vehemently desire you will also look that way.

Sim. I will, sir. Retiring.

Evans. Pless my soul! how full of chokers I am, and trembling of mind! I shall be glad if he have deceived me. How melancholy I am! I will knog his urinals about his knave's costard when I have good opportunities for the ork: pless my soul!

Sings.

To shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals;
There will we make our beds of roses,
And a thousand fragrant posies.

To shallow—

Mercy on me! I have a great dispositions to cry.

Melodious birds sing madrigals;—
When as I sat in Paphion,—
And a thousand vagran posies.

To shallow—

Sim. Coming forward. Yonder he is coming, this way, Sir Hugh.

Evans. He's welcome.

To shallow rivers, to whose falls—

Heaven prosper the right! What weapons is he?

Sim. No weapons, sir. There comes my master, Master Shallow, and another gentleman, from Frogmore, over the stile, this way.

Evans. Pray you, give me my gown; or else keep it in your arms.

Enter Page, Shalhow, and Slennder.

Shal. How now, Master parson! Good morrow, good Sir Hugh. Keep a gamester from the dice, and a good student from his book, and it is wonderful.

Slen. Aside. Ah, sweet Anne Page!

Page. Save you, good Sir Hugh!

Evans. Pless you from his mercy sake, all of you!

Shal. What, the sword and the word! do you study them both, Master parson?

Page. And youthful still in your doublet and hose! this raw rheumatic day!

Evans. There is reasons and causes for it.

Page. We are come to you to do a good office, Master parson.

Evans. Farry well: what is it?

Page. Yonder is a most reverend gentleman, who, belike having received wrong by some person, is at most odds with his own gravity and patience that ever you saw.

Shal. I have lived fourscore years and upward; I never heard a man of his place, gravity, and learning, so wide of his own respect.

Evans. What is he?

Page. I think you know him; Master Doctor Caius, the renowned French physician.

Evans. Got's will, and his passion of my heart! I had as lief you would tell me of a mess of porridge.

Page. Why?

Evans. He has no more knowledge in Hippocrates and Galen,—and he is a knave besides; a cowardly knave as you would desires to be acquainted withal.

Page. I warrant you, he's the man should fight with him.

Shal. It appears so by his weapons. Keep them asunder: here comes Doctor Caius.

Enter Host, Caius, and Rugby.

Page. Nay, good Master parson, keep in your weapon.
Shal. So do you, good Master doctor.
Host. Disarm them, and let them question: let them keep their limbs whole and hack our English.

Caius. I pray you, let—a me speak a word vit your ear; vefere will you not meet—a me?
Evans. Aside to Caius. Pray you, use your patience: in good time.

Caius. By gar, you are de coward, de Jack dog, John ape.
Evans. Aside to Caius. Pray you, let us not be laughing-stogs to other men’s humours; I desire you in friendship, and I will one way or other make you amends. Aloud. I will knock your urinals about your knave’s cogscomb for missing your meetings and appointments.

Caius. Diable! Jack Rugby; mine host de Jartiere; have I not stay for him to kill him? have I not, at de place I did appoint?
Evans. As I am a Christians soul now, look you, this is the place appointed. I’ll be judgment by mine host of the Garter.

Caius. Ay, dat is very good: excellent.

Host. Peace, I say! hear mine host of the Garter. Am I politic? am I subtle? am I a Machiavel? Shall I lose my doctor? no; he gives me the potions and the motions. Shall I lose my parson, my priest, my Sir Hugh? no; he gives me the proverbs and the noverbs. Give me thy hand, terrestrial; so. Give me thy hand, celestial; so. Boys of art, I have deceived you both; I have directed you to wrong places: your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole, and let burnt sack be the issue. Come, lay their swords to pawn. Follow me, lads of peace; follow, follow, follow.

Shal. Trust me, a mad host. Follow, gentlemen, follow.

Exeunt Shallow, Slender, Page, and Host.
Caius. Ha! do I perceive dat? have you make—a de sor of us? ha, ha, ha!

Evans. This is well; he has made us his villiani-stog. I desire you that we may be friends, and let us knock our brains together to be revenge on this same scal, scoury, cogging companion, the host of the Garter.

Caius. By gar, vit all my heart. He promise to bring me vek is Anne Page: by gar, he deceive me too.

Evans. Well, I will smite his noddles. Pray you, follow.

Exeunt.

Scene II.—A Street in Windsor.

Enter Mistress Page and Robin.

Mrs. Page. Nay, keep your way, little gallant: you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a leader. Whether had you rather lead mine eyes, or eye your master’s heels?
Rob. I had rather, försooth, go before you like a man than follow him like a dwarf.

Mrs. Page. O! you are a flattering boy: now I see you’ll be a courtier.

Enter Ford.

Ford. Well met, Mistress Page. Whither go you?
Scene II.]

The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. 'Have I caught my heavenly jewel?' Why, now let me die, for I have lived long enough: this is the period of my ambition. O this blessed hour!

Mrs. Ford. O sweet Sir John!

Fal. Mistress Ford, I cannot cog, I cannot prate, Mistress Ford. Now shall I sin in my wish: I would thy husband were dead. I'll speak it before the best lord, I would make thee my lady.

Mrs. Ford. I your lady, Sir John! alas, I should be a pitiful lady.

Fal. Let the court of France show me such another. I see how thine eye would emulate the diamond: thou hast the right arched beauty of the brow that becomes the ship-tire, the tire-valliant, or any tire of Venetian admittance.

Mrs. Ford. A plain kercchief, Sir John: my brows become nothing else; nor that well neither.

Fal. By the Lord, thou art a tyrant to say so: thou wouldst make an absolute courter; and the firm fixture of thy foot would give an excellent motion to thy gait in a semi-circled farthingale. I see what thou wert, if Fortune thy foe were not. Nature thy friend: come, thou canst not hide it.

Mrs. Ford. Believe me, there's no such thing in me.

Fal. What made me love thee? let that persuade thee there's something extraordinary in thee. Come, I cannot cog and say thou art this and that, like a many of these lispang hawthorn-buds, that come like women in men's apparel, and smell like Bucklersbury in simple-time: I cannot; but I love thee, none but thee, and thou dost savour it.

Mrs. Ford. Do not betray me, sir. I fear you love Mistress Page.

Fal. Thou might'st as well say I love to walk by the Counter-gate, which is as hateful to me as the neck of a lime-kin.

Mrs. Ford. Well, heaven knows how I love you; and you shall one day find it.

Fal. Keep in that mind; I'll deserve it.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you do, or else I could not be in that mind.

Rob. Within, Mistress Ford! Mistress Ford! here's Mistress Page at the door, sweating and blowing and looking wildly, and would needs speak with you presently.

Fal. She shall not see me. I will ensonce me behind the arras.

Mrs. Ford. Pray you, do so: she's a very tattling woman.

Falstaff hides himself.

Re-enter Mistress Page and Robin.

What's the matter? how now!

Mrs. Page. O Mistress Ford! what have you done? You're shamed, you are overthrow, you're undone for ever!

Mrs. Ford. What's the matter, good Mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. O well-a-day, Mistress Ford! having an honest man to your husband, to give him such cause of suspicion!

Mrs. Ford. What cause of suspicion?

Mrs. Page. What cause of suspicion! Out upon you! how am I mistook in you!

Mrs. Ford. Why, alas! what's the matter?

Mrs. Page. Your husband's coming hither, her simply; the wealth I have waits on my consent; and my consent goes not that way.

Ford. I beseech you heartily, some of you go home with me to dinner: besides your cheer, you shall have sport; I will show you a monster. Master doctor, you shall go; so shall you, Master Page; and you, Sir Hugh.

Shal. Well, fare you well; we shall have the freer woom at Master Page's.

Exit Shallow and Slender.

Caius. Go home, John Rugby; I come anon.

Exit Rugby.

Host. Farewell, my hearts. I will to my honest knight Falstaff, and drink canary with him.

Exit.

Ford. Aside. I think I shall drink in pipe-wine first with him; I'll make him dance. Will you go, gentle?

All. Have with you to see this monster.

Exit.

Scene III.—A Room in Ford's House.

Enter Mistress Ford and Mistress Page.

Mrs. Ford. What, John! what, Robert?

Mrs. Page. Quickly, quickly! Is the buck-basket—

Mrs. Ford. I warrant. What, Robin, I say!

Enter Servants with a basket.

Mrs. Page. Come, come, come.

Mrs. Ford. Here, set it down.

Mrs. Page. Give your men the charge; we must be brief.

Mrs. Ford. Marry, as I told you before, John and Robert, be ready here hard by in the broughouse; and when I suddenly call you, come forth, and without any pause or staggering, take this basket on your shoulders: that done, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the whitsters in Datchet-meal, and there empty it in the muddy ditch close by the Thames side.

Mrs. Page. You will do it?

Mrs. Ford. I have told them over and over; they lack no direction. Be gone, and come when you are called.

Exit Servants.

Mrs. Page. Here comes little Robin.

Enter Robin.

Mrs. Ford. How now, my eyes-musket! what news with you?

Rob. My master, Sir John, is come in at your back-door, Mistress Ford, and requests your company.

Mrs. Page. You little Jack-a-Lent, have you been true to us?

Rob. Ay, I'll be sworn. My master knows not of your being here and hath threatened to put me into everlasting liberty if I tell you of it, for he swears he'll turn me away.

Mrs. Page. Thou'lt a good boy; this secrecy of thine shall be a tailor to thee and shall make thee a new doublet and hose. I'll go hide me. Mistress Ford. Do so. Go tell thy master I am alone.

Exit Robin.

Mistress Page, remember you your cue.

Mrs. Page. I warrant thee: if I do not act it, blass me.

Exit.

Mrs. Ford. Go to, then: we'll use this unwholesome humility, this gross watery pumition; we'll teach him to know turtles from jays.
woman, with all the officers in Windsor, to search for a gentleman that he says is here now in the house by your consent, to take an ill advantage of his absence. You are undone. 114

Mrs. Ford. 'Tis not so, I hope.

Mrs. Page. Pray heaven it be not so, that you have such a man here! but 'tis most certain your husband's coming, with half Windsor at his heels, to search for such a one: I come before to tell you. If you know yourself clear, why, I am glad of it: but if you have a friend here, convey, convey him out. Be not amazed; call all your senses to you: defend your reputation, or bid farewell to your good life for ever. 124

Mrs. Ford. What shall I do? There is a gentleman, my dear friend; and I fear not mine own shame so much as his peril: I had rather than a thousand pound he were out of the house.

Mrs. Page. For shame! never stand 'you had rather,' and 'you had rather': your husband's here at hand; bethink you of some conveyance: in the house you cannot hide him. O! how have you deceived me. Look, here is a basket: if he be of any reasonable stature, he may creep in here; and throw foul linen upon him, as if it were going to bucking: or, it is whiting-time, send him by your two men to Datchet-meal.

Mrs. Ford. He's too big to go in there. What shall I do?

Re-enter Falstaff.

Fal. Let me see 't, let me see 't! O! let me see 't. I'll in, I'll in. Follow your friend's counsel. I'll in.

Mrs. Page. What! Sir John Falstaff! Are these your letters, knight?

Fal. I love thee: help me away; let me creep in here; I'll never—

He gets into the basket; they cover him with foul linen.

Mrs. Page. Help to cover your master, boy. Call your men, Mistress Ford. You dissembling knight!

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John! 130

Re-enter Servants.

Go take up these clothes here quickly; where's the cowl-staff? look, how you drumble: carry them to the laundress in Datchet-meal; quickly, come.

Enter Ford, Page, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Ford. Pray you, come near: if I suspect without cause, why then make sport at me, then let me be your jest; I deserve it. How now! whither bear you this?

Serv. To the laundress, forsooth.

Mrs. Ford. Why, what have you to do whither they bear it? You were best meddle with buck-washing.

Ford. Buck! I would I could wash myself of the buck! Buck, buck, buck! Ay, buck; I warrant you, buck, and of the season too, it shall appear. Exeunt Servants with the basket.

Gentlemen, I have dreamed to-night: I'll tell you my dream. Here, here, here be my keys: ascend my chambers; search, seek, find out: I'll warrant we'll unkennel the fox. Let me stop this way first: Locking the door, so, now uncape.

Page. Good Master Ford, be contented: you wrong yourself too much.

Ford. True, Master Page. Up, gentlemen; you shall see sport anon: follow me, gentlemen. Exit.

Evans. This is very fantastical humours and jealousies.

Caius. By gar, 'tis no de fashion of France: it is not jealous in France.

Exeunt PAGE, CAIUS, and EVANS.

Mrs. Page. Is there not a double excellency in this?

Mrs. Ford. I know not which pleases me better; that my husband is deceived, or Sir John.

Mrs. Page. What a taking was he in when your husband asked who was in the basket!

Mrs. Ford. I am half afraid he will have need of washing; so throwing him into the water will do him a benefit.

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest rascal! I would all of the same strain were in the same distress.

Mrs. Ford. I think my husband hath some special suspicion of Falstaff's being here; for I never saw him so gross in his jealousy till now.

Mrs. Page. I will lay a plot to try that; and we will yet have more tricks with Falstaff: his dissolute disease will scarce obey this medicine.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we send that foolish carion, Mistress Quickly, to him, and excuse his throwing into the water; and give him another hope, to betray him to another punishment?

Mrs. Page. We'll do it: let him be sent for to-morrow, eight o'clock, to have amends.

Re-enter Ford, Page, Caius, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Ford. I cannot find him: may be the knave bragged of that he could not compass.

Mrs. Page. Heard you that?

Mrs. Ford. You use me well, Master Ford, do you?

Ford. Ay, I do so.

Mrs. Ford. Heaven make you better than your thoughts!

Ford. Amen!

Ford. Ay, ay; I must bear it.

Evans. If there be any pody in the house, and in the chambers, and in the coffers, and in the presses, heaven forgive my sins at the day of judgment!

Caius. By gar, nor I too, dere is no bodies.

Page. Fie, fie, Master Ford! are you not ashamed? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? I would not ha' your distemper in this kind for the wealth of Windsor Castle.

Ford. 'Tis my fault, Master Page: I suffer for it.

Evans. You suffer for a mad conscience: your wife is as honest a 'oman as I will desires among five thousand, and five hundred too.

Caius. By gar, I see 'tis an honest woman.

Ford. Well; I promised you a dinner. Come come, walk in the Park: I pray you, pardon me; I will heretofore make known to you why I have done this. Come, wife; come, Mistress Page: pray you pardon me; pray heartily, pardon me.
Page. Let's go in, gentlemen; but, trust me, we'll mock you. I do invite you to-morrow morning to my house to breakfast; after, we'll a-birding together: I have a fine hawk for the bush. Shall it be so?

Ford. Any thing.

Evans. If there is one, I shall make two in the company.

Caius. If dere be one or two, I shall make-a de turd.

Ford. Pray you, go, Master Page.

Evans. I pray you now, remembrance to-morrow on the lousy knave, mine host.

Caius. Dat is good; by gar, vit all my heart.

Evans. A lousy knave! to have his gibes and his mockeries!

Exeunt.

Scene IV.—A Room in Page's House.

Enter Fenton and Anne Page.

Fent. I see I cannot get thy father's love; Therefore no more turn me to him, sweet Nan.

Anne. Alas! how then?

Fent. Why, thou must be thyself. He doth object I am too great of birth, And that my state being gall'd with my expense, I seek to heal it only by his wealth. Besides these, other bars he lays before me, My riots past, my wild societies; And tells me 'tis a thing impossible I should love thee but as a property.

Anne. May be he tells you true.

Fent. No, heaven so speed me in my time to come! Albeit I will confess thy father's wealth Was the first motive that I woo'd thee, Anne: Yet, wooing thee, I found thee of more value Than stamps in gold or sums in sealed bags; And 'tis the very riches of thyself That now I aim at.

Anne. Gentle Master Fenton, Yet seek my father's love; still seek it, sir: If opportunity and humblest suit Cannot attain it, why, then,—hark you hither! They converse apart.

Enter Shallow, Slender, and Mistress Quickly.

Shal. Break their talk, Mistress Quickly: my kinsman shall speak for himself.

Slen. I'll make a shaft or a bolt on't. 'Slid, his but venturing.

Shal. Be not dismayed.

Slen. No, she shall not dismay me: I care not for that, but that I am afraid.

Quick. Hark ye! Master Slender would speak a word with you.

Anne. I come to him. Aside. This is my father's choice. O! what a world of vile ill-favour'd faults Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year.

Quick. And how does good Master Fenton? Pray you, a word with you.

Shal. She's coming; to her, coz. O boy, thou hast a father!

Slen. I had a father, Mistress Anne; my uncle can tell you good jests of him. Pray you, uncle, tell Mistress Anne the jest, how my father stole two geese out of a pen, good uncle.
physician? Look on Master Fenton.' This is my doing.

Fent. I thank thee; and I pray thee, once to-night.

Give me sweet Nan this ring. There's for thy pains.

Quick. Now heaven send thee good fortune! Exit FENTON.

A kind heart he hath: a woman would run through fire and water for such a kind heart. But yet I would my master had Mistress Anne; or I would Master Slender had her; or, in sooth, I would Master Fenton had her. I will do what I can for them all three, for so I have promised, and I'll be as good as my word; but speciously for Master Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to Sir John Falstaff from my two mistresses: what a beast am I to slack it! Exit.

SCENE V.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, I say,—

Bard. Here, sir.

Fal. Go fetch me a quart of sack; put a toast in 't. Exit BARDOLPH.

Have I lived to be carried in a basket, like a barrow of butcher's offal, and to be thrown in the Thames? Well, if I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains ta'en out and buttered, and give them to a dog for a new year's gift. The rogues slipt me into the river with as little remorse as they would have drowned a blind bitch's puppies, fifteen i the litter; and you may know by my size that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking: if the bottom were as deep as hell, I should down. I had been drowned but that the shore was shelly and shallow; a death that I abhor, for the water swells a man, and what a thing should I have been when I had been swelled! I should have been a mountain of mummy.

Re-enter BARDOLPH with sack.

Bard. Here's Mistress Quickly, sir, to speak with you.

Fal. Come, let me pour in some sack to the Thames water, for my belly's as cold as if I had swallowed snowballs for pills to cool the reins. Call her in.

Bard. Come in, woman.

Enter Mistress QUICKLY.

Quick. By your leave, I cry you mercy: give your worship good morrow.

Fal. Take away these chalices. Go brew me a bottle of sack finely.

Bard. With eggs, sir?

Fal. Simple of itself; I'll no pullet-sperm in my brewage. Exit BARDOLPH.

How now!

Quick. Marry, sir, I come to your worship from Mistress Ford.

Fal. Mistress Ford! I have had ford enough; I was thrown into the ford; I have my belly full of ford.

Quick. Alas the day! good heart, that was not her fault: she does so take on with her men; they mistook their erection.

Fal. So did I mine, to build upon a foolish woman's promise.

Quick. Well, she laments, sir, for it, that it would yearm your heart to see it. Her husband goes this morning a-birding: she desires you once more to come to her between eight and nine. I must carry her word quickly: she'll make you amends, I warrant you.

Fal. Well, I will visit her: tell her so; and bid her think what a man is: let her consider his frailty, and then judge of my merit.

Quick. I will tell her.

Fal. Well, be gone: I will not miss her. Quick. Peace be with you, sir. Exit.

Fal. I marvel I hear not of Master Brook; he sent me word to stay within. I like his money well. O! here he comes.

Enter FORD.

Ford. Bless you, sir!

Fal. Now, Master Brook, you come to know what hath passed between me and Ford's wife?

Ford. That, indeed, Sir John, is my business.

Fal. Master Brook, I will not lie to you. I was at her house the hour she appointed me.

Ford. And sped you, sir?

Fal. Very ill-favouredly, Master Brook.

Ford. How so, sir? Did she change her determination?

Fal. No, Master Brook; but the peaking Cornuto her husband, Master Brook, dwelling in a continual alarum of jealousy, comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embraced, kissed, protested, and, as it were, spoke the prologue of our comedy; and at his heels a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his distemper, and, forsooth, to search his house for his wife's love.

Ford. What, while you were there?

Fal. While I was there.

Ford. And did he search for you, and could not find you?

Fal. You shall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one Mistress Page; gives intelligence of Ford's approach; and, in her invention and Ford's wife's distraction, they conveyed me into a buck-basket.

Ford. A buck-basket!

Fal. By the Lord, a buck-basket! rammed me in with foul shirts and smocks, socks, foul stockings, greasy napkins; that, Master Brook, there was the rankest compound of villainous smell that ever offended nostril.

Ford. And how long lay you there?

Fal. Nay, you shall hear, Master Brook, what I have suffered to bring this woman to evil for your good. Being thus crammed in the basket, a couple of Ford's knives, his hinds, were called forth by their mistress to carry me in the name of foul clothes to Datchet-lane: they took me on their shoulders; met the jealous knave their master in the door, who asked them once or twice what they had in their basket. I quaked for fear lest the lunatic knave would have searched it: but fate, ordaining he should be a cuckold, held his hand. Well; on went he for a search, and away went I for foul clothes. But mark the sequel, Master Brook: I suffered the pangs of three several deaths: first, an intolerable fright, to be detected with a jealous rotten bell-wether;
THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

SCENE V.

THE answer Thou he genitivo, think it that am as subject to heat as butter; a man of continual dissolution and thaw: it was a miracle to escape suffocation. And in the height of this bath, when I was more than half stewed in grease, like a Dutch dish, to be thrown into the Thames, and cooled, glazed, hot in that surge, like a horse-shoe; think of that, hissing hot, think of that, Master Brook.

Ford. In good sadness, sir, I am sorry that for my sake you have suffered all this. My suit then is desperate; you'll undertake her no more? Fal. Master Brook, I will be thrown into Etua, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her thus. Her husband is this morning gone a-birding: I have received from her another embassy of meeting; 'twixt eight and nine is the hour, Master Brook.

Ford. 'Tis past eight already, sir.

Fal. Is it? I will then address me to my appointment. Come to me at your convenient leisure, and you shall know how I speed, and the conclusion shall be crowned with your enjoying her: adieu. You shall have her, Master Brook; Master Brook, you shall eckold Ford. Exit. 142

Ford. Hum! ha! is this a dream? is this a dream? do I sleep? Master Ford, awake! awake, Master Ford! there's a hole made in your best coat, Master Ford. This 'tis to be married: this 'tis to have linen and back-baskets. Well, I will proclaim myself what I am: I will now take the lecher; he is at my house; he cannot 'scape me; 'tis impossible he should; he cannot creep into a halfpenny purse, nor into a pepper-box; but, lest the devil that guides him should aid him, I will search impossible places. Though what I am I cannot avoid, yet be to what I would not shall not make me tame; i have horns to make one mad, let the proverb go with me: I'll be horn-mad.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Street.

Enter Mistress Page, Mistress Quickly, and William.

Mrs. Page. Is he at Master Ford's already, thinkest thou?

Quick. Sure he is by this, or will be presently; but truly, he is very courageous mad about his throwing into the water. Mistress Ford desires you to come suddenly.

Mrs. Page. I'll be with her by and by: I'll but bring my young man here to school. Look, where his master comes; 'tis a playing-day, I see.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans.

How now, Sir Hugh! no school to-day?

Evans. No; Master Slender is let the boys leave to play.

Quick. Blessing of his heart!

Mrs. Page. Sir Hugh, my husband says my son profits nothing in the world at his book: I pray you, ask him some questions in his accident.

Evans. Come hither, William; hold up your head; come.

Mrs. Page. Come on, sirrah; hold up your head; answer your master, be not afraid.

Evans. William, how many numbers is in nouns? Will. Two.

Quick. Truly, I thought there had been one number more, because they say, 'Od's nouns.'

Evans. Peace your tattlings! What is fairest, William?

Will. Pulcher.

Quick. Polecats! there are fairer things than polecats, sure.

Evans. You are a very simplicity oman: I pray you, peace. What is lapis, William?

Will. A stone.

Evans. And what is a stone, William?

Will. A pebble.

Evans. No, it is lapis: I pray you remember in your prain.

Will. Lapiz.

Evans. That is good, William. What is he, William, that does lend articles?

Will. Articles are borrowed of the pronoun, and be thus declined, Singulariter, nominativo, hic, hae, hoc.

Evans. Nominativo, hie, hag, hog; pray you, mark: genitiro, hujus. Well, what is your accusative case?

Will. Accusativo, hine.

Evans. I pray you, have your remembrance, child: accusativo, hang, hony, hyp.

Quick. Hang-hog is Latin for bacon, I warrant you.

Evans. Leave your prubbles, oman. What is the focative case, William?

Will. O vocative, O.

Evans. Remember, William; focative iscaret.

Quick. And that's a good root.

Evans. 'Oman, forbear.

Mrs. Page. Peace!

Evans. What is your genitive case plural, William?

Will. Genitivo case?

Evans. Ay.

Will. Genitivo, horum, harum, horum.

Quick. Vengeance of Jenny's case! fie on her! Never name her, child, if she be a whore.

Evans. For shame, 'oman!

Quick. You do ill to teach the child such words. He teaches him to lick and to hack, which they'll do fast enough of themselves, and to call 'horum,' fie upon you!

Evans. 'Oman, art thou lunatics? hast thou no understandings for thy cases and the numbers of the genders? Thou art as foolish Christian creatures as I would desires.

Mrs. Page. Prithee, hold thy peace.

Evans. Show me now, William, some declensions of your pronouns.

Will. Forsooth, I have forgot.

Evans. It is qui, quae, quod; if you forget your quiis, your quiare, and your quods, you must be preeches. Go your ways and play; go.

Mrs. Page. He is a better scholar than I thought he was.

Evans. He is a good sprag memory. Farewell, Mistress Page.

Mrs. Page. Adieu, good Sir Hugh.

Get you home, boy. Come, we stay too long.

Exit Sir Hugh.
Scene II.—A Room in Ford’s House

Enter Falstaff and Mistress Ford.

Fal. Mistress Ford, your sorrow hath eaten up my sufferance. I see you are obsequious in your love, and I profess requital to a hair’s breadth; not only, Mistress Ford, in the simple office of love, but in all the accoutrement, complement and ceremony of it. But are you sure of your husband now?

Mrs. Ford. He’s a-birding, sweet Sir John.

Fal. What ho! gossip Ford! what ho!

Enter Mistress Page.

Mrs. Page. How now, sweetheart! who’s at home besides yourself?

Mrs. Ford. Why, none but mine own people.

Mrs. Page. Indeed!

Mrs. Page. Truly, I am so glad you have nobody here.

Mrs. Ford. Why?

Mrs. Page. Why, woman, your husband is in his old lunes again: be so takes on yonder with my husband; so rails against all married mankind; so curses all Eve’s daughters, of what complexion soever; and so buffets himself on the forehead, crying, ‘Peer out, peer out!’ that any madness I ever yet beheld seemed but tameness, civility and patience, to this his distemper he is in now. I am glad the fat knight is not here.

Mrs. Ford. Why, does he talk of him?

Mrs. Page. Of none but him; and swears he was carried out, the last time he searched for him, in a basket: protests to my husband he is now here, and hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his suspicion. But I am glad the knight is not here; now he shall see his own folly.

Mrs. Ford. How near is he, Mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. Hard by; at street end; he will be here anon.

Mrs. Ford. I am undone! the knight is here.

Mrs. Page. Why then you are utterly ashamed, and he’s but a dead man. What a woman are you! Away with him, away with him! better shame than murder.

Mrs. Ford. Which way should he go? how should I bestow him? Shall I put him into the basket again?

Re-enter Falstaff.

Fal. No, I’ll come no more i’ the basket. May I not go out ere he come?

Mrs. Page. Alas! three of Master Ford’s brothers watch the door with pistols, that none shall issue out; otherwise you might slip away ere he came. But what make you here?

Fal. What shall I do? I’ll creep up into the chimney.

Mrs. Ford. There they always use to discharge their birding-pieces.

Mrs. Page. Creep into the kiln-hole.

Fal. Where is it?

Mrs. Ford. He will seek there, on my word. Neither press, coffer, chest, trunk, well, vault, but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his note: there is no hiding you in the house.

Fal. I’ll go out then.

Mrs. Page. If you go out in your own semblance, you die, Sir John. Unless you go out disguised,—

Mrs. Ford. How might we disguise him?

Mrs. Page. Alas the day! I know not. There is no woman’s gown big enough for him; otherwise he might put on a hat, a muffler and a kerchief, and so escape.

Fal. Good hearts, devise something: any extremity rather than a mischief.

Mrs. Ford. My maid’s aunt, the fat woman of Brentford, has a gown above.

Mrs. Page. On my word, it will serve him; she’s as big as he is; and there’s her thrummed hat and her muffler too. Run up, Sir John.

Mrs. Ford. Go, go, sweet Sir John: Mistress Page and I will look some linen for your head.

Mrs. Page. Quick, quick! we’ll come dress you straight; put on the gown the while. Exit Falstaff.

Mrs. Ford. I would my husband would meet him in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brentford; he swears she’s a witch; forbade her my house and hath threatened to beat her.

Mrs. Page. Heaven guide him to thy husband’s cudgel, and the devil guide his cudgel afterwards!

Mrs. Ford. But is my husband coming?

Mrs. Page. Ay, in good sadness, is he; and talks of the basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence.

Mrs. Ford. We’ll try that; for I’ll appoint my men to carry the basket again, to meet him at the door with it, as they did last time.

Mrs. Page. Nay, but he’ll be here presently: let’s go dress him like the witch of Brentford.

Mrs. Ford. I’ll first direct my men what they shall do with the basket. Go up; I’ll bring linen for him straight.

Exit.

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest varlet! we cannot misuse him enough.

We’ll leave a proof, by that which we will do, Wives may be merry, and yet honest too: We do not act that often jest and laugh; ‘Tis old but true, ‘Still swim eat all the draft.’

Exit.

Re-enter Mistress Ford with two Servants.

Mrs. Ford. Go, sirs, take the basket again on your shoulders: your master is hard at door; if he bid you set it down, obey him. Quickly; dispatch.

Exit.

First Serv. Come, come, take it up.

Second Serv. Pray heaven it be not full of knight again.

First Serv. I hope not; I had as lief bear so much lead.

Enter Ford, Page, Shallow, Cajus, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Ford. Ay, but if it prove true, Master Page, have you any way then to unfool me again? Set down the basket, villains. Somebody call my wife. Youth in a basket! O you panders rascals! there’s a knot, a ging, a pack, a conspiracy against me: now shall the devil be
THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Mrs. Page. Come, Mother Prat; come, give me your hand.

Ford. I'll pray her. Out of my door, you witch, beats him, you hang, you baggage, you polecat, you rouyon! out, out! I'll conjure you, I'll fortune-tell you.

Exit Falstaff.

Mrs. Page. Are you not ashamed? I think you have killed the poor woman.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, he will do it. 'Tis a goodly credit for you.

Ford. Hang her, witch!

Evans. By yea and no, I think the 'oman is a witch indeed: I like not when a 'oman has a great peard; I spy a great peard under her mussler.

Ford. Will you follow, gentlemen? I beseech you, follow: see but the issue of my jealousy. If I cry out thus upon no trial, never trust me when I open again.

Page. Let's obey his humour a little further. Come, gentlemen.

Execute Ford, Page, Shallow, Caius, and Evans.

Mrs. Page. Trust me, he beat him most pitifully.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, by the mass, that he did not; he beat him most unpitifully, methought.

Mrs. Page. I'll have the cudgel hallowed and hung o'er the altar: it hath done meritorious service.

Mrs. Ford. What think you? May we, with the warrant of womanhood and the witness of a good conscience, pursue him with any further revenge? I do think you, in the way of waste, attempt us again.

Mrs. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we have served him?

Mrs. Page. Yes, by all means; if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husband's brains. If they can find in their hearts the poor unvirtuous fat knight shall be any further afflicted, we two will still be the ministers.

Mrs. Ford. I'll warrant they'll have him publicly shamed, and methinks there would be no period to the jest, should he not be publicly shamed.

Mrs. Page. Come, to the forge with it then; shape it: I would not have things cool.

Scene III. — A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Host and Bardolph.

Host. Sir, the Germans desire to have three of your horses: the duke himself will be to-morrow at court, and they are going to meet him.

Host. What duke should that be comes so secretly? I hear not of him in the court. Let me speak with the gentlewomen; they speak English?

Host. Bardolph, sir; I'll call them to you.

Host. They shall have my horses, but I'll make them pay; I'll 'lave them then: they have had my house a week at command; I have turned away my other guests: they must come off; I'll 'lave them. 'Come.

Exeunt.
THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

SCENE IV.—A Room in Ford's House

Enter Page, Ford, Mistress Page, Mistress Ford, and Sir Hugh Evans.

Evans. 'Tis one of the pest discretions of an 'oman as ever I did look upon.

Page. And did he send you both these letters at an instant?

Mrs. Page. Within a quarter of an hour.

Ford. Pardon me, wife. Henceforth do what thou wilt;

I rather will suspect the sun with cold

Than thee with wantonness; now doth thy honour stand,

In him that was of late an heretic,

As firm as faith.

Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well; no more. Be not as extreme in submission

As in offence;

But let our plot go forward: let our wives

Yet once again, to make us public sport,

Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow;

Where we may take him and disgrace him for it.

Ford. There is no better way than that they spoke of.

Page. How? to send him word they'll meet him in the Park at midnight? Fie, fie! he'll never come.

Evans. You say he has been thrown in the rivers, and has been grievously peaten as an old 'oman: methinks there should be terrors in him that he should not come; methinks his flesh is punished, he shall have no desires.

Page. So think I too.

Mrs. Ford. Devise but how you'll use him when he comes,

And let us two devise to bring him thither.

Mrs. Page. There is an old tale goes that Herne the hunter,

Sometimes a keeper here in Windsor forest,

Doth all the winter-time, at still midnight,

Walk round about an oak, with great ragg'd horns;

And there he blasts the tree, and takes the cattle,

And makes milch-kine yield blood, and shakes a chain

In a most hideous and dreadful manner:

You have heard of such a spirit, and well you know

The superstitious idle-headed eld

Received and did deliver to our age

This tale of Herne the hunter for a truth.

Page. Why, yet there want not many that do fear

In deep of night to walk by this Herne's oak.

But what of this?

Mrs. Ford. Marry, this is our device;

That Falstaff at that oak shall meet with us,

Disguised like Herne with huge horns on his head.

Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come:

And in this shape when you have brought him thither,

What shall be done with him? what is your plot?

Mrs. Page. That likewise have we thought upon, and thus:

Nan Page, my daughter, and my little son,

And three or four more of their growth, we'll dress

Like urchins, ophuses and fairies, green and white,

With rounds of waxen tapers on their heads

And rattles in their hands. Upon a sudden,

As Falstaff, she, and I, are newly met,

Let them from forth a sawpit rush at once

With some diffused song: upon their sight,

We two in great amazedness will fly:

Then let them all encircle him about,

And, fairy-like, to pinch the unclean knight;

And ask him why, that hour of fairy revel,

In their so sacred paths he dares to tread

In shape profane.

Mrs. Ford. And till he tell the truth,

Let the supposed fairies pinch him sound

And burn him with their tapers.

Mrs. Page. The truth being know

We'll all present ourselves, dis-horn the spirit

And mock him home to Windsor.

Ford. The children must

Be practised well to this, or they'll ne'er do it.

Evans. I will teach the children their b'haviours; I will be like a jack-an-apes also, to burn the knight with my taber.

Ford. That will be excellent. I'll go buy the vizards.

Mrs. Page. My Nan shall be the queen of all the fairies.

Finely attired in a robe of white.

Page. That silk will I go buy. Aside. And I will tire

Shall Master Slender steal my Nan away,

And marry her at Eton. Go send to Falstaff straight.

Ford. Nay, I'll to him again in name of Brook

He'll tell me all his purpose. Sure, he'll come.

Mrs. Page. Fear not you that. Go get your properties

And tricking for our fairies.

Evans. Let us about it: it is admirable pleasures and very honest knaverys.

Even as Page, Ford, and Evans.

Mrs. Page. Go, Mistress Ford,

Send Quickly to Sir John, to know his mind.

Exit Mistress Ford.

I'll to the doctor: he hath my good will,

And none but he, to marry with Nan Page.

That Slender, though well landed, is an idiot;

And he my husband best of all affects:

The doctor is well money'd, and his friends

Potent at court: he, none but he, shall have her,

Though twenty thousand worthier come to crave her.

Exit.

SCENE V.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Host and Simple.

Host. What would'st thou have, boor? what thickskin? speak, breathe, discuss; brief, shot, quick, snap.

Sim. Marry, sir, I come to speak with Sir John Falstaff from Master Slender.

Host. There's his chamber, his house, his castl his standing-bed and truckle-bed: 'tis painted about with the story of the Prodigal, fresh as new.

Go knock and call; he'll speak like an Anthropophaginian unto thee: knock, I say.

Sim. There's an old woman, a fat woman, got up into his chamber: I'll be so bold as stay, till she come down; I come to speak with he indeed.
Host. Ha! a fat woman! the knight may be abed: ’Tis I will. Bully knight! Bully Sir John! speak from thy lungs military: art thou so? it is thine host, thine Ephesian, calls.

Fal. Above. How now, mine host! 19

Host. There was, mine host, an old fat woman in now with me, but she’s gone.

Sim. Pray you, sir, was ’t not the wise woman Brentford?

Fal. Ay, marry, was it, muscle-shell: what aid did you with her?

Sim. My master, sir, Master Slender, sent to see her go through the streets, to know whether one Nym, sir, that beguiled him of hair, had the chain or no.

Fal. And what says she, I pray, sir?

Sim. Marry, she says that the very same man beguiled Master Slender of his chain cozened of it.

Sim. I would I could have spoken with the man herself: I had other things to have with her too from him.

Fal. What are they? let us know.

Host. Ay, come; quick. 41

Sim. I may not conceal them, sir.

Host. Conceal them, or thou diest.

Sim. Why, sir, they were nothing but about stress Aine Page; to know if it were my master’s fortune to have her or no.

Fal. ’Tis, ’tis his fortune.

Sim. What, sir?

Fal. To have her, or no. Go; say the woman d’me so.

Sim. May I be bold to say so, sir?

Fal. Ay, sir: like who more bold.

Sim. I thank your worship: I shall make my master glad with these tidings. 46

Exit. Host. Thou art clerky, thou art clerky, Sir John. Was there a wise woman with thee?

Fal. Ay, that there was, mine host; one that taught me more wit than ever I learned more in my life: and I paid nothing for it; but was paid for my learning. 62

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. Out, alas, sir! cozenage, mere cozenage! Host. Where be my horses? speak well of them, detto.

Bard. Run away with the cozeners; for so on as I came beyond Eton, they threw me off on behind one of them in a slough of mare: diset spurs and away, like three German devils, we Doctor Faustuses.

Host. They are gone but to meet the duke, lain. Do not say they be fled: Germans are nest men.

Enter Sir HUGH EVANS.

Evans. Where is mine host?

Host. What is the matter, sir?

Evans. Have a care of your entertainments: I am a friend of mine come to town, tells me there are three cozen-germans that has cozened all the hosts of Readings, of Maidenhead, of Colebrook, of horses and money. I tell you for good will, look you: you are wise and full of gibes and volting-stops, and ’tis not convenient you should be cozened. Fare you well. Exit.

Enter Doctor CAIUS.

Caius. Vere is mine host de Jarteiere?

Host. Here, Master doctor, in perplexity and doubtful dilemma.

Caius. I cannot tell vat is dat; but it is tell-a me dat you make grand preparation for a Duke de Jarmyng: by my trot, dere is no duke dat de court is know to come. I tell you for good vill: adieu. 91

Exit.

Host. Ete and cry, villain! go. Assist me, knight; I am undone. Fly, run, hue and cry, villain! I am undone!

Exeunt Host and BARDOLPH.

Fal. I would all the world might be cozened, for I have been cozened and beaten too. If it should come to the ear of the court how I have been transformed, and how my transformation hath been washed and cudgelled, they would melt me out of my fat drop by drop, and liquor Fisherman’s boots with me: I warrant they would whine me with their fine wits till I were as crest-fallen as a dried pear. I never prospered since I foreswore myself at primero. Well, if my wind were but long enough to say my prayers, I would repent.

Enter Mistress QUICKLY.

Now, whence come you?

Quick. From the two parties, forsooth.

Fal. The devil take one party and his dam the other! and so they shall be both bestowed. I have suffered more for their sakes, more than the villainous inconsistency of man’s disposition is able to bear.

Quick. And have not they suffered? Ye, I warrant; speciously one of them; Mistress Ford, good heart, is beaten black and blue, that you cannot see a white spot about her.

Fal. What tell’st thou me of black and blue? I was beaten myself into all the colours of the rainbow; and I was like to be apprehended for the witch of Brentford: but that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old woman, delivered me, the knave constable had set me i’ the stocks, i’ the common stocks, for a witch. 125

Quick. Sir, let me speak with you in your chamber; you shall hear how things go, and, I warrant, to your content. Here is a letter will say somewhat. Good hearts! what ado here is to bring you together! Sure, one of you does not serve heaven well, that you are so crossed.

Fal. Come up into my chamber. Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter FENTON and Host.

Host. Master Fenton, talk not to me: my mind is heavy; I will give over all.

Fent. Yet hear me speak. Assist me in my purpose,

And, as I am a gentleman, I’ll give thee A hundred pound in gold more than your loss.
Host. I will hear you, Master Fenton; and I will at the least keep your counsel.

Pent. From time to time I have acquainted you
With the dear love I bear to fair Anne Page;
Who mutually hath answer'd my affection,
So far forth as herself might be her choice.
Even to my wish. I have a letter from her
Of such contents as you will wonder at;
The mirth whereof so larded with my matter,
That neither singly can be manifested,
Without the show of both; wherein fat Falstaff
Hath a great scene: the image of the jest
I'll show you here at large. Hark, good mine host:
To-night at Herne's oak, just 'twixt twelve and one,
Must my sweet Nan present the Fairy Queen;
The purpose why, is here; in which disguise,
While other jests are something rank on foot,
Her father hath commanded her to slip
Away with Slender, and with him at Eton
Immediately to marry: she hath consented:
Now, sir, her mother, ever strong against that match
And firm for Doctor Caius, hath appointed
That he shall likewise shuffle her away,
While other sports are tasking of their minds;
And at the denary, where a priest attends,
Straight marry her: to this her mother's plot
She, seemingly obedient, likewise hath
Made promise to the doctor. Now, thus it rests:
Her father means she shall be all in white,
And in that habit, when Slender sees his time
To take her by the hand and bid her go,
Sheshall go with him; her mother hath intended
The better to denote her to the doctor,
For they must all be mask'd and vizarded,
That quaint in green she shall be loose enrob'd,
With ribands pendent, flaring 'bout her head;
And when the doctor spies his vantage ripe,
To pinch her by the hand; and on that token
The maid hath given consent to go with him.

Host. Which means she to deceive, father or mother?

Pent. Both, my good host, to go along with me:
And here it rests, that you'll procure the vicar
To stay for me at church 'twixt twelve and one,
And, in the lawful name of marrying,
To give our hearts united ceremony.

Host. Well, husband your device; I'll to the vicar.
Bring you the maid, you shall not lack a priest.

Pent. So shall I evermore be bound to thee;
Besides, I'll make a present recompense.

Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Garter Inn.

Enter Falstaff and Mistress Quickly.

Fal. Prithhee, no more prattling; go: I'll hold
This is the third time; I hope good luck lies in odd numbers. Away! go. They say there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance or death. Away!

Quick. I'll provide you a chain, and I'll do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

Fal. Away, I say; time wears: hold up your head, and minece. Exit Mistress Quickly.

Enter Ford.

How now, Master Brook! Master Brook, matter will be known to-night, or never.
you in the Park about midnight, at Herne's oak, and you shall see wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yesterday, sir, you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her, Master Brook, as you;
like a poor old man; but I came from Master Brook, like a poor old woman.
The same knave Ford, her husband, hath the first mad devil of jealousy in him, Master Brook that ever governed frenzy. I will tell you:
be me grievously, in the shape of a woman for in the shape of man, Master Brook, I am not Goliath with a weaver's beam, because know also life is a shuttle. I am in haste;
along with me; I'll tell you all, Master Brook.
Since I plucked geese, play'd truant, and whipped top, I know not what 'twas to begin till lately. Follow me: I'll tell you a strange things of this knave Ford, on whom night I will be revenged, and I will deliver wife into your hand. Follow. Strange this in hand, Master Brook! Follow. Exit.

SCENE II.—Windsor Park.

Enter PAGE, SHALLOW, and SLENDER.

Page. Come, come, we'll couch i'the grass-ditch till we see the light of our fairies.

Shal. Ay, forsooth: I have spoke with her; we have a day word how to know one another.

Scene. So come to her in white, and cry 'mum'; she shall give 'budget'; and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: but what needs either your 'mum' or her 'budget' but the white she decipher her well enough. It hath struck o'clock.

Page. The night is dark; light and spirits shall become it well. Heaven prosper our sport! man means evil but the devil, and we shall know him by his horns. Let's away; follow me.

Exit.

SCENE III.—The Street in Windsor.

Enter Mistress PAGE, Mistress FORD, and Doctor Caius.

Mrs. Page. Master doctor, my daughter is green: when you see your time, take her by hand, away with her to the denary, and dispatch it quickly. Go before into the Park:
two must go together.

Caius. I know vat I have to do. Adieu.

Mrs. Page. Fare you well, sir. Exit Caius.

My husband will not rejoice so much at abuse of Falstaff, as he will chaste at the doctor's marrying my daughter; but 'tis no mater; better a little chiding than a great deal heart-break.

Mrs. Ford. Where is Nan now and her trio of fairies, and the Welsh devil, Hugh?

Mrs. Page. They are all couched in a pit by Herne's oak, with obscured lights; within the very instant of Falstaff's and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

Mrs. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze me.

Mrs. Page. If he be not amazed, he will scenel]

THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

Enter Sir Hugh Evans, like a Satyr; Anne Page, as the Fairy Queen, attended by her Brother and Others, dressed like Fairies, with waxen tapers on their heads.

Anne. Fairies, black, grey, green, and white, You moonshine revelers, and shades of night, You orphan heirs of fixed destiny, Attend your office and your quality. Crier Hobgoblin, make the fairy oyes.

Hobgoblin. Elves, list your names: silence, you airy toys!

Cricket, to Windsor chimneys shall leap't: Where fires thou find'st unrak'd and hearths unsweet, There pinch the maids as blue as bilberry: Our radiant queen hates sluts and sluttery. Fal. They are fairies; he that speaks to them shall die:

I'll wink and cough: no man their works must eye. Lies down upon his face.

Evans. Where's Bede? Go you, and where you find a maid
That, ere she sleep, has thrice her prayers said, Raise up the organs of her fantasy, Sleep she as sound as careless infancy; But those that sleep and think not on their sins Pinch them, arms, legs, backs, shoulders, sides and shins.

Anne. About, about!

Search Windsor Castle, elves, within and out: Strew good luck, uphues, on every sacred room, That it may stand till the perpetual doom, In state as wholesome in as state 'tis fit, Worthy the owner, and the owner it.

The several chairs of order look you scour With juice of balm and every precious flower: Each fair instalment, coat, and several crest, With loyal blazon, evermore be blest!
And nightly, meadow-fairies, look you sing, Like to the Garter's compass, in a ring: The expressature that it bears, green let it be, More fertile-fresh than all the field to see; And Honi soit qui mal y pense write In emerald tufts; flowers purple, blue, and white; Like sapphire, pearl, and rich embroidery, Buckled below fair knighthood's bending knee: Fairies the flowers for their character.

Away! dispere! But till 'tis one o'clock, Our dance of custom round about the oak

Of Herne the hunter, let us not forget.

Evans. Pray you, lock hand in hand; yourselves in order set; And twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be, To guide our measure round about the tree. But, stay; I smell a man of middle-earth.

Fal. Heavens defend me from that Welsh fairy, lest he transform me to a piece of cheese! Hobgoblin. Vile worm, thou wast o'erlook'd even in thy birth.

Anne. With trial-fire touch me his finger-end: If he be chaste, the flame will back descend And turn him to no pain; but if he start, It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

Hobgoblin. A trial! come.

Evans. Come, will this wood take fire? They burn him with their tapers.

Fal. Oh, oh, oh!

Anne. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire! About him, fairies, sing a scornful rime; And, as you trip, still pinch him to your time.
Song.

Pie on sinful fantasy!
Lust and luxury!
Lost is but a bloody fire,
Kindled with unquenchable desire.
Fed in heart, whose flames aspire
As thoughts do blow them higher and higher.
Pinch him, fairies, mutually;
Pinch him for his villany;
Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him about,
Till candles and star-light and moonshine be out.

During this song the Fairies pinch Falstaff,
Doctor Caius comes one way, and steals away
A Fairy in green; Slender another way, and takes off a Fairy in white; and Fenton comes, and steals away Anne Page. A noise of hunting is heard within. All the Fairies run away.
Falstaff pulls off his buck's head, and rises.

Enter Page, Ford, Mistress Page, and Mistress Ford. They lay hold on him.

Page. Nay, do not fly: I think we have watch'd you now:
Will none but Horne the hunter serve your turn?
Mrs. Page. I pray you, come, hold up the jest no higher. 140
Now, good Sir John, how like you Windsor wights?
See you these, husband? do not these faire yokes
Become the forest better than the town?
Ford. Now, sir, who's a cuckold now? Master Brook, Falstaff's a knave, a cuckoldly knave; here are his horns, Master Brook: and, Master Brook, he hath enjoyed nothing of Ford's but his buck-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money, which must be paid to Master Brook;
his horses are arrested for it, Master Brook. 145 Mrs. Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck; we could never meet. I will never take you for my love again, but I will always count you my deer.

Fal. I do begin to perceive that I am made an ass.
Ford. Ay, and an ox too; both the proofs are extant.
Fal. And these are not fairies? I was three or four times in the thought they were not fairies; and yet the guiltness of my mind, the sudden surprise of my powers, drove the grossness of the follyper into a received belief, in despite of the teeth of all rime and reason, that they were fairies. See now how wit may be made a Jack-a-Lent, when 'tis upon ill employment!
Evans. Sir John Falstaff, serve God, and leave your desires, and fairies will not plague you.
Ford. Well said, fair Antony.
Evans. And leave you your jealousies too, I pray you.
Ford. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.
Fal. Have I laid my brain in the sun and dried it, that it wants matter to prevent so gross o'er-reaching as this? Am I riddens with a Welsh goat too? shall I have a coxcomb of frize? 'Tis time I were chocked with a piece of toasted cheese.
Evans. Seese is not good to give putter: your pelly is all putter.
Fal. 'Seese' and 'putter'! have I lived to stand at the taunt of one that makes fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of lust and late-walking through the realm.

Mrs. Page. Why, Sir John, do you think though we would have thrust virtue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders and have given ourselves without scruple to hell, that ever the devil could have made you our delight?
Ford. What, a hodge-pudding? a bag of flux
Mrs. Page. A puffed man?

Page. Old, cold, withered, and of intolerable entrails?
Ford. And one that is as slanderous as Satan.
Page. And as poor as Job?
Ford. And as wicked as his wife?
Evans. And given to fornications, and to taverns, and sack and wine and meegilins, and to drinkings and swearings and staries, and pribbles and prabbles?

Fal. Well, I am your theme: you have the start of me; I am dejected; I am not able to answer the Welsh flannel. Ignorance itself is a plummot over me; use me as you will.
Ford. Marry, sir, we'll bring you to Windsor to one Master Brook, that you have cozened money, to whom you should have been a pandar;
over and above that you have suffered, I think
I may repay that money will be a bitting affliction.
Mrs. Ford. Nay, master, let that go to make amends;
Forgive that sum, and so we'll all be friends.
Ford. Well, here's my hand: all is forgiven at last.
Page. Yet be cheerful, knight: thou shalt eat a posset to-night at my house; where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughs at thee. Tell her Master Slender hath married her daughter.
Mrs. Page. Aside. Doctors doubt that in Anne Page be my daughter, she is, by this Doctor Caius' wife.

Enter Slender.

Slen. Whon, ho! ho! father Page?
Page. Son, how now? how now, son! have you dispatched?
Slen. Dispatched! I'll make the best in Glostershire know on't; would I were hanged, la, else
Page. Of what, son?
Slen. I came yonder at Eton to marry Mistress Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly boy: if it had not been i' the church, I would have swinged him, or he should have swunged me. I did not think it had been Anne Page, would might never stir! and 'tis a postmaster's boy.

Page. Upon my life, then, you took the wrong Slen. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a boy for a girl: if I had been married to him, for all he was in woman's apparel, I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did no
I tell you how you should know my daughte
by her garments?
Slen. I went to her in white, and cried 'mum, and the cried 'budget,' as Anne and I had appointed; and yet it was not Anne, but a postmaster's boy.

Mrs. Page. Good George, be not angry: know of your purpose; turned my daughter into green; and indeed, she is now with the docto at the deaney, and there married.
Measure for Measure.

Abhorson, an Executioner.

Mistress Overdone, a Bawd.
Lords, Officers, Citizens, Boy, and Attendants.

Enter Duke, Escalus, Lords, and Attendants.

Escal. My lord.

Duke. Of government the properties to unfold, could seem in me to affect speech and discourse; since I am put to know that your own science excels, in that, the lists of all advice strength can give you: then no more remains, it that to your sufficiency.

Ang. Always obedient to your grace’s will, I come to know your pleasure.

Exit an Attendant.

What figure of us think you he will bear? For you must know, we have with special soul Elected him our absence to supply, Lent him our terror, dress’d him with our love, And given his deputation all the organs Of our own power: what think you of it? Escal. If any in Vienna be of worth To undergo such ample grace and honour, It is Lord Angelo.

Duke. Look where he comes.

Enter Angelo.
Duke. There is a kind of character in thy life,
That to the observer doth thy history
Fully unfold. Thyself and thy belongings
Are not thine own so proper, as to waste
Thyself upon thy virtues, they on thee.
Heaven doth with us as we with torches do,
Not light them for themselves; for if our virtues
Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike
As if we had them not. Spirits are not finely touch'd
But to fine issues, nor Nature never lends
The smallest scruple of her excellence,
But, like a thirsty goddess, she determines
Herself the glory of a creditor,
Both thanks and use. But I do bend my speech
To one that can my part in him advertise;
Hold therefore, Angelo:
In our remove be thou at full soall;
Mortality and mercy in Vienna
Live in thy tongue and heart. Old Escalus,
Though first in question, is thy secondary.
Take thy commission.

Ang. Now, good my lord,
Let there be some more test made of my metal,
Before so noble and so great a figure
Be stamp'd upon it.

Duke. No more evasion:
We have with a heaven'd and prepared choice
Proceeded to you; therefore take your honours.
Our haste from hence is of so quick condition
That it prefers itself, and leaves inquest'd Matters of needful value. We shall write to you,
As time and our concerns shall importune,
How it goes with us; and do look to know
What doth befall you here. So, fare you well:
To the hopeful execution do I leave you
Of your commissions.

Ang. Yet give leave, my lord,
That we may bring you something on the way.

Duke. My haste may not admit it;
Nor need you, on mine honour, have to do
With any scruple: your scope is as mine own,
So to enforce or qualify the laws
As to your soul seems good. Give me your hand;
I'll privily away: I love the people,
But do not like to stage me to their eyes.
Though it do well, I do not relish well
Their loud applause and Aves vehement,
Nor do I think the man of safe discretion
That does affect it. Once more, fare you well.

Ang. The heavens give safety to your purposes!

EscaL. Lead forth and bring you back in happiness!

Duke. I thank you. Fare you well. Exit.

EscaL. I shall desire you, sir, to give me leave
To have free speech with you; and it concerns me
To look into the bottom of my place:
A power I have, but of what strength and nature
I am not yet instructed.

Ang. 'Tis so with me. Let us withdraw together,
And we may soon our satisfaction have Touching that point.

EscaL. I'll wait upon your honour. —Exeunt.
MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

Overdone. Marry, sir, that's Claudio, Signior Claudio.
      First Gent. Claudio to prison! 'tis not so.
      Overdone. Nay, but I know 'tis so: I saw him restred, saw him carried away; and, which is sure, within these three days his head to be hopped off.
      Lucio. But, after all this fooling, I would not have it so. Art thou sure of this?
      Overdone. I am too sure of it; and it is for getting Madam Julietta with child.
      Lucio. Believe me, this may be: he promised me two hours since, and he was ever so recise in promise-keeping.
      First Gent. But most of all agreeing with the proclamation.
      Lucio. Away! let's go learn the truth of it.
      Exit Lucio and Gentlemen.

Enter Pompey.

Pompey. How now! what's the news with you?
      Overdone. Yonder man is carried to prison.
      Overdone. Well: what has he done?
      Pompey. A woman.
      Overdone. But what's his offence?
      Pompey. Fortrouts in a peculiar river.
      Overdone. What is, there a maid with child him?
      Pompey. No, but there's a woman with maid him. You have not heard of the proclaimation, have you?
      Overdone. What proclamation, man?
      Pompey. All houses in the suburbs of Vienna must be plucked down.
      Overdone. And what shall become of those in the city?
      Pompey. They shall stand for seed: they had me down too, but that a wise burgher put in them.
      Overdone. But shall all our houses of resort in the suburbs be pulled down?
      Pompey. To the ground, mistress.
      Overdone. Why, here's a change indeed in the commonwealth! What shall become of me?
      Pompey. Come; fear not you; good counsellors seek no clients: though you change your place, on need not change your trade; I'll be your usher still. Courage! there will be pity taken you; you that have worn your eyes almost out in the service, you will be considered.
      Overdone. What's to do here, Thomas tapster?
      Let's withdraw.
      Pompey. Here comes Signior Claudio, led by no provost to prison; and there's Madam Juliet.
      Exit.

Enter Provost, Claudio, Juliet, and Officers.

Claud. Fellow, why dost thou show me thus to the world?

Prov. I do it not in evil disposition, at from Lord Angelo by special charge.
Claud. Thus can the demi-god Authority take us pay down for our offence by weight.

The words of heaven; on whom it will, it will;
On whom it will not, so: yet still 'tis just.

Re-enter Lucio and two Gentlemen.

Lucio. Why, how now, Claudio! whence comes this restraint?

Claud. From too much liberty, my Lucio, liberty:
As surfeit is the father of much fast,
So every scope by the inordinate use
Turns to restraint. Our natures do pursue,
Like rats that ravin down their proper bane,
A thirsty evil, and when we drink we die.

Lucio. If I could speak so wisely under an arrest, I would send for certain of my creditors.
And yet, to say the truth, I had as lief have the popery of freedom as the morality of imprisonment. What's thy offence, Claudio?

Claud. What but to speak of would offend again.

Lucio. What is it murder?
Claud. No.
Lucio. Lechery?
Claud. Call it so.
Prov. Away, sir! you must go.

Claud. One word, good friend. Lucio, a word with you.

Lucio. A hundred, if they 'll do you any good.
Is lechery so looked after?

Claud. Thus stands it with me: upon a true contract
I got possession of Julietta's bed:
You know the lady; she is fast my wife,
Save that we do the annunciation lack
Of outward order: this we came not to,
Only for procuracion of a dower
Remaining in the coffer of her friends,
From whom we thought it meet to hide our love
Till time had made them for us. But it chances
The stealth of our most mutual entertainment
With character too gross is writ on Juliet.

Lucio. With child, perhaps?

Claud. Unhappily, even so.
And the new deputy now for the duke,
Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newness,
Or whether that the body public be
A horse whereon the governor doth ride,
Who, newly in the seat, that it may know
He can command, lets it straight feel the spur;
Whether the tyranny be in his place,
Or in his eminence that fills it up,
I stagger in:—but this new governor
Awakes me all the enrolled penalties
Which have, like unsound'd armour, hung by the wall.

So long that nineteen zodiacs have gone round,
And none of them been worn; and, for a name.
Now puts the drowsy and neglected act
Freshly on me: 'tis surely for a name.

Lucio. I warrant it is: and thy head stands tickle on thy shoulders that a milkmaid, if she be in love, may sigh it off. Send after the duke and appeal to him.

Claud. There done so, but he's not to be found.

I prithee, Lucio, do me this kind service:
This day my sister should the cloister enter,
And there receive her approbation;
Acquaint her with the danger of my state;
Implore her, in my voice, that she make friends
To the strict deputy; bid herself assay him:
I have great hope in that; for in her youth
There is a prone and speechless dialect,
Such as move men; beside, she hath prosperous art
When she will play with reason and discourse,
And well she can persuade.

Lucio. I pray she may: as well for the encouragement of the like, which else would stand under grievous imposition, as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be sorry should be thus foolishly lost at a game of tick-tack. I'll to her.

Clau. I thank you, good friend Lucio.

Lucio. Within two hours.

Clau. Come, officer; away! 200

SCENE III.—A Monastery.

Enter DUKE and Friar THOMAS.

Duke. No, holy father; throw away that thought:
Believe not that the dribbling dart of love
Can pierce a complete bosom. Why I desire thee
To give me secret harbour, hath a purpose
More grave and wrinkled than the aims and ends
Of burning youth.

Fri. May your grace speak of it?

Duke. My holy sir, none better knows than you
How I have ever lov'd the life remov'd,
And held in idle price to haunt assemblies
Where youth, and cost, and witless bravery keeps.
I have deliver'd to Lord Angelo,
A man of stricture and firm abstinence,
My absolute power and place here in Vienna,
And he supposes me travell'd to Poland;
For so I have stor'd it in the common ear,
And so it is receiv'd. Now, pious sir,
You will demand of me why I do this?

Fri. Glady, my lord.

Duke. We have strict statutes and most biting laws,
The needful bits and curbs to headstrong steeds,
Which for this fourteen years we have let sleep;
Even like an o'er-grown lion in a cave,
That goes not out to prey. Now, as fond fathers,
Having bound up the threat'ning twigs of birch,
Only to stick it in their children's sight
For terror, not to use, in time the rod
Becomes more mock'd than fear'd; my decrees,
Dead to infliction, to themselves are dead,
And liberty plucks justice by the nose;
The baby beats the nurse, and quite athwart
Goes all decorum.

Fri. It rested in your grace
To unloose this tied-up justice when you pleas'd;
And it in you more dreadful would have seem'd
Than in Lord Angelo.

Duke. I do fear, too dreadful:
Sith 'twas my fault to give the people scope,
'Twould be my tyranny to strike and gall them
For what I bid them do: for we bid this be done,
When evil deeds have their permissive pass
And not the punishment. Therefore indeed, my father,
I have on Angelo impos'd the office,
Whomay, in the ambush of my name, strike home,
And yet my nature never in the fight
To do it slander. And to behold his sway,
I will, as 'twere a brother of your order,
Visit both prince and people: therefore, I prithee,
Supply me with the habit, and instruct me
How I may formally in person bear me

Like a true friar. More reasons for this action
At our more leisure shall I render you;
Only, this one: Lord Angelo is precise;
Stands at a guard with envy; scarce confesses
That his blood flows, or that his appetite
Is more to bread than stone: hence shall we see
If power change purpose, what our seemers be.

Enter Lucio.

Lucio. Hail, virgin, if you be, as those chee-roses
Proclaim you are no less! Can you so stead in
As bring me to the sight of Isabella,
A novice of this place, and the fair sister
To her unhappy brother Claudio?

Isab. Why 'her unhappy brother'? let me as judge
The rather for I now must make you know
I am that Isabella and his sister.

Lucio. Gentle and fair, your brother kind greets you.
Not to be weary with you, he's in prison.

Isab. Woe me! for what?

Lucio. For that which, if myself might be I judge
He should receive his punishment in thanks:
He hath got his friend with child.

Isab. Sir, make not me your story.

Lucio. It is true.
I would not, though 'tis my familiar sin
With maids to seem the lapwing and to jest,
Tongue far from heart, play with all virgins
I hold you as a thing ensky'd and snainted;
By your renouncement an immortal spirit,
And to be talk'd with in sincerity,
As with a saint.

Isab. You do blaspheme the good in mocks me.

Lucio. Do not believe it. Fewness and tru
'tis thus:
Your brother and his lover have embrac'd;
As those that feed grow full, as blossoming ti
That from the secessity the bare fallow bring
To teeming foison, even so her plenteous wor
Expresseth his full tith and husbands.

Isab. Some one with child by him? My con
Juliet?

Lucio. Is she your cousin?

Isab. Adoptedly; as school maids change their names vain though apt affection. She it is.

Lucio. Ask, if he let him marry her.

Lucio. This is the point: the duke is very strangely gone from hence; are many gentlemen, myself being one, hand and hope of action; but we do learn those that know the very nerves of state, and that the knightly blood and the profits of the mind, study and fast. To give fear to use and liberty, and, for long run by the hideous, mice by lions, hath pick’d out an act, and whose heavy sense your brother’s life into forfeit: he arrests him on it, and follows close the rigour of the statute, make him an example. All hope is gone, less you have the grace by your fair prayer soften Angelo; and that’s my pith of business, knit you and your poor brother.

Sub. Doth he so seek his life?

Lucio. Has censur’d him eady; and, as I hear, the provost hath warrant for his execution.

Sub. Alas! what poor ability’s in me do him good?

Lucio. Assay the power you have.

Sub. My power, alas! I doubt,—

Lucio. Our doubts are traitors, I make us lose the good we oft might win, fearing to attempt. Go to Lord Angelo, let him learn to know, when maiden sue, I give like gods; but when they weep and kneel, their petitions are as freely theirs they themselves would owe them.

Sub. I’ll see what I can do.

Sub. I will about it straight; longer staying but to give the Mother of my affair. I humbly thank you; send me to my brother; soon at night send him certain word of my success.

Lucio. I take my leave of you.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Hall in ANGELO’S HOUSE.

Enter ANGELO, ESCALUS, a Justice, Provoost, Officers, and other Attendants.

Ang. We must not make a scarecrow of the law, ing it up to fear the birds of prey, let it keep one shape, till custom make it ir perch and not their terror.

Escal. Ay, but yet us be keen and rather cut a little, no fall, and bruise to death. Alas! this gentleman, om I would save, had a most noble father. but your honour know, om I believe to be most strait in virtue, t, in the working of your own affections, 10 Had time coher’d with place or place with wishing, Or that the resolute acting of your blood Could have attain’d the effect of your own purpose, Whether you had not, sometime in your life, Err’d in this point which now you censure him, And pull’d the law upon you. Ang. ’Tis one thing to be tempted, Escalus, Another thing to fall. I not deny, The jury, passing on the prisoner’s life, May in the sworn twelve have a thief or two Guiltier than him they try; what’s open made to justice, That justice seizes: what know the laws That thieves do pass on thieves? ’Tis very pregnant, The jewel that we find, we stoop and take it Because we see it; but what we do not see We tread upon, and never think of it. You may not so extenuate his offence For I have had such faults; but rather tell me, When I, that censure him, do so offended, Let mine own judgment pattern out my death. And nothing come in partial. Sir, he must die. Escal. Be it as your wisdom will.

Ang. Where is the provost?

Prov. Here, if it like your honour.

Ang. See that Claudio Be executed by nine to-morrow morning: Bring him his confessor, let him be prepar’d; For that’s the utmost of his pilgrimage.

Exit Provost.

Escal. Well, heaven forgive him, and forgive us all!

Some rise by sin, and some by virtue fall:
Some run from brakes of vice, and answer none,
And some condemned for a fault alone.

Enter ELBOW, and Officers with Froth and POMPEY.

Elb. Come, bring them away: if these be good people in a commonweal that do nothing but use their abuses in common houses, I know no law: bring them away.

Ang. How now, sir. What’s your name, and what’s the matter?

Elb. If it please your honour, I’m the poor duke’s constable, and my name is Elbow: I do lean upon justice, sir; and do bring in here before your good honour two notorius benefactors.

Ang. Benefactors! Well; what benefactors are they? are they not malefactors?

Elb. If it please your honour, I know not well what they are; but precise villains they are, that I am sure of, and void of all profanation in the world that good Christians ought to have.

Escal. This comes off well: here’s a wise officer.

Ang. Go to: what quality are they of? Elbow is your name? why dost thou not speak, Elbow?

Pompey. He cannot, sir: he’s out at elbow.

Ang. What are you, sir?

Elb. He, sir! a tapster, sir; parcell-bawd; one that serves a bad woman, whose house, sir, was, as they say, plucked down in the suburbs; and now she presse a hot-house, which, I think, is a very ill house too.

Escal. How know you that?

Elb. My wife, sir, whom I detest before heaven and your honour,— Esca. How! thy wife? 79
Elb. Ay, sir; whom, I thank heaven, is an honest woman.

Esca. Dost thou detest her therefore?
Elb. I say, sir, I will detest myself also, as well as she, that this house, if it be not a bawd's house, it is pity of her life; for it is a naughty house.

Esca. How dost thou know that, constable?
Elb. Marry, sir, by my wife; who, if she had been a woman cardinally given, might have been accused in fornication, adultery, and all uncleanness there.

Esca. By the woman's means?
Elb. Ay, sir, by Mistress Overdone's means; but as she spits in his face, so she defied him.

Pompey. Sir, if it please your honour, this is not so.

Elb. Prove it before these varlets here, thou honourable man, prove it.

Esca. To ANGELO. Do you hear how he misplaces?

Pompey. Sir, she came in great with child, and longing, saving your honour's reverence, for stewed prunes. Sir, we had but two in the house, which at that very time stood, as it were, in a fruit-dish, a dish of some three-pence; your honours have seen such dishes; they are not china dishes, but very good dishes.

Esca. Go to, go to: no matter for the dish, sir.

Pompey. No, indeed, sir, not of a pin; you are therein in the right; but to the point. As I say, this Mistress Elbow, being, as I say, with child, and being great-bellied, and longing, as I said, for prunes, and having but two in the dish, as I said, Master Froth here, this very man, having eaten the rest, as I said, and, as I say, paying for them very honestly; for, as you know, Master Froth, I could not give you three-pence again.

Froth. No, indeed.

Pompey. Very well: you being then, if you be remembered, cracking the stones of the foresaid prunes,— Froth. Ay, so I did, indeed.

Pompey. Why, very well: I telling you then, if you be remembered, that such a one and such a one were past care of the thing you wrought, unless they kept very good diet, as I told you,—

Froth. All this is true.

Pompey. Why, very well then,—

Esca. Come, you are a tedious fool: to the purpose. What was done to Elbow's wife, that he hath cause to complain of? Come me to what was done to her.

Pompey. Sir, your honour cannot come to that yet.

Esca. No, sir, nor I mean it not.

Pompey. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honour's leave. And, I beseech you, look into Master Froth here, sir; a man of fourscore pound a year, whose father died at Hallowmas. Was't not at Hallowmas, Master Froth?

Froth. All-hallow'nd eve.

Pompey. Why, very well: I hope here be truths. He, sir, sitting, as I say, in a lower chair, sir; 'twas in the Bunch of Grapes, where indeed you have a delight to sit, have you not?

Froth. I have so, because it is an open room and good for winter.

Pompey. Why, very well then: I hope here be truths.

Ang. This will last out a night in Russia, 114
When nights are longest there: I'll take my leave.

And leave you to the hearing of the cause,
Hoping you'll find good cause to whip them all.

Esca. I think no less. Good morrow to you, lordship.

Exit ANGELO.

Now, sir, come on: what was done to Elbow's wife, once more?

Pompey. Once, sir? there was nothing done to her once.

Elb. I beseech you, sir, ask him what this man did to my wife.

Pompey. I beseech your honour, ask me.

Esca. Well, sir, what did this gentleman to her?

Pompey. I beseech you, sir, look in this gentle man's face. Good Master Froth, look upon his honour; 'tis for a good purpose. Doth you honour mark his face?

Esca. Ay, sir, very well.

Pompey. Nay, I beseech you, mark it well.

Esca. Well, I do so.

Pompey. Doth your honour see any harm in his face?

Esca. Why, no.

Pompey. I'll be supposed upon a book, his face is the worst thing about him. Good, then; his face be the worst thing about him, how could Master Froth do the constable's wife any harm I would know that of your honour.

Esca. He's in the right. Constable, what seest thou to it?

Elb. First, an it like you, the house is respected house; next, this is a respected fellow and his mistress is a respected woman.

Pompey. By this hand, sir, his wife is a most respected person than any of us all.

Elb. Varlet, thou liest: thou liest, wicked varlet. The time is yet to come that she shall ever respected with man, woman, or child.

Pompey. Sir, she was respected with him before he married with her.

Esca. Which is the wiser here? Justice Iniquity? Is this true?

Elb. O thou calf! O thou varlet! O th' wicked Hannibal! I respected with her befo' I was married to her! If ever I was respect with her, or she with me, let not your worst think me the poor duke's officer. Prove th' thou wicked Hannibal, or I'll have mine act of battery on thee.

Esca. If he took you a box o' th' ear, y might have your action of slander too.

Elb. Marry, I thank your good worship for What is 't your worship's pleasure I shall do w' this wicked calf?

Esca. Truly, officer, because he hath so offences in him that thou wouldest discover thou couldst, let him continue in his courses thou knowest what they are.

Elb. Marry, I thank your worship for it. Th' seest, thou wicked varlet, now, what's come up thee: thou art to continue now, thou var'-thou art to continue.

Esca. Where were you born, friend?

Froth. Here in Vienna, sir.

Esca. Are you of fourscore pounds a year?

Froth. Yes, an't please you, sir.

Esca. So. What trade are you of, sir?

Pompey. A tapster; a poor widow's tapster.

Esca. Your mistress' name?
Pompey. Mistress Overdone.

Escal. Hath she had any more than one husband?

Pompey. Nine, sir; Overdone by the last. Escal. Nine! Come hither to me, Master Froth, Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with tapsters; they will draw you, Master Froth, and you will hang them. Get you gone, and let me hear no more of you.

Froth. I thank your worship. For mine own part, I never come into any room in a taphouse, but I am drawn in.

Escal. Well: no more of it, Master Froth; farewell. Exit FROTH.

Escal. Troth, and your bum is the greatest bung about you, so that, in the beastliest sense, you are Pompey the Great. Pompey, you are partly a bawd, Pompey, howsoever you colour it in being a tapster, are you not? come, tell me true: it shall be the better for you.

Pompey. Truly, sir, I am a poor fellow that would live.

Escal. How would you live, Pompey? by being a bawd? What do you think of the trade, Pompey? is it a lawful trade?

Pompey. If the law would allow it sir.

Escal. But the law will not allow it, Pompey; nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Pompey. Does your worship mean to geld and play all the youth of the city?

Escal. No, Pompey.

Pompey. Truly, sir, in my poor opinion, they will to’t then. If your worship will take order or the drabs and the knives, you need not to ear the bawds.

Escal. There are pretty orders beginning, I can tell you: it is but heading and hanging.

Pompey. If you head and hang all that offend that way but for ten year together, you’ll be had to give out a commission for more heads. This law hold in Vienna ten year, I’ll rent the finest house in it after three-pence a bay. If you live to see this come to pass, say Pompey old you so.

Escal. Thank you, good Pompey; and, in requital of your prophecy, hark you: I advise you, et me not find you before me again upon any complaint whatsoever; no, not for dwelling where you do: if I do, Pompey, I shall beat you to your ent, and prove a shrewd Caesar to you. In plain pleading, Pompey, I shall have you whipt. So, for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Pompey. I thank your worship for your good counsel; Aside; But I shall follow it as the flesh and fortune shall better determine.

Whip me! No, no; let carman whip his jade; The valiant heart’s not whipt out of his trade.

Exit. 270

Escal. Come hither to me, Master Elbow; come hither, Master constable. How long have you been in this place of constable?

Elb. Seven year and a half, sir.

Escal. I thought, by the readiness in the office, you had continued in it some time. You say, seven years together?

Elb. And a half, sir.

Escal. Alas! it hath been great pains to you, They do you wrong to put you so oft upon’t. Are there not men in your ward sufficient to serve it?

Elb. Faith, sir, few of any wit in such matters. As they are chosen, they are glad to choose me for them: I do it for some piece of money, and go through with all.

Escal. Look you bring me in the names of some six or seven, the most sufficient of your parish. Elb. To your worship’s house, sir? Escal. To my house. Fare you well. Exit ELBOW.

What’s o’clock, think you? Just. Eleven, sir.

Escal. I pray you home to dinner with me. Just. I humbly thank you.

Escal. It grieves me for the death of Claudio; But there’s no remedy.

Just. Lord Angelo is severe.

Escal. It is but needful: Mercy is not itself, that oft looks so; Pardon is still the nurse of second woe. But yet, poor Claudio! There is no remedy. 290 Come, sir.

Exit.

SCENE II. —Another Room in the Same.

Enter Provost, and a Servant.

Serv. He’s hearing of a cause: he will come straight:

I’ll tell him of you.

Prov. Pray you, do. Exit Servant. I’ll know His pleasure; may he will relent. Alas! He hath but as offended in a dream:

All sects, all ages, smack of this vice, and he To die for it!

Enter ANGELO.

Ang. Now, what’s the matter, Provost?

Prov. Is it your will Claudio shall die to-morrow?

Ang. Did I not tell thee, yea? hadst thou not order?

Why dost thou ask again?

Prov. Lest I might be too rash, Under your good correction, I have seen,

When, after execution, judgment hath Repented o’er his doom.

Ang. Go to: let that be mine:

Do you your office, or give up your place,

And you shall well be spard.

Prov. I crave your honour’s pardon. What shall be done, sir, with the groaning Juliet? She’s very near her hour.

Ang. Dispose of her To some more fitter place, and that with speed.

Re-enter Servant.

Serv. Here is the sister of the man condemn’d Desires access to you.

Ang. Hath he a sister?

Prov. Ay, my good lord; a very virtuous maid, And to be shortly of a sisterhood,

If not already.

Ang. Well, let her be admitted. Exit Servant. See you the fornicateuress be remov’d;

Let her have needful, but not lavish, means: There shall be order for’t.
Enter Lucio and Isabella.

Proo. God save your honour!

Ang. Stay a little while. To Isabella. You're welcome: what's your wish?

Isab. I am a woeful suitor to your honour, but please your honour hear me.

Ang. Well; what's your suit?

Isab. There is a vice that most I do abhor. And most desire should meet the blow of justice, for which I would not plead, but that I must for which I must not plead, but that I am at war 'twixt will and will not.

Ang. Well; the matter? Isab. I have a brother is condemn'd to die: I do beseech you, let it be his fault, and not my brother.

Prov. Aside. Heaven give thee moving graces! Ang. Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it?

Why, every fault's condemn'd ere it be done. Mine were the very cipher of a function, To fine the faults whose fine stands in record, And let go by the actor.

Isab. O just but severe law! I had a brother then. Heaven keep your honour! Lucio. To Isabella. Give 't not o'er so: to him again, entreat him; Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown; You are too cold; if you should need a pin, You could not with more tame a tongue desire it. To him, I say!

Isab. Must he needs die?

Ang. Maiden, no remedy. Isab. Yes; I do think that you might pardon him.

Ang. I will not do't.

Isab. But can you, if you would?

Ang. Look, what I will not, that I cannot do. Isab. But might you do't, and do the world no wrong.

If so your heart were touch'd with that remorse As mine is to him?

Ang. He's sentence'd: 'tis too late.

Lucio. To Isabella. You are too cold.

Isab. Too late? why, no; I, that do speak a word, May call it back again. Well, believe this, No ceremony that to great ones longs, Not the king's crown, nor the decreed sword, The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe, Become them with one half so good a grace As mercy does. If he had been as you, and you as he, You would have slip't like him; but he, like you, Would not have been so stern.

Ang. Pray you, be gone.

Isab. I would to heaven I had your potency, And you were Isabella! should it then be thus? No; I would tell what 'twere to be a judge,

And what a prisoner.

Lucio. To Isabella. Ay, touch him; there's the vein.

Ang. Your brother is a forfeit of the law, And you but waste your words.

Isab. Alas! alas! Why, all the souls that were forfeit once; And He that might the vantage best have took, Found out the remedy. How would you be, If He, which is the top of judgment, should But judge you as you are? O! think on that, And mercy then will breathe within your lips, Like man new made.

Ang. Be you content, fair maid; it is the law, not I, condemns your brother: Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son, It should be thus with him: he must die to-morrow.

Isab. To-morrow! O! that's sudden. Spare him, spare him! He's not prepar'd for death. Even for our kitchens We kill the fowl of season: shall we serve heaven With less respect than we do minister To our gross selves? Good, shall good my lord, be think you: Who is it that hath died for this offence? There's many have committed it.

Lucio. To Isabella. Ay, well said.

Ang. The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept: Those many had not dar'd to do that evil, If the first that did the edict infringe Had answer'd for his deed: now, 'tis awake, Takes not of what is done, and, like a prophet, Looks in a glass, that shows what future evils, Either new, or by remissness new-conceiv'd, And so in progress to be hatch'd and born, Are now to have no successive degrees, But, ere they live, to end.

Isab. Yet show some pity.

Ang. I show it most of all when I show justice For then I pity those I do not know, Which a dismiss'd offence would after gait, And do him right, that, answering one foue wrong, Lives not to act another. Be satisfied: Your brother dies to-morrow: be content.

Isab. So you must be the first that gives this sentence, And he that suffers. O! it is excellent To have a giant's strength, but it is tyrannous To use it like a giant.

Lucio. To Isabella. That's well said.

Isab. Could great men thunder As Jove himself does, Jove would ne'er be quiet For every pelting, petty officer Would use his heaven for thunder; nothing but thunder. Merciful heaven! Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bol Splitst the unweageable and gnarled oak Than the soft myrtle; but man, proud man, Drest in a little brief authority, Most ignorant of that he's most assur'd, His glassy essence, like an angry ape, Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven As make the angels weep; who, with our spleen, Would all themselves laugh mortal.

Lucio. To Isabella. O! to him, to him wench. He will relent:

He's coming; I perceive't.

Isab. We cannot weigh our brother with ours. Great men may jest with saints; 'tis wit in them But in the less foul profanation.

Lucio. To Isabella. Thou'rt in the right girl: more o' that.
Isab. That in the captain's but a choleric word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.
Lucio. To ISABELLA. Art avis do' that? more on't.
Ang. Why do you put these sayings upon me?
Isab. Because authority, though it err like others,
 Hath yet a kind of medicine in itself, that Skins the vice o' the top. Go to your bosom;
 Knock there, and ask your heart what it doth know
 That's like my brother's fault: if it confess
 A natural guiltiness as is his,
et it not sound a thought upon your tongue
 Against my brother's life.
Ang. Aside. She speaks, and 'tis such sense, that my sense breeds with it. Fare you well.
Isab. Gentle my lord, turn back.
Ang. I will bethink me. Come again to-morrow.
Isab. Hark how I'll brieve you. Good my lord, turn back.
Ang. How, brieve me? Isab. Ay, with such gifts that heaven shall share with you.
Lucio. To ISABELLA. You had marr'd all else.
Isab. Not with fond shekels of the tested gold,
'r stones whose rates are either rich or poor
's fancy values them; but with true prayers
 That shall be up at heaven and enter there
're sunrise: prayers from preserved souls,
From fasting maid's whose minds are dedicate
'o nothing temporal.
Ang. Well; come to me to-morrow.
Lucio. To ISABELLA. Go to; 'tis well: away!
Isab. Heaven keep your honour safe!
Ang. Aside. Amen: for I am that way going to temptation,
Where prayers cross.
Isab. At what hour to morrow will I attend your lordship?
Ang. At any time fore noon.
Isab. Save your honour!

Exit LUCIO, ISABELLA, and Provost.

Ang. From thee; even from thy virtue!
What's this? what's this? Is this her fault or mine?
he tempter or the tempted, who sins most? ask she, nor doth she tempt; but it is I, hat, lying by the violet in the sun,
o as the carrion does, not as the flower, 170 rupt with virtuous season. Can it be hat modesty may more betray our sense han woman's lightness? Having waste ground ough, shall we desire to raze the sanctuary, nd pitch our evils there? O! fie, fie, fie.
hat dost thou, or what art thou, Angelo?
est thou desire her? tell how far these things hat make her good? O! let her brother live.
ieves for their robbery have authority hen judges steal themselves. What! do I love hat I desire to hear her speak again, nd feast upon her eyes? What is 't I dream on?
ning enemy! that, to catch a saint,
With saints dost bait thy hook. Most dangerous
Is that temptation that doth good us on
To sin in loving virtue: never could the strumpet,
With all her double vigour, art and nature,
Once stir my temper; but this virtuous maid
Subdues me quite. Ever till now,
When men were fond, I smil'd and wonder'd how.

Exit.

Scene III.---A Room in a Prison.

Enter Duke, disguised as a friar, and Provost.

Duke. Hail to you, provost! so I think you are.
Prov. I am the provost. What's your will,
good friar?

Duke. Bound by my charity and my blessing,
I come to visit the afflicted spirits
Here in the prison: do me the common right
To let me see them and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minister
To them accordingly.

Prov. I would do more than that, if more were needful.

Enter JULIET.

Duke. When must he die?

Prov. As I do think, to-morrow.

To JULIET. I have provided for you: stay awhile,
And you shall be conducted.

Duke. Repent you, fair one, of the sin you carry?

Juliet. I do, and bear the shame most patiently.

Duke. I'll teach you how you shall arraign your conscience.

Juliet. I'll gladly learn.

Duke. Love you the man that wrong'd you?

Juliet. Yes, as I love the woman that wrong'd him.

Duke. So then it seems your most offensive act
Was mutually committed?

Juliet. Mutually.

Duke. Then was your sin of heavier kind than his.

Juliet. I do confess it, and repent it, father.

Duke. 'Tis meet so, daughter: but lest you do repent,

Juliet. As that the sin hath brought you to this shame,
Which sorrow is always toward ourselves, not heaven,
Showing we would not spare heaven as we love it,
But as we stand in fear,—

Juliet. I do repent me, as it is an evil,
And take the shame with joy.

Duke. There rest.

Your partner, as I hear, must die to-morrow,
And I am going with instruction to him.

Grace go with you! Benedicite!

Exit.

Juliet. Must die to-morrow! O! injurious love,
That respite me a life, whose very comfort
Is still a dying horror.

Prov. 'Tis pity of him. Exit.
MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

SCENE IV.—A Room in ANGELO’S House.

Enter ANGELO.

ANG. When I would pray and think, I think
And pray
To several subjects: heaven hath my empty
Words,
Whilst my invention, hearing not my tongue,
Anchors on ISABEL; heaven in my mouth,
As if I did but only chew his name,
And in my heart the strong and swelling evil
Of my conception. The state, wherein I studied,
Is like a good thing, being often read,
Grown sordid and tedious; yea, my gravity,
Wherein, let no man hear me, I take pride,
Could I with boot change for an idle rhyme,
Which the air beats for vain. O place! O form!
How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit,
Wrench awe from fools, and tie the wiser souls
To thy false seeming! Blood, thou art blood:
Let’s write good angel on the devil’s horn,
’Tis not the devil’s crest.

Enter a Servant.

How now! who’s there?

SERV. One Isabel, a sister,
Desires access to you.
ANG. Teach her the way. Exit Servant.

OH! heavens!
Why does my blood thus master to my heart,
Making both it unable for itself,
And dispossessing all my other parts.
Of necessary fitness?
So play the foolish thongs with one that swoons;
Come all to help him, and stop the air
By which he should revive: and even so
The general, subject to a well-wish’d king,
Quit their own part, and in obsequious fondness
Crowd to his presence, where their untaught love
Must needs appear offence.

Enter ISABELLA.

How now, fair maid?

ISAB. I am come to know your pleasure.
ANG. That you might know it, would much Better please me
Than to demand what ’tis. Your brother cannot Live.

ISAB. Even so. Heaven keep your honour!
ANG. Yet may he live awhile; and, it may be,
As long as you or I: yet he must die.

ISAB. Under your sentence?
ANG. Yea.

ISAB. When, I beseech you? that in his reprieve,
Longer or shorter, he may be so fitted
That his soul sicken not.

ANG. Ha! fie, these filthy vices! It were as Good
to pardon him that hath from nature stolen
A man already made, as to remit
Their saucy sweetness that do coin heaven’s
Image
In stamps that are forbid; ’tis all as easy
Falsely to take away a life true made,
As to put metal in restrained means
To make a false one.

ISAB. ’Tis set down so in heaven, but not in Earth.

ANG. Say you so? then I shall pose you
Quickly.

Which had you rather, that the most just law
Now took your brother’s life; or, to redeem him,
Give up your body to such sweet uncleanness
As she that he hath stain’d?

ISAB. Sir, believe this,
I had rather give my body than my soul.
ANG. I talk not of your soul. Our compell’d Sins
Stand more for number than for accomplish.
ISAB. How say you?

ANG. Nay, I’ll not warrant that; for I can speak Against the thing I say. Answer to this:
I now the voice of the recorded law,
 Pronounce a sentence on your brother’s life:
Might there not be a charity in sin
To save this brother’s life?

ISAB. Please you to do’t.
I’ll take it as a peril to my soul;
It is no sin at all, but charity.

ANG. Pleas’d you to do’t at peril of your soul.
Were equal paws of sin and charity.

ISAB. That I do beg his life, if it be sin,
Heaven let me bear it! you granting of my suit.
If that be sin, I’ll make it my morn prayer
To have it added to the faults of mine,
And nothing of your answer.

ANG. Nay, but hear me
Your sense pursues not mine: either you are Ignorant,
Or seem so craftily; and that’s not good.
ISAB. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good
But graciously to know I am no better.

ANG. Thus wisdom wishes to appear most Bright.
When it doth tax itself; as these black masks
Proclaim an ensnared beauty ten times louder
Than beauty could, display’d. But mark me;
To be received plain, I’ll speak more gross:
Your brother is to die.

ISAB. So.

ANG. And his offence is so, as it appears Accountant to the law upon that pain.

ISAB. True.

ANG. Admit no other way to save his life,—
As I subscribe not that, nor any other,
But in the loss of question,—that you, his sister
Finding yourself desir’d of such a person,
Whose credit with the judge, or own great place
Could fetch your brother from the manacles
Of all the building law; and that there were
No earthly mean to save him, but that either
You must lay down the treasures of your bod
To this suppos’d, or else to let him suffer;
What would you do?

ISAB. As much for my poor brother as myself.
That is, were I under the terms of death,
The impression of keen whips I’d wear as rubi
And strip myself to death, as to a bed
That longing have been sick for, ere I’d yield
My body up to shame.

ANG. Then must your brother do
ISAB. And ’twere the cheaper way:
Better it were a brother died at once,
Than that a sister, by redeeming him,
Should die for ever.

ANG. Were not you then as cruel as the senten
That you have slander’d so?

ISAB. Ignominy in ransom and free pardon
Are of two houses: lawful mercy
Is nothing kin to foul redemption.
Ang. You seem’d of late to make the law a tyrant; And rather prov’d the sliding of your brother A mercenary rather than a vice. Isab. O! pardon me, my lord, it oft falls out, To have what we would have, we speak not what we mean. I something do excuse the thing I hate, For his advantage that I dearly love. Ang. We are all frail. Isab. Else let my brother die, If not a feedary, but only he Owe and succeed thy weakness. Ang. Nay, women are frail too. Isab. Ay, as the glasses where they view themselves, Which are as easy broke as they make forms. Women! Help heaven! men their creation mar In profiting by them. Nay, call us ten times frail, For we are soft as our complexions are, And credulous to false prints.

Ang. I think it well; And from this testimony of your own sex, Since I suppose we are made to be no stronger Than faults may shake our frames, let me be bold: I do arrest your words. Be that you are, That is, a woman; if you be more, you’re none; If you be one, as you are well express’d By all external warrants, show it now; By putting on the destin’d livery. Isab. I have no tongue but one: gentle my lord, Let me entreat you speak the former language. Ang. Plainly conceive, I love you. Isab. My brother did love Juliet; and you tell me That he shall die for’t. Ang. He shall not, Isabella, if you give me love. Isab. I know your virtue hath a license in’t, Which seems a little fouler than it is, To pluck on others.

Ang. Believe me, on mine honour, My words express my purpose. Isab. Ha! little honour to be much believ’d, And most pernicious purpose! Seeming, seeming! I will proclaim thee, Angelo! look for’t: sign me a present pardon for my brother, Or with an outstretch’d threat I’ll tell the world aloud What man thou art.

Ang. Who will believe thee, Isabel? My unsold’d name, the austereness of my life, My vouch against you, and my place i’ the state, Will so your accusation overweigh, That you shall stifle in your own report And smell of calumny. I have begun, And now I give my sensual race the rein: Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite; Lay by all nicety and prolixious blushes, That banish what they sue for; redeem thy brother By yielding up thy body to my will, Or else he must not only die the death, But thy unkindness shall his death draw out To lingering sufferance. Answer me to-morrow, Or, by the affection that now guides me most, I’ll prove a tyrant to him. As for you, Say what you can, my false o’erweighs your true.

Isab. To whom should I complain? Did I tell this, Who would believe me? O perilous mouths! That bear in them one and the self-same tongue, Either of condemnation or approbation, Bidding the law make court’sy to their will, Hooking both right and wrong to the appetite, To follow as it draws. I’ll to my brother: Though he hath fallen by prompture of the blood, Yet hath he in him such a mind of honour, That, had he twenty heads to tender down On twenty bloody blocks, he’d yield them up, Before his sister should her body stoop To such abhor’d pollution. Then, Isabel, live chaste, and, brother, die: More than our brother is our chastity. I’ll tell him yet of Angelo’s request, And fit his mind to death, for his soul’s rest.

Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Prison.

Enter Duke, as a friar, Claudio, and Provost.

Duke. So then you hope of pardon from Lord Angelo?

Claud. The miserable have no other medicine But only hope: I have hope to live, and am prepar’d to die.

Duke. Be absolute for death; either death or life Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with life:

If I do lose thee, I do lose a thing That none but fools would keep: a breath thouart, Servile to all the skyey influences, That do this habitation, where thou keep’st, Hourly afflict. Merely, thou art death’s fool; For him thou labour’st by thy flight to shun, And yet rumm’d toward him still. Thou art not noble;

For all the accommodations that thou bear’st Are nurs’d by baseness. Thou art by no means valiant;

For thou dost fear the soft and tender fork Of a poor worm. Thy best of rest is sleep, And that thou oft provok’st; yet grossly fear’st Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thyself;

For thou exist’st on many a thousand grains That issue out of dust. Happy thou art not;

For what thou hast not, still thou striv’st to get, And what thou hast, forget’st. Thou art not certain;

For thy complexion shifts to strange effects, After the moon. If thou art rich, thou’rt poor; For, like an ass whose back with ingots bows, Thou bear’st thy heavy riches but a journey, And death unloads thee. Friend hast thou none; For thine own bowels, which do call thee sire, The mere effusion of thy proper joins, Do curse the gout, serpigo, and the rheum, For ending thee no sooner. Thou hast nor youth nor age,

But, as it were, an after-dinner’s sleep, Dreaming on both; for all thy blessed youth Becomes as aged, and doth beg the alms Of paled old; and when thou art old and rich, Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty,
To make thy riches pleasant. What's yet in this
That bears the name of life? Yet in this life
Lie hid more thousand deaths; yet death we fear,
That makes these odds all even.

Clau. I humbly thank you. If
To sue to live, I find I seek to die,
And, seeking death, find life: let it come on.

Isab. Within. What, ho! Peace here; grace and good company!

Pro. Who's there? come in: the wish deserves a welcome.

Duke. Dear sir, ere long I'll visit you again.

Clau. Most holy sir, I thank you.

Enter ISABELLA.

Isab. My business is a word or two with Claudio.

Pro. And very welcome. Look, signior; here's your sister.

Duke. Provost, a word with you.

Pro. As many as you please.

Duke. Bring me to hear them speak, where I may be concealed.

Exeunt DUKE and PROVOST.

Clau. Now, sister, what's the comfort?

Isab. Why, as all comforts are; most good,
most good, indeed.

Lord Angelo, having affairs to heaven,
Intends you for his swift ambassador,
Where you shall be an everlasting leisur:
Therefore your best appointment make with speed;
To-morrow you set on.

Clau. Is there no remedy?

Isab. None, but such remedy, as to save a head
To cleave a heart in twain.

Clau. But is there any?

Isab. Ay, brother, you may live:
There is a devilish mercy in the judge,
If you'll implore it, that will free your life,
But fetter you till death.

Clau. Perpetual duration?

Isab. Ay, just; perpetual duration, a restraint,
Though all the world's vastidity you had,
To a determin'd scope.

Clau. But in what nature?

Isab. In such a one as, you consenting to 't,
Would bark your honour from that trunk you bear,
And leave you naked.

Clau. Let me know the point.

Isab. O, I do fear thee, Claudio; and I quake,
Lest thou a feverous life shouldst entertain,
And six or seven winters more respect
Than a perpetual honour. Dar'st thou die?
The sense of death is most in apprehension,
And the poor beetle, that we tread upon,
In corporal suffrance finds a pang as great
As when a giant dies.

Clau. Why give you me this shame?
Think you I can a resolution fetch
From flowery tenderness? If I must die,
I will encounter darkness as a bride,
And hug it in mine arms.

Isab. There spoke my brother: there my father's grave
Did utter forth a voice. Yes, thou must die:
Thou art too noble to conserve a life
In base applauses. This outward-sainted deputy,
Whose settled visage and deliberate word
Nips youth i' the head, and follies doth unnew
As falcon doth the fowl, is yet a devil;
His filth within being cast, he would appear
A pond as deep as hell.

Clau. The princely Angelo.

Isab. O! 'tis the cunning livery of hell,
The damnedest body to invest and cover
In princely guards. Dost thou think, Claudio?
If I would yield him my virginity,
Thou mightst be freed.

Clau. O heavens! it cannot be.

Isab. Yes, he would give it thee, from this rank offence,
So to offend him still. This night's the time
That I should do what I abhor to name,
Or else thou diest to-morrow.

Clau. Thou shalt not do't.

Isab. O! were it but my life,
I'd throw it down for your deliverance
As frankly as a pin.

Clau. Thanks, dear Isabel.

Isab. Be ready, Claudio, for your death to morrow.

Clau. Yes. Has he affections in him,
That thus can make him bite the law by the nose
When he would force it? Sure, it is no sin;
Or of the deadly seven it is the least.

Isab. Which is the least?

Clau. If it were damnable, he being so wise
Why should he for the momentary trick
Be perjuredly fin'd? O Isabel!

Isab. What says my brother?

Clau. Death is a fearful thing.

Isab. And shamed life a hateful.

Clau. Ay, but to die, and go we know not where;
To lie in cold obstructions and to rot;
This sensible warm motion to become
A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit
To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside
In thrilling region of thick-ribbed ice;
To be imprisoned in the viewless winds,
And blown with restless violence round about
The pendent world; or to be worse than worst
Of those that lawless and uncertain thoughts
Imagine howling: 'tis too horrible!
The weariest and most loathed worldly life
That age, ache, penury and imprisonment
Can lay on nature is a paradise
To what we fear of death.

Isab. Alas! alas!

Clau. Sweet sister, let me live.

Isab. What sin you do to save a brother's life,
Nature dispenses with the deed so far
That it becomes a virtue.

Isab. O you beast! O faithless coward! O dishonest wretch!
Will thou be made a man out of my vice?
Is't not a kind of incest, to take life
From thine own sister's shame? What should think?

Heaven shield my mother play'd my father fair
For such a warped slip of wilderness
Ne'er issu'd from his blood. Take my defiance
Die, perish! Might but my bending down
Reprove thee from thy fate, it should proceed.
I'll pray a thousand prayers for thy death,
No word to save thee.

Clau. Nay, hear me, Isabel.

Isab. O! fie, fie, fie.

Thy sin's not accidental, but a trade.
Mercy to thee would prove itself a bawd: Tis best that thou diest quickly. Going, Claud. O hear me, Isabella!

Re-enter Duke.

Duke. Vouchsafe a word, young sister, but one word. Isab. What is your will? Duke. Might you dispense with your leisure, I would by and by have some speech with you: he satisfaction I would require is likewise your own benefit. Isab. I have no superfluous leisure: my stay must be stolen out of other affairs; but I will attend you awhile. Duke. Aside to Claudio. Son, I have overheard what hath passed between you and your sister. Angelo had never the purpose to corrupt her; only he hath made an assay of her virtue and practise his judgment with the disposition of affairs. She, having the truth of honour in her, hath made him that gracious denial which he is most glad to receive; I am confessor to Angelo, and I know this to be true; therefore prepare yourself to death. Do not satisfy your resolution with hopes that are fallible: to-morrow you must die. Go to your knees and make ready. Claudio. Let me ask my sister pardon. I am so ut of love with life that I will sue to be rid of it. Duke. Hold you there: farewell. Exit Claudio.

Re-enter Provost.

Prov. What's your will, father? Duke. That now you are come, you will be one. Leave me awhile with the maid; my mind promises with my habit no loss shall much her by my company. Prov. In good time. Exit. Duke. The hand that hath made you fair hath ade you good: the goodness that is cheap in vanity makes beauty brief in goodness; but age, being the soul of your complexion, shall keep the body of it ever fair. The assault that Angelo hath made to you, fortune hath conveyed my understanding; and, but that frailty hath examples for his failing, I should wonder at Angelo. How will you do to content this substitute, and to save your brother? Isab. I am now going to resolve him. I had rather my brother die by the law than my son should be unlawfully born. But O! how much the good duke deceived in Angelo. If ever he return and I can speak to him, I will open my ps in vain, or discover his government.

Duke. That shall not be much amiss; yet, as matter now stands, he will avoid your accusation: he made trial of you only. Therefore, sten your ear on my advisings: to the love I have in doing good a remedy presents itself. I do myself believe that you may most uprightly do a poor wronged lady a merited merit, redeem your brother from the angry law, no stain to your own graciou person, and much case the absent duke, if peradventure he shall ever return to have hearing of this business. Isab. Let me hear you speak further. I have dirt to do any thing that appears not foul in the truth of my spirit.

Duke. Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful. Have you not heard speak of Mariana, the sister of Frederick, the great soldier who misconceived at sea? Isab. I have heard of the lady, and good words went with her name. Duke. She should this Angelo have married; was allied to her by oath, and the nuptial appointed: between which time of the contract, and limit of the solemnity, her brother Frederick was wrecked at sea, having in that perished vessel the dowry of his sister. But mark how heavily this befell to the poor gentlewoman: there she lost a noble and renowned brother, in his love toward her ever most kind and natural; with him the portion and sinew of her fortune, her marriage dowry; with both, her combine husband, this well-seeing Angelo. Isab. Can this be so? Did Angelo so leave her? Duke. Left her in her tears, and dried not one of them with his comfort; swallowed his vows whole, pretending in her discoveries of dishonour: in few, bestowed her on her own lamentation, which she yet wears for his sake, and he, a marble to her tears, is washed with them, but relents not.

Isab. What a merit were it in death to take this poor maid from the world! What corruption in this life, that it will let this man live! But how out of this can she avail? Duke. It is a rupture that you may easily heal; and the cure of it not only saves your brother, but keeps you from dishonour in doing it. Isab. Show me how, good father.

Duke. This forenamed maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection: his unjust unkindness, that in all reason should have quenched her love, hath, like an impediment in the current, made it more violent and unruly. Go you to Angelo: answer his requiring with a plausible obedience; agree with his demands to the point; only refer yourself to this advantage, first, that your stay with him may not be long, that the time may have all shadow and silence in it, and the place answer to convenience. This being granted in course, and now follows all, we shall advise this wronged maid to stand up your appointment, go in your place; if the encounter acknowledge itself hereafter, it may compel him to her recompense; and here by this is your brother saved, your honour untainted, the poor Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt deputy scaled. The maid will I frame and make fit for his attempt. If you think well to carry this, as you may, the doubleness of the benefit defends the deceit from reproof. What think you of it?

Isab. The image of it gives me content already, and, I trust it will grow to a most prosperous perfection.

Duke. It lies much in your holding up. Hast you speedily to Angelo: if for this night he entreat you to his bed, give him promise of satisfaction. I will presently to Saint Luke's; there, at the moated grange, resides this dejected Mariana: at that place call upon me, and dispatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.

Isab. I thank you for this comfort. Fare you well, good father.

Exeunt. 280
Scene II.—The Street before the Prison.

Enter Duke, as a friar; to him Elbow, Pompey, and Officers.

Elb. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you willneeds buy and sell men and women like beasts, we shall have all the world drink brown and white bastard.

Duke. O heavens! what stuff is here?

Pompey. 'Twas never merry world, since, of two usuries, the merriest was put down, and the worse allowed by order of law a furred gown to keep him warm; and furred with fox and lambkins too, to signify that craft, being richer than innocency, stands for the facing.

Elb. Come your way, sir. Bless you, good father friar.

Duke. And you, good brother father. What offence hath this man made you, sir?

Elb. Marry, sir; he hath offended the law: and, sir, we take him to be a thief too, sir; for we have found upon him, sir, a strange picklock, which we have sent to the deputy.

Duke. Fie, sirrah! a bawd, a wicked bawd! The evil that thou causest to be done, That is thy means to live. Do thou but think What 'tis to cram a man or clothe a back From such a filthy vice: say to thyself, From their abominable and beastly touches I drink, I eat, array myself, and live; Canst thou believe thy living is a life, So stinkingly depending? Go mend, go mend.

Pompey. Indeed, it does stink in some sort, sir; but yet, sir, I would prove—

Duke. Nay, if the devil have given thee proofs for sin, Thou wilt prove his. Take him to prison, officer; Correction and instruction must both work Ere this rude beast will profit.

Elb. He must before the deputy, sir; he has given him warning. The deputy cannot abide a whoremaster: if he be a whoremonger, and comes before him, he were as good go a mile on his errand.

Duke. That we were all, as some would seem to be,
From our faults, as faults from seeming, free!

Elb. His neck will come to your waist,—a cord, sir.

Pompey. I spy comfort: I cry bail. Here's a gentleman and a friend of mine.

Enter Lucio.

Lucio. How now, noble Pompey! What, at the wheels of Caesar! Art thou led in triumph? What, is there none of Pygmalion's images, newly made woman, to be had now, for putting the hand in the pocket and extracting it clutched? What reply, ha? What sayest thou to this tune, matter and method? Is 't not drowned? Is 't the last rain, ha? What savest thou, Troth? Is the world as it was, man? Which is the way? Is it sad, and few words, or how? The trick of it?

Duke. Still thus, and thus: still worse!

Lucio. How doth my dear morsel, thy mistress? Procures she still, ha?

Pompey. Troth, sir, she hath eaten up all her beef, and she is herself in the tub.

Lucio. Why, 'tis good; it is the right of it; it must be so: ever your fresh whore and your powdered bawd: an unshunned consequence; i must be so. Art going to prison, Pompey?

Pompey. Yes, faith, sir.

Lucio. Why, 'tis not amiss, Pompey. Fare well. Go, say I sent thee thither. For debt Pompey, or how?

Duke. For being a bawd, for being a bawd. Lucio. Well, then imprison him. If imprison ment be the due of a bawd, why, 'tis his right bawd is he doubtless, and of antiquity too; bawd born. Farewell, good Pompey. Command me to the prison, Pompey. You will turn good hus band now, Pompey; you will keep the house.

Pompey. I hope, sir, your good worship will be my bail.

Lucio. No, indeed, will I not, Pompey; it is not the wear. I will pray, Pompey, to increase your bondage: if you take it not patiently, why your mettle is the more. Adieu, trusty Pompey. Bless you, friar.

Duke. And you.

Pompey. You will not bail me then, sir?

Lucio. Then, Pompey, nor now. What news abroad, friar? What news?

Elb. Come your ways, sir; come.

Lucio. Go to kennel, Pompey; go.

Execute Elbow, Pompey, and Officer.

What news, friar, of the duke?

Duke. I know none. Can you tell me of any Lucio. Some say he is with the Emperor of Russia; other some, he is in Rome: but what is he, think you?

Duke. I know not where; but wheresoever wish him well.

Lucio. It was a mad fantastical trick of him to steal from the state, and usurp the beggary I was never born to. Lord Angelo duke it we in his absence; he puts transgression to t.

Duke. He does well in t.

Lucio. A little more lenity to leechery would do no harm in him: something too embayed this way, friar.

Duke. It is too general a vice, and severi must cure it.

Lucio. Yes, in good sooth, the vice is of great kindred; it is well allied; but it is impossible to extirp it quite, friar, till eating a drinking be put down. They say this Angel was not made by man and woman after it downright way of creation: is it true, thou?

Duke. How should he be made, then?

Lucio. Some report a sea-nymph spawned him some, that he was begot between two stoc fishes. But it is certain that when he mak water his urine is congealed ice; that I know to be true; and he is a motion generative; that infallible.

Duke. You are pleasant, sir, and speak appear

Lucio. Why, what a ruthless thing is this him, for the rebellion of a codpiece to take aw the life of a man! Would the duke that absent have done this? Ere he would be hanged a man for the getting a hundred bauds, he would have paid for the nursing thousand: he had some feeling of the spot he knew the service, and that instructed him to mercy.
Duke. I never heard the absent duke much ted for women; he was not inclined that day.
Lucio. O, sir, you are deceived.
Duke. 'Tis not possible.
Lucio. Who? not the duke? yes, your beggar fifty, and his use was to put a ducat in her back-dish; the duke had crotchet's in him. He would be drunk too; that let me inform you. 190 Lucio. Sir, I was an inward of his. A shy allow was the duke; and I believe I know the use of his withdrawing.
Duke. What, what, I prithee, might be the cause?
Lucio. No, pardon: 'tis a secret must be locked within the teeth and the lips; but this I can let understand, the greater file of the subject old the duke to be wise.
Duke. Wise! why, no question but he was. 200
Lucio. A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow.
Duke. Either this is envy in you, folly, or mistaking: the very stream of his life and the uniness he hath helmed must upon a warrant led give him a better proclamation. Let him but testimonied in his own bringings-forth, and he shall appear to the envious a scholar, a statesman and a soldier. Therefore you speak askingly; or, if your knowledge be more, it is much darkened in your malice.
Lucio. Sir, I know him, and I love him.
Duke. Love talks with better knowledge, and knowledge with dearer love.
Lucio. Come, sir, I know what I know.
Duke. I can hardly believe that, since you now not what you speak. But, if ever the duke is in our prayers, by my faith, let me desire him to make your answer before him: if it be onest you have spoke, you have courage to maintain it. I am bound to call upon you; and, pray you, your name? 230
Lucio. Sir, my name is Lucio, well known to us.
Duke. He shall know you better, sir, if I may so to report you.
Lucio. I fear you not.
Duke. O! you hope the duke will return no more, or you imagine me too unfruitful an opposite. But indeed I can do you little harm;
ou'll forswear this again. 231
Lucio. I'll be hanged first: thou art deceived me, friar. But no more of this. Canst thou kill if Claudio die to-morrow or no?
Duke. Why should he die, sir?
Lucio. Why? for filling a bottle with a tunish. I would the duke we talk of were returned gain: this ungeniture agent will unpeople his province with continency; sparrow's must not build in his house-eaves, because they are cereous. The duke yet would have dark deeds arkly answered; he would never bring them to glit: would he were returned! Marry, this lawful is condemned for untruth. Farewell, ood friar; I prithee, pray for me. The duke, say to thee again, would eat mutton on ridays. He's not past it yet, and I say to ee, he would mouth with a beggar, though he smelt brown bread and garlic: say that I aid so. Farewell.
Exit. 250
Duke. No might nor greatness in mortality
Can censure scape: back-wounding calumny
The whitest virtue strikes. What king so strong
Can tie the gall up in the slanderous tongue?
But who comes here?

Enter Escalus, Provost, and Officers with Mistress Overdone.

Escal. Go: away with her to prison!
Overdone. Good my lord, be good to me; your honour is accounted a merciful man; good my lord.
Escal. Double and treble admonition, and still forfeit in the same kind! This would make mercy swear and play the tyrant. 272
Prov. A bawd of eleven years' continuance, may it please your honour.
Overdone. My lord, this is one Lucio's information against me. Mistress Kate Keepdown was with child by him in the duke's time; he promised her marriage; his child is a year and a quarter old, come Philip and Jacob; I have kept it myself, and see how he goes about to abuse me! 273
Escal. That fellow is a fellow of much license:
let him be called before us. Away with her to prison! Go to; no more words.

Exeunt Mistress Overdone and Officers.

Provost. My brother Angelo will not be altered;
Claudio must die to-morrow. Let him be furnished with divines, and have all charitable preparation; if my brother wrought by my pity, it should not be so with him.

Prov. So please you, this friar hath been with him, and advised him for the entertainment of death.

Escal. Good even, good father.
Duke. Bliss and goodliness on you!
Escal. Of whence are you?
Duke. Not of this country, though my chance is now
To use it for my time: I am a brother
Of gracious order, late come from the See
In special business from his Holiness.

Escal. What news abroad i' the world?
Duke. None, but that there is so great a fever on goodness, that the dissolution of it must cure it: novelty is only in request; and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of course, as it is virtuous to be constant in any undertaking.
There is scarce truth enough alive to make societies secure, but security enough to make fellowships accused. Much upon this riddle runs the wisdom of the world. This news is old enough, yet it is every day's news. I pray you, sir, of what disposition was the duke?

Escal. One that, above all other strifes, contended especially to know himself.

Duke. What pleasure was he given to?

Escal. Rather rejoicing to see another merry, then merry at any thing which professed to make him rejoice: a gentleman of all temperance. But leave him to his events, with a prayer they may prove prosperous; and let me desire to know how you find Claudio prepared.
I am made to understand that you have lent him visitation.

Duke. He professes to have received no sinister measure from his judge, but most willingly humbles himself to the determination of justice;
yet had he framed to himself, by the instruction of his frailty, many deceiving promises of life, which I by my good leisure have discredited to him, and now is he resolved to die. 269

Esc. You have paid the heavens your function, and the prisoner the very debt of your calling. I have laboured for the poor gentleman to the extremest shore of my modesty; but my brother justice have I found so severe, that he hath forced me to tell him he is indeed Justice.

Duke. If his own life answer the strictness of his proceeding, it shall become him well; wherein if he chance to fail, he hath sentenced himself.

Esc. I am going to visit the prisoner. Fare you well. 290

Duke. Peace be with you! Exeunt Escalus and Provost.

He who the sword of heaven will bear Should be as holy as severe; Pattern in himself to know, Grace to stand, and virtue go; More nor less to others paying Than by self-offences weighing. Shame to him whose cruel striking Kills for faults of his own liking! Twice treble shame on Angelo, To weed my vice and let his grow! O! what may man within him hide, Though angel on the outward side; How may likeness made in crimes, Making practice on the times, To draw with idle spiders' strings Most ponderous and substantial things! Craft against vice I must apply: With Angelo to-night shall lie His old betrothed but despised: So disguise shall, by the disguised, Pay with falsehood false exacting, And perform an old contracting. Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The moated Grange at St. Luke's.

Enter Mariana and a Boy. Boy sings.

Take, O take those lips away, That so sweetly were foreworn; And those eyes, the break of day, Lights that do mislead the worn:

But my kisses bring again, bring again,

Seals of love, but seal'd in vain, seal'd in vain.

Marian. Break off that song, and haste thee quick away:

Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice Hath often still'd my brawling discontent. Exit Boy.

Enter Duke, disguised as before.

I cry you mercy, sir; and well could wish You had not found me here so musical: Let me excuse me, and believe me so, My mirth it much displeas'd, but pleas'd my woe.

Duke. 'Tis good: though music oft hath such a charm

To make bad good, and good provoke to harm. I pray you tell me, hath any body inquired for me here to-day? Much upon this time have I promised here to meet.
MARI.

Fear me not. 71

DUKE. Nor, gentle daughter, fear you not at all, for he is your husband on a pre-contract: to bring you thus together, 'tis no sin, think but the justice of your title to him shall flourish the deceit. Come, let us go: our court 's to reap, for yet our tithe 's to sow.

EXECUT.

SCENE II.—A Room in the Prison.

Enter Provost and Pompey.

PROVOST. Come hither, sirrah. Can you cut off a man's head?

POMPEY. If the man be a bachelor, sir, I can; and if he be a married man, he's his wife's head, and I can never cut off a woman's head.

PROVOST. Come, sir, leave me your snatches, and I will give you a direct answer. To-morrow morning to die Claudio and Barnardine. Here is in your prison a common executioner, who in his lice lacks a helper: if you will take it on you to assist him, it shall redeem you from your yres; if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment, and your deliverance with an untied whipping, for you have been a notorious wvd.

POMPEY. Sir, I have been an unlawful bawd me out of mind; but yet I will be content to an lawful hangman. I would be glad to receive your instruction from my fellow partner.

PROVOST. What ho, Abhorson! Where's Abhorson, here?

Enter Abhorson.

ABHORSON. Do you call, sir?

PROVOST. Sirrah, here's a fellow will help you to-morrow in your execution. If you think it meet, you shall be with him by the year, and let him know where you are; if not, use him for the present and dismiss him. He cannot plead his tinnation with you; he hath been a bawd.

ABHORSON. A bawd, sir? Fie upon him! he will discredit our mystery.

PROVOST. Go to, sir; you weigh equally; a feather shall turn the scale.

EXECUT. Pompey, Pray, sir, by your good favour—for, surely, a good favour you have, but that you are a hanging look—do you call, sir, your occupation a mystery?

ABHORSON. Ay, sir; a mystery.

POMPEY. Painting, sir, I have heard say is a mystery; and your whores, sir, being members of my occupation, using painting, do prove my application a mystery; but what mystery there could be in hanging, if I should be hanged, I must imagine.

ABHORSON. Sir, it is a mystery.

POMPEY. Proof?

ABHORSON. Every true man's apparel fits your tief.

POMPEY. If it be too little for your thief, your true man thinks it big enough; if it be too big for your thief, your thief thinks it little enough: every true man's apparel fits your thief.

RE-ENTER PROVOST.

PROVOST. Are you agreed?

POMPEY. Sir, I will serve him; for I do find ur hangman is a more penitent trade than ur bawd; he doth oftener ask forgiveness.

PROVOST. You, sirrah, provide your block and your axe to-morrow four o'clock.

ABHORSON. Come on, bawd; I will instruct thee in my trade: follow.

POMPEY. I do desire to learn, sir; and I hope, if you have occasion to use me for your own turn, you shall find me yare; for, truly, sir, for your kindness I owe you a good turn.

PROVOST. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio:

EXECUT. POMPEY AND ABHORSON.

The one has my pity; not a jot the other. Being a murderer, though he were my brother.

Enter CLAUDIO.

Look, here's the warrant, Claudio, for thy death: 'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to-morrow Thou must be made immortal. Where's Barnardine?

CLAUDIO. As fast lock'd up in sleep as guiltless labour
When it lies starkly in the traveller's bones:
He will not wake.

PROVOST. Who can do good on him?
WELL, go; prepare yourself. Knocking within.

But hark, what noise?

Heaven give your spirits comfort!

Exit CLAUDIO.

By and by,
I hope it is some pardon or reprieve
For the most gentle Claudio.

Enter DUKE, disguised as before.

Welcome, father.

DUKE. The best and wholesomest spirits of the night
Envelop you, good provost! Who call'd here of late?

PROVOST. None, since the curfew rung.

DUKE. Not Isabel?

PROVOST. No.

DUKE. They will, then, ere 't be long.

PROVOST. What comfort is for Claudio?

DUKE. There's some in hope.

PROVOST. It is a bitter deputy.

DUKE. Not so, not so: his life is parallel'd
Even with the stroke and line of his great justice: He doth with holy abstinance subdue
That in himself which he spurs on his power
To qualify in others: were he mean'd with that Which he corrects, then were he tyrannous:
But this being so, he's just.

Knocking within.

Now are they come. Exit PROVOST.

This is a gentle provost: seldom when
The steeld goater is the friend of men.

Knocking.

How now! What noise? That spirit's possess'd with haste
That wounds the unsisting postern with these strokes.

RE-ENTER PROVOST.

PROVOST. There he must stay until the officer
Arise to let him in; he is call'd up.

DUKE. Have you no countermand for Claudio yet,
But he must die to-morrow?

PROVOST. None, sir, none.

DUKE. As near the dawning, provost, as it is,
You shall hear more ere morning.
Happily you something know; yet I believe there comes no countermand; no such example have we. Besides, upon the very siege of justice, Lord Angelo hath to the public ear professed the contrary.

Enter a Messenger.

This is his lordship's man. Duke. And here comes Claudio's pardon.

Mess. My lord hath sent you this note; and by me this further charge, that you swerve not from the smallest article of it, neither in time, matter, or other circumstance. Good morrow; or, as I take it, it is almost day.

Duke. Aside. This is his pardon, purchas'd by such sin

For which the pardoner himself is in; Hence hath offence his quick celerity, When it is borne in high authority, When vice makes mercy, mercy 's so extended, That for the fault's love is the offender friend.

Now, sir, what news?

Prov. I told you: Lord Angelo, belike thinking me remiss in mine office, awakens me with this unwonted putting-on; methinks strangely, for he hath not used it before.

Duke. Pray, let's hear.

Prov. Whatsoever you may hear to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by four of the clock; and in the afternoon Barnardine. For my better satisfaction, let me have Claudio's head sent me by five. Let this be duly performed; with a thought that more depends on it than we must yet deliver. This fail not to do your office, as you will answer it at your peril. What say you to this, sir?

Duke. What is that Barnardine who is to be executed in the afternoon?

Prov. A Bohemian, born, but here nursed up and bred; one that is a prisoner nine years old.

Duke. How came it that the absent duke had not either delivered him to his liberty or executed him? I have heard it was ever his manner to do so.

Prov. His friends still wrought reprimess for him: and, indeed, his fact, till now in the government of Lord Angelo, came not to an undoubted proof.

Duke. It is now apparent?

Prov. Most manifest, and not denied by himself.

Duke. Hath he borne himself penitently in prison? how seems he to be touched?

Prov. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully, but as a drunken sleep; careless, reckless, and fearless of what's past, present, or to come; insensible of mortality, and desperately mortal.

Duke. He wants advice.

Prov. He will hear none. He hath evermore had the liberty of the prison: give him leave to escape hence, he would not: drunk many times a day, if not many days entirely drunk. We have very oft awakened him, as to carry him to execution, and showed him a seeming warrant for it: he hath not moved him at all.

Duke. More of him anon. There is written in your brow, provost, honesty and constancy: if I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me; but in the boldness of my cunning I will lay myself in hazard. Claudio, whom here you have warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit: the law than Angelo who hath sentenced him: To make you understand this in a manifest effect, I crave but four days' respite, for that which you are to do me both a present and dangerous courtesy.

Prov. Pray, sir, in what?

Duke. In the delaying death.

Prov. Alack! how may I do it, having the holy limited, and an express command, under penalty to deliver his head in the view of Angelo? may make my case as Claudio's, to cross this the smallest.

Duke. By the vow of mine order I warrant you if my instructions may be your guide. Let it Barnardine this morning executed, and I head borne to Angelo.

Prov. Angelo hath seen them both, and we discover the favour.

Duke. O! death's a great disguiser, and you in add to it. Shave the head and tie the beard, and say it was the desire of the penitent to such sinned before his death: you know the crown is common. If anything fall to you upon thine more than thanks and good fortune, by a saint whom I profess, I will plead against with my life.

Prov. Pardon me, good father: it is again my oath.

Duke. Were you sworn to the duke, or to the deputy?

Prov. To him, and to his substitutes.

Duke. You will think you have made no offer if the duke avouch the justice of your dealing?

Prov. But what likelihood is in that?

Duke. Not a resemblance, but a certainty. Since I see you fearful, that neither my clemency, nor persuasion can with ease attain you, I will go further than I meant, to pluck fears out of you. Look you, sir; here is hand and seal of the duke: you know the character, I doubt not, and the signet is not strange to you.

Prov. I know them both.

Duke. The contents of this is the return the duke: you shall anon over-read it at your pleasure, where you shall find within these days he will be here. This is a thing that Angelo knows not, for he this very day receives letter of strangestouch; perchance of the duke's idea perchance entering into some monastery; by chance, nothing of what is writ. Look, unfolding star calls up the shepherd, not yourself into amazement how these things should be: all difficulties are but easy when they are known. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardine's head: I will give him a press shift and advise him for a better place. Yet are amazed, but this shall absolutely resolve you. Come away; it is almost clear dawn. Exit.
Senior Rash; he's in for a commodity of brown waxer and old ginger, nine score and seventeen sounds, of which he made five marks, ready money: marry, then ginger was not much in request, for the old women were all dead. Then's there here one Master Cappe, at the suit of Master Three-pile the mercer, for some four suits of peach-coloured satin, which now peaches him beggar. Then have we here young Dizzy, and young Master Deep-vow, and Master Copper-spur, and Master Starve-lackey the rapier-and-dagger man, and young Drop-heir that killed lusty Padding, and Master Forthright the tilter, and brave Master Shoe-tie the great traveller, and first Half-can that stabbed Pots, and, I think, forty more; all great doers in our trade, and are ow 'for the Lord's sake.'

Enter Abhorson.

Abhor. Sirrah, bring Barnardine hither.

Pompey. Master Barnardine! you must rise and be hanged, Master Barnardine!

Abhor. Tell him he must awake, and that nickly too.

Pompey. Pray, Master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleep afterwards.

Abhor. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Pompey. He is coming; sir, he is coming; I ear his car rustle.

Abhor. Is the axe upon the block, sirrah?

Pompey. Very ready, sir.

Enter Barnardine.

Bar. How now, Abhorson? what's the news with you?

Abhor. Truly, sir, I would desire you to clap to your prayers; for, look you, the warrant's on. Bar. You rogue, I have been drinking all night; I am not fitted for t.

Pompey. O, the better, sir; for he that drinks at night, and is hanged betimes in the morning, may sleep the sounder all the next day.

Abhor. Look, you, sir; here comes your ghostly ther: do we jest now, think you?

Enter Duke disguised as before.

Duke. Sir, induced by my charity, and hearing you hastily you are to depart, I am come to advise you, comfort you, and pray with you.

Bar. Friar, not I: I have been drinking hard last night, and I will have more time to prepare, or they shall beat out my brains with billets; will not consent to die this day, that's certain.

Duke. O, sir, you must; and therefore I beseech you look forward on the journey you shall go. Bar. I swear I will not die to-day for any an's persuasion.

Duke. But hear you.

Bar. Not a word: if you have any thing to say to me, come to my ward; for thence will I to-day.

Exit.

Enter Provost.

Duke. unfit to live or die. O grave heart! After him, fellows: bring him to the block.

Exit Abhorson and Pompey.

Prov. Now, sir, how do you find the prisoner?

Duke. A creature unprepared, unmeet for death; and to transport him in the mind he is. We were damnable.

Prov. Here in the prison, father.

There died this morning of a cruel fever One Ragozine, a most notorious pirate, A man of Claudio's years; his beard and head Just of his colour. What if we do omit This reprobe till he were well inclin'd, And satisfy the deputy with the visage Of Ragozine, more like to Claudio?

Duke. O! 'tis an accident that heaven provides. Dispatch it presently: the hour draws on Prefix'd by Angelo. See this be done, And sent according to command, whilst I persuade this rude wretch willingly to die.

Prov. This shall be done, good father, presently; But Barnardine must die this afternoon; And how shall we continue Claudio, To save me from the danger that might come If he were known alive?

Duke. Let this be done:

Put them in secret holds, both Barnardine and Claudio: Ere twice the sun hath made his journal greeting To yonder generation, you shall find Your safety manifested.

Prov. I am your free dependant.

Duke. Quick, dispatch, and send the head to Angelo. Exit Provost.

Now will I write letters to Angelo,— The provost, he shall bear them,—whose contents Shall witness to him I am near at home, And that, by great injunctions, I am bound To enter publicly: him I'll desire To meet me at the consecrated fount A league below the city; and from thence, By cold gradation and well balanced form, We shall proceed with Angelo.

Re-enter Provost.

Prov. Here is the head; I'll carry it myself.

Duke. Convenient is it. Make a swift return, For I would commune with you of such things That want no ear but yours.

Prov. I'll make all speed. Exit. Isab. Within. Peace, ho, be hear! Duke. The tongue of Isabel. She's come to know If yet her brother's pardon be come hither; But I will keep her ignorant of her good, To make her heavenly comforts of despair, When it is least expected.

Enter Isabella.

Isab. Ho! by your leave.

Duke. Good morning to you, fair and gracious daughter.

Isab. The better, given me by so holy a man. Hath yet the deputy sent my brother's pardon?

Duke. He hath releas'd him, Isabel, from the world. His head is off and sent to Angelo.

Isab. Nay, but it is not so.
Duke. It is no other: show your wisdom, daughter.

Isab. O! I will to him and pluck out his eyes.

Duke. You shall not be admitted to his sight.

Isab. Unhappy Claudio! wretched Isabel! Injurious world! most damned Angelo!

Duke. This nor hurts him nor profits you a jot; Forbear it therefore; give your cause to heaven. Mark what I say, which you shall find

By every syllable a faithful verity.

The duke comes home to-morrow; nay, dry your eyes:

One of our Covent, and his confessor, Gives me this instance: already he hath carried Notice to Escalus and Angelo,

Who do prepare to meet him at the gates,

There to give up their power. If you can, pace your wisdom

In that good path that I would wish it go,
And you shall have your bosom on this wretch, Grace of the duke, revenge to your heart, and

And general honour.

Isab. I am directed by you.

Duke. This letter then to Friar Peter give; 'Tis that he sent me of the duke's return:

Say, by this token, I desire his company

At Mariana's house to-night. Hark! Be just and yours I'll perfect him truthful, and he shall bring you

Before the duke; and to the head of Angelo

Accuse him home, and home. For my poor self, I am combined by a sacred vow,

And shall be absent. Wend you with this letter:

Command these fretting waters from your eyes

With a light heart: trust not my holy order, if

If I pervert your course. Who's here?

Enter Lucio.

Lucio. Good even. Friar, where is the provost?

Duke. Not within, sir.

Lucio. O pretty Isabella, I am pale at mine heart to see thine eyes so red: thou must be patient. I am fain to dine and sup with water and bran; I dare not for my head fill my belly; one fruitful meal would set me to. But they say the duke will be here to-morrow. By my troth, Isabel, I loved thy brother: if the old fantastical duke of dark corners had been at home, he had lived.

Exit Isabella.

Duke. Sir, the duke is marvellous little beholding to your reports; but the best is, he lives not in them.

Lucio. Friar, thou knowest not the duke so well as I do: he's a better woodman than thou takest him for.

Duke. Well, you'll answer this one day. Fare ye well.

Lucio. Nay, tarry; I'll go along with thee: I can tell thee pretty tales of the duke.

Duke. You have told me too many of him already, sir, if they be true; if not true, none were enough.

Lucio. I was once before him for getting a wench with child.

Duke. Did you such a thing?

Lucio. Yes, marry, did I; but I was fain to forswear it: they would else have married me to the rotten medlar.

Duke. Sir, your company is fairer than honest. Rest you well.

Lucio. By my troth, I'll go with thee to the lane's end. If bawdy talk offend you, we'll have very little of it. Nay, friar, I am a kind of burr; I shall stick.

Exeunt.

Scene IV.—A Room in Angelo's House.

Enter Angelo and Escalus.

Escal. Every letter he hath writ hath disvouchéd other.

Ang. In most uneven and distracted manner. His actions show much like to madness; pray heaven his wisdom be not tainted! and why meet him at the gates, and redeem our authorités there?

Escal. I guess not.

Ang. And why should we proclaim it in an hour before his entering, that if any crave redress of injustice, they should exhibit their petitions in the street?

Escal. He shows his reason for that: to have a dispatch of complaints, and to deliver us from devices hereafter, which shall then have a power to stand against us.

Ang. Well, I beseech you, let it be proclaimed; Betimes, I the morrow I'll call you at your house. Give notice to such men of sort and suit As are to meet him.

Escal. I shall, sir: fare you well.

Ang. Good night. Exeunt Escalus.

This deed unshapes me quite, makes me un pregnant

And dull to all proceedings. A deflower'd maid

And by an eminent body that enforce'd

The law against it! But that her tender shan

Will not proclaim against her maiden loss,

How might she tongue me! Yet reason dar

er no:

For my authority bears a credent bulk,

That no particular scandal once can touch

But it confounds the breathers. He should ha

live'd,

Save that his riotous youth, with danger

sense,

Might in the times to come have ta'en reveng

By so receiving a dishonour'd life

With ransom of such shame. Would yet he ha

live'd!

Alack! when once our grace we have forgot,

Nothing goes right: we would, and we won

not.

Scene V.—Fields without the Town.

Enter Duke in his own habit, and Friar Peter.

Duke. These letters at fit time deliver me.

Giving letters.

The provost knows our purpose and our plot,

The matter being afoot, keep your instructor,

And hold you ever to our special drift,

Though sometimes you do brench from this that,

As cause doth minister. Go call at Flavius

house,

And tell him where I stay: give the like note

To Valentine, Rowland, and to Crassus,

And bid them bring the trumpets to the gate:

But send me Flavius first.

Fri. Pet. It shall be speeded well.
Enter Varrius.

Duke. I thank thee, Varrius; thou hast made good haste.

Now, we will walk: there's other of our friends Will greet us here anon, my gentle Varrius.

Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—Street near the City Gate.

Enter Isabella and MARIANA.

Isab. To speak so indirectly I am loath; would say the truth; but to accuse him so, that is your part: yet I am advis'd to do it; 'tis says, to veil full purpose.

MARI. Be rul'd by him. Isab. Besides, he tells me that, if peradventure he speak against me on the adverse side, should not think it strange; for 'tis a physic hat's bitter to sweet end.

MARI. I would Friar Peter—

Isab. O! peace, the friar is come.

Enter Friar Peter.

Fri. Pet. Come, I have found you out a stand most fit,

Here you may have such vantage on the duke, 'e shall not pass you. Twice have the trumpets sounded:

He generous and gravest citizens have hent the gates, and very near upon he duke is out'ring; therefore hence, away!

Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A public Place near the City Gate.

ARIANA veiled, ISABELLA, and Friar Peter, at a distance.

Inter Duke, VARRIUS, Lords; ANGELO, ESCALUS, LUCIO, Provost, Officers and Citizens, at several doors.

Duke. My very worthy cousin, fairly met! My old and faithful friends, we are glad to see you.

Anglo. ESCAL. Happy return be to your royal grace!

Duke. Many and hearty thankings to you both. We have made inquiry of you; and we hear such goodness of your justice, that our soul annot but yield you forth to public thanks, overrunning more requital.

Anglo. You make my bonds still greater.

Duke. O! your desert speaks loud; and I should wrong it o lock it in the wards of covert bosom, that it deserves, with characters of brass, forsed residence 'gainst the tooth of time and natures of oblivion. Give me your hand, and let the subject see, to make them know hat outward courtesies would fail proclaim hows that keep within. Come, Escalus, on must walk by us on our other hand; no good supporters are you.

Friar Peter and ISABELLA come forward.

Fri. Pet. Now is your time: speak loud and kneel before him.

Isab. Justice, O royal duke! Vail your regard pon a wrong'd, I would fain have said, a mad! worthy prince! dishonour not your eye By throwing it on any other object, Till you have heard me in my true complaint, And given me justice, justice, justice, justice!

Duke. Relate your wrongs: in what? by whom?

Be brief.

Here is Lord Angelo shall give you justice:

Reveal yourself to him.

Isab. O worthy duke!

You bid me seek redemption of the devil,

Hear me yourself; for that which I must speak Must either punish me, not being believe'd,

Or wring redress from you. Hear me, O hear me, here!

Ang. My lord, her wits, I fear me, are not fain: She hath been a suitor to me for her brother Cut off by course of justice,

Isab. By course of justice!

Ang. And she will speak most bitterly and strange.

Isab. Most strange, but yet most truly, will I speak.

That Angelo's forsworn, is it not strange?
That Angelo's a murderer, is 't not strange?
That Angelo is an adulterous thief,

An hypocrite, a virgin-violator;

Is it not strange and strange?

Duke. Nay, it is ten times strange.

Isab. It is not truer he is Angelo
Than this is all as true as it is strange;

Nay, it is ten times true; for truth is truth To the end of reckoning.

Duke. Away with her! poor soul,

She speaks this in the infirmity of sense.

Isab. O prince! I conjure thee, as thou believest

There is another comfort than this world,

That thou neglect me not, with that opinion

That I am touch'd with madness. Make not impossible

That which but seems unlike. 'Tis not impossible

But one, the wicked'st traitor on the ground.

May seem as shy, as grave, as just, as absolute

As Angelo; even so may Angelo,

In all his dressings, characters, titles, forms,

Be an arch-villain. Believe it, royal prince:

If he be less, he's nothing; but he's more,

Had I more name for badness.

Duke. By mine honesty,

If she be mad, as I believe no other,

Her madness hath the oddest frame of sense,

Such a dependancy of thing on thing, As e'er I heard in madness.

Isab. O gracious duke! Harp not on that; nor do not banish reason For inequality; but let your reason serve To make the truth appear where it seems hid, And hide the false seems true.

Duke. Many that are not mad

Have, sure, more lack of reason. What would you say?

Isab. I am the sister of one Claudio,

Condemn'd upon the act of fornication

To lose his head; condemn'd by Angelo.

I, in probation of a sisterhood,

Was sent to by my brother; one Lucio,

As then the messenger—

Lucio. That's I, an't like your grace:

I came to her from Claudio, and desir'd her

To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo

For her poor brother's pardon.

Isab. That's he indeed,
Duke. You were not bid to speak.

Lucio. No, my good lord; nor wish'd to hold my peace.

Duke. Pray you, take note of it; and when you have a business for yourself, pray heaven you then be perfect.

Lucio. I warrant your honour.

Duke. The warrant's for yourself: take heed to it.

Isab. This gentleman told somewhat of my tale,—

Lucio. Right.

Duke. It may be right; but you are in the wrong to speak before your time. Proceed.

Isab. I went to this pernicious caitiff deputy.

Duke. That's somewhat madly spoken.

Isab. Pardon it:

The phrase is to the matter.

Duke. Mended again: the matter; proceed.

Isab. In brief, to set the needless process by, how I persuaded, how I pray'd, and kneel'd, how he refell'd me, and how I replied,—For this was of much length,—the vile conclusion I now begin with grief and shame to utter.

He would not, but by gift of my chaste body To his concupiscible intemperate lust, Release my brother; and, after much debate, My sisterly remorse confutes mine honour, and I did yield to him. But the next morn betimes, His purpose surfetthing, he sends a warrant For my poor brother's head.

Duke. This is most likely!

Isab. O! that it were as like as it is true.

Duke. By heaven, fond wretch! thou know'st not what thou speak'st, or else thou art suborn'd against his honour In hateful practice. First, his integrity Stands without blemish; next, it imports no reason That with such vehemency he should pursue so Faults proper to himself; if he had so offended, He would have weigh'd thy brother by himself, And not have cut him off. Some one hath set you on: Confess the truth, and say by whose advice Thou cam'st here to complain.

Isab. And is this all?

Then, O you blessed ministers above! Keep in me patience; and with ripen'd time Unfold the evil which is here wrapt up In countenance. Heaven shield your grace from woe.

As I, thus wrong'd, hence unbelived go!

Duke. I know you'd fain be gone. An officer! To prison with her! Shall we thus permit A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall On him so near us? This needs must be a practice. Who knew of your intent and coming hither?

Isab. One that I would were here, Friar Lodowick.

Duke. A ghostly father, belike. Who knows that Lodowick?

Lucio. My lord, I know him; 'tis a meddling friar; I do not like the man: had he been lay, my lord, for certain words he spake against your grace In your retirement, I had swing'd him soundly.

Duke. Words against me! This a good friar belike!

And to set on this wretched woman here Against our substitute! Let this friar be found, Lucio. But yesternight, my lord, she and that friar, I saw them at the prison: a saucy friar, A very scurvye fellow.

Fri. Pet. Bless'd be your royal grace I have stood by, my lord, and I have heard Your royal ear abus'd. First, hath this woman Most wrongfully accus'd your substitute, Who is as free from touch or soil with her, As she from one ungot.

Duke. We did believe no less Know you that Friar Lodowick that she speaks of?

Fri. Pet. I know him for a man divine and holy Not scurvye, nor a temporary meddler, As he's reported by this gentleman; And, on my trust, a man that never yet Did, as he vouches, misreport your grace.

Lucio. My lord, most villainously; believe it.

Fri. Pet. Well; he in time may come to clean himself, But at this instant he is sick, my lord, Of a strange fever. Upon his mere request, Being come to knowledge that there was complaint

Intended against Lord Angelo, came I hither, To speak, as from his mouth, what he doth know Is true and false; and what he with his oath All probation will make up full clear, Whene'er he's converted. First, for this woman, To justify this worthy nobleman, So vulgarly and personally accus'd, Her shall you hear disproved to her eyes, Till she herself confess it.

Duke. Good friar, let's hear it.

ISABELLA is carried off guarded; or MARIANA comes forward.

Do you not smile at this, Lord Angelo? O heaven! the vanities of wretched fools. Give us some seats. Come, cousin Angelo; In this I'll be impartial; be you judge Of your own cause. Is this the witness, friar? First, let her show her face, and after speak. Mari. Pardon, my lord, I will not show my face Until my husband bid me.

Duke. What, are you married?

Mari. No, my lord.

Duke. Are you a maid?

Mari. No, my lord.

Duke. A widow then?

Mari. Neither, my lord.

Duke. Why, y

Are nothing then; neither maid, widow, nor wife.

Lucio. My lord, she may be a punk; for most of them are neither maid, widow, nor wife.

Duke. Silence that fellow: I would he had some cause To prattle for himself.

Lucio. Well, my lord.

Mari. My lord, I do confess I ne'er was married.

And I confess besides I am no maid; I have known my husband, yet my husband knows not That ever he knew me.

Lucio. He was drunk then my lord: it can no better.
Duke. For the benefit of silence, would thou ert so too!

Lucio. Well, my lord.

Duke. This is no witness for Lord Angelo.

Mari. Now I come to 't, my lord:
that he accuses him of fornication,

a selfsame manner doth accuse my husband;
and charges him, my lord, with such a time,
then, I'll depose, I had him in mine arms with all the effect of love.

Ang. Charges she more than me?

Mari. Not that I know.

Duke. No? you say your husband.

Mari. Why, just, my lord, and that is Angelo,

Tho' he knows that he never knew my body,

it knows he thinks that he knows Isabel's.

Ang. This is a strange abuse. Let's seeth face.

Mari. My husband bids me; now I will unmask.

Unclothing. 220

his is that face, thou cruel Angelo,

Thick once thou swore'st was worth the looking on:

his is the hand which, with a vow'd contract,

'as fast belo'k'd in thine: this is the body hat took away the match from Isabel, and did supply thee at thy garden-house

for her imagin'd person.

Duke. Know you this woman?

Lucio. Carnally, she says.

Duke. Sirrah, no more!

Lucio. Enough, my lord.

Ang. My lord, I must confess I know this woman;

ad five years since there was some speech of marriage

twixt myself and her, which was broke off,

truly for that her promised proportions me short of composition; but in chief

or that her reputation was disvalued

levity: since which time of five years never spake with her, saw her, nor heard from her,

on my faith and honour.

Mari. Noble prince,

there comes light from heaven and words from breath,

there is sense in truth and truth in virtue.

an allane'd this man's wife as strongly words could make up vows: and, my good lord,

it Tuesday night last gone, in's garden-house knew me as a wife. As this is true, me in safety raise me from my knees,

else for ever confided into marble monument.

Ang. I did but smile till now:

ow, good my lord, give me the scope of justice;

patience here is touch'd. I do perceive these poor informal women are no more

it instruments of some more mighty member that sets them on. Let me have way, my lord, find this practice out.

Duke. Ay, with my heart;

id punish them to your height of pleasure.

you foolish friar, and thou pernicious woman, empet with her that's gone, think'st thou thy oaths,

tough they would swear down each particular saint

ere testimonies against his worth and credit that's seal'd in approbation? You, Lord Escauls, with my cousin: lend him your kind pains

To find out this abuse, whence 'tis deriv'd.

There is another friar that set them on;

Let him be sent for.

Fri. Pet. Would he be here, my lord; for he

Hath set the women on to this complaint:

Your provost knows the place where he abides

And he may fetch him.

Duke. Go do it instantly.

Exit Provost.

And you, my noble and well-warranted cousin,

Whom it concerns to hear this matter forth;

Do with your injuries as seems you best,

In any chastisement: I for a while will leave you;

But stir not you till you have well determin'd

Upon these slanderers.

Escauls. My lord, we'll do it thoroughly.

Exit Duke.

Signior Lucio, did not you say you knew that

Friar Lodowick to be a dishonest person?

Lucio. Ceceullus non facit monachum: honest in nothing but in his clothes; and one that hath spoken most villainous speeches of the duke.

Escauls. We shall entreat you to abide here till he come and enforce them against him. We shall find this friar a notable fellow.

Lucio. As any in Vienna, on my word.

Escauls. Call that same Isabel here once again:

I would speak with her.

Exit an Attendant.

Pray you, my lord, give me leave to question;

you shall see how I'll handle her.

Lucio. Not better than he, by her own report.

Escauls. Say you?

Lucio. Marry, sir, I think, if you handled her privately, she would sooner confess: perchance, publicly, she 'll be ashamed.

Escauls. I will go starkly to work with her.

Lucio. That's the way: for women are light at midnight.

Re-enter Officers, with Isabella.

Escauls. Come on, mistress; here's a gentle woman denies all that you have said.

Lucio. My lord, here comes the masque I spoke of; here with the provost.

Escauls. In very good time: speak not you to him till we call upon you.

Lucio. Mummy.

Re-enter Duke, disguised as a friar, and Provost.

Escauls. Come, sir. Did you set these women on to slander Lord Angelo? they have confessed

you did.

Duke. 'Tis false.

Escauls. How know you where you are?

Duke. Respect to your great place! and let the devil

Be sometime honour'd for his burning throne.

Where is the duke? 'tis he should hear me speak.

Escauls. The Duke's in us, and we will hear you speak:

Look you speak justly.

Duke. Boldly, at least. But, O' poor souls,

Come you to seek the lamb here of the fox?

Good night to your redress! Is the duke gone?

Then is your cause gone too. The duke's unjust,

Thus to retort your manifest appeal,

And put your trial in the villain's month.

Which here you come to accuse.

Lucio. This is the masque: this is he I spoke of.
Escal. Why, thou unreverend and unhallow'd friar!
Is't not enough thou hast suborn'd these women
To accuse this worthy man, but, in foul mouth,
And in the witness of his proper ear,
To call him villain?
And then to glance from him to the duke himself,
To tax him with injustice? Take him hence;
To the rack with him! We'll touse you joint by joint,
But we will know his purpose. What, 'unjust'!
Duke. Be not so hot; the duke
Dare no more stretch this finger of mine than he Dare rack his own: his subject am I not,
Nor here provincial. My business in this state
Made me a looker-on here in Vienna,
Where I have seen corruption boil and bubble
Till it o'er-run the stew: laws for all faults,
But faults so countenanced, 'tis the strong statutes
Stand like the forfeits in a barber's shop,
As much in mock as mark.
Escal. Slander to the state! Away with him to prison!
Ang. What can you vouch against him, Signior Lucio?
Is this the man that you did tell us of?
Lucio. 'Tis he, my lord. Come hither, goodman baldpate: do you know me?
Duke. I remember you, sir, by the sound of your voice: I met you at the prison, in the absence of the duke.
Lucio. O! did you so? And do you remember what you said of the duke?
Duke. Most notably, sir.
Lucio. Do you so, sir? And was the duke a fleshmonger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?
Duke. You must, sir, change persons with me, ere you make that my report: you, indeed, spoke so of him; and much more, much worse.
Lucio. O thou damnable fellow! Did not I pluck thee by the nose for thy speeches?
Duke. I protest I love the duke as I love myself.
Ang. Hark! how the villain would close now, after his treasnable abuses.
Escal. Such a fellow is not to be talked withal:
Away with him to prison! Where is the provost? Away with him to prison! Lay bolts enough upon him, let him speak no more! Away with these gigglots too, and with the other confederate companion.

The Provost lays hand on the Duke.

Duke. Stay, sir; stay awhile.
Lucio. Come, sir; come, sir; come, sir; foh! sir. Why, you bald-pated, lying mascal, you must be hooded, must you? show your knave's visage, with a pox to you! show your sheep-biting face, and be hanged an hour! Will not off?

Pulls off the Friar's hood, and discovers the Duke.

Duke. Thou art the first knave that ever made a duke.
First, provost, let me bail these gentle three.
To Lucio. Sneak not away, sir; for the friar and you Must have a word anon. Lay hold on him.
Lucio. This may prove worse than hanging.

Duke. To Escalus. What have you spoke pardon; sit you down:
We'll borrow place of him. To Angelo. Sir by your leave.
Hast thou or word, or wit, or impudence,
That yet can do thee office? If thou hast,
Rely upon it till my tale be heard,
And hold no longer out.
Ang. O my dear lord!
I should be guiltier than my guiltiness,
To think I can be undiscoverable.
When I perceive your grace, like power divine
Hath look'd upon my passes. Then, good providence
No longer session hold upon my shame,
But let my trial be mine own confession:
Immediate sentence then and sequent death
Is all the grace I beg.

Say, wast thou o'er contracted to this woman
Ang. I was, my lord.
Duke. Go take her hence, and marry her instantly.
Do you the office, friar; which consummate,
Return him here again. Go with him, provost
Exeunt Angelo, Mariana, Friar Peter,
Escalus, and Provost.

Escal. My lord, I am more amaz'd at his di honour
Than at the strangeness of it.

Duke. Come hither, Isab. Your friar is now your prince: as I was then Advertising and holy to your business,
Not changing heart with habit, I am still Attorney'd at your service.

Isab. O! give me pardo
That I, your vassal, have employ'd and pain'd
Your unknown sovereignty.
Duke. You are pardon'd, Isab.
And now, dear maid, be you as free to us.
Your brother's death, I know, sits at your hear
And you may marvel why I obsess'd myself,
Labouring to save his life, and would not rath
Make rash remembrance of my hidden power
Than let him so be lost. O most kind maid!
It was the swift celerity of his death,
Which I did think with slower foot came on,
That brain'd my purpose: but, peace be with his.
That life is better life, past fearing death,
Than that which lives to fear: make it yo
comfort,
So happy is your brother.

Isab. I do, my lord.

Re-enter Angelo, Mariana, Friar Peter, and Provost.

Duke. For this new-married man approachi
here.
Whose salt imagination yet hath wrong'd
Your well-defended honour, you must pardon
For Mariana's sake. But as he adjudg'd ye brother,
Being criminal, in double violation
Of sacred chastity, and of promise-breach,
Thereon dependent, for your brother's life,
The very mercy of the law cries out
Most audible, even from his proper tongue
'An Angelo for Claudio, death for death!' Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers leisure.
Like doth quit like, and Measure still for Measure.
Then, Angelo, thy fault thus manifested,
MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

Duke. O my most gracious lord! I hope you will not mock me with a husband.

Duke. It is your husband mock'd you with a husband, desiring to the safeguard of your honour, hought your marriage fit; else imputation, that he knew you, might reproach your life, and chok'd your good to come. For his possessions, though by confiscation they are ours, I do instate and widow you withal, buy you a better husband.

Mari. O my dear lord! crave no other, nor no better man. Duke. Never crave him; we are definitive.

Mari. Gentle my liege!—Kneeling.

Duke. You do but lose your labour, say with him to death! To Lucio. Now, sir, to you.

Mari. O my good lord! Sweet Isabel, take me your knees, and all my life to come lend you all my life to do you service. Duke. Against all sense you do importune him. Lord, she kneel'd down in mercy of this fact, her brother's ghost his paved bed would break, her knee's hence in horror.

Mari. Isabel, sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me: Abd up your hands, say nothing. I'll speak all say, best men are moulded out of faults, for, the most become much more the better it being a little bad: so may my husband, Isabel! will you not lend a knee? Duke. He dies for Claudia's death.

ok, if it please you, on this man condemn'd, if my brother liv'd. I partly think the sincerity govern'd his deeds, he did look on: since it is so, him not die. My brother had but justice, that he did the thing for which he died: Angelo, act did not o'ertake his bad intent, d must be buried but as an intent at perish'd by the way. Thoughts are no subjects, ents but merely thoughts.

Mari. Surely, my lord. Dukc. Your suit's unprofitable; stand up, I say, ave bethought me of another fault.

Duke. Had you a special warrant for the deed? Pro. No, my good lord; it was by private message.

Duke. For which I do discharge you of your office: go up your keys.

Pro. Pardon me, noble lord: I taught it was a fault, but knew it not, did repent me, after more advice; testimony whereof, one in the prison, it should by private order else have died, I have reserv'd alive.

Escal. I am sorry, one so learned and so wise As you, Lord Angelo, have still app'red. Should slip so grossly, both in the heat of blood, And lack of temper'd judgment afterward. Ang. I am sorry that such sorrow I procure; And so deep sticks it in my penitent heart That I crave death more willingly than mercy: 'Tis my deserving, and I do entreat it.

Re-enter Provost, Barnardine, Claudio muzzled, and Juliet.

Duke. Which is that Barnardine? Pro. This, my lord. Dukc. There was a friar told me of this man. Sirrah, thou art said to have a stubborn soul, That apprehends no further than this world, And squar's thy life according. Thou canst not demand;

But, for those earthly faults, I quit them all, And pray thee take this mercy to provide For better times to come. Friar, advise him: I leave him to your hand. What muzzled fellow's that?

Pro. This is another prisoner that I saw'd, That should have died when Claudio lost his head, As like almost to Claudio as himself.

Unmuzzles Claudio.

Duke. To Isabella. If he be like your brother, for his sake Is he pardon'd; and for your lovely sake Give me your hand and say you will be mine, He is my brother too. But fitter time for that, By this Lord Angelo perceives he's safe: Methinks I see a quick'ning in his eye. Well, Angelo, your evil quits you well: Look that you love your wife; her worth worth yours. I find an apt remission in myself, And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon. To Lucio. You, sirrah, that knew me for a fool, a coward, One all of luxury, an ass, a madman: Wherein have I so deserve'd of you, That you extol me thus?

Lucio. Faith, my lord, I spoke it but according to the trick. If you will hang me for it, you may; but I had rather it would please you I might be whipped.

Duke. Whipp'd first, sir, and hang'd after. Proclaim it, provost, round about the city. Is any woman wrong'd by this lewd fellow, As I have heard him swear himself there's one Whom he begot with child, let her appear, And he shall marry her: the nuptial finish'd, Let him be whipp'd and hang'd.

Lucio. I beseech your highness, do not marry me to a whore. Your highness said even now, I made you a duke: good my lord, do not recom pense me in making me a cuckold.

Duke. Upon mine honour, thou shalt marry her. Thy slanders I forgive; and therewithal Remit thy other forfeits. Take him to prison, And see our pleasure herein executed.
Lucio. Marrying a punk, my lord, is pressing to death, whipping and hanging.

Duke. Slaugtering a prince deserves it.

Execut Officers with Lucio.

She, Claudio, that you wound'd, look you restore.

Joy to you, Mariana! love her, Angelo:

I have confess'd her and I know her virtue.

Thanks, good friend Esclus, for thy much goodness:

There's more behind that is more gratulate.

Thanks, provost, for thy care and secrecy:

We shall employ thee in a worthier place.

Forgive him, Angelo, that brought you home

The head of Ragozine for Claudio's:

The offence pardons itself. Dear Isabel,

I have a motion much imports your good;

Where'to if you'll a willing ear incline,

What's mine is yours and what is yours mine.

So, bring us to our palace; where we'll show

What's yet behind, that's meet you all shou know.

SCENE.—Ephesus.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Hall in the Duke's Palace.

Enter Duke, Ægeon, Gaoler, Officers, and other Attendants.

Ægeon. Proceed, Solinus, to procure my fall,
And by the doom of death end woes and all.

Duke. Merchant of Syracuse, plead no more.

I am not partial to infringe our laws:

The enmity and discord which of late

Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your duke

To merchants, our well-dealing countrymen,

Who, wanting guilders to redeem their lives,

Have seal'd their rigorous statutes with their bloods,

Excludes all pity from our threatening looks.

For, since the mortal and intestine jars

Twixt thy seditious countrymen and us,

It hath in solemn synods been decreed,

Both by the Syracusians and ourselves,

To admit no traffic to our adverse towns:

Nor, more, if any born at Ephesus

Be seen at Syracusan marts and fairs;

Again, if any Syracusan born

Come to the bay of Ephesus, he dies,

His goods confiscate to the duke's dispose;

Unless a thousand marks be levied,

To quit the penalty and to ransom him.

Thy substance, valued at the highest rate,

Cannot amount unto a hundred marks;

Therefore by law thou art condemn'd to die.

Ægeon. Yet this my comfort: when your words are done,

My woes end likewise with the evening sun.

Duke. Well, Syracusan; say in brief the cause

Why thou departedst from thy native home,

And for what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus,

Ægeon. A heavier task could not have be impos'd

Than I to speak my griefs unspeakable;

Yet, that the world may witness that my end

Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence,

I'll utter what my sorrow gives me leave.

In Syracusa was I born, and wed

Unto a woman, happy but for me,

And by me too, had not our hap been bad.

With her I liv'd in joy: our wealth increas'd

By prosperous voyages I often made

To Epidamnum; till my factor's death,

And the great care of goods at random left,

Drew me from kind embraces of my spou.

From whom my absence was not six months

Before herself, almost at fainting under

The pleasing punishment that women bear,

Had made provision for her following me,

And soon and safe arrived where I was.

There had she not been long but she became

A joyful mother of two goodly sons;

And, which was strange, the one so like the other

As could not be distinguishing'd but by names.

That very hour and in the self-same inn,

A meaner woman was deliver'd

Of such a burden, male twins, both alike.

Those, for their parents were exceeding poor

I bought, and brought up to attend my sons.

My wife, not meanly proud of two such boys

Made daily motions for our home return:

Unwilling I agreed; alas! too soon

We came aboard.
league from Epidamnum had we sail'd,
before the always-wind-obeying deep ave any tragic instance of our harm:
but longer did we not retain much hope;
or what obscured light the heavens did grant did but convey unto our fearful minds doubtful warrant of immediate death;
'Nch, though myself would gladly have embrac'd, et the incessant weepings of my wife,
keeping before for what she saw must come,
nd pitious plainings of the pretty babes,
hat morn'd for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
rc'd me to seek delays for them and me.
nd this it was, for other means was none:
no sailors sought for safety by our boat,
nd left the ship, then sinking-ripe, to us;
y wife, more careful for the latter-born,
nd fasten'd him unto a small spare mast,
ich as seafaring men provide for storms;
nd one of the other twins was bound,
'hist I had been like heedful of the other.
ne children thus dispos'd, my wife and I,
xing our eyes on whom our care was fix'd,
sten'd ourselves at either end the mast;
nd floating straight, obedient to the stream,
ere carried towards Corinth, as we thought.
length the sun, gaz ing upon the earth,
ispers'd those vapours that offended us,
nd by the benefit of his wished light seas wax'd calm, and we discovered vo ships from far making again to us;
'd Corinth that, of Epidaurus this:
nd ere they came,—O! let me say no more;
ther the sequel by that went before.
Duke. Nay, forward, old man; do not break sa;
we may pity, though not pardon thee.
Ege. O! if I had the gods done so, I had not now forthly term'd them merciless to us, nd, ere the ships could meet by twice five leagues,
were encounter'd by a mighty rock;
ich being violently borne upon,
helpful ship was splitted in the midst;
that in this unjust divorce of us time had left to both of us alike hat to delight in, what to sorrow for.
er part, poor soul! seeming as burdened ith lesser weight, but not with lesser woe, as carried with more speed before the wind,
nd in our sight they three were taken up;
fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
length another ship had seiz'd on us;
nd, knowing whom it was their hap to save,
ave healthful welcome to their shipwreck'd guests;
nd would have rett the fishers of their prey,
ad not their bark been very slow of sail;
ad therefore homeward did they bend their course.
hus have you heard me sever'd from my bliss,
hat by misfortunes was my life prolong'd,
tell sad stories of my own mishaps.
Duke. And, for the sake of them thou sorrow-est for,
om the favour to dilate at full hat hath befall'n of them and thee till now.
Ege. My youngest boy, and yet my eldest care, ete eighteen years became inquisitive
After his brother; and importun'd me
That his attendant—so his case was like,
Reft of his brother, but retain'd his name—
Might bear him company in the quest of him;
Whom whilst I labour'd of a love to see,
I hazarded the loss of whom I lov'd.
Five summers have I spent in furthest Greece,
Roaming clean through the bounds of Asia,
nd, coasting homeward, came to Ephesus,
Hopeless to find, yet loath to leave unsought
Or that or any place that harbours men.
But there must end the story of my life;
And happy were I in my timely death,
Could all my travells warrant me they live.

Duke. Hapless Egeon, whom the fates have mark'd
To bear the extremity of dire mishap!
Now, trust me, were it not against our laws,
Against my crown, my oath, my dignity
Which princes, would they, may not disannul,
My soul should sue as advocate for thee.
But through thou art adjudged to the death,
And passed sentence may not be recall'd
But to our honour's great disparagement.
Yet will I favour thee in what I can:
Therefore, merchant, I'll limit thee this day
To seek thy life by beneficial help:
Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus;
Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the sun,
And live; if no, then thou art doom'd to die,
Gaoler, take him to thy custody.

Goat. I will, my lord.

Ege. Hopeless and helpless doth Egeon wend,
But to procrastinate his lifeless end.

Scene II.—The Mart.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse, Dromio of Syracuse, and a Merchant.

Merc. Therefore, give out you are of Epidamnum,
Lest that your goods too soon be confiscate.
This very day, a Syracusan merchant
Is apprehended for arrival here;
And not being able to buy out his life,
According to the statute of the town,
Dies ere the weary sun set in the west.
There is your money that I had to keep.
Ant. S. Go bear it to the Centaur, where we host,
And stay there, Dromio, till I come to thee.
Within this hour it will be dinner-time:
Till that, I'll view the manners of the town,
Peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings,
And then return and sleep within mine inn,
For with long travel I am stiff and weary.
Get thee away.

Dro. S. Many a man would take you at your word,
And go indeed, having so good a mean.

Exit.

Ant. S. A trusty villain, sir, that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholy,
Lightens my humour with his merry jests.
What, will you walk with me about the town,
And then go to my inn and dine with me?
Mer. I am invited, sir, to certain merchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefit;
I crave your pardon. Soon at five o'clock.
Please you, I'll meet with you upon the mart,
And afterwards consort you till bed-time:
My present business calls me from you now.
Ant. S. Farewell till then: I will go lose myself,
And wander up and down to view the city.
Mer. Sir, I commend you to your own content.
Exit.

Ant. S. He that commends me to mine own content
Commends me to the thing I cannot get.
I to the world am like a drop of water
That in the ocean seeks another drop;
Who, falling there to find his fellow forth,
Unseen, inquisitive, confounds himself:
So I, to find a mother and a brother,
In quest of them, unhappy, lose myself.

Enter DROMIO of Ephesus.

Here comes the almanac of my true date.
What now? How chance thou art return'd so soon?

Dro. E. Return'd so soon! rather approach'd too late.
The capon burns, the pig falls from the spit;
The clock hath strucken twelve upon the bell;
My mistress made it one upon my cheek:
She is so hot because the meat is cold;
The meat is cold because you come not home;
You come not home because you have no stomach;
You have no stomach having broke your fast;
But we that know what 'tis to fast and pray
Are penitent for your default day.

Ant. S. Stop in your wind, sir. Tell me this, I pray:
Where have you left the money that I gave you?

Dro. E. O!—sixpence, that I had o' Wednesday last
To pay the saddler for my mistress' crupper;
The saddler had it, sir; I kept it not.

Ant. S. I am not in a sportive humour now.
Tell me, and dally not, where is the money?
We being strangers here, how dar'st thou trust
So great a charge from thine own custody?

Dro. E. I pray you, jest, sir, as you sit at dinner.
I from my mistress come to you in post;
If I return, I shall be post indeed,
For she will score your fault upon my pate.
Methinks, your maw, like mine, should be your clock
And strike you home without a messenger.

Ant. S. Come, Dromio, come; these jests are out of season:
Reserve them till a merrier hour than this.
Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee?

Dro. E. To me, sir! why, you gave no gold to me.
Ant. S. Come on, sir knave, have done your foolishness,
And tell me how thou hast dispos'd thy charge.

Dro. E. My charge was but to fetch you from the mart
Home to your house, the Phoenix, sir, to dinner.
My mistress and her sister stay for you.

Ant. S. Now, as I am a Christian, answer me,
In what safe place you have bestow'd my money;
Or I shall break that merry sconce of yours
That stands on tricks when I am undispos'd.
Where is the thousand marks thou hadst of me?

Dro. E. I have some marks of yours upon my pate,
Some of my mistress' marks upon my shoulders,
But not a thousand marks between you both,
If I should pay your worship those again,
Perchance you will not bear them patiently.

Ant. S. Thy mistress' marks! what mistress slave hast thou?

Dro. E. Your worship's wife, my mistress a the Phoenix;
She that doth fast till you come home to dine.
And prays that you will hie you home to dinner.

Ant. S. What! wilt thou flout me thus unt my face,
Being forbid? There, take you that, sir knave

S. Stripes him.

Dro. E. What mean you, sir? for God's sake hold your hands.
Nay, an you will not, sir, I'll take my heels.

Ant. S. Upon my life, by some device or othe
The villain is o'errault of all my money.
They say this town is full of cozenage;
As, nimble jugglers that deceive the eye,
Dark-working sorcerers that change the mind,
Soul-killing witches that deform the body,
Disguised cheaters, prating mountebanks,
And many such like liberties of sin:
If it prove so, I will be gone the sooner.
I'll to the Centaur, to go seek this slave:
I greatly fear my money is not safe.

Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The House of ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus

Enter ADRIANA and LUCIANA.

Adr. Neither my husband nor the slave return'd
That in such haste I sent to seek his master.
Sure, Luciana, it is two o'clock.

Luc. Perhaps some merchant hath invited him
And from the mart he's somewhere gone to dine.
Good sister, let us dine and never fret:
A man is master of his liberty:
Time is their master, and, when they see time,
They'll go or come: if so, be patient, sister.

Adr. Why should their liberty than ours be more?

Luc. Because their business still lies out of door.

Adr. Look, when I serve him so, he takes it ill.

Luc. O! know he is the bridle of your will.

Adr. There's none but asses will be bridled so.

Luc. Why, headstrong liberty is lash'd with woe.

There's nothing situate under heaven's eye
But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky:
The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowls,
Are their males' subjects and at their controls.
Men, more divine, the masters of all these,
Lords of the wide world, and wild wat'ry seas
Indued with intellectual sense and souls,
Of more pre-eminence than fish and fowls,
Are masters to their females, and their lords:
Then let your will attend on their accords.

Adr. This servitude makes you to keep unwoe.

Luc. Not this, but troubles of the marriage be

Adr. But, were you wedded, you would be some sway.

Luc. Ere I learn love, I'll practise to obey.

Adr. How if your husband start some oth where?

Luc. Till he come home again, I would forbear.

Adr. Patience unmov'd! no marvel thoug she pause:
They can be meek that have no other cause.
A wretched soul, bruis'd with adversity,
Enter Dromio of Ephesus.

Adr. Say, is your tardy master now at hand? Dro. E. Nay, he is at two hands with me, and at my two ears can witness.

Adr. Say, didst thou speak with him? Know'st thou his mind?

Dro. E. Ay, ay; he told his mind upon mine ear, shrow his hand, I scarce could understand it. Luc. Speak he so doubtfully, thou could'st not feel his meaning?

Dro. E. Nay, he struck so plainly, I could too ill feel his blows; and withal so doubtfully, at I scarce understand them.

Adr. But say, I prithee, is he coming home? seems he hath great care to please his wife.

Dro. E. Why, mistress, sure my master is horn-mad.

Adr. Horn-mad, thou villain! Dro. E. I mean not cuckold-mad; but, sure, he is stark mad.

When I desir'd him to come home to dinner, I ask'd me for a thousand marks in gold; is dinner-time, quo'th I; 'my gold!' quo'th he: 'our neat doth burn,' quo'th I; 'my gold!' quo'th he: 'Wilt thou come home?' quo'th I; 'my gold!' quo'th he: 'where is the thousand marks I gave thee, villain?' he pig, quo'th I, 'is burn'd; 'my gold!' quo'th he: 'mistriss, sir, quo'th I; 'hang up thy mistrelss! now not thy mistress: out on thy mistrelss!'

Quoth who?

Dro. E. Quoth my master: 'know,' quo'th he, 'no house, no wife, no mistress.'

That my errand, due unto my tongue, hank him, I bear home upon my shoulders; or, in conclusion, he did beat me there.

Adr. Go back again, thou slave, and fetch him home.

Dro. E. Go back again, and be new beaten home? or God's sake, send some other messenger.

Adr. Back, slave, or I will break thy pate across.

Dro. E. And he will bless that cross with other beating:

'tween you I shall have a holy head.

Adr. Hence, prating peasant! fetch thy master home.

Dro. E. Am I so round with you as you with me, bat like a football you do spurn me thus? spurn me hence, and he will spurn me hither: last in this service, you must case me in leather. Exit. Luc. Fie, how impatiently lowereth in your face!

Adr. His company must do his minions grace, Whilst I at home starve for a merry look.

Hath homely age the alluring beauty took
From my poor cheek? then he hath wasted it:

Are my discourses dull? barren my wit? if voluble and sharp discourse be marr'd,

Unkindness blunts it more than marble hard:

Do their gay vestments his affections bait?

That's not my fault; he's master of my state:

What ruins are in me that can be found
By him not ruin'd? then is he the ground
Of my defeatures. My decayed fair
A sunny look of his would soon repair;

But, too unruly deer, he breaks the pale
And feeds from home: poor I am but his state.

Luc. Self-harming jealousy! fie! beat it hence.

Adr. Unfeeling fools can with such wrongs dispense.

I know his eye doth homage otherwhere, Or else what lets it but he would be here?

Sister, you know, he promis'd me a chain:

Would that alone, alone he would detain,

So he would keep fair quarter with his bed! I see, the jewel best enamelled

Will lose his beauty; and though gold hides still,

That others touch, yet often touching will,

Wear gold; and no man that hath a name,

But falsehood and corruption doth it shame.

Since that my beauty cannot please his eye,

I'll weep what's left away, and weeping die.

Luc. How many fond fools serve mad jealousy!

Exeunt.

Scene II.—A public Place.

Enter Antipholus of Syracuse.

Ant. S. The gold I gave to Dromio is laid up Safe at the Centaur; and the heedful slave Is wander'd forth, in care to seek me out.

By computation, and mine host's report,

I could not speak with Dromio since at first,

I sent him from the mart. See, here he comes.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

How now, sir! is your merry humour alter'd?

As you love strokes, so jest with me again.

You know no Centaur? You receiv'd no gold?

Your mistress sent to have me home to dinner?

My house was at the Phoenix? Wast thou mad, That thus so madly thou diest answer me?

Dro. S. What answer, sir? when spake I such a word?

Ant. S. Even now, even here, not half an hour since.

Dro. S. I did not see you since you sent me hence,

Home to the Centaur, with the gold you gave me.

Ant. S. Villain, thou diest deny the gold's receipt,

And told'st me of a mistress and a dinner;

For which, I hope, thou felt'st I was displeas'd.

Dro. S. I am glad to see you in this merry vein: What mean'st this jest? I pray you, master, tell me.

Ant. S. Yea, dost thou jeer, and flout me in the teeth?

Think'st thou I jest? Hold, take thou that, and that.

Beating him.

Dro. S. Hold, sir, for God's sake! now your jest is earnest:

Upon what bargain do you give it me?

Ant. S. Because that I familiarly sometimes
Do you for my fool and chat with you,
Your sauciness will set upon my love,
And make a common of my serious hours.
When the sun shines let foolish gnats make sport,
But creep in caverns when he hides his beams.
If you will jest with me, know my aspect,
And fashion your demeanour to my looks,
Or I will beat this method in your sconce.

Dro. S. Sconce call you it? so you would leave battering, I had rather have it a head: an you use these blows long, I must get a sconce for my head and ensconce it too; or else I shall seek my wit in my shoulders. But, I pray, sir, why am I beaten?

Ant. S. Dost thou not know?

Dro. S. Nothing, sir, but that I am beaten.

Ant. S. Shall I tell you why?

Dro. S. Ay, sir, and wherefore; for, they say, every why hath a wherefore.

Ant. S. Why, first,—for flouting me; and, then, wherefore,—

For urging it the second time to me.

Dro. S. Was there ever any man thus beaten out of season,

When, in the why and the wherefore is neither rime nor reason?

Well, sir, I thank you.

Ant. S. Thank me, sir! for what?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, for this something, that you gave me for nothing.

Ant. S. I'll make you amend next, to give you nothing for something. But say, sir, is it dinner-time?

Dro. S. No, sir: I think the meat wants that I have.

Ant. S. In good time, sir; what's that?

Dro. S. Basting.

Ant. S. Well, sir, then 'twill be dry.

Dro. S. If it be, sir, I pray you eat none of it.

Ant. S. Your reason?

Dro. S. Lest it make you cholerick, and purchase me another dry basting.

Ant. S. Well, sir, learn to jest in good time: there's a time for all things.

Dro. S. If I drust have denied that, before you were so cholerick.

Ant. S. By what rule, sir?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, by a rule as plain as the plain bald pate of Father Time himself.

Ant. S. Let's hear it.

Dro. S. There's no time for a man to recover his hair that grows bald by nature.

Ant. S. May he not do it by fine and recovery?

Dro. S. Yes, to pay a fine for a periwig and recover the lost hair of another man.

Ant. S. Why is Time such a niggard of hair, being, as it is, so plentiful an excrement?

Dro. S. Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts: and what he hath scanted men in hair he hath given them in wit.

Ant. S. Why, but there's many a man hath more hair than wit.

Dro. S. Not a man of those but he hath the wit to lose his hair.

Ant. S. Why, thou didst conclude hairy men plain dealers without wit.

Dro. S. The plainer dealer, the sooner lost: yet he loseth it in a kind of jollity.

Ant. S. For what reason?

Dro. S. For two; and sound ones too.
Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, Dromio of Ephesus, Angelo, and Balthazar.

Ant. E. Good Signior Angelo, Dromio of Ephesus, Angelo, and Balthazar.

Ant. E. You are sad, Signior Balthazar: pray God, our cheer May answer my good will and your good welcome here.

Bal. I hold your dainties cheap, sir, and your welcome dear.

Ant. E. O Signior Balthazar, either at flesh or fish, A table-full of welcome makes scarce one dainty dish.

Bal. Good meat, sir, is common; that every churl affords.

Ant. E. And welcome more common, for that's nothing but words.

Bal. Small cheer and great welcome makes a merry feast.

Ant. E. Ay, to a niggardly host and more sparing guest:

But though my mates be mean, take them in good part;

Better cheer may you have, but not with better heart.

But soft! my door is lock'd. Go bid them let us in.

Dro. E. Maud, Bridget, Marian, Cicely, Gillian, Jen!
Dro. S. Within. Mome, mait-horse, capon, coxcomb, idiot, patch!

Dro. E. They stand at the door, master: b them welcome hither.

Ant. E. There is something in the wind, the we cannot get in.

Dro. E. You would say so, master, if you garments were thin.

Ant. E. Go fetch me something: I'll break o the gate.

Dro. S. Within. Break any breaking her and I'll break your knave's pate.

Dro. E. A man may break a word with you sir, and words are but wind;

Ant. E. Go and break it in your face, so he break not behind.

Dro. S. Within. It seems thou wantest breaking: Out upon thee, hind!

Dro. E. Here's too much 'out upon thee I pray thee, let me in.

Dro. S. Within. Ay, when fowls have feathers, and fish have no fin.

Ant. E. Well, I'll break in. Go borrow m a crow.

Dro. E. A crow without feather? maes mean you so?

For a fish without a fin, there's a fowl without a feather:

If a crow help us in, sirrah, we'll pluck a cro together.

Ant. E. Go get thee gone: fetch me an ice crow.

Bal. Have patience, sir; O! let it not be so

Herein you war against your reputation,

And draw within the compass of suspect

The unviolated honour of your wife.

Once this,—your long experience of her wisdom,

Her sober virtue, years, and modesty,

Plead on her part some cause to you unknown

And doubt not, sir, but she will well excuse

Why at this time the doors are made against ye

Be rul'd by me: depart in patience,

And let us to the Tiger all to dinner;

And about evening come yourself alone,

To know the reason of this strange restraint.

If by strong hand you offer to break in

Now in the stirring passage of the day,

A vulgar comment will be made of it,

And that supposed by the common rout

Against your yet ungalled estimation,

That may with foul intrusion enter in

And dwell upon your grave when you are dead

For slander lives upon succession,

For ever hounded where it gets possession.

Ant. E. You have prevail'd: I will depart quiet.

And, in despite of mirth, mean to be merry.

I know a wench of excellent discourse,

Pretty and witty, wild and yet, too, gentle:

There will we dine: this woman that I mean

My wife,—but, I protest, without desert,—

Hath oftentimes upbraided me withal:

To her will we to dinner. To Angelo. Go you home

And fetch the chain; by this I know 'tis mad

Bring it, I pray you, to the Porpentine;

For there's the house: that chain will I besto

Be it for nothing but to spite my wife,
He gains by death that hath such means to die:
Let Love, being light, be drowned if she sink.
Luc. What! are you mad, that you do reason so?
Ant. S. Not mad, but mated; how, I do not know.
Luc. It is a fault that springeth from your eye.
Ant. S. For gazing on your beams, fair sun, being by.
Luc. Gaze where you should, and that will clear your sight.
Ant. S. As good to wink, sweet love, as look on night.
Luc. Why call you me love? call my sister so.
Ant. S. Thy sister's sister.
Luc. That's my sister.
Ant. S. No;
It is thyself, mine own self's better part;
Mine eye's clear eye, my dear heart's dearer heart;
My food, my fortune, and my sweet hope's aim,
My sole earth's heaven, and my heaven's claim.
Luc. All this my sister is, or else should be.
Ant. S. Call thyself sister, sweet, for I aim thee.
Thee will I love and with thee lead my life:
Thou hast no husband yet nor I no wife.
Give me thy hand.
Luc. O! soft, sir; hold you still:
I'll fetch my sister, to get her good will.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse lastly.
Ant. S. Why, how now, Dromio! wherunnest thou so fast?
Dro. S. Do you know me, sir? am I Dromio? am I your man? am I myself?
Ant. S. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thyself.
Dro. S. I am an ass, I am a woman's man and besides myself.
Ant. S. What woman's man? and how besides thyself?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, besides myself, I am due to a woman; one that claims me, one that haunts me, one that will have me.
Ant. S. What claim lays she to thee?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, such claim as you would lay to your horse; and she would have me as a beast; not that, I being a beast, she would have me; but that she, being a very beastly creature, lays claim to me.
Ant. S. What is she?
Dro. S. A very reverend body; ay, such as one as a man may not speak of without he say 'sir-reverence.' I have but lean luck in the match, and yet is she a wondrous fat marriage.
Ant. S. How dost thou mean a fat marriage?
Dro. S. Marry, sir, she's the kitchen-wench, and all grease; and I know not what use to put her to but to make a lamp of her and run from her by her own light. I warrant her rags and the tallow in them will burn a Poland winter; if she lives till doomsday, she'll burn a week longer than the whole world.
Ant. S. What complexion is she of?
Dro. S. Swart, like my shoe, but her face nothing like so clean kept; for why, she sweats; a man may go over shoes in the grime of it.
Ant. S. That's a fault that water will mend.
Dro. S. No, sir, 'tis in grain; Noah's flood could not do it.
THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A public Place.

Enter a Merchant, ANGELO, and an Officer.

Mer. You know since Pentecost the sun is down
And since I have no much importun'd you;
Nor now I had not, but that I am bound
To Persia, and want guilders for my voyage:
Therefore make present satisfaction,
Or I'll att'ch you by this officer.

Off. Even just the sum that I do owe to y
Is growing to me by Antipholus;
And in the instant that I met with you
He had of me a chain : at five o'clock
I shall receive the money for the same.
Pleaseth you walk with me down to his house;
I will discharge my bond, and thank you too.

Enter ANTIPOHLUS of Ephesus, and DROMIO of Ephesus.

Off. That labour may you save: see where comes.

Ant. E. While I go to the goldsmith's house,
I buy a rope's end, that will I bestow
Among my wife and her confederates,
For locking me out of my doors by day.
But soft! I see the goldsmith: Get thee gone,
Buy thou a rope and bring it home to me.

Dro. E. I buy a thousand pound a year,
I buy a rope!

Ant. E. A man is well holp up that trusteth
you:
I promised your presence and the chain;
But neither chain nor goldsmith came to me.
Belike you thought our love would last too long.
If it were chain'd together, and therefore end not.

Ang. Saving your merry humour, here's note
How much your chain weighs to the utmost strength.
The fineness of the gold, and chargeful fastness.
Which doth amount to three odd ducats more.
Than I stand indebted to this gentleman:
I pray you see him presently discharge'd,
For he is bound to sea and stays but for it.
Scene I. — The Comedy of Errors.

Ant. E. I am not furnish'd with the present money. Besides, I have some business in the town. Food signor, take the stranger to my house, and with you take the chain, and bid my wife disburse the sum on the receipt thereof. 'Tis chance I will be there as soon as you.

Ang. Then you will bring the chain to her yourself?

Ant. E. No; bear it with you, lest I come not time enough.

Ang. Well, sir, I will. Have you the chain about you?

Ant. E. An if I have not, sir, I hope you have, or else you may return without your money.

Ang. Nay, come, I pray you, sir, give me the chain: both wind and tide stay for this gentleman, and I, to blame, have held him here too long.

Ant. E. Good Lord! you use this dailiness to excuse our breach of promise to the Porpentine should have chid you for not bringing it, but, like a shrew, you first begin to brawl.

Mer. The hour steals on; I pray you, sir, dispatch.

Ang. You hear how he importunes me: the chain!

Ant. E. Why, give it to my wife and fetch your money.

Ang. Come, come; you know I gave it you even now, either send the chain or send me by some token.

Ant. E. Fie! now you run this humour out of breath, some, where's the chain? I pray you let me see it.

Mer. My business cannot brook this dailiness, good sir, say whe'r you'll answer me or no: if not, I'll leave him to the officer.

Ant. E. I answer you! what should I answer you?

Ang. The money that you owe me for the chain.

Ant. E. I owe you none till I receive the chain.

Ang. You know I gave it you half an hour since.

Ant. E. You gave me none: you wrong me much to say so.

Ang. You wrong me more, sir, in denying it: consider how it stands upon my credit.

Mer. Well, officer, arrest him at my suit.

Off. I do; and charge you in the duke's name to obey me.

Ang. This touches me in reputation. Either consent to pay this sum for me, or I attach you by this officer.

Ant. E. Consent to pay thee that I never had! Arrest me, foolish fellow, if thou dar'st.

Ang. Here is thy fée: arrest him, officer: would not spare my brother in this case, if he should scorn me so apparently.

Off. I do arrest you, sir; you hear the suit.

Ant. E. I do obey thee till I give thee bail. But, sirrah, you shall buy this sport as dear as all the metal in your shop will answer.

Ang. Sir, sir, I shall have law in Ephesus, for your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter Dromio of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Master, there is a bark of Epidamnum that stays but till her owner comes aboard, and then, sir, she bears away. Our fraughtage, sir,
My heart prays for him, though my tongue doth curse.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Here, go: the desk! the purse! sweet now, make haste.

Inc. How hast thou lost thy breath?

Dro. S. By running fast. 30

Adr. Where is thy master, Dromio? is he well?

Dro. S. No, he's in Tartar limbo, worse than hell:
A devil in an everlasting garment hath him,
One whose hard heart is button'd up with steel;
A fiend, a fury, pitiless and rough:
A wolf, nay, Worse, a fellow all in buff;
A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermands
The passages of alleys, creeks and narrow lands:
A hound that runs counter and yet draws dry-foot well;
One that, before the judgment, carries poor souls to hell.

Adr. Why, man, what is the matter?

Dro. S. I do not know the matter: he is 'rested on the case.

Adr. What, is he arrested? tell me at whose suit.

Dro. S. I know not at whose suit he is arrested well;
But is in a suit of buff which 'rested him, that can I tell.

Will you send him, mistress, redemption, the money in his desk?

Adr. Go fetch it, sister. Exit Luciana.

This I wonder at;
That he, unknown to me, should be in debt:
Tell me, was he arrested on a band?

Dro. S. Not on a band, but on a stronger thing;
A chain, a chain. Do you not hear it ring?

Adr. What, the chain?

Dro. S. No, no, the bell: 'tis time that I were gone:
It was two ere I left him, and now the clock strikes one.

Adr. The hours come back: that did I never hear.

Dro. S. O yes: if any hour meet a sergeant,
a turns back for very fear.

Adr. As if Time were in debt! how fondly dost thou reason!

Dro. S. Time is a very bankrupt, and owes more than he's worth to season.
Nay, he's a thief too: have you not heard men say,
That Time comes stealing on by night and day?
If Time be in debt and thief, and a sergeant in the way,

Hath he not reason to turn back an hour in a day?

Re-enter Luciana.

Adr. Go, Dromio: there's the money, hear it straight,
And bring thy master home immediately.
Come, sister; I am press'd down with conceit;
Conceit, my comfort and my injury.

Exeunt.

Scene III.—A public Place.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse.

Ant. S. There's not a man I meet but doth salute me
As if I were their well-acquainted friend;
And every one doth call me by my name.
Some tender money to me; some invite me;
Some other give me thanks for kindnes;es
Some offer me commodities to buy:
Even now a tailor call'd me in his shop
And show'd me silks that he had bought for me
And, therewithal, took measure of my body.
Sure these are but imaginary wiles,
And Lapland sorcerers inhabit here.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Master, here's the gold you sent me for,
What have you got the picture of old Adam new-apparelled?

Ant. S. What gold is this? What Adam does thou mean?

Dro. S. Not that Adam that kept the Paradise
But that Adam that keeps the prison: he that goes in the calf's skin that was killed for the Prodigal: he that came behind you, sir, like an evil angel, and bid you forsake your liberty.

Ant. S. I understand thee not.

Dro. S. No? why, 'tis a plain case: he that went, like a bass-viol, in a case of leather: the man, sir, that, when gentlemen are tired, give them a sob and rests them; he, sir, that takes pit-on decayed men and gives them suits of durance he that sets up his rest to do more exploits with his mace than a morris-pike.

Ant. S. What, thou meanest an officer?

Dro. S. Ay, sir, the sergeant of the band; he that brings any man to answer it that breaks his band; one that thinks a man always going to bed and says 'God give you good rest!' 2

Ant. S. Well, sir, there rest in your foolery.
I there any ship puts forth to-night? may we be gone?

Dro. S. Why, sir, I brought you word an hour since that the bark Expedition put forth to night; and then were you hindered by that sergeant to tarry for the hoy Delay. Here are the angels that you sent for to deliver you.

Ant. S. The follow is distract, and so am I;
And here we wander in illusions:
Some blessed power deliver us from hence!

Enter a Courtesan.

Cour. Well met, well met, Master Antipholus.
I see, sir, you have found the goldsmith now:
Is that the chain you promis'd me to-day?

Ant. S. Satan, avoid! I charge thee, temp me not!

Dro. S. Master, is this Mistress Satan?

Ant. S. It is the devil.

Dro. S. Nay, she is worse. she is the devil's dam, and here she comes in the habit of a light wench: and thereof comes that the wenches say 'God damn me'; that's as much as to say 'God make me a light wench.' It is written they appear to men like angels of light: light:

And light wenches will burn. Come not near her.

Cour. Your man and you are marvellous merry, sir. Will you go with me? we'll mendi Dro. S. Master, if you do, expect spoon-men or bespeak a long spoon.

Ant. S. Why, Dromio?

Dro. S. Marry, he must have a long spoon that must eat with the devil.
Ant. S. Avoid then, fiend! what tell'st thou me of supping? thou art, as you are all, a sorceress: conjure thee to leave me and be gone. Cour. Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner, for my diamond the chain you promised, and I'll be gone, sir, and not trouble you. Dro. S. Some devils ask but the parings of one's nails, rush, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin, nut, a cherry-stone; at she, more covetous, would have a chain. faster, be wise: an if you give it her, he devil will shake her chain and fright us with it. Cour. I pray you, sir, my ring, or else the chain: hope you do not mean to cheat me so. Ant. S. Avant, thou witch! Come, Dromio, let us go. Dro. S. 'Fly pride,' says the peacock; mistress, that you know.

Exeunt ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse and DROMIO of Syracuse.

Cour. Now, out of doubt Antipholus is mad, he would never so demean himself. ring he hath of mine worth forty ducats, nd for the same he promised me a chain: oth one and other he denies me now. he reason that I gather he is mad, besides this present instance of his rage, a mad tale he told to-day at dinner, his own doors being shut against his entrance, like his wife, acquainted with his fits, a purpose shut the doors against his way. y way is now to hie home to his house, nd tell his wife, that, being lunatic, e rush'd into my house, and took perforc y ring away. This course I fittest choose, r forty ducats is too much to lose.

SCENE IV.---A Street.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus, and the Officer.

Ant. E. Fear me not, man; I will not break away: Il give thee, ere I leave thee, so much money, warrant thee, as I am rested for. y wife is in a wayward mood to-day, nd will not lightly trust the messenger. ant I should be attach'd in Ephesus, tell you, 'twill sound harshly in her ears.

Enter DROMIO of Ephesus with a rope's end. ere comes my man: I think he brings themoney, ow now, sir! have you that I sent you for? Dro. E. Here's that, I warrant you, will pay em all.

Ant. E. But where's the money? Dro. E. Why, sir, I gave it for the rope. Ant. E. Five hundred ducats, villain, for a rope? Dro. E. I'll serve you, sir, five hundred at a rate. Ant. E. To what end did I bid thee hie thee me? Dro. E. To a rope's end, sir; and to that end I returned. Ant. E. And to that end, sir, I will welcome you. Beats him.

Off. Good sir, be patient.

Ant. E. Thou whoreson, senseless villain! Dro. E. I would I were senseless, sir, that I might not feel your blows. Ant. E. Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an ass. Dro. E. I am an ass, indeed; you may prove it by my long ears. I have served him from the hour of my nativity to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service but blows. When I am cold, he beats me with beating; when I am warm, he cools me with beating; I am waked with it when I sleep; raised with it when I sit; driven out of doors with it when I go from home; welcomed home with it when I return; nay, I bear it on my shoulders, as a beggar won't her brat; and, I think, when he hath lamed me, I shall beg with it from door to door.

Ant. E. Come, go along: my wife is coming yonder.

Enter ADRIANA, LUCIANA, the Courtezan, and PINCH.

Dro. E. Mistress, respect fines, respect your end; or rather, the prophecy like the parrot, 'Beware the rope's end.'

Ant. E. Wilt thou still talk? Beats him.

Cour. How say you now? is not your husband mad?

Adr. His incivility confirms no less. Good Doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer; Establish him in his true sense again, And I will please you what you will demand. Luc. Alas! how fiery and how sharp he looks. Cour. Mark how he trembles in his ecstasy! Pinch. Give me your hand and let me feel your pulse.

Ant. E. There is my hand, and let it feel your ear. Stripes him. Pinch. I charge thee, Satan, hons'd within this man, To yield possession to my holy prayers, And to thy state of darkness hie thee straight: I conjure thee by all the saints in heaven. Ant. E. Peace, doting wizard, peace! I am not mad. Adr. O! that thou wert not, poor distressed soul. Ant. E. You minion, you, are these your customers?

Did this companion with the saffron face Revel and feast it at my house to-day, Whilst upon me the guilty doors were shut And I denied to enter in my house? Adr. O husband, God doth know you din'd at home; Where would you had remain'd until this time, Free from these slanders and this open shame! Ant. E. Dined at home! Thou villain, what say'st thou? Dro. E. Sir, sooth to say, you did not dine at home. Ant. E. Were not my doors lock'd up and I shut out? Dro. E. Perdy, your doors were lock'd and you shut out.
THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Street before an Abbey.

Enter Merchant and Angelo.

Ang. I am sorry, sir, that I have hinder’d ye. But, I protest, he had the chain of me, Though most dishonestly he doth deny it.

Mer. How is the man esteemed’er here in the cit? Ang. Of very reverend reputation, sir, Of credit infinite, highly belov’d,

Second to none that lives here in the city:

Bear me forthwith unto his creditor, And, knowing how the debt grows, I will pay it Good Master doctor, see him safe convey’d Home to my house. O most unhappy day! in Ant. E. O most unhappy strumpet!

Dro. E. Master, I am here enter’d in bond for you.

Ant. E. Out on thee, villain! wherefore dost thou mad me?

Dro. E. Will you be bound for nothing? be mad, good master; cry ‘the devil!’

Luc. God help, poor souls! how idly do they, talk.

Adr. Go bear him hence. Sister, go you with me Execute PINCH and Assistants with ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus and DROMIO of Ephesus.

Say now, whose suit is he arrested at?

Off. One Angelo, a goldsmith; do you know him?

Adr. I know the man. What is the sum he owes?

Off. Two hundred ducats.

Adr. Say, how grows it due?

Off. Due for a chain your husband had of him.

Adr. He did bespeak a chain for me, but he did not.

Cour. When as your husband all in rage, to do Came to my house, and took away my ring, The ring I saw upon his finger now, Straight after did I meet him with a chain.

Adr. It may be so, but I did never see it. Come, gaoler, bring me where the goldsmith is I long to know the truth hereof at large.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse, with his rapier, drawn, and DROMIO of Syracuse.

Luc. God, for thy mercy! they are loose again. Adr. And come with naked swords. Let call more help, To have them bound again.

Off. Away! they’ll kill a

Exeunt ADRIANA, LUCIANA, and Officer.

Ant. S. I see these witches are afraid of sword

Dro. S. She that would be your wife now ra from you.

Ant. S. Come to the Centaur; fetch our staff from thence: I long that we were safe and sound aboard. Dro. S. Faith, stay here this night, they w surely do us no harm; you saw they speak us false, give us gold; methinks they are such a gentle nation, that but for the mountain of mad fie that claims marriage of me, I could find in my heart to stay here still, and turn witch.

Ant. S. I will not stay to-night for all the tow Therefore away, to get our stuff aboard.

Exeunt.

Ant. E. And did not she herself revile me there?

Dro. E. Sans fable, she herself revil’d you there.

Ant. E. Did not her kitchen-maid rail, taunt, and scorn me?

Dro. E. Certes, she did; the kitchen-vestal scorn’d you.

Ant. E. And did not I in rage depart from thence?

Dro. E. In verity you did: my bones bear witness, That since have felt the vigour of his rage.

Adr. Is’t good to soothe him in these contraries? Pinch. It is no shame: the fellow finds his vein, And yielding to him humours well his frenzy.

Ant. E. Thou hast suborn’d the goldsmith to arrest me.

Adr. Alas! I sent you money to redeem you, By Dromio here, who came in haste for it.

Dro. E. Money by me! heart and good-will you might;

But surely, master, not a rag of money.

Ant. E. Went’st not thou to her for a purse of ducats?

Adr. He came to me, and I delivered it.

Luc. And I am witness with her that she did.

Dro. E. God and the rope-maker bear me witness

That I was sent for nothing but a rope!

Pinch. Mistresses, both man and master is possessed:

I know it by their pale and deadly looks. They must be bound and laid in some dark room.

Ant. E. Say, wherefore didst thou lock me forth-to-day?

And why dost thou deny the bag of gold?

Adr. I did not, gentle husband, lock thee forth.

Dro. E. And, gentle master, I receiv’d no gold;

But I confess, sir, that we were lock’d out.

Adr. Dissembling villain! thou speak’st false in both.

Ant. E. Dissembling harlot! thou art false in all, And art confederate with a damned pack

To make a lossthain abject scorn of me; But with these nails I’ll pluck out these false eyes That would behold in me this shamefull sport.

Adr. O! bind him, bind him, let him not come near me.

Pinch. More company! the fiend is strong within him.

Luc. Ay me! poor man, how pale and wan he looks!

Enter three or four, and bind ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus.

Ant. E. What, will you murder me? Thou gaoler, thou,

I am thy prisoner: wilt thou suffer them To make a rescue?

Off. Masters, let him go:

He is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.

Pinch. Go bind this man, for he is frantic too.

They bind DROMIO of Ephesus.

Adr. What wilt thou do, thou peevish officer? Hast thou delight to see a wretched man Do outrage and displeasure to himself?

Off. He is my prisoner: if I let him go, The debt he owes will be requir’d of me.

Adr. I will discharge thee ere I go from thee:
THE COMEDY OF ERRORS.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse and DROMIO of Syracuse.

Ang. 'Tis so; and that self chain about his neck hich he foresaw most monstrously to have,
and, sir, put me, I'll speak to him.

Dro. Sir, if you would put me to this shame and trouble;
I had not without some scandal to yourself,
the circumstance and oaths so to deny his chain which now you wear so openly:
I did hoist sail and put to sea to-day.

Ang. You had of me: can you deny it?

Ant. Sir, I think I had: I never did deny it.

Mcr. Yes, that you did, sir, and foresware it too.

Ant. Sir, who heard me to it or foresware it?

Mcr. These ears of mine, thou know'st, did hear thee.

Enter ADRIANA, LUCIANA, Courtezan, and others.

Adr. Hold! hurt him not, for God's sake! he is mad.

Dro. Sir, we get within him, take his sword away:
and Dromio too, and bear them to my house.

Adr. Run, master, run; for God's sake take a house!

Adr. This we have been heavy, sad, sad.
And much different from the man he was;
it till this afternoon his passion
'te break into extremity of rage.

Adr. Hath he not lost much wealth by wreck of sea?

Adr. Aye, but not rough enough.

Adr. As roughly as my modesty would let me.

Adr. Haply, in private.

Adr. And in assemblies too.

Adr. Ay, but not enough.

Adr. It was the copy of our conference:
In bed, he slept not for my urging it;
At board, he fed not for my urging it.
Alone, it was the subject of my theme;
In company I often glanced it:
Still did I tell him it was vile and bad.

Adr. And thereof came it that the man was mad:
The venom clamours of a jealous woman
Poison more deadly than a mad dog's tooth.

Adr. It seems, his sleeps were hinder'd by thy railing,
And thereof comes it that his head is light.

Luc. Thou say'st his meat was sauc'd with thy up-obrading.

Unquiet meals make ill digestion:
Thereof the raging fire of fever bred:
And what's a fever but a fit of madness?

Luc. Thou say'st his sports were hinder'd by thy brawls:

Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth ensue
But moody and dull melancholy,

Kinsman to grim and comfortless despair,

And at their heels a huge infectious troop
Of pale distemperatures and foes to life!

In food, in sport, and life-preserving rest
To be disturb'd, would mad or man or beast:
The consequence is then thy jealous fits

Have scar'd thy husband from the use of wits.

Luc. She never reprehended him but mildly
When he demean'd himself rough, rude, and wildly.

Why bear you these rebukes and answer not?

Adr. She did betray me to my own reproach.

Good people, enter and lay hold on him.

Adr. No; not a creature enters in my house.

Adr. Then let your servants bring my husband forth.

Adr. Neither; he took this place for sanctuary,
Till I have brought him to his wits again,

Luc. Or lose my labour in assaying it.

Adr. I will attend my husband, be his nurse,

Adr. Dost not; nor will I let him stir.
Till I have us'd the approved means I have,

With wholesome syrups, drugs, and holy prayers,

To make of him a formal man again.

It is a branch and parcel of mine oath,

A charitable duty of my order;

Therefore depart and leave him here with me.

Adr. I will not hence and leave my husband here:

Adr. And ill doth beseech your holiness

To separate the husband and the wife.

Adr. Be quiet and depart; thou shalt not have him.

Exit. Luc. Complain unto the Duke of this indignity.

Adr. Come, go: I will fall prostrate at his feet,
And never rise until my tears and prayers
Have won his grace to come in person hither,

Luc. By this, I think, the dial points at five:

Luc. I'm sure, the duke himself in person

Comes this way to the melancholy vale,
Enter Duke attended; Ægeon bare-headed; with the Healdsman and other Officers.

Duke. Yet once again proclaim it publicly, \(193\)
If any friend will pay the sun for him,
He shall not die; so much we tender him.

Adr. Justice, most sacred duke, against the abbeys!

Duke. She is a virtuous and a reverend lady: It cannot be that she hath done thee wrong.

Adr. May it please your grace, Antipholus,
my husband,
Whom I made lord of me and all I had,
At your important letters, this ill day
A most outrageous fit of madness took him,
That desperately he hurried through the street,
With him his bondman, all as mad as he, \(141\)
Doing displeasure to the citizens
By rushing in their houses, bearing thence Rings, jewels, anything his rage did like.
Once did I get him bound and sent him home,
Whilst to take order for the wrongs I went
That here and there his fury had committed.
Anon, I wot not by what strong escape,
He broke from those that had the guard of him,
And with his mad attendant and himself, \(159\)
Each one with irdel passion, with drawn swords,
Met us again and madly bent on us
Chas'd us away, till raising of more aid
We came again to bind them. Then they fled
Into this abbey, whither we pursu'd them;
And here the abbess shuts the gates on us,
And will not suffer us to fetch him out,
Nor send him forth that we may bear him hence.
Therefore, most gracious duke, with thy command
Let him be brought forth and borne hence for help.

Duke. Long since thy husband serv'd me in my wars,
And I to thee engag'd a prince's word,
When thou didst make him master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could.

Go, some of you, knock at the abbey-gate
And bid the lady abbess come to me.
I will determine this before I stir.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O mistresst mistress! shift and save yourself.

My master and his man are both broke loose,
Bitten the maids a-row and bound the doctor,
Whose beard they have sing'd off with brands of fire;
And ever as it blaze'd they threw on him
Great pads of pudd'll mire to quench the hair.

My master praches patience to him, and the while
His man with scissors nicks him like a fool;
And sure, unless you send some present help,
Between them they will kill the conjurer.

Adr. Peace, fool! thy master and his man are
here,
And that is false thou dost report to us.

Serv. Mistress, upon my life, I tell you true;
I have not breath'd almost, since I did see it.
He cries for you and vows, if he can take you,
To scourch your face and to disfigure you.

Cry within
Hark, hark! I hear him, mistress: fly, be gone.

Duke. Come, stand by me; fear nothing
Guard with halberds!

Adr. Ay me, it is my husband! Witness you
That he is borne about invisible:
Even now we hous'd him in the abbey here,
And now he's there, past thought of human reason.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus and Dromio of Ephesus.

Ant. E. Justice, most gracious duke! O! grant me justice,
Even for the service that long since I did thee,
When I bestriid thee in the wars and took Deep scars to save thy life; even for the blood
That then I lost for thee, now grant me justice.

Adr. Unless the fear of death doth make me dote,
I see my son Antipholus and Dromio.

Ant. E. Justice, sweet prince, against that woman there!
She whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife,
That had abused and dishonour'd me.

Even in the strength and height of injury! \(24\)
Beyond imagination is the wrong
That she this day hath shameless thrown on me.

Duke. Discover how, and thou shalt find me just.

Ant. E. This day, great duke, she shut the doors upon me,
While she with harlots feasted in my house.

Duke. A grievous fault! Say, woman, didst thou so?

Adr. No, my good lord: myself, he, and my sister,
To-day did dine together. So befall my soul
As this is false he burdens me withal!

Luc. Ne'er'may I look on day, or sleep on night
But she tells to your highness simple truth! \(21\)

Adr. O perjurd woman! They are both for sworn:
In this the madman justly chargeth them!

Ant. E. My liege, I am advised what I say:
Neither disturbed with the effect of wine,
Nor heady-rash, provok'd with raging ire,
Albeit my wrongs might make one wiser mad.
This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner
That goldsmith there, were he not pack'd with her,
Could witness it, for he was with me then; \(22\)

Who parted with me to go fetch a chain,
Promising to bring it to the Porpentine,
Where Balthazar and I did dine together.
Our dinner done, and he not coming thither,
I went to seek him: in the street I met him,
And in his company that gentleman,
There did this perjur'd goldsmith swear me down
That I this day of him receiv'd the chain,
Which, God he knows, I saw not; for the which
He did arrest me with an officer.

I did obey, and sent my peasant home
For certain ducats: he with none return'd.
Then fairly I bespoke the officer
To go in person with me to my house.
By the way we met
My wife, her sister, and a rabble more of vile confederates: along with them they brought one Pinch, a hungry lean-fac'd villain, mere anatomy, a mountebank, thread-bare juggler, and a fortune-teller. needy, hollow-eyed, sharp-looking wretch, living-dead man. This pernicious slave, orsooth, took on him as a conjurer, and gazin in mine eyes, feeling my pulse, nd with no face, as 'twere, out-facing me, ries out, I was possess'd. Then all together hey fell upon me, bound me, bore me thence, nd in a dark and dankish vault at home here left me and my man, both bound together; ill, gnawing with my teeth my bonds in sunder, gain'd my freedom, and immediately an hither to your grace, whom I beseech! to give me ample satisfaction or these deep shames and great indignities.

Ant. My lord, in truth, thus far I witness with him, that he din'd not at home, but was lock'd out.

Duke. But had he such a chain of thee, or no? Ant. He had, my lord; and when he ran in here, these people saw the chain about his neck.

Mer. Besides, I will be sworn these ears of mine card you confess you had the chain of him after you first forswore it on the mart; nd thereupon I drew my sword on you; nd then you fled into this abbey here, rom whence, I think, you are come by miracle.

Ant. E. I never came within these abbey-walls, or ever didst thou draw thy sword on me: never saw the chain, so help me heaven! this is false you burden me withal.

Duke. Why, what an intricate impeach is this! think you all have drunk of Circe's cup.

here you houn'sd him, here he would have been; he were mad, he would not plead so coldly; ou say he din'd at home; the goldsmith here enies that saying. Sirrah, what say you? Dro. E. Sir, he din'd with her there, at the Porpentine.

Cuir. He did, and from my finger snatch'd that ring.

Ant. E. 'Tis true, my liege; this ring I had of her.

Duke. Saw'st thou him enter at the abbey here? Cuir. Ass'ure, my liege, as I do see your grace.

Duke. Why, this is strange. Go call the abbess hither. think you are all mated or stark mad.

Exit an Attendant.

Ant. E. Most mighty duke, vouchsafe me speak a word.
uply I see a friend will save my life, id pay the sum that may deliver me.

Ant. E. Is not your name, sir, call'd Antipholus, id is not that your bondman, Dromio? Dro. E. Within this hour I was his bondman, sir; he, I thank him, gnaw'd in two my cords: now am I Dromio and his man unbound.

Ant. E. I am sure you both of you remember me.

Dro. Ourselves we do remember, sir, by you; lately we were bound, as you are now.

Ant. E. Why look you strange on me? you know me well.

Ant. E. I never saw you in my life till now.

Ant. E. O! grief hath chang'd me since you saw me last, And careful hours, with Time's deformed hand, Have written strange adventures in my face: But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice? Ant. E. Neither.

Ant. E. Dromio, nor thou? Dro. E. No, trust me, sir, nor I.

Ant. E. I am sure thou dost.

Dro. E. Ay, sir, but I am sure I do not; and whatsoever a man denies, you are now bound to believe him.

Ant. E. Not my knowe voice! O time's extremity, Hast thou so crack'd and splintered my poor tongue In seven short years, that here my only son Knows not my feeble key of untim'd cares? Though now this grained face of mine be hid In sap-consuming winter's drizzled snow, And all the conduits of my blood froze up, Yet hath my night of life some memory, My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left, My dull deaf ears a little use to hear: All these old witnesses, I cannot err, Tell me thou art my son Antipholus.

Ant. E. I never saw my father in my life.

Ant. E. But seven years since, in Syracusa, boy, Thou know'st we parted: but perhaps, my son, Thou sham'st to acknowledge me in misery.

Ant. E. The duke and all that know me in the city Can witness with me that it is not so: I ne'er saw Syracusa in my life.

Duke. I tell thee, Syracusan, twenty years Have I been patron to Antipholus,

During which time he ne'er saw Syracusa:

I see thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Enter Abbess, with Antipholus of Syracusa and Dromio of Syracusa.

Abb. Most mighty duke, behold a man much wrong'd. All gather to see them.

Adr. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me.

Duke. One of these men is Genius to the other;

And so of these. Which is the natural man, And which the spirit? who decipher the same? Dro. S. I, sir, am Dromio: command him away.

Dro. E. I, sir, am Dromio: pray, let me stay.

Ant. S. Augeon art thou not? or else his ghost? Dro. S. O! my old master; who hath bound him here?

Abb. Whoever bound him, I will loose his bonds, And gain a husband by his liberty.

Speak, old Augeon, if thou be'st the man That hadst a wife once call'd Æmilia, That bore thee at a burden two fair sons. O! if thou be'st the same Ægeon, speak, And speak unto the same Æmilia.

Ant. E. If I dream not, thou art Æmilia.

If thou art she, tell me where is that son That floated with thee on the fatal raft?

Abb. By men of Epidamnum, he and I, And the twin Dromio, all were taken up: But by and by rude fishermen of Corinth By force took Dromio and my son from them, And me they left with those of Epidamnum. What then became of them I cannot tell; I to this fortune that you see me in.

Duke. Why, here begins his morning story right;
This two Antipholus', these two so like,
And these two Dromios, one in semblance,
Besides her urging of her wreck at sea; 369
These are the parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together.
Antipholus, thou cam'st from Corinth first?
Ant. S. No, sir, not I; I came from Syracuse.
Duke. Stay, stand apart; I know not which is which.
Ant. E. I came from Corinth, my most gracious
lord.
Dro. E. And I with him.
Ant. E. Brought to this town by that most famous warrior,
Duke Menaphon, your most renowned uncle. 369
Aed. Which of you two did dine with me to-day?
Ant. S. I, gentle mistress.
Aed. And are not you my husband?
Ant. E. No; I say nay to that.
Ant. S. And so do I; yet did she call me so;
And this fair gentlewoman, her sister here,
Did call me brother. To Luciana. What I told you then,
I hope I shall have leisure to make good,
If this be not a dream I see and hear.
Aed. That is the chain, sir, which you had of me.
Ant. S. I think it be, sir; I deny it not.
Ant. E. And you, sir, for this chain arrested me.
Aed. I think I did, sir: I deny it not. 378
Aed. I sent you money, sir, to be your bail
By Dromio; but I think he brought it not.
Dro. E. No, none by me.
Ant. S. This purse of ducats I receiv'd from you,
And Dromio, my man, did bring them me.
I see we still did meet each other's man,
And I was ta'en for him, and he for me,
And thereupon these errors are arose.
Ant. E. These ducats pawn I for my father
here.
Duke. It shall not need: thy father hath his life.
Cour. Sir, I must have that diamond from you.
Ant. E. There, take it; and much thanks for my good cheer.
Abb. Renowned duke, vouche'safe to take the pains
To go with us into the abbey here,
And hear at large discoursed all our fortunes;
And all that are assembled in this place,
That by this sympathized one day's error
Have suffer'd wrong, go keep us company,
And we shall make full satisfaction.
Thirty-three years have I but gone in travail
Of you, my sons; and till this present hour
My heavy burden ne'er delivered.
The duke, my husband, and my children both.
And you the calendars of their nativity,
Go to a gossips' feast, and joy with me
After so long grief such festivity!
Duke. With all my heart I'll gossip at this feast
Exeunt Duke, Abbess, Egeon, Courtesan,
Merchant, Angelo, and Attendant Dro. S. Master, shall I fetch your stuff from shipboard?
Ant. E. Dromio, what stuff of mine hast the embark'd?
Dro. S. Your goods that lay at host, sir,
the Centaur.
Ant. S. He speaks to me. I am your master.
Dromio:
Come, go with us; we'll look to that anon:
Embrace thy brother there; rejoice with him
Exeunt Antipholus of Syracuse, Antipholus of Ephesus, Adriana and Lucian Dro. S. There is a fat friend at your master's house,
That kitchen'd me for you to-day at dinner:
She now shall be my sister, not my wife.
Dro. S. Methinks, you are my glass, and my brother:
I see by you I am a sweet-faced youth.
Will you walk in to see their gossiping?
Dro. S. Not I, sir; you are my elder.
Dro. E. That's a question: how shall we try it?
Dro. S. We'll draw cuts for the senior: then, lead thou first.
Dro. E. Nay, then thus:
We came into the world like brother and brother,
And now let's go hand in hand not one before another.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

DON PEDRO, Prince of Aragon.
DON JOHN, his bastard Brother.
CLAUDIO, a young Lord of Florence.
BENEDICK, a young Lord of Padua.
LEONATO, Governor of Messina.
ANTONIO, his Brother.
BALTHAZAR, Servant to Don Pedro.
BORACHIO, \{ Followers of Don John.
MESSengers, Watch, Attendants.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Before Leonato's House.

LEONATO, HERO, BEATRICE, and others, with a Messenger.

LEON. I learn in this letter that Don Pedro of Aragon comes this night to Messina.

MESS. He is very near this: he was not seen leagues off when I left him.

LEON. How many gentlemen have you lost in this action?

MESS. But few of any sort, and none of name.

LEON. A victory is twice itself when the clever brings home full numbers. I find here that Don Pedro hath bestowed much honour on young Florentine called Claudio.

MESS. Much deserved on his part and equally merited by Don Pedro. He hath borne himself beyond the promise of his age, doing in the figure of a lamb the feats of a lion: he hath deed better bettered expectation than you expect of me to tell you how.

LEON. He hath an uncle here in Messina will very much glad of it.

MESS. I have already delivered him letters, and ere appears much joy in him; even so much at joy could not show itself modest enough without a badge of bitterness.

LEON. Did he break out into tears?

MESS. In great measure.

LEON. A kind overflow of kindness. There are faces truer than those that are so washed: what much better is it to weep at joy than to y weep at weep!

BEAT. I pray you, is Signior Mountanto returned from the wars or no?

MESS. I know none of that name, lady; there as none such in the army of any sort.

LEON. What is he that you ask for, niece?

HERO. My cousin means Signior Benedick of adu.
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

M. I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.

B. No; an he were, I would burn my study. But, I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer now that will make a voyage with him to the devil?

M. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

B. O Lord! he will hang upon him like a disease: he is sooner caught than the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio! if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound ere he be cured.

M. I will hold friends with you, lady.

B. Do, good friend.

L. You will never run mad, niece.

B. No, not till a hot January.

M. Don Pedro is approached.

Enter Don Pedro, Don John, Claudio, Benedick, Balthazar, and others.

D. Pedro. Good Signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

L. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your grace, for trouble being gone, comfort should remain; but when you depart from me, sorrow abides and happiness takes his leave.

D. Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly. I think this is your daughter.

L. Her mother hath many times told me so.

B. Were you in doubt, sir, that you asked her?

L. Signior Benedick, no; for then were you a child.

D. Pedro. You have it full, Benedick: we may guess by this what you are, being a man. Truly, the lady fathers herself. Be happy, lady, for you are like an honourable father.

B. If Signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is.

B. I wonder that you will still be talking, Signior Benedick: nobody marks you.

B. What! my dear Lady Disdain, are you yet living?

B. Is it possible disdain should die while she hath such meet food to feed it as Signior Benedick? Courtesy itself must convert to disdain, if you come in her presence.

B. Then is courtesy a turncoat. But it is certain I am loved of all ladies, only you excepted; and I would I could find in my heart that I had not a hard heart; for, truly, I love none.

B. A dear happiness to women: they would else have been troubled with a pernicious suitor. I thank God and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that: I had rather hear my dog bark at a crow than a man swear he loves me.

B. God keep your ladyship still in that mind; so some gentleman or other shall 'scape a predestinate scratched face.

B. Scratching could not make it worse, an 'twere such a face as yours were.

B. Well, you are a rare parrot-teacher.

B. A bird of my tongue is better than a beast of yours.

B. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so good a continuer. But kee your way, i' God's name; I have done.

B. You always end with a jade's trick: know you of old.

D. Pedro. This is the sum of all, Leonato. Signior Claudio, and Signior Benedick, my dearest friend Leonato hath invited you all. I tell him we shall stay here at least a month, and he heartily prays some occasion may detain you longer: I dare swear he is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

L. If you swear, my lord, you shall not be forsworn. To Don John. Let me bid you we come, my lord: being reconciled to the prince your brother, I owe you all duty.

D. John. I thank you: I am not of man words, but I thank you.

L. Please it your grace lead on?

D. Pedro. Your hand, Leonato; we will go together.

Exeunt all but Benedick and Claudio.

C. Benedick, didst thou note the daughter of Signior Leonato?

B. I noted her not; but I looked on her.

C. Is she not a modest young lady?

B. Do you question me, as an honest man should do, for my simple true judgment; or would you have me speak after my custom, a being a professed tyrant to their sex?

C. No; I pray thee speak in sober judgment.

B. Why, I faith, methinks she's too lo for a high praise, too brown for a fair praise, and too little for a great praise: only this commendation I can afford her, that were she other than she is, she were unhandsome, and being another but as she is, I do not like her.

C. Thou art wiser than I am in sport: I pray thee tell me truly how thou likest her.

B. Would you buy her, that you inquire after her?

C. Can the world buy such a jewel?

B. Yea, and a case to put it into. Do you speak this with a sad brow, or do you play the flouting Jack, to tell us Cupid is a good hurt finder, and Vulcan a rare carpenter? Come, what key shall a man take you, to go in the song?

C. In mine eye she is the sweetest lad that ever I looked on.

B. I can see yet without spectacles and see no such matter: there's her cousin, and she were not possessed with a fury, exceedeth her much in beauty as the first of May doth till last of December. But I hope you have no intent to turn husband, have you?

C. I would scarce trust myself, though had sworn the contrary, if Hero would be my wife.

B. Is't come to this, i' faith? Hath not the world one man but he will wear his eye with suspicion? Shall I never see a bachelor of threescore again? Go to, i' faith; an the wilt needs thrust thy neck into a yoke, we print of it, and sigh away Sundays. Look Don Pedro is returned to seek you.

Re-enter Don Pedro.

D. Pedro. What secret hath held you here that you followed not to Leonato's?

B. I would your grace would construe it to tell.

D. Pedro. I charge thee on thy allegiance.
Bene. You hear, Count Claudio: I can be as crafty as a damned man; I would have you think so; but on my allegiance, mark you this, on my allegiance: he is in love. With who? now that your grace's part. Mark how short his answer: with Hero, Leonato's short daughter.

Claud. If this were so, so were it uttered. Bene. Like the old tale, my lord: 'tis not nor 'twas not so; but, indeed, God forbid should be so.

Claud. If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

D. Pedro. Amen, if you love her; for the lady very well worthy.

Claud. You speak this to fetch me in, my lord. D. Pedro. By my troth, I speak my thought. Claud. And in faith, my lord, I spoke mine.

Bene. And by my two faiths and troths, my lord, I spoke mine.

Claud. That I love her, I feel.

D. Pedro. That she is worthy, I know.

Bene. That I neither feel how she should be wed nor know how she should be worthy, is no opinion that fire cannot melt out of me: I'll die in it at the stake.

D. Pedro. Thou wast ever an obstinate heretic the despite of beauty.

Claud. And never could maintain his part but the force of his will.

Bene. That a woman conceived me, I thank: for that she brought me up, I likewise give most humble thanks: but that I will have re cheat winded in my forehead, or hang my gle in an invisible baldrick, all women shall do me. Because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will do myself the hurt to trust none; and the fine is, for the fish I may go the finer, I will live a bachelor.

D. Pedro. I shall see thee ere I die, look pale love.

Bene. With anger, with sickness, or with grief, my lord; not with love: prove that ever the more blood with love than I will get again in drinking, pick out mine eyes with a ballad-ker's pen, and hang me up at the door of a heel-house for the sign of blind Cupid.

D. Pedro. Well, if ever thou dost fall from thy faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat; I shoot at me; and he that hits me, let him clapped on the shoulder, and called Adam.

D. Pedro. Well, as time shall try: time the savage bull doth bear the yoke.

Bene. The savage bull may; but if ever the siblile Benedick bear it, pluck off the bull's horns and set them in my forehead; and let me vilely painted, and in such great letters as you write 'Here is good horse to hire,' let them slyly under my sign 'Here you may see Benedict the married man.'

Claud. If this should ever happen, thou shalt be horn-mad.

D. Pedro. Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his arrow in Venice, thou wilt quaver for this shortly. Bene. I look for an earthquake too then.

D. Pedro. Well, you will temporise with theirs. In the meantime, good Signior Benedick, air to Leonato's: commend me to him and him I will not fail him at supper; for indeed he hath made great preparation.

Bene. I have almost matter enough in me for such an embassage; and so I commit you—

Claud. To the tuition of God: from my house, if I had it,—

D. Pedro. The sixth of July: your loving friend, Benedick.

Bene. Nay, mock not, mock not. The body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but slightly based on neither: ere you flout old ends any further, examine your conscience: and so I leave you.

Exit. 233

Claud. My liege, your highness now may do me good.

D. Pedro. My love is thine to teach: teach it but how,

And thou shalt see how apt it is to learn

Any hard lesson that may do thee good.

Claud. Hath Leonato any son, my lord?

D. Pedro. No child but Hero; she's his only heir.

Dost thou affect her, Claudio?

Claud. O! my lord,

When you went onward on this ended action, I look'd upon her with a soldier's eye,

That lik'd, but had a rougher task in hand

Than to drive liking to the name of love;

But now I am return'd, and that war-thoughts Have left their places vacant, in their rooms Come thro'ning soft and delicate desires,

All prompting me how fair young Hero is,

Saying, I lik'd her ere I went to wars.

D. Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover presently, And tire the hearer with a book of words.

If thou dost love fair Hero, cherish it,

And I will break with her, and with her father,

And thou shalt have her. Was 't not to this end That thou began'st to twist so fine a story?

Claud. How sweetly do you minister to love,

That know love's grief by his complexion!

But lest my liking might too sudden seem,

I would have sal'd it with a longer treatise.

D. Pedro. What need the bridge much broader than the flood?

The fairest grant is the necessity.

Look, what will serve is fit: 'tis once, thou lovest.

And I will fit thee with the remedy.

I know we shall have reveling to-night:

I will assume thy part in some disguise,

And tell fair Hero I am Claudio;

And in her bosom I'll unclasp my heart,

And take her hearing prisoner with the force

And strong encounter of my amorous tale:

Then after to her father will I break;

And the conclusion is, she shall be thine.

In practice let us put it presently.

Exeunt.

Scene II.—A Room in LEONATO's House.

Enter LEONATO and ANTONIO, meeting.

Leon. How now, brother! Where is my cousin, your son? Hath he provided this music?

Ant. He is very busy about it. But, brother, I can tell you strange news that you yet dream not of.

Leon. Are they good?

Ant. As the event stamps them: but they have a good cover; they show well outward. The prince and Count Claudio, walking in a thick-pleached alley in mine orchard, were thus much overheard by a man of mine: the prince discovered to Claudio that he loved my niece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance; and if he found her accordant, he meant to take the present time by the top and instantly break with you of it.

Leon. Hath the fellow any wit that told you this?

Ant. A good sharp fellow: I will send for him; and question him yourself.

Leon. No, no; we will hold it as a dream till it appear itself: but I will acquaint my daughter withal, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradventure this be true. Go you, and tell her of it.

Several persons cross the stage.

Cousins, you know what you have to do. O! I cry you mercy, friend; go you with me, and I will use your skill. Good cousin, have a care this busy time.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Room in Leonato's House.

Enter DON JOHN and CONRADE.

Con. What the good-year, my lord! why are you thus out of measure sad?

D. John. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds; therefore the sadness is without limit.

Con. You should hear reason.

D. John. And when I have heard it, what blessing brings it?

Con. If not a present remedy, at least a patient sufferance.

D. John. I wonder that thou, being, as thou sayest thou art, born under Saturn, goest about to apply a moral medicine to a mortifying mischief. I cannot hide what I am: I must be sad when I have cause, and smile at no man's jests; eat when I have stomach, and wait for no man's leisure; sleep when I am drowsy, and tend on no man's business; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.

Con. Yea; but you must not make the full show of this till you may do it without controlment. You have of late stood out against your brother, and he hath ta'en you newly into his grace; where it is impossible you should take true root but by the fair weather that you make yourself: it is needful that you frame the season for your own harvest.

D. John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge than a rose in his grace; and it better fits my blood to be disdained of all than to fashion a carriage to rob love from any; in this, though I cannot be said to be a flattering honest man, it must not be denied but I am a plain-dealing villain. I am trusted with a muzzle and enfranchised with a clog; therefore I have decreed not to sing in my cage. If I had my mouth, I would bite: if I had my liberty, I would do my liking: in the meantime, let me be that I am, and seek not to alter me.

Con. Can you make no use of your discontent?

D. John. I make all use of it, for I use it only. Who comes here?

Enter BORACHIO.

What news, Borachio?

Bora. I came yonder from a great supper the prince, your brother, is royally entertain'd by Leonato; and I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.

D. John. Will it serve for any model to build mischief on? What is he for a fool that betroth himself to unquietness?

Bora. Merry, it is your brother's right hand.

D. John. Who? the most exquisite Claudio.

Bora. Even he.

D. John. A proper squire! And who, at who? which way looks he?

Bora. Merry, on Hero, the daughter and he of Leonato.

D. John. A very forward March-chick! He came you to this!

Bora. Being entertained for a perfumer, as was smoking a musty room, comes me the prince, and Claudio, hand in hand, in sad conference. I whipt me behind the arras, and there heard agreed upon that the prince should woo He for himself, and having obtained her, give it to Count Claudio.

D. John. Come, come; let us thither: 'tis may prove food to my displeasure. That you start-up hath all the glory of my overthrow: I can cross him any way, I bless myself eke way. You are both sure, and will assist me?

Con. To the death, my lord.

D. John. Let us to the great supper: the cheer is the greater that I am subdued. Woe the cook were of my mind! Shall we go pro what's to be done?

Bora. We 'll wait upon your lordship.

Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Hall in Leonato's House.

Enter LEONATO, ANTONIO, HERO, BEATRICE and others.

Leon. Was not Count John here at supper?

Ant. I saw him not.

Beat. How tardy that gentleman looks! never can see him but I am heart-burned hour after.

Hero. He is of a very melancholy dispositi- Beat. He were an excellent man that were in just in the midway between him and Benedick the one is too like an image, and says nothing and the other too like my lady's eldest son evermore tattling.

Leon. Then half Sigior Benedick's tongue Count John's mouth, and half Count John's malady in Sigior Benedick's face.—

Beat. With a good leg and a good foot, and money enough in his purse, such a man would win any woman in the world, if a cou- get her good will.

Leon. By my troth, niece, thou wilt never thea husband, if thou beso showd of thy tongue.

Ant. In faith, she's too curt.

Beat. Too curt is more than curt: I sti lessen God's sending that way; for it is so: 'God sends a curt cow short horns'; but a cow so curt he sends none.

Leon. So, by being too curt, God will stri you no horns!

Beat. Just, if he send me no husband; for rich blessing I am at him upon my knees every morning and evening. Lord! I could not endure husband with a beard on his face: I had rather in the woollen.
Leon. You may light on a husband that hath beard.
Beat. What should I do with him? dress him my apparel and make him my waiting-gentleman? He that hath a beard is more than a thug, and he that hath no beard is less than a man; and he that is more than a youth is not for me; and he that is less than a man, I am not for you; therefore I will even take sixpence in earnest
the bear-ward, and lead his apes into hell. 42
Leon. Well then, you go into hell?
Beat. No; but to the gate; and there will the ill meet me, like an old cuckold, with horns his head, and say 'Get you to heaven, Beatrice, be ye part of heaven; here’s no place for you kids': so deliver I up my apes, and away to int Peter for the heavens; he shows me where the bachelors sit, and there live we as merry as an e day is long. 51
Ant. To Hero. Well, niece, I trust you will be led by your father.
Beat. Yes, faith; it is my cousin’s duty to make urtes, and say ‘Father, as it please you’: you have yet for all that, cousin, let him be a hand-me fellow, or else make another courtesy, and say ‘Father, as it please me.’
Leon. Well, niece, I hope to see you one day ted with a husband.
60
Beat. Not till God make men of some other star than earth. Would it not grieve a woman be overmastered with a piece of valiant dust?
make an account of her life to a clog of wayward marl? No, uncle, I'll none: Adam’s sons are my brethren; and, truly, I hold it a sin to be such in my kindred.
Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you:
the prince do solicit you in that kind, you how your answer.
70
Beat. The fault will be in the usucous, cousin, you be not wooded in good time: if the prince too important, tell him there is measure in every thing, and so dance out the answer. For ar me, Hero: wooing, wedding, and repenting, as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinque-pace:
e first suit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch jig,
d full as fantastical; the wedding, mannerly-dest, as a measure, full of state and ancient;
d’then comes repentance, and, with his bad gs, falls into the cinque-pace faster and faster,
I sink into his grave. 82
Leon. Cousin, you apprehend passing shrewly.
Beat. I have a good eye, uncle: I can see a urch by daylight.
Leon. The revelers are entering, brother:
ake good room!

Act I.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING. 111

D. Pedro. Lady, will you walk about with your end?

D. Pedro. With me in your company?

\[D. Pedro.\] I may say so, when I please.

\[D. Pedro.\] And when please you to say so?

\[Hero.\] When I like your favour; for God de-defend the lute should be like the case!

\[D. Pedro.\] My visor is Philemon’s roof; within the house is Jove.

\[Hero.\] Why then, your visor should be thatched.

\[D. Pedro.\] Speak low, if you speak love.

\[Takes her aside.\]

\[Balth.\] Well, I would you did like me.

\[Mary.\] So would not I, for my own sake; for
I have many ill qualities.

\[Balth.\] Which is one?

\[Mary.\] I say my prayers aloud.

\[Balth.\] I love you the better: the hearers may cry, Amen.

\[Mary.\] God match me with a good dancer!

\[Balth.\] Amen.

\[Mary.\] And God keep him out of my sight when the dance is done! Answer, clerk.

\[Balth.\] No more words: the clerk is answered.

\[Urs.\] I know you well enough: you are Signior Antonio.

\[Ant.\] At a word, I am not.

\[Urs.\] I know you by the wagging of your head.

\[Ant.\] To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

\[Urs.\] You could never do him so ill-well, unless you were the very man. Here’s his dry hand up and down: you are he, you are he.

\[Ant.\] At a word, I am not.

\[Urs.\] Come, come; do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit? Can virtue hide itself? Go to, mum, you are he: graces will appear, and there’s an end.

\[Beat.\] Will you not tell me who told you so?

\[Bene.\] No, you shall pardon me.

\[Beat.\] Nor will you not tell me who you are?

\[Bene.\] Not now.

\[Beat.\] That I was disdainful, and that I had my good wit out of the ‘Hundred Merry Tales.’
Well, this was Signior Benedick that said so.

\[Bene.\] What’s he?

\[Beat.\] I am sure you know him well enough.

\[Bene.\] Not I, believe me.

\[Beat.\] Did he never make you laugh?

\[Bene.\] I pray you, what is he?

\[Beat.\] Why, he is the prince’s jester: a very dull fool; only his gift is in devising impossible slander: none but libertines delight in him;
and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villany; for he both pleases men and angers them, and then they laugh at him and beat him.
I am sure he is in the fleet: I would he had boarded me!

\[Bene.\] When I know the gentleman, I’ll tell him what you say.

\[Beat.\] Do, do: he’ll but break a comparison or two on me; which, peradventure not marked or not laughed at, strikes him into melancholy;
and then there’s a partridge wing saved, for the fool will eat no supper that night. Music within.
We must follow the leaders.

\[Bene.\] In every good thing.

\[Beat.\] Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning.

Dance. Then exeunt all but Don John,
Borachio, and Claudio.

\[D. John.\] Sure my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it. The ladies follow her and but one visor remains.
Bora. And that is Claudio: I know him by his bearing.

D. John. Are not you Signior Benedick?

Claud. You know me well; I am he.

D. John. Signior, you are very near my brother in his love: he is enamoured on Hero. I pray you, dissuade him from her; she is no equal for his birth: you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Claud. How know you he loves her?

D. John. I heard him swear his affection.

Bora. So did I too; and he swore he would marry her to-night.

D. John. Come, let us to the banquet.

Exeunt Don John and BORACHIO.

Claud. Thus answer I in name of Benedick.

Bene. Count Claudio?

Claud. Yea, the same.

Bene. Come, will you go with me?

Claud. Whither?

Bene. Even to the next willow, about your own business, count. What fashion will you wear the garland of? About your neck, like an usurer’s chain; or under your arm, like a lieutenant’s scarf? You must wear it one way, for the prince hath got your Hero.

Claud. I wish him joy of her.

Bene. Why, that’s spoken like an honest drover: so they sell bullocks. But did you think the prince would have served you thus?

Claud. I pray you, leave me.

Bene. Ho! now you strive like the blind man: ‘twas the boy that stole your meat, and you’ll beat the post.

Claud. If it will not be, I’ll leave you. Exit.

Bene. Alas! poor hurt fowl. Now will he creep into sedges. But that my lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me! The prince’s fool! Ha! it may be I go under that title because I am merry. Yea, but so I am apt to do myself wrong: I am not so reputed: it is the base though bitter disposition of Beatrice that puts the world into her person, and so gives me out. Well, I’ll be revenged as I may.

Re-enter DON PEDRO.

D. Pedro. Now, Signior, where’s the count? Did you see him?

Bene. Troth, my lord, I have played the part of Lady Fame. I found him here as melancholy as a lodge in a warren. I told him, and I think I told him true, that your grace had got the good will of this young lady; and I offered him my company to a willow-tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsoken, or to bind him up a rod, as being worthy to be whipped.

D. Pedro. To be whipped! What’s his fault?

Bene. The flat transgression of a school-boy, who, being overjoyed with finding a bird’s nest shows it its companion, and he steals it.

D. Pedro. Wilt thou make a trust a transgression? The transgression is in the stealer.

Bene. Yet it had not been amiss the rod had been made, and the garland too; for the garland he might have worn himself, and the rod might have bestowed on you, who, as I take I have stolen his bird’s nest.

D. Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, a restore them to the owner.

Bene. If their singing answer your saying, my faith, you say honestly.

D. Pedro. The Lady Beatrice hath a quart to you: the gentleman that danced with me told her she is much wronged by you.

Bene. O! she misused me past the endurace of a block; an oak but with one green leaf or would have answered her: my visor beg to assume life and scold with her. She told not thinking I had been myself, that I was the prince’s jester; that I was duller than a grathaw; huddling jest upon jest with such impossible conveyance upon me, that I stood a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting me. She speaks poniards, and every word staid if her breath were as terrible as her termination there were no living near her; she would inf to the north star. I would not marry her, thou she were endowed with all that Adam had him before he transgressed: she would have made Hercules have turned spit, yea, and he left his club to make the fire too. Come, is not of her; you shall find her the infernal in good apparel. I would to God some sorrows would conjure her, for certainly, while she here, a man may live as quiet in hell as in sanctuary; and people sin upon purpose because they would go thither; so indeed, all disquise horror, and perturbation follow her.

Enter CLAUDIO, BEATRICE, HERO, and LEONATO.

D. Pedro. Look! here she comes.

Bene. Will your grace command me any service in the world’s end? I will go on a slightest errand now to the Antipodes that can devise to send me on: I will fetch you your toothpick now from the furthest inch of Asia bring you the length of Prester John’s for fetch you a hair of the Great Cham’s beard; you any embassage to the Pigmies, rather the hold three words’ conference with this hare.

You have no employment for me?

D. Pedro. None, but to desire your good company.

Bene. O God, sir, here’s a dish I love not cannot endure my Lady Tongue.

E. D. Pedro. Come, lady, come; you have in the heart of Signior Benedick.

Beat. Indeed, my lord, he lent it me awhi, and I gave him use for it, a double heart in his single one: marry, once before he won it me with false dice, therefore your grace may well say I have lost it.

D. Pedro. You have put him down, lady, if you have put him down.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, lord, lest I should prove the mother of fo have brought Count Claudio, whom you sent to seek.

D. Pedro. Why, how now, count! wherefore are you sad?

Claud. Not sad, my lord.

D. Pedro. How then? sick?

Claud. Neither, my lord.

Beat. The count is neither sad, nor sick, nor easy, nor well; but civil count, civil as an orange; id something of that jealons complection.

D. Pedro. I faith, lady, I think your blazon to be true; though, I’ll be sworn, if he be so, his accent is false. Here, Claudio, I have wooed in my name, and fair Hero is won; I have broke it her father, and his good will obtained; name she day of marriage, and God give thee joy!

Leon. Count, take of me my daughter, and it her my fortunes; his grace hath made the match, and all grace say Amen to it!

Beat. Speak, count, tis your cue.

Claud. Silence is the perfectest herald of joy: were but little happy, if I could say how much. Jill, as you are mine, I am yours: I give away myself for you and dole upon the exchange.

Beat. Speak, cousin; or, if you cannot, stop his oath with a kiss, and let him not speak neither.

D. Pedro. In faith, lady, you have a merry art.

Beat. Yea, my lord; I thank it, poor fool, it brows on the windy side of care. My cousin takes him in his ear that he is in her heart.

Claud. And so sheoth, cousin.

Beat. Good Lord, for alliance! Thus goes ere one to the world but I, and I am sun-nit. I may sit in a corner and cry heigh-ho for a husband!

D. Pedro. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

Beat. I would rather have one of your father’s thing. Hath your grace ne’er a brother like you? Your father got excellent husbands, if a id could come by them.

D. Pedro. Will you have me, lady?

Beat. No, my lord, unless I might have another working-days; your grace is too costly to ar every day. But, I beseech your grace, ron me; I was born to speak all mirth and matter.

D. Pedro. Your silence most offends me, and be merry best becomes you; for, out of ques-nam, you were born in a merry hour.

Beat. No, sure, my lord, my mother cried; t then there was a star danced, and under at was I born. Cousins, God give you joy!

Leon. Niece, will you look to those things I id you of?

Beat. I cry you mercy, uncle. By your grace’s rdon.

D. Pedro. By my troth, a pleasant-spirited ly.

Leon. There’s little of the melancholy element her, my lord: she is never sad but when she eps; and not ever sad then, for I have heard daughter say, she hath often dreamed of happiness and walked herself with laughing.

D. Pedro. She cannot endure to hear tell of husband.

Leon. O! by no means; she mocks all her eyes out of suit.

D. Pedro. She were an excellent wife for nedick.

Leon. O Lord! my lord, if they were but a week married, they would talk themselves mad.

D. Pedro. Count Claudio, when mean you to go to church?

Claud. To-morrow, my lord. Time goes on crutches till love have all his rites.

Leon. Not till Monday, my dear son, which is hence a just seven-night; and a time too brief too, to have all things answer my mind.

D. Pedro. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing; but, I warrant thee, Claudio, the time shall not go dully by us. I will in the interim undertake one of Hercules’ labours, which is, to bring Signior Benedick and the Lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection the one with the other. I would fain have it a match; and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction.

Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights’ watchings.

Claud. And I, my lord.

D. Pedro. And you too, gentle Hero?

Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband.

D. Pedro. And Benedick is not the unhope-fullest husband that I know. Thus far can I praise him; he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirmed honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she shall fall in love with Benedick; and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer: his glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift.

Exit.

SCENE II.—Another Room in Leonato’s House.

Enter Don John and Borachio.

D. John. It is so: the Count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Bora. Yeaa, my lord; but I can cross it.

D. John. Any bar, any cross, any impediment will be medicinable to me: I am sick in dis-pleasure to him, and whatsoever comes athwart his affection ranges evenly with mine. How canst thou cross this marriage?

Bora. Not honestly, my lord; but so covertly that no dishonesty shall appear in me.

D. John. Show me briefly how.

Bora. I think I told your lordship, a year since, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting-gentlewoman to Hero.

Bora. I can, at any unseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her lady’s chamber-window.

D. John. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Bora. The poison of that lies in you to temper. Go you to the prince your brother; spare not to tell him that he hath wronged his honour in marrying the renowned Claudio, whose estimation do you mightly hold up, to a contaminated stale, such a one as Hero.

D. John. What proof shall I make of that?
Scene III.—Leonato’s Orchard.

Enter Benedick.

Bene. Boy! Enter a Boy.

Boy. Signior.

Bene. In my chamber-window lies a book; bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am here already, sir.

Bene. I know that; but I would have thee here, and here again. Exit Boy.

I do much wonder that one man, seeing how much another man is a fool when he dedicates his behaviour to love, will, after he hath laughed at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his own scorn by falling in love: and such a man is Claudio. I have known when there was no music with him: but the drum and the fife; and now had he rather hear the tabor and the pipe: I have known when he would have walked ten mile afoot to see a good armour: and now will he lie ten nights awake, carving the fashion of a new doublet. He was wont to speak plain and to the purpose, like an honest man and a soldier; and now is he turned orthography: his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange díshes. May I be so converted, and see with these eyes? I cannot tell; I think not; I will not be sworn but love may transform me to an oyster: but I’ll take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool. One woman is fair, yet I am well; another is wise, yet I am well; another virtuous, yet I am well; but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace. Rich she shall be, that’s certain; wise, or I’ll none; virtuous, or I’ll never cheapen her; fair, or I’ll never look on her; mild, or come not near me; noble, or no I for an angel; of good discourse, an excellent musician, and her hair shall be of what colour I please God. Ha! the prince and Monsieur Love I will hide me in the arbour. Withdraw.

Enter Don Pedro, Leonato, and Claudio, followed by Balthazar and Musicians.

D. Pedro. Come, shall we hear this music? Claud. Yea, my good lord. How still th’ evening is, As hush’d on purpose to grace harmony! D. Pedro. See you where Benedick hath hit himself? Claud. O’ very well, my lord: the music ende. We’ll fit the kid-fox with a penny-worth.

D. Pedro. Come, Balthazar, we’ll hear the song again.

Balth. O! good my lord, tax not so bad a voice To slander music any more than once.

D. Pedro. It is the witness still of excellence, To put a strange face on his own perfection. I pray thee, sing, and let me woo no more.

Balth. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing Since many a woorer doth commence his suit. To her heart thinks not worthy; yet he wooes, Yet will he swear he loves...

D. Pedro. Now, pray thee, come Or, if thou wilt hold longer argument, Do it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes; There’s not a note of mine that’s worth th’ noting.

D. Pedro. Why, these are very crotchetts th’ he speaks.

Note, note, forsooth, and nothing! Music. Bene. Now, divine air! now is his soul ravished. Is it not strange that sheeps’ guts should he souls out of men’s bodies? Well, a horn tor a money, when all’s done.

Balth. Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more, Men were deceivers ever, One foot in sea, and one on shore, To one thing constant never. Then sigh not so, But let them go, And be you blithe and bonny, Converting all your sounds of woe Into Hey nonny, nonny.

Sing no more ditties, sing no more, Of dumps so dull and heavy; The fraud of men was ever so, Since summer first was leavy. Then sigh not so, But let them go, And be you blithe and bonny, Converting all your sounds of woe Into Hey nonny, nonny.

D. Pedro. By my troth, a good song.

Balth. And an ill singer, my lord.

D. Pedro. Ha, no, no; faith, thou sing well enough for a shift.

Bene. An he had been a dog that should b howled thus, they would have hanged him; I pray God his bad voice bode no mischief, had as lief have heard the night-raven, or what plague could have come after it.
D. Pedro. Yea, marry; dost thou hear, Balazar? I pray thee, get us some excellent aspic; for to-morrow night we would have it the Lady Hero's chamber-window.

Balth. The best I can, my lord.

D. Pedro. Do so: farewell.

Exeunt Balthazar and Musicians.

D. Pedro. Pray thee, where is Leonato? I told thee to-day, that thy niece Beatrice was in love with Signior Benedick. 30

Claud. O! ay. Stalk on, stalk on; the fowl's I did never think that lady would have red any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither; but most wonderful at she should do so on Signior Benedick, for the love she hath in all outward behaviours seemed to abhor.

Bene. Is't possible? Sits the wind in that corner?

Leon. By my troth, my lord, I cannot tell at to think of it but that she loves him with enraged affection: it is past the infinite of ought.

D. Pedro. May be she doth but counterfeit.

Claud. Faith, like enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit. There was never unquiet of passion came so near the life of passion as she discovers it.

D. Pedro. Why, what effects of passion shows she?

Claud. Bait the hook well: this fish'll bite.

Leon. What effects, my lord? She will sit up; you heard my daughter tell you how.

Claud. She did indeed.

D. Pedro. How, how, I pray you? You amazed I would have thought her spirit had been incible against all assaults of affection.

Leon. I would have sworn it had, my lord; socially against Benedick.

I. I should think this a guilt, but that the bearded fellow speaks it: knavery cannot, hide himself in such reverence.

Claud. He hath taken the infection: hold it up.

D. Pedro. Hath she made her affection known to Benedick?

Leon. No; and swears she never will: that's torment.

Iaud. 'Tis true indeed; so your daughters: 'Shall I,' says she, 'that have so oft entered him with scorn, write to him that I love him?'

Leon. This says she now when she is beginning to write to him; for she'll be up twenty nghts, and there will she sit in her smock she have writ a sheet of paper: my daughter 30 35 40 45

Claud. Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

I. When she had writ it, and was reading it over, she found Benedick and Beatrice beeing the sheet?

Claud. That.

Leon. O! she tore the letter into a thousand frappes; raged herself that she should be so modest to write to one that she knew would not her: 'I measure him,' says she, 'by my own **; for should thou find him, if he write to me; I, though I love him, I should.'

Claud. Then down upon her knees she falls, stops, sobes, beats her heart, tears her hair, prays, curses; 'O sweet Benedick! God give me patience!'

Leon. She doth indeed; my daughter says so; and the ecstasy hath so much overborne her, that my daughter is sometime afraid she will do a desperate outrage to herself. It is very true.

D. Pedro. It were good that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it.

Claud. To what end? He would but make a sport of it and torment the poor lady worse.

D. Pedro. An he should, it were an alms to hang him. She's an excellent sweet lady, and, out of all suspicion, she is virtuous.

Claud. And she is exceeding wise.

D. Pedro. In everything but in loving Benedick.

Leon. O! my lord, wisdom and blood combatting in so tender a body, we have ten proofs to one that blood hath the victory. I am sorry for her, as I have just cause, being her uncle and her guardian.

D. Pedro. I would she had bestowed this dotage on me; I would have daffed all other respects and made her half myself. I pray you, tell Benedick of it, and hear what a' will say.

Leon. Were it good, think you?

Claud. Hero thinks surely she will die; for she says she will die if he love her not, and she will die ere she make her love known, and she will die if he woo her, rather than she will hate one breath of her accustomed crossness.

D. Pedro. She doth well: if she should make tender of her love, 'tis very possible he'll scorn it; for the man, as you know all, hath a contemptible spirit.

Claud. He is a very proper man.

D. Pedro. He hath indeed a good outward happiness.

Claud. Before God, and in my mind, very wise.

D. Pedro. He doth indeed show some sparks that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

D. Pedro. As Hector, I assure you: and in the managing of quarrels you may say he is wise; for either he avoids them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a most Christian-like fear.

Leon. If he do fear God, a' must necessarily keep peace: if he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrel with fear and trembling.

D. Pedro. And so will he do; for the man doth fear God, howsover it seems not in him by some large jests he will make. Well, I am sorry for your niece. Shall we go seek Benedick, and tell him of her love?

Claud. Never tell him, my lord: let her wear it out with good counsel.

Leon. Nay, that's impossible: she may wear her heart out first.

D. Pedro. Well, we will hear further of it by your daughter: let it cool the while. I love Benedick well, and I could wish he would modestly examine himself, to see how much he is unworthy so good a lady.

Leon. My lord, will you walk? Dinner is ready.

Claud. If he do not dote on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation.

D. Pedro. Let there be the same net spread for her; and that must your daughter and her gentlewoman carry. The sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter: that's the scene that I would see, which will be merely a dumb-show.

Let us send her to call him in to dinner.

_Exit DON PEDRO, CLAUDIO, and LEONAT0._

_Bene._ Advancing from the armour. This can be no trick: the conference was badly borne. They have the truth of this from Hero. They seem to pity the lady: it seems her affections have their full bent. Love me! why, it must be required. I hear how I am censured: they say I will bear myself proudly, if I perceive the love come from her; they say too that she will rather die than give any sign of affection. I did never think to marry: I must not seem proud: happy are they that hear their detractions, and can put them to mending. They say the lady is fair: 'tis a truth, I can bear them witness; and virtuous: 'tis so, I cannot reprove it; and wise, but for loving me. By my troth, it is no addition to her wit, nor no great argument of her folly, for I will be horribly in love with her. I may chance have some old quirks and remnants of wit broken on me, because I have railed so long against marriage; but doth not the appetite alter? A man loves the meat in his youth that he cannot endure in his age. Shall quips and sentences and these paper bullets of the brain awe a man from the career of his humour? No: the world must be peopled. When I said I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married. Here comes Beatrice. By this day! she's a fair lady: I do spy some marks of love in her.

_Enter BEATRICE._

_Beat._ Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

_Bene._ Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains.

_Beat._ I took no more pains for those thanks than you take pains to thank me: if it had been painful, I would not have come.

_Bene._ You take pleasure then in the message?

_Beat._ Ye, just as much as you may take upon a knife's point, and choke a daw withal. You have no stomach, signior: fare you well. _Exit._

_Bene._ Ha! 'Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner;' there's a double meaning in that. 'I took no more pains for those thanks than you took pains to thank me;' that's as much as to say, Any pains that I take for you is as easy as thanks. If I do not take pity of her, I am a villain; if I do not love her, I am a Jew. I will go get her picture. _Exit._

ACT III.

SCENE I.—LEONATO'S GARDEN.

_Enter HERO, MARGARET, and URSULA._

_Hero._ Good Margaret, run thee to the parlour; There shall thou find my cousin Beatrice Proposing with the prince and Claudio: Whisper her ear, and tell her I and Ursula Walk in the orchard, and our whole discourse Is all of her; say that thou overheard'st us, And bid her steal into the pleached bower, Where honey-suckles, ripen'd by the sun, Forbid the sun to enter; like favourites, Made proud by princes, that advance their pride

Against that power that vex'd it. There will I hide her,
To listen our propose. This is thy office; Bear thee well in it and leave us alone.

_Mary._ I'll make her come, I warrant ye, presently.

_Hero._ Now, Ursula, when Beatrice doth come, As we do trace this alley up and down, Our talk must only be of Benedick: When I do name him, let it be thy part To praise him more than ever man did merit My talk to thee must be how Benedick Is sick in love with Beatrice: of this matter Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made, That only wounds by hearsay.

_Enter BEATRICE, behind._

Now begin;
For look where Beatrice, like a lapwing, run Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

_Urs._ The pleasant'st angling is to see the Cut-with-her golden oars the silver stream, And greedily devour the treacherous bait, So angle we for Beatrice; who even now Is couched in the woodbine overture. Fear you not my part of the dialogue.

_Hero._ Then go we near her, that her ear be nothing Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it. No, truly, Ursula, she is too disdainful; I know her spirits are as coy and wild As haggards of the rock.

_Urs._ But are you sure That Benedick loves Beatrice so entirely?

_Hero._ So says the prince, and my new-told lord.

_Urs._ And did they bid you tell her oft madam?

_Hero._ They did entreat me to acquaint it;
But I persuaded them, if they lov'd Benedick To wish him wrestle with affection, And never to let Beatrice know of it.

_Urs._ Why did you so? Doth not the gentleman Deserve as full as fortunate a bed As ever Beatrice shall couch upon?

_Hero._ O god of love! I know he doth deserve As much as may be yielded to a man; But Nature never fram'd a woman's heart Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice; Disdain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes, Misprising what they look on, and her wit Values itself so highly, that to her All matter else seems weak. She cannot loor Take no shape nor project of affection, She is so self-endured.

_Urs._ Sure, I think so; And therefore certainly it were not good She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.

_Hero._ Why, you speak truth. I never yet saw man, How wise, how noble, young, how rarely feared, But she would spell him backward: if fair-fair, She would swear the gentleman should be his sister; If black, why, Nature, drawing of an antick Made a foul blot; if tall, a lance-ill-headed If low, an agate very vilely cut; If speaking, why, a vane blown with all wind silent, why, a block moved with none.

turns she every man the wrong side out,

d never gives to truth and virtue that ish simplicity and merit purchase.

70

Yet, sure, such carping is not commendable.

75

No, not to be so odd and from all

fashions

Beatrice is; cannot be commendable.

90

who dare tell her so? If I should speak, would mock me into air: O! she would laugh me

of myself, press me to death with wit.

before let Benedick, like cover’d fire,

sume away in sighs, waste inwardly:

were a better death than die with mocks,

is as bad as die with tickling.

80

Yet tell her of it: hear what she will say.

90

No; rather I will go to Benedick, counsel him to fight against his passion.

100

I, truly, I’ll devise some honest slanders stain my counsel with. One doth not know much an ill word may empoison liking.

O! do not your counsel such a wrong;

cannot be so much without true judgment,

ving so swift and excellent a wit

she is priz’d to have, as to refuse are a gentleman as Signior Benedick.

105

He is the only man of Italy,

ways excepted my dear Claudio.

110

pray you, be not angry with me, madam,

aking my fancy: Signior Benedick, shape, for bearing, argument and valour,

is foremost in report through Italy.

Indeed, he hath an excellent good name.

120

His excellence did earn it, ere he had it.

en or are you married, madam?

125

Why, every day, to-morrow. Come,

go in:

show thee some attires, and have thy counsel

ach is the best to furnish me to-morrow.

She’s lim’d, I warrant you: we have caught her, madam.

135

If it prove so, then loving goes by haps:

ie Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps.

Exit Hero and Ursula.

145

What fire is in mine ears? Can this be true?

and I condemn’d for pride and scorn so much?

attempt, farewell! and maiden pride, adieu!

a glory lives behind the back of such.

Benedick, love on; I will require thee,

aming my wild heart to thy loving hand;

bewost love, my kindness shall incite thee to bind our loves up in a holy band;

others say thou dost deserve, and I ev it better than reportedly.

Exit.

Scene II.—A Room in Leonato’s House.

Pedro, Claudio, Benedict, and Leonato.

Pedro. I do but stay till your marriage be summate, and then go I toward Arragon.

Claud. I’ll bring you thither, my lord, if

I vouchsafe me.

Pedro. Nay; that would be as great a soil

he new gloss of your marriage, as to show a d his new coat and forbid him to wear it. I will only be bold with Benedick for his company;

for, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth: he hath twice or thrice cut

Cupid’s bow-string, and the little hangman dare not shoot at him. He hath a heart as sound as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper; for what his heart thinks his tongue speaks.

Bene. Gallants, I am not as I have been.

Leon. So say I: methinks you are sadder.

Claud. I hope he be in love.

D. Pedro. Hang him, truant! there’s no true drop of blood in him, to be truly touched with love. If he be sad, he wants money.

Bene. I have the tooth-ach.

D. Pedro. Draw it.

Bene. Hang it.

Claud. You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards.

D. Pedro. What! sigh for the tooth-ach?

Leon. Where is but a humour or a worm.

Bene. Well, every one can master a grief but he that has it.

Claud. Yet say I, he is in love.

D. Pedro. There is no appearance of fancy in him, unless it be a fancy that he hath to strange disguises; as, to be a Dutchman to-day, a Frenchman to-morrow, or in the shape of two countries at once, as, a German from the waist downward, all slops, and a Spaniard from the hip upward, no doublet. Unless he have a fancy to this folly, as it appears he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it appear he is.

Claud. If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signs: a’ brushes his hat o’ mornings; what should that bode?

D. Pedro. Hath any man seen him at the barber’s?

Claud. No, but the barber’s man hath been seen with him, and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls.

Leon. Indeed, he looks younger than he did,

by the loss of a beard.

D. Pedro. Nay, a’ rubs himself with civet;

can you smell him out by that?

Claud. That’s as much as to say, the sweet youth’s in love.

D. Pedro. The greatest note of it is his melancholy.

Claud. And when was he wont to wash his face?

D. Pedro. Yea, or to paint himself? for the which, I hear what they say of him.

Claud. Nay, but his jesting spirit; which is now crept into a lute-string, and now governed by stops.

D. Pedro. Indeed, that tells a heavy tale for him. Conclude, conclude he is in love.

Claud. Nay, but I know who loves him.

D. Pedro. That would I know too: I warrant, one that knows him not.

Claud. Yes, and his ill conditions; and, in despite of all, dies for him.

D. Pedro. She shall be buried with her face upwards.

Bene. Yet is this no charm for the tooth-ach.

Old signior, walk aside with me: I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby-horses must not hear.

Exit Benedick and Leonato.

D. Pedro. For my life, to break with him about Beatrice,

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

Claud. 'Tis even so. Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice, and then the two bears will not bite one another when they meet.

Enter Don John.

D. John. My lord and brother, God save you!
D. Pedro. Good den, brother.
D. John. If your leisure served, I would speak with you.
D. Pedro. In private?
D. John. If it please you; yet Count Claudio may hear, for what I would speak of concerns him.
D. Pedro. What's the matter?
D. John. To Claudio. Means your lordship to be married to-morrow?
D. Pedro. You know he does.
D. John. I know not that, when he knows what I know.
Claud. If there be any impediment, I pray you discover it.
D. John. You may think I love you not: let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me by that I now will manifest. For my brother, I think he holds you well, and in dearness of heart hath help to effect your ensuing marriage; surely suit ill spent, and labour ill bestowed!
D. Pedro. Why, what's the matter?
D. John. I came hither to tell you; and, circumstances shortened, for she has been too long a talking of, the lady is disloyal.
Claud. Who? Hero?
D. John. Even she: Leonato's Hero, your Hero, every man's Hero.
Claud. Disloyal?
D. John. The word is too good to paint out her wickedness; I could say she were worse: think you of a worse title, and I will fit her to it. Wonder not till further warrant: go but with me to-night, you shall see her chamber-window entered, even the night before her wedding-day: if you love her then, to-morrow wed her; but it would better fit your honour to change your mind.
Claud. May this be so?
D. Pedro. I will not think it.
D. John. If you dare not trust that you see, confess not that you know. If you will follow me, I will show you enough; and when you have seen more and heard more, proceed accordingly.
Claud. If I see anything to-night why I should not marry her to-morrow, in the congregation, where I should wed, there will I shame her.
D. Pedro. And, as I woud for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her.
D. John. I will disparage her no further till you are my witnesses: bear it coldly but till midnight, and let the issue show itself.
D. Pedro. O day untowardly turned!
Claud. O mischief strangely thwarting! I
D. John. O plague right well prevented! So will you say when you have seen the sequel.

Exeunt.

Scene III.—A Street.

Enter Dogberry and Verges, with the Watch.

Dogb. Are you good men and true?
Verg. Yon, or else it were pity but they should suffer salvation, body and soul.

Dogb. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance on them, being chosen for the prince's watch.
Verg. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

Dogb. First, who think you the most desert man to be constable?

First Watch. Hugh Oatcake, sir, or Goe Seacoal, for they can write and read.
Dogb. Come hither, neighbour Seacoal. O God, have you with you a good name: to be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune, but to write and read comes by nature.

Second Watch. Both which, Master constable—
Dogb. You have: I knew it would be your answer. Well, for your favour, sir, why, God thanks, and make no boat of it; and in your writing and reading, let that appear which there is no need of such vanity. You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man for constable of the watch; therefore bear you no lantern. This is your charge: you shall comprehend all vagrorn men; you are to bid any stand, in the prince's name.

Watch. How if a' will not stand?
Dogb. Why, then take no note of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave.
Verg. If he will not stand when he is bid, he is none of the prince's subjects.
Dogb. True, and they are to meddle with me but the prince's subjects. You shall also note no noise in the streets: for the watch to babble and talk is most tolerable and not too endured.

Watch. We will rather sleep than talk; we know what belongs to a watch.

Dogb. Why, you speak like an ancient and most quiet watchman, for I cannot see how sleeping should offend; only have a care that your bills be not stolen. Well, you are to call all the alehouses, and bid those that are drunket them to bed.

Watch. How if they will not?
Dogb. Why then, let them alone till they are sober: if they make you not then the best answer, you may say they are not the men you took them for.

Watch. Well, sir.
Dogb. If you meet a thief, you may suspect, by virtue of your office, to be no true man; if, for such kind of men, the less you meddle or make with them, why, the more is for your honesty.

Watch. If we know him to be a thief, all we not lay hands on him?
Dogb. Truly, by your office you may; but think they that touch pitch will be defiled. The most peaceable way for you, if you do find a thief, is to let him show himself what he is a steal out of your company.
Verg. You have been always called a merciful man, partner.
Dogb. Truly, I would not hang a dog by my bell much more a man who hath any honesty in him.
Verg. If you hear a child cry in the night you must call to the nurse and bid her still it.

Watch. How if the nurse be asleep and will not hear us?
Dogb. Why, then depart in peace, and leave... child wake her with crying; for the ewe that will not hear her lamb when it baes, will never answer a calf when he bleats.

Very. 'Tis very true.

Dogb. This is the end of the charge. You, constable, are to present the prince's own person: if you meet the prince in the night, you may stay him.

Very. Nay, by 'r lady, that I think a' cannot.

Dogb. Five shillings to one on't, with any man that knows the statues, he may stay him: marry, not without the prince be willing; for, indeed, he watch ought to offend no man, and it is an offence to stay a man against his will.

Very. By 'r lady, I think it be so.

Dogb. Ha, ah, ha! Well, masters, good night; there be any matter of weighty chances, call me up. Keep your fellows' counsels and your own, and good night. Come, neighbour.

Watch. Well, masters, we hear our charge: at us go sit here upon the church-bench till two, and then all to bed.

Dogb. One word more, honest neighbours. I ray you, watch about Signior Leonato's door; or the wedding being there to-morrow, there is a great cool to-night. Adieu; be vigilant, I exeex you.

Excunc DOGBERRY and VERGES.

Enter BORACHIO and CONRADE.

Bora. What, Conrade!

Bora. Conrade, I say!

Con. Here, man, I am at thy elbow.

Bora. Mass, and my elbow itched; I thought wise would a scab follow.

Con. I will owe thee an answer for that; and now forward with thy tale.

Bora. Stand thee close then under this p unstee for it dripples rain, and I will, like a true uncard, utter all to thee.

Watch. Aside. Some treason, masters; yet close.

Bora. Therefore know I have earned of Don John a thousand ducats.

Con. Is it possible that any villainy should be dear?

Bora. Thou should'st rather ask if it were possible any villainy should be so rich; for when villains have need of poor ones, poor ones ay make what price they will.

Con. I wonder at it.

Bora. That shows thou art unconfirmed. Thou knowest that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, a cloak, is nothing to a man.

Con. Yes, it is apparel.

Bora. I mean, the fashion.

Con. Yes, the fashion is the fashion.

Bora. Tush! I may as well say the fool's the oil. But seest thou not what a deformed thief is fashion is!

Watch. Aside. I know that Deformed; 'tis has en a vile thief this seven year; 'tis goes up and van like a gentleman; I remember his name.

Bora. Didst thou not hear somebody?

Con. No: 'twas the vane on the house.

Bora. Seest thou not, I say, what a deformed thief is fashion is! how giddily 'a' turns about the hot bloods between fourteen and five-and- thirty sometime fashioning them like Pharaoh's idlers in the rocky painting; sometime like god Bel's priests in the old church-window; sometime like the shaven Hercules in the smirched worm-eaten tapestry, where his cod-piece seems as massy as his club?

Con. All this I see, and I see that the fashion wears out more apparel than the man. But art not thou thyself giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?

Bora. Not so neither; but know that I have to-night wooed Margaret, the lady Hero's gentlewoman, by the name of Hero; she leaves me out at her mistress' chamber-window, bids me a thousand times good night,—I tell this tale vilely;—I should first tell thee how the prince, Claudio, and my master, planted and placed and possessed by my master Don John, saw afar off in the orchard this amiable encounter.

Con. And thoughtst thou Margaret was Hero?

Bora. Two of them did, the prince and Claudio; but the devil my master knew she was Margaret; and partly by his oaths, which first possessed them, partly by the dark night, which did deceive them, but chiefly by my villany, which did confirm any slander that Don John had made, away went Claudio enraged; swore he would meet her, as he was appointed, next morning at the temple, and there, before the whole congregation, shame her with what he saw over night, and send her home again without a husband.

First Watch. We charge you in the prince's name, stand!

Second Watch. Call up the right Master constable. We have here recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery that ever was known in the commonwealth.

First Watch. And one Deformed is one of them: I know him, 'tis wears a lock.

Con. Masters, masters!

Second Watch. You'll be made bring Deformed forth, I warrant you.

Con. Masters,—First Watch. Never speak; we charge you let us obey you to go with us.

Bora. We are like to prove a goodly commodity, being taken up of these men's bills.

Con. A commodity in question, I warrant you, Come, we'll obey you.

Excunc.

Scene IV. A Room in LEONATO'S House.

Enter HERO, MARGARET, and URSULA.

Hero. Good Ursula, wake my cousin Beatrice, and desire her to rise.

Urs. I will, lady.

Hero. And bid her come hither,

Urs. Well. Exit.

Marg. Troth, I think your other rabato were better.

Hero. No, pray thee, good Meg, I'll wear this.

Marg. By my troth's not so good; and I warrant, your cousin will say so.

Hero. My cousin's a fool, and thou art another: I'll wear none but this.

Marg. I like the new tare within excellently, if they were a thought browner; and your gown's a most rare fashion, faith. I saw the Duchess of Milan's gown that they praise so.

Hero. O! that exceeds, they say.

Marg. By my troth, 's but a night gown in
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

respect of yours: cloth o' gold, and cuts, and laced with silver, set with pearls down sleeves, side sleeves, and skirts round, underborne with a blush tinsel; but for a fine, quaint, graceful, and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten on't.

_Hero._ God give me joy to wear it! for my heart is exceeding heavy.

_Mary._ 'Twill be heavier soon by the weight of a man.

_Hero._ Fie upon thee! art not ashamed?

_Mary._ Of what, lady? of speaking honourably?
Is not marriage honourable in a beggar? Is not your lord honourable without marriage? I think you would have me say, 'saving your reverence, a husband': an bad thinking do not wret true speaking, I'll offend nobody. Is there any harm in 'the heavier for a husband'? None, I think, an it be the right husband and the right wife;
otherwise 'tis light, and not heavy: ask my Lady Beatrice else; here she comes.

_Enter Beatrice._

_Hero._ Good morrow, coz.

_Beat._ Good morrow, sweet Hero.

_Hero._ Why, how now? do you speak in the sick time?

_Beat._ I am out of all other tune, methinks.

_Mary._ Clap us into 'Light o' love': that goes without a burtin: do you sing it, and I'll dance it.

_Beat._ Ye light o' love, with your heels! then, if your husband have stable enough, you'll see
he shall lack no barns.

_Mary._ O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.

_Beat._ 'Tis almost five o'clock, cousin: 'tis time you were ready. By my troth, I am exceeding ill. Heigh-ho!

_Mary._ For a hawk, a horse, or a husband?

_Beat._ For the letter that begins them all, H.

_Mary._ Well, an you be not turned Turk,
there's no more sailing by the star.

_Beat._ What means the fool, trow?

_Mary._ Nothing I; but God send every one their heart's desire!

_Hero._ These gloves the count sent me; they are an excellent perfume.

_Beat._ I am studded, cousin, I cannot smell.

_Mary._ A maid, and stuffed! 'tis goodly catching of cold.

_Beat._ O, God help me! God help me! how long have you professed apprehension?

_Mary._ Ever since you left it. Doth not my wit become me rarely?

_Beat._ It is not seen enough, you should wear it in your cap. By my troth, I am sick.

_Mary._ Get you some of this distilled Carduus Benedictus, and lay it to your heart: it is the only thing for a qualm.

_Hero._ There thou prickest her with a thistle.

_Beat._ Benedictus! why Benedictus! you have some mortal in this Benedictus.

_Mary._ Moral! no, by my troth, I have no moral meaning; I meant, plain holy-thistle.
You may think, perchance, that I think you are in love; nay, by 'r lady, I am not such a fool to think what I list: nor I list not to think what I can; nor indeed, I cannot think, if I would think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love, or that you will be in love, or that you can be in love. Yet Benedick was such another, as now is he become a man: he swore he would never marry; and yet now, in despite of his heart, he eats his meat without grudging: at how you may be converted, I know not, but methinks you look with your eyes as other women do.

_Beat._ What pace is this that thy tongue keep _Mary._ Not a false gallop.

_Re-enter Ursula._

_Urs._ Madam, withdraw: the prince, the con-Signior Benedick, Don John, and all the galla-of the town, are come to fetch you to church.

_Hero._ Help to dress me, good coz, good M-good Ursula.

_Exeunt._

SCENE V.—Another Room in LEONATOS'S Hou-

Enter LEONATOS, with DOGBERRY and VER-

Leon. What would you with me, hon-neighbour?

_Doeg._ Marry, sir, I would have some confidewith you, that decerns you nearly.

_Leon._ Brief, I pray you; for you see it is busy time with me.

_Doeg._ Marry, this it is, sir.

_Verg._ Yes, in truth it is, sir.

_Leon._ What is it, my good friends?

_Doeg._ Goodman Verges, sir, speaks a little the matter; an old man, sir, and his wits not so blunt; as, God help, I would desire the were; but, in faith, honest as the skin betwixt his brows.

_Verg._ Yes, I thank God I am as honest as man living that is an old man and no honest than I.

_Doeg._ Comparisons are odorous: palpable neighbour Verges.

_Leon._ Neighbours, you are tedious.

_Doeg._ It pleases your worship to say so; we are the poor duke's officers; but, truly, mine own part, if I were as tedious as a kind
I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.

_Leon._ All thy tediousness on me? ha!

_Doeg._ Yea, an 'twere a thousand pound me than 'tis; for I hear as good exclamation on your worship, as of any man in the city, and thought be but a poor man, I am glad to hear it.

_Verg._ And so am I.

_Leon._ I would fain know what you have to _Doeg._ Marry, sir, our watch to-night, except your worship's presence, have ta'en a couple of arrant knives as any in Messina.

_Doeg._ A good old man, sir; he will be talkin as they say, 'When the age is in, the wit is God help us! it is a world to see!' Well said:
faith, neighbour Verges: well, God's a good man; an two men ride of a horse, one in front ride behind. An honest soul, 't faith, sir: my troth he is, as ever broke bread; but God's to be worshipped: all men are not alike; a good
neighbour.

_Leon._ Indeed; neighbour, he comes too soy much of you.

_Doeg._ Gifts that God gives.

_Leon._ I must leave you.

_Doeg._ One word, sir. Our watch, sir, I indeed comprehended two aspicious persons,
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Inside of a Church.

Don Pedro, Don John, Leonato, Friar Francis, Claudio, Benedick, Hero, Beatrice, etc.

Leon. Come, Friar Francis, be brief: only to plain form of marriage, and you shall recount particular duties afterwards.

Claud. You come hither, my lord, to marry this?

Leon. No. To be married to her, friar; you come marry her.

Claud. Lady, you come hither to be married to count?

Leon. None, my lord.

Claud. Know you any, count?

Leon. I dare make his answer; none.

Claud. O! what men dare do! what men may what men daily do, not knowing what they do! How now! Interjections! Why then, be of laughing, as, ah! ha! he!

Claud. Stand thee by, friar. Father, by your leave: you with free and unconstrained soul me this maid, your daughter?

Leon. As freely, son, as God did give her me.

Claud. And what have I to give you back, whose worth counterpoise this rich and precious gift?

Pedro. Nothing, unless you render her again.

Claud. Sweet prince, you learn me noble thankfulness.

Leon. Take her back again: not this rotten orange to your friend, but the sign and semblance of her honour. And how like a maid she blushes here, what authority and show of truth cunning sin cover itself withal.

Claud. Is not that blood as modest evidence To witness simple virtue? Would you not swear, All you that see her, that she were a maid, By these exterior shows? But she is none: She knows the heat of a luxurious bed; Her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.

Leon. What do you mean, my lord?

Claud. Not to be married, Not to knit my soul to an approved wanton:

Leon. Dear my lord, if you, in your own proof, Have vanquish'd the resistance of her youth, And made defeat of her virginity—

Claud. I know what you would say: if I have known her.

You'll say she did embrace me as a husband, And so extenuate the forehand sin:

No, Leonato, I never tempted her with word too large; But, as a brother to his sister, show'd Bashful sincerity and comely love.

Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you?

Claud. Out on thee! Seeming! I will write against it:

You seem to me as Dian in her orb, As chaste as is the bud ere it be blown: But you are more intemperate in your blood Than Venus, or those pamper'd animals That rage in savage sensuality.

Hero. Is my lord well, that he doth speak so wide?

Leon. Sweet prince, why speak not you?

D. Pedro. What should I speak? I stand dishonour'd, that have gone about To link my dear friend to a common stale.

Leon. Are these things spoken, or do I but dream?

D. John. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.

Bene. This looks not like a nuptial.

Hero. True! O God!

Claud. Leonato, stand I here?

Is this the prince? Is this the prince's brother? Is this face Hero's? Are our eyes our own?

Leon. All this is so; but what of this, my lord?

Claud. Let me but move one question to your daughter, And, by that fatherly and kindly power That you have in her, bid her answer truly.

Leon. I charge thee do so, as thou art my child.

Hero. O God defend me! how am I beset! What kind of catechising call you this?

Claud. To make you answer truly to your name, Hero. Is it not Hero? Who can blot that name With any just reproach?

Claud. Marry, that can Hero: Hero itself can blot out Hero's virtue. What man was he talk'd with you yesternight Out at your window, betwixt twelve and one? Now, if you are a maid, answer to this.

Hero. I talk'd with no man at that hour, my lord.

D. Pedro. Why, then are you no maiden, Leonato?

I am sorry you must hear: upon mine honour, Myself, my brother, and this grieved count, Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night, Talk with a Russian at her chamber-window: Who hath indeed, most like a liberal villain, Confess'd the vile encounters they have had. A thousand times in secret,
Much Ado About Nothing.

D. John. Fie, fie! they are not to be nam'd, my lord,
Not to be spoke of;
There is not chastity enough in language
Without offence to utter them. Thus, pretty lady, I am sorry for thy much misgovernment.
Claud. O Hero! what a Hero hadst thou been,
If half thy outward graces had been placed 101
About thy thoughts and counsels of thy heart.
But fare thee well, most foul, most fair! farewell,
Thou pure impurity, and impious purity!
For thee I'll lock up all the gates of love,
And on my eyelids shall conjecture hang,
To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm,
And never shall it more be gracious.
Leon. Hath no man's dagger here a point for me?
     Hero swoons.
Beat. Why, how now, cousin! wherefore sink
     you down?
D. John. Come, let us go. These things, come thus to light.
Smother her spirits up.

Exeunt Don Pedro, Don John, and Claudio.

Ben. How doth the lady?
Beat. Dead, I think: help, uncle!
Hero! why, Hero! Uncle! Signior Benedick!
Friar!
Leon. O Fate! take not away thy heavy hand:
Death is the fairest cover for her shame
That may be wish'd for.
Beat. How now, cousin Hero!
Fri. Have comfort, lady.
Leon. Dost thou look up?
Fri. Yea; wherefore should she not?
Leon. Wherefore! Why, doth not every earthly thing
Cry shame upon her? Could she here deny
The story that is printed in her blood?
Do not live, Hero; do not ope thine eyes;
For, did I think thou wouldst not quickly die, Thought I thy spirits were stronger than thy
shames,
Myself would, on the rearward of reproaches,
Strike at thy life. Grie'd I, had I but one?
Chid I for that at frugal nature's frame?
O! one too much by thee. Why had I one?
Why ever wast thou lovely in my eyes?
Why had I not with charitable hand
Took up a beggar's issue at my gates?
Who smirch'd thus, and mir'd with infamy,
I might have said, 'No part of it is mine,
This shame derives itself from unknown loins'?
But mine, and mine I lov'd, and mine I prais'd,
And mine that I was proud on, mine so much
That I myself was to myself not mine,
Valuing of her; why, she—O! she is fallen
Into a pit of ink, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her clean again,
And salt too little which may season give
To her foul-tainted flesh.

Ben. Sir, sir, be patient.
For my part, I am so affili'd in wonder,
I know not what to say.
Beat. O! on my soul, my cousin is belied.
Ben. Lady, were you her bedfellow last night?
Beat. No, truly not; although, until last night,
I have this twelvemonth been her bedfellow.
Leon. Confirm'd, confirm'd! O! that is stronger made,
Which was before barr'd up with ribs of iron.
Would the two princes lie? and Claudio lie,
Who lov'd her so, that, speaking of her foulness Wash'd it with tears! Hence from her, her lend me a
Fri. Hear me a little;
For I have only been silent so long,
And given way unto this course of fortune,
By noting of the lady: I have mark'd
A thousand blushing apparitions
To start into her face; a thousand innocent
shames
In angel whiteness beat away those bluses;
And in her eye there hath appear'd a fire,
To burn the errors that these princes hold
Against her maiden truth. Call me a fool;
Trust not my reading nor my observations,
Which with experimental seal doth warrant
The tenour of my book; trust not my age,
My reverence, calling, nor divinity,
If this sweet lady lie not guiltless here
Under some biting error.

Leon. Friar, it cannot be. 17
Thou seest that all the grace that she hath left
Is that she will not add to her damnation
A sin of porjury: she not denies it.
Why seest thou then to cover with excuse
That which appears in proper nakedness?
Fri. Lady, what man is he you are accus'd of?
Heroes. They know that do accuse me, I know none.
If I know more of any man alive
Than that maiden modesty doth warrant,
Let all my sins lack mercy! O my father! is Prove you that any man with me convers'd
At hours unmeet, or that I yesternight
Maintain'd the change of words with any creature.
Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.
Fri. There is some strange misprision in the princes.
Ben. Two of them have the very bent of honour;
And if their wisdoms be misled in this,
The practice of it lives in John the bastard,
Whose spirits till in frame of villanies.
Leon. I know not. If they speak but truth of her,
These hands shall tear her; if they wrong her,
The proudest of them shall well hear of it.
Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,
Nor age so eat up my invention,
Nor fortune made such havoc of my means,
Nor my bad life reft me so much of friends,
But they shall find, awak'd in such a kind,
Both strength of limb and policy of mind,
Ability in means and choice of friends,
To quit me of them thoroughly.

Fri. Pause awhile, 2
And let my counsel sway you in this case.
Your daughter here the princes left for dead;
Let her awhile be secretly kept in,
And publish it that she is dead indeed:
Maintain a mourning ostentation;
And on your family's old monument
Hang mournful epitaphs and do all rites
That appertain unto a burial.
Leon. What shall become of this? what will this do?
Fri. Marry, this well carried shall on her behalf Change slander to remorse; that is some good
But not for that dream I on this strange course,
But on this travell look for greater birth.

She dying, as it must be so main'tain'd,
Upon the instant that she was accus'd,
Shall be lamented, pitied and excus'd.
Of every hearer; for it so falls out,
That what we have we prize not to the worth
Whiles we enjoy it, but being lack'd and lost.

Why, then we rack the value, then we find
The virtue that possession would not show us
Whiles it was ours. So will it fare with Claudia:
When he shall hear she died upon his words,
The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination,
And every lovely organ of her life
Shall come apparell'd in more precious habit,
More moving-delicacy and full of life.
Into the eye and prospect of his soul,
Than when she liv'd indeed: then shall he mourn,
If ever love had interest in his liver,
And wish he had not so accus'd her,
No, though he thought his accusation true.
Let this be so, and doubt not but success
Will fashion the event in better shape
Than I can lay it down in likeliness.

But if all aim but this be level'd false,
The supposition of the lady's death
Will quench the wonder of her inflamy:
And if it sort not well, you may conceal her,
As best befits her wounded reputation,
In some reclusive and religious life.
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds, and injuries.

Bene. Signior Leonato, let the friar advise you:
And though you know my inwardness and love
Is very much unto the prince and Claudia,
Yet, by mine honour, I will deal in this
As secretly and justly as your soul
Should with your body.

Leon. Being that I flow in grief,
The smallest twine may lead me.

Fri. 'Tis well consented: presently away,
For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure.

Come, lady, die to live: this wedding-day
Perhaps is but prolong'd: have patience and endure.

Execut Friar, Hero, and Leonato.

Bene. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while?

Beat. Yea, and I will weep a while longer.

Bene. I will not desire that.

Beat. You have no reason: I do it freely.

Bene. Surely I do believe your fair cousin
Is wronged.

Beat. Ah! how much might the man deserve
Of me that would right her.

Bene. Is there any way to show such friendship?

Beat. A very even way, but no such friend.

Bene. May a man do it?

Beat. It is a man's office, but not yours.

Bene. I do love nothing in the world so well as you: is not that strange?

Beat. As strange as the thing I know not. It Were as possible for me to say I loved nothing so well as you; but believe me not, and yet I lie not: I confess nothing, nor I deny nothing.
I am sorry for my cousin.

Bene. By my sword, Beatrice, thou lov'st me.

Beat. Do not swear by it, and eat it.

Bene. I will swear by it that you love me: and I will make him eat it that says I love not

you.

Beat. Will you not eat your word?

Bene. With no sauce that can be devised to it.
I protest I love thee.

Beat. Why then, God forgive me!

Bene. What offence, sweet Beatrice?

Beat. You have stay'd me in a happy hour:
I was about to protest I loved you.

Bene. And do it with all thy heart.

Beat. I love you with so much of my heart
That none is left to protest.

Bene. Come, bid me do any thing for thee.

Beat. Kill Claudia.

Bene. Ha! not for the wide world,

Beat. You kill me to deny it. Farewell.

Bene. Tarry, sweet Beatrice.

Beat. I am gone, though I am here: there is no love in you: nay, I pray you, let me go.

Bene. Beatrice,—

Beat. In faith, I will go.

Bene. We'll be friends first.

Beat. You dare easier be friends with me than fight with mine enemy.

Bene. Is Claudia thine enemy?

Beat. Is he not approved in the height a villain,
That hath slandered, scorn'd, dishonoured my kinswoman? O! that I were a man. What!

Beat. Why, in hand until they come to take hands,

Beat. And then with public accusation, uncovered shander, unmitigated rancour,—O God! that I were a man. I would eat his heart in the marketplace.

Bene. Hear me, Beatrice,—

Beat. Talk with a man out at a window! A proper saying!

Bene. Nay, but, Beatrice,—

Beat. Sweet Hero! She is wronged, she is shandered, she is undone.

Bene. Beat.—

Beat. Princes and counties! Surely, a princely testimony, a goodly count, Count Comfed; a sweet gallant, surely! O! that I were a man

Beat. For his sake, or that I had any friend would be a man for my sake! But manhood is melted into courtesies, value into compliment, and men are only towed into tongue, and trim ones too:
he is now as valiant as Hercules, that only tells a lie and swears it. I cannot be a man with wishing, therefore I will die a woman with grieving.

Bene. Tarry, good Beatrice. By this hand, I love thee.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way than swearing by it.

Bene. Think you in your soul the Count Claudia hath wronged Hero?

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a soul.

Bene. Enough! I am engaged, I will challenge him, I will kiss your hand, and so I leave you.
By this hand, Claudia shall render me a dear account. As you hear of me, so think of me.

Beat. Go, comfort your cousin: I must say she is dead;

and so, farewell.

Exeunt. 430

SCENE II.—A Prison.

Enter Dogberry, Verges, and Sexton, in gums; and the Watch, with Conrade and Borachio.

Dog. Is our whole assembly appeared?

Verg. O! a stool and a cushion for the sexton.
ACT V.

SCENE I.—Before LEONATO’S House.

Enter LEONATO and ANTONIO.

Ant. If you go on thus, you will kill yourself.
And ’tis not wisdom thus to second grief
Against yourself.

Leon. I pray thee, cease thy counsel,
Which falls into mine ears as profitless
As water in a sieve: give not me counsel;
Nor let no comforter delight mine ear.

But such a one whose wrongs do suit with mine
Bring me a father that so lov’d his child,
Whose joy of her is overwhelm’d like mine,
And bid him speak of patience;

Measure his woe the length and breadth of mine
And let it answer every strain for strain,
As thus for thus and such a grief for such,
In every lineament, branch, shape, and form:
If such a one will smile, and stroke his beard,
Bid sorrow wag, cry ‘hem!’ when he should groan,
Patch grief with provers, make misfortune drunk
With candle-wasters; bring him yet to me,
And I of him will gather patience.

But there is no such man; for, brother, men
Can counsel and speak comfort to that grief
Which they themselves do not feel; but, tasting it,
Their counsel turns to passion, which before
Would give preceptual medicine to rage,
Fetter strong madness in a silken thread,
Charm aches with air and agony with words.

No, no; ’tis all men’s office to speak patience
To those that wring under the load of sorrow.
But man’s manumit; nor is sufficiency
To be so moral when he shall endure
The like himself. Therefore give me no counsel.
My griefs cry louder than advertisements.

Ant. Therein do men from children nothing differ.

Leon. I pray thee, peace! I will be flesh and blood;

For there was never yet philosopher
That could endure the tooth-ache patiently
However they have writ the style of gods
And made a push at chance and suffrance.

Ant. Yet bend not all the harm upon yourself.
Make those that do offend you suffer too.
Enter Don Pedro and Claudio.

Ant. Here comes the prince and Claudio hastily.

D. Pedro. Good day, good den.

Ant. If he could right himself with quarrelling, one of us would lie low.

D. Pedro. Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old man.

Ant. Had I let so thine, thou, I thine, my brother.

I had let you, thou, so thine, I thine, I brother, VA i.3i

Leon. Hear you, my lords,—

D. Pedro. We have some haste, Leonato.

Leon. Some haste, my lord! well, fare you well, my lord: re you so hasty now? well, all is one.

D. Pedro. Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old man.

Ant. But he was as young as you.

Leon. You, thine, I say, I brother, VA i.3i

120

Ant. Come, brother, away. I will be heard.

D. Pedro. I will not hear you.

Leon.

Dooby. Marry, sir, they have committed fals report; moreover, they have spoken untruths secondarily, they are slanders; sixth, and lastly, they have belied a lady; thirdly, they have verific'd unjust things; and, to conclude, the are lying knaves.

D. Pedro. First, I ask thee what they have done; thirdly, I ask thee what's their offence, sixth, and lastly, why they are committed; and to conclude, what you lay to their charge.

Claud. Rightly reasoned, and in his own division; and, by my troth, there's one meaning well suited.

D. Pedro. Who have you offended, master, that you are thus bound to your answer? the learned constable is too cunning to be understood. What's your offence?

Bora. Sweet prince, let me go no further to mine answer: do you hear me, and let this count me kill. I have deceived even your very eyes: what your wisdoms could not discover, these shallow fools have brought to light; wherein the night overheard me confessing to this man how Don John your brother incensed me to slander the Lady Hero; how you were brought into the orchard and saw me confound Margaret in Hero's garments; how you disgraced her, when you should marry her. My villainy have you upon record; which I have rather seal with my death than repeat over to my shame. The lady is dead upon mine own master's false accusation; and, briefly, desire nothing but the reward of a villain.

D. Pedro. Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?

Claud. I have drunk poison whiles he uttered it.

D. Pedro. But did my brother set thee on this?

Bora. Yea; and paid me richly for the practice of it.

D. Pedro. He is compos'd and fram'd in treachery:

And fled he is upon this villany.

Claud. Sweet Hero! now thy image doth appear In the rare semblance that I lov'd it first.

Dooby. Come, bring away the plaintiffs: this time our sexton hath reformed Signior Leonato of the matter. And, masters, do no forget to specify, when time and place you shew, that I am an ass.

Fery. Here, here comes Master Signior Leonato and the sexton too.

Re-enter Leonato, Antonio, and the Sexton.

Leon. Which is the villain? Let me see his eye That when I note another man like him, I may avoid him: which of these is he?

Bora. If you would know your wronger, look on me.

Leon. Art thou the slave that with thy breath hast kild Mine innocent child?

Bora. Yea, even I alone.

Leon. No, not so, villain; thou beliest thyself Here stand a pair of honourable men: A third is fled, that had a hand in it. I thank you, princes, for my daughter's death. Record it with your high and worthy deeds.

'Twas bravely done, if you bethink you of it.

Claud. I know not how to pray your patience.
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

Scene I.

[Enter DON PEDRO and CLAUDIO.]

Don Pedro. We will not fail.

Claud. To-night I’ll mourn with Hero.

[Exeunt Don PEDRO and CLAUDIO.

Leon. To the Watch. Bring you these fellows on. We’ll talk with Margaret, How her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow.

[Exeunt.

Scene II.—Leonato’s Garden.

Enter BENEDICK and MARGARET, meeting.

Bene. Pray thee, sweet Mistress Margaret, deserve well at my hands by helping me to the speech of Beatrice.

Marg. Will you then write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty?

Bene. In so high a style, Margaret, that no man living shall come over it; for, in most comely truth, thou deserves it.

Marg. To have no man come over me! why, shall I always keep below stairs?

Bene. Thy wit is as quick as the greyhound’s mouth; it catches.

Marg. And yours as blunt as the fencer’s foils, which hit, but hurt not.

Bene. A most manly wit, Margaret; it will not hurt a woman: and so, I pray thee, call Beatrice. I give thee the bucklers.

Marg. Give us the swords, we have bucklers of our own.

Bene. If you use them, Margaret, you must put on the pikes with a vice; and they are dangerous weapons formaids.

Marg. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who I think hath legs.

Bene. And therefore will come.

Exit MARGARET.

The god of love,
That sits above,
And knows me, and knows me,
How pitiful I deserve,—

I mean in singing; but in loving, Leander the good swimmer, Troilus the first employer of pandars, and a whole bookful of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose names yet run smoothly in the even road of a blank verse, why, they were never so truly turned over and over as my poor self in love. Marry, I cannot show it in rime; I have tried: I can find out no rime to ‘lady’ but ‘baby,’ an innocent rime; for ‘scorn,’ ‘horn,’ a hard rime; for ‘school,’ ‘fool,’ a babbling rime; very ominous endings. No, I was not born under a rining planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms.

Enter BEATRICE.

Sweet Beatrice, would’st thou come when I called thee?

Beat. Yea, signior; and depart when you bid me.

Bene. O! stay but till then.

Beat. ‘Then’ is spoken; fare you well now: and yet, ere I go, let me go with that I came; which is, with knowing what hath passed between you and Claudio.

Bene. Only foul words; and therupon I will kiss thee.

Beat. Foul words is but foul wind, and foul wind is but foul breath, and foul breath is noisome; therefore I will depart unsnubbed.

Bene. Thou hast frightened the word out of his right sense, so forcible is thy wit. But, I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge, and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward. And, I pray thee now, tell me, for which of my bad parts dist thou first fall in love with me?

Beat. For them all together; which maintained so politic a state of evil that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them. But for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me?

Bene. Suffer love! a good epithet. I do suffer love, indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spite of your heart, I think. Alas! poor heart. If you spit it for my sake, I will spite it for yours; for I will never love that which my friend hates.

Bene. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceably.

Beat. It appears not in this confession; there's not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself.

Bene. An old, an old instance, Beatrice, that lived in the time of good neighbours. If a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monument than the bell rings and the widow weeps.

Beat. And how long is that, think you?

Bene. Question: why, an hour in clamour and a quarter in rhem: therefore is it most expedient for the wise, if Don John, his conscience, find no impediment to the contrary, to be the trumpet of his own virtues, as I am to myself. So much for praising myself, who, I myself will bear witness, is praise-worthy. And now tell me, how doth your cousin?

Beat. Very ill.

Bene. And how do you?

Beat. Very ill too.

Bene. Serve God, love me, and mend. There will I leave you too, for here comes one in haste.

Enter Ursula.

Urs. Madam, you must come to your uncle.
Yonder's old coil at home: it is proved my Lady Hero hath been falsely accused, the prince and Claudio mightily abused; and Don John is the author of all, who is fleed and gone. Will you come presently?

Beat. Will you go hear this news, signior?

Bene. I will live in thy heart, die in thy lap, and be buried in thy eyes; and moreover I will go with thee to thy uncle's.

Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Inside of a Church.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, and Attendants, with music and tapers.

Claud. Is this the monument of Leonato?

A Lord. It is, my lord.

Claud. Reads from a scroll.

Done to death by slanderous tongues
Was the Hero that here lies:
Death, in guardian of her wrongs,
Gives her fame which never dies.
So the life that died with shame
Lives in death with glorious fame.

Hang thou there upon the tomb,
Praising her when I am dumb.

Now, music, sound, and sing your solemn hymn.

Song.

Pardon, goddess of the night,
Those that slew thy virgin knight:
For the which, with songs of woe
Round about her tomb they go.

Midnight, assist our moon;
Help us to sigh and groan,
Heavily, heavily.

Gears, yawn and yield your dead,
Till death be uttered,
Heavily, heavily.

Claud. Now, unto thy bones good night!
Yearly will I do this rite.

D. Pedro. Good morrow, masters: put you torchets out.

The wolves have prey'd; and look, the gent
day,
Before the wheels of Phoebus, round about

Dapples the drowsy east with spots of grey.

Thanks to you all, and leave us: fare you well

Claud. Good morrow, masters: each h several way.

D. Pedro. Come, let us hence, and put o
other weeds;
And then to Leonato's we will go.

Claud. And Hymen now with luckier iss speed's,

Than this for whom we render'd up this woe

Scene IV.—A Room in Leonato's House.

Enter Leonato, Antonio, Benedick, Be
Margaret, Ursula, Friar Franch and Hero.

Fri. Did I not tell you she was innocent?

Leon. So are the prince and Claudio, wh accus'd her

Upon the error that you heard debated:
But Margaret was in some fault for this,
Although against her will, as it appears
In the true course of all the question.

Ant. Well, I am glad that all things sortsow we Bene. And so am I, being else by faith enforc to call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.

Leon. Well, daughter, and you gentlewomen
Withdraw into a chamber by yourselves,
And when I send for you, come hither mask'd
The prince and Claudio promis'd by this hour:
To visit me.

You know your office, brother:
You must be father to your brother's daughte
And give her to young Claudio.

Ant. Which I will do with confirm'd count ance.

Bene. Friar, I must entreat your pains, I thin
Fri. To do what, signior?

Bene. To bind me, or undo me; one of the Signior Leonato, truth it is, good signior,
Your niece regards me with an eye of favour.

Leon. That eye my daughter lent her: most true.

Bene. And I do with an eye of love requite h Leon. The sight whereof I think you li from me,
From Claudio, and the prince. But what's ye will?

Bene. Your answer, sir, is enigmatical:
But, for my will, my will is your good wil
MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

by Don Pedro and Claudio, with Attendants.

D. Pedro. Good morrow to this fair assembly.

Leon. Good morrow, prince; good morrow, Claudio:

Claudio: I here attend you. Are you yet determin'd o'-day to marry with my brother's daughter?

Claud. I'll hold my mind, were she an Ethiop.

Leon. Call her forth, brother: here's the friar ready.

Exit ANTONIO.

D. Pedro. Good morrow, Benedick. Why, what's the matter, hast thou such a February face, o' full of frost, of storm and cloudiness?

Claud. I think he thinks upon the savage bull, ush! fear not, man, we'll tip thy horns with gold, and all Europa shall rejoice at thee, since Europa did at lusty Jove, then he would play the noble beast in love.

Bene. Bull Jove, sir, had an amiable low; and some such strange bull leap'd your father's cow, and got a calf in that same noble feat, such like to you, for you have just his beatle.

Re-enter ANTONIO, with the Ladies masked.

Claud. For this I owe you: hence come other reckonings, which is the lady I must seize upon?

Ant. This same is she, and I do give you her.

Claud. Why, then she's mine. Sweet, let me see your face.

Leon. No, that you shall not, till you take her hand for this friar, and swear to marry her.

Claud. Give me your hand: before this holy friar, my husband, if you like of me.

Hero. And when I liv'd, I was your other wife:

Unmasking, &c.

and when you lov'd, you were my other husband.

Claud. Another Hero!

Hero. Nothing certain: he Hero died defil'd, but I do live,.id, surely as I live, I am a maid.

D. Pedro. The former Hero! Hero that's dead!

Leon. She died, my lord, but whiles she slander liv'd.

Fri. All this amazement can I qualify; when after that the holy rites are ended, I tell you largely of fair Hero's death: meantime, let wonder seem familiar, ad to the chapel let us presently.

Bene. Soft and fair, friar. Which is Beatrice?

Beat. Answer to that name. Unmasking.

What is your will?

Bene. Do not you love me?

Beat. Why, no; no more than reason.

Bene. Why then, your uncle and the prince and Claudio have been deceiv'd; they swore you did.

Beat. Do not you love me?

Bene. Troth, no; no more than reason.

Beat. Why then, my cousin, Margaret, and Ursula, are much deceiv'd; for they did swear you did.

Bene. They swore that you were almost sick for me.

Beat. They swore that you were well nigh dead for me.

Bene. 'Tis so much matter. Then you do not love me?

Beat. No, truly, but in friendly recompense.

Leon. Come, cousin, I am sure you love the gentleman.

Claud. And I'll be sworn upon 't that he loves her;

For here's a paper written in his hand, A halting sonnet of his own pure brain, Fashion'd to Beatrice.

Hero. And here's another:

Writ in my cousin's hand, stol'n from her pocket, Containing her affection unto Benedick.

Bene. A miracle! here's our own hands against our hearts. Come, I will have thee; but, by this light, I take thee for pity.

Beat. I would not deny you; but, by this good day, I yield upon great persuasion, and partly to save your life, for I was told you were in a consumption.

Bene. Peace! I will stop your mouth.

Kisses her.

D. Pedro. How dost thou, Benedick, the married man?

Bene. I'll tell thee what, prince; a college of wit-crackers cannot flout me out of my humour. Dost thou think I care for a satire or an epigram? No: if a man will be beaten with brains, a' shall wear nothing handsome about him. In brief, since I do purpose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it; and therefore never flout at me for what I have said against it, for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion. For thy part, Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee; but, in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruised, and love my cousin.

Claud. I had well hoped thou would'st have denied Beatrice, that I might have cudgelled thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double-dealer; which, out of question, thou wilt be, if my cousin do not look exceeding narrowly to thee.

Bene. Come, come, we are friends. Let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts and our wives' heels.

Leon. We'll have dancing afterward.

Bene. First of my word; therefore play, music! Prince, thou art sad; get thee a wife, get thee a wife: there is no staff more reverend than one tipped with horn.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, your brother John is taken in flight.

And brought with armed men back to Messina.

Bene. Think not on him till to-morrow: I'll devise thee brave punishments for him. Strike up, pipers.

Dance. Exeunt.

SCENE.—Navarre.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—The King of Navarre's Park.

Enter the King, Berowne, Longaville, and Dumaine.

King. Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live register'd upon our brazen tombs,
And then grace us in the disgrace of death;
When, spite of cormorant devouring Time,
The endeavour of this present breath may buy
That honour which shall bate his scythe's keen edge,
And make us heirs of all eternity,
Therefore, brave conquerors, for so you are,
That war against your own affections
And the huge army of the world's desires;
Our late edict shall strongly stand in force:
Navarre shall be the wonder of the world;
Our court shall be a little academe,
Still and contemplative in living art.
You three, Berowne, Dumaine, and Longaville,
Have sworn for three years' term to live with me,
My fellow-scholars, and to keep those statutes
That are recorded in this schedule here:
Your oaths are pass'd; and now subscribe your names,
That his own hand may strike his honour down
That violates the smallest branch herein.

If you are arm'd to do, as sworn to do,
Subscribe to your deep oaths, and keep it too.

Long. I am resolv'd; 'tis but a three years' fast:
The mind shall banquet, though the body pine:
Fat paunches have lean pates, and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits.

Dum. My loving lord, Dumaine is mortified:
The grosser manner of these world's delights
He throws upon the gross world's baser slaves:

To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die;
With all these living in philosophy.
Berowne. I can but say their protestation over
So much, dear liege, I have already sworn,
That is, to live and study here three years.
But there are other strict observances:
As, not to see a woman in that term,
Which I hope well is not enrolled there:
And one day in a week to touch no food,
And but one meal on every day beside;
The which I hope is not enrolled there:
And then, to sleep but three hours in the night;
And not be seen to wink of all the day;
When I was wont to think no harm all night,
And make a dark night too of half the day.

King. Your oath is pass'd to pass away from these Berowne. Let me say no, my liege, an if you please.
I only swore to study with your grace,
And stay here in your court for three years' space.

Long. You swore to that, Berowne, and to the rest.

Berowne. By yea and nay, sir, then I swore in je
What is the end of study? let me know.

King. Why, that to know which else we should not know.

Berowne. Things hid and barr'd, you mean from common sense?

King. Ay, that is study's god-like recompence.

Berowne. Come on then; I will swear to study so.

To know the thing I am forbid to know;
As thus: to study where I well may dine,
When I to feast expressly am forbid;
Or study where to meet some mistress fine,
When mistresses from common sense are
Or, having sworn too hard-a-keeping oath,
Study to break it, and not break my troth.
If study’s gain be thus, and this be so,
Study knows that which yet it doth not know;
Swear me to this, and I will ne’er say no.

King. These be the stops that hinder study quite,
And train our intellects to vain delight.

Berowne. Why, all delights are vain; but that most vain,
Which with pain purchas’d doth inherit pain:
As, painfully to pore upon a book,
To seek the light of truth; while truth the while Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look:
Light seeking light doth light of light beguile:
So, ere you find where light in darkness lies,
Your light grows dark by losing of your eyes.
Study me how to please the eye indeed,
By fixing it upon a fairer eye,
Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his heed,
And give him light that it was blinded by:
Study is like the heaven’s glorious sun,
That will not be deep-search’d with saucy looks;
Mall have continual plodders ever won,
Save base authority from others’ books,
These earthly godfathers of heaven’s lights.

That give a name to every fixed star,
Lave no more profit of their shining nights
Than those that walk and wot not what they are.
‘Oo much to know is to know nought but fame;
And every godfather can give a name.

King. How well he’s read, to reason against reading!

Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding!

Long. He weeds the corn, and still lets grow the weeding.

Berowne. The spring is near, when green goose are a-breeding.

Dum. How follows that?

Berowne. Fit in his place and time.

Dum. In reason nothing.

Berowne. Something then in rime.

King. Berowne is like an envious sneaping frost
That bites the first-born infants of the spring.

Berowne. Well, say I am: why should proud summer boast

Before the birds have any cause to sing?
Why should I joy in an abortive birth?
At Christmas I no more desire a rose
Than wish a snow in May’s new-fangled mirth;
But like of each thing that in season grows.
You, to study now it is too late,
Limb over the house to unlock the little gate.

Long. Well, sit you out: go home, Berowne:
Some nont.

Berowne. No, my good lord; I have sworn to stay with you:
And though I have for barbarism spoke more
Than for that angel knowledge you can say,
Yet confident I’ll keep what I have swore,
And hide the prudence of each three days’
time I live me the paper; let me read the same;
And to the strictest decrees I’ll write my name.

King. How well this yielding rescues thee from shame!

Berowne. Item, That no woman shall come within mile of my court. Hath this been proclaimed?
Beroene. This fellow: What wouldst thou?
Dull. I myself reprehend his own person, for I am his grace's tharborough: but I would see his own person in flesh and blood.
Beroene. This is he.
Dull: Signior Arno—Arno—commends you. There's villain abroad: this letter will tell you more.
Cost. Sir, the contents thereof are as touching me.
King. A letter from the magnificent Armido.
Beroene. How sover the matter, I hope in God for high words.
Long. A high hope for a low heaven: God grant us patience!
Beroene. To hear? or forbear laughing?
Long. To hear meekly, sir, and to laugh moderately; or to forbear both.
Beroene. Well, sir, be it as the style shall give us cause to climb in the merriness.
Cost. The matter is to me, sir, as concerning Jaquenetta. The manner of it, I was taken with the manner.
Beroene. In what manner?
Cost. In manner and form following, sir; all those three: I was seen with her in the manor-house, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park; which, put together, is in manner and form following. Now, sir, for the manner,—it is the manner of a man to speak to a woman; for the form,—in some form.
Beroene. For the following, sir?
Cost. As it shall follow in my correction; and God defend the right!
King. Will you hear this letter with attention?
Beroene. As we would hear an oracle.
Cost. Such is the simplicity of man to hearken after the flesh.
King. Great deputy, the welkin's vicegerent, and sole dominator of Navarre, my soul's earth's God, and body's fostering patron.
Cost. Not a word of Costard yet.
King. So it is,—
Cost. It may be so; but if he say it is so, he is, in telling true, but so,— King. Peace! Cost. Be to me and every man that dares not fight.
King. No words! Cost. Of other men's secrets, I beseech you.
King. So it is, besiegéd with sable-coloured melancholy, I did commend the black-oppressing humour to the most wholesome physic of thy health-giving air; and, as I am a gentleman, betook myself to walk. The time when. About the sixth hour; when beasts must graze, birds best peck, and men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper: so much for the time when. Now for the ground which; which, I mean, I walked upon: it is yelded thy park. Then for the place where; where, I mean, I did encounter that obscure and most preposterous event, that dreweth from my snow-white pen the ebon-coloured ink, which here thou viewest, beholdst, surveysest, or seest. But to the place where; it standeth north-north-east and by east from the west corner of thy curious-knotted garden: there did I see that low-spirited swain, that base minnow of thy mirth.
Cost. Me. King. that shallow vassal,—
Cost. Still me.
King. which, as I remember, hight Costard,—
Cost. O! me.
King. sorted and consorted, contrary to thy established proclaimed edict and continent canon, with,—with—O! with—but with this I passion to say wherewith.—
Cost. With a wench.
King. With a child of our grandmother Eve, a female; or, for thy more sweet understanding, a woman. Him I, as my ever-esteemed duty pricks me on, have sent to thee, to receive the need of punishment, by thy sweet grace's officer, Anthony Dull, a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, and estimation.
Dull. Me, an't shall please you; I am Anthony Dull.
King. For Jaquenetta,—so is the weaker vessels called which I apprehended with the aforesaid swain:—I keep her as a vessel of thy late's fury; and shalt at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine, in all compliments of devoted and hearty burning heat of duty.

DON ADRIANO DE ARMADO.
Beroene. This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that ever I heard.
King. Ay, the best for the worst. But, sirrah, what say you to this?
Cost. Sir, I confess the wench.
King. Did you hear the proclamation?
Cost. I do confess much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.
King. It was proclaimed a year's imprisonment to be taken with a wench.
Cost. I was taken with none, sir: I was taken with a damsels.
King. Well, it was proclaimed 'damsel.'
Cost. This was no damsels neither, sir: she was a virgin.
King. It is so varied too, for it was proclaimed 'virgin.'
Cost. If it were, I deny her virginity: I was taken with a maid.
King. This maid will not serve your turn, sirs.
Cost. This maid will serve my turn, sir.
King. Sir, I will pronounce your sentence you shall fast a week with bran and water.
Cost. I had rather pray a month with mutton and porridge.
King. And Don Armado shall be your keep. My Lord Beroene, see him deliver'd o'er:
And go we, lords, to put in practice that Which each to other hath so strongly sworn.

Exeunt King, Longaville, and Dumain. Beroene. I'll lay my head to any good man's hat,
These oaths and laws will prove an idle scorn.
Sirrah, come on.
Cost. I suffer for the truth, sir: for true it is I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is true girl; and therefore welcome the sour cup prosperity! Affliction may one day smile again; and till then, sit thee down, sorrow!

SENE II.——The Same.

Enter ARMADO and MOTH.

Arm. Boy, what sign is it when a man of good spirit grows melancholy?
Moth. A great sign, sir, that he will look at...
LOVE’S LABOUR’S LOST.

SCENE II.

Arm. Why, sadness is one and the self-same thing, dear imp.

Moth. No, no; O Lord, sir, no.

Arm. How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvelan?

Moth. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough senior.

Arm. Why tough senior? why tough senior?

Moth. Why tender juvelan? why tender juvelan?

Arm. I spoke it, tender juvelan, as a congruent epitheton appertaining to thy young days, which we may nominate tender.

Moth. And I, tough senior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Arm. Pretty, and apt.

Moth. How mean you, sir? I pretty, and my saying apt? or, I apt, and my saying pretty? 21

Arm. Thou pretty, because little.

Moth. Little pretty, because little. Wherefore apt?

Arm. And therefore apt, because quick.

Moth. Speak you this in my praise, master?

Arm. In thy condign praise.

Moth. I will praise an eel with the same praise.

Arm. What! that an eel is ingenious?

Moth. That an eel is quick.

Arm. I do say thou art quick in answers: thou seest my blood.

Moth. I am answered, sir.

Arm. I love not to be crossed.

Moth. Aside. He speaks the mere contrary: crosses love not him.

Arm. I have promised to study three years with the duke.

Moth. You may do it in an hour, sir.

Arm. Impossible.

Moth. How many is one thrice told?

Arm. I am ill at reckoning; it fitteth the spirit of a tapster.

Moth. You are a gentleman and a gamester, sir.

Arm. I confess both: they are both the varnish of a complete man.

Moth. Then, I am sure you know how much the gross sum of deuce-ace amounts to.

Arm. It doth amount to one more than two. 50

Moth. Which the base vulgar do call three.

Arm. True.

Moth. Why, sir, is this such a piece of study? Now, here is three studied, woe ye’ll thrieve winc; and how easy it is to put ‘years’ to the word three, and study three years in two words, the dancing horse will tell you.

Arm. A most fine figure!

Moth. To prove you a cipher.

Arm. I will hereupon confess I am in love; and as it is base for a soldier to love, so am I in love with a base wench. If drawing my word against the humour of affection would deliver me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take Desire prisoner, and ransom him to my French courtier for a new-devised courtesy. think scorn to sigh: methinks I should outwear Cupid. Comfort me, boy. What great men have been in love?

Moth. Hercules, master.

Arm. Most sweet Hercules! More authority, dear boy, name more; and, sweet my child, let him be men of good repute and carriage.

Moth. Samson, master: he was a man of good carriage, great carriage, for he carried the town-gates on his back like a porter; and he was in love.

Arm. Owell-knit Samson! strong-jointed Samson! I do excel thee in my rapier as much as thou didst me in carrying gates. I am in love too. Who was Samson’s love, my dear Moth?

Moth. A woman, master.

Arm. Of what complexion?

Moth. Of all the four, or the three, or the two, or one of the four.

Arm. Tell me precisely of what complexion.

Moth. Of the sea-water green, sir.

Arm. Is that one of the four complexions?

Moth. As I have read, sir; and the best of them too.

Arm. Green indeed is the colour of lovers; but to have a love of that colour, methinks, Samson had small reason for it. He surely affected her for her wit.

Moth. It was so, sir, for she had a green wit.

Arm. My love is most immaculate white and red.

Moth. Most maculate thoughts, master, are masked under such colours.

Arm. Define, define, well-educated infant.

Moth. My father’s wit, and my mother’s tongue, assist me!

Arm. Sweet invocation of a child; most pretty and pæthetical!

Moth. If she be made of white and red,

Her faults will ne’er be known,

For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,

And fears by pale white shown:

Then if she fear, or be to blame,

By this you shall not know,

For still her cheeks possess the same

Which native she doth owe.

A dangerous rime, master, against the reason of white and red.

Arm. Is there not a ballad, boy, of the King and the Beggar?

Moth. The world was very guilty of such a ballad some three ages since; but I think now ’tis not to be found; or, if it were, it would neither serve for the writing nor the tune.

Arm. I will have that subject newly writ o’er, that I may example my digression by some mighty precedent. Boy, I do love that country girl that I took in the park with the rational kind Costard: she deserves well.

Moth. Aside. To be whipped; and yet a better love than my master.

Arm. Sing, boy; my spirit grows heavy in love.

Moth. And that’s great marvel, loving a light wench.

Arm. I say, sing.

Moth. Forbear till this company be past.

Enter DULL, COSTARD, and JAQUENETTA.

Dull. Sir, the duke’s pleasure is, that you keep Costard safe: and you must let him take no delight nor no penance, but a must fast three days a week. For this damsel, I must keep her at the park; she is allowed for the day. Fare you well.

Arm. I do betray myself with blushing. Maid! Jog. Man?

Arm. I will visit thee at the lodge.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The King of Navarre's Park. A Pavilion and Tents at a distance.

Enter the Princess of France, Rosaline, Maria, Katharine, Boyet, Lords, and other Attendants.

Boyet. Now, madam, summon up your dearest spirits; Consider whom the king your father sends, To whom he sends, and what's his embassy: Yourself, held precious in the world's esteem, To parley with the sole inheritor Of all perfections that a man may owe, Matchless Navarre; the plea of no less weight Than Aqutaine, a dowry for a queen. Be now as prodigal of all dear grace As Nature was in making graces dear When she did starve the general world beside, And prodigally gave them all to you.

Prin. Good Lord Boyet, my beauty, though but mean, Needs not the painted flourish of your praise: Beauty is bought by judgment of the eye, Not utter'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues. I am less proud to hear you tell my worth Than you much willing to be counted wise In spending your wit in the praise of mine. But now to task the tasker: good Boyet, You are not ignorant, all-telling fame Doth noise abroad, Navarre hath made a vow, Till painful study shall outwear three years, No woman may approach his silent court: Therefore to us seemeth it a meafull course, Before we enter his forbidden gates, To know his pleasure; and in that behalf, Bold of your worthiness, we single you As our best-moving fair solicitor. Tell him, the daughter of the King of France, On serious business, craving quick dispatch, Importunes personal conference with his grace Haste, signify so much; while we attend, Like humble-visig'd suitors, his high will.

Boyet. Proud of employment, willingly I go.

Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so

Exit Boyet.

Who are the notaries, my loving lords, That are vow-fellows with this virtuous duke?

First Lord. Lord Longaville is one.

Prin. Know you the man.

Mar. I know him, madam: at marriage-feasts Between Lord Perigort and the beauteous heiress Of Jaques Falconbridge, solemnized In Normandy, saw I this Longaville, A man of sovereign parts he is esteemed; Well fitted in the arts, glorious in arms: Nothing becomes him ill that he would well. The only soul of his fair virtue's gloss, If virtue's gloss will stain with any soil, Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a will; Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will st" illustration:

It should none spare that come within his power.

Prin. Somemerry mocking lord, belike; is't so?

Mar. They say so most that most his humour know.

Prin. Such short-liv'd wits do wither as th'd grow.

Who are the rest?

Kath. The young Dumaine, a well-accomplish youth, Of all that virtue love for virtue lov'd; Most power to do most harm, least knowing i For he hath wit to make an ill shape good, And shape to win grace though he had no wit. I saw him at the Duke Alençon's once; And much too little of that good I saw Is my report to his great worthiness.

Ros. Another of these students at that time.

Was there with him, if I have heard a truth; Berowne they call him; but a merrier man, Within the limit of becoming mirth, I never spent an hour's talk withal. His eye begets occasion for his wit;
Now, what admittance, lord?

Boyet. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;
And he and his competitors in oath
Were all address'd to meet you, gentle lady,
Before I came. Marry, thus much I have learnt;
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes here to besiege his court,
Than seek a dispensation for his oath,
To let you enter his uncoped house.
Here comes Navarre. The Ladies mask.

Enter King, Longaville, Dumaine, Berowne,
And Attendants.

King. Fair princess, welcome to the court of Navarre.

Prin. 'Fair' I give you back again; and welcome! I have not yet; the roof of this court is too high to be yours, and welcome to the wide fields too base to be nine.

King. You shall be welcome, madam, to my court.

Prin. I will be welcome then: conduct me thither.

King. Hear me, dear lady; I have sworn an oath.
Prin. Our Lady help my lord! he'll be forsworn.

King. Not for the world, fair madam, by my will.

Prin. Why, why, shall break it; will, and nothing else.

King. Your ladyship is ignorant what it is.

Prin. Were my lord so, his ignorance were wise,
Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance.
I hear your grace hath sworn out house-keeping:
'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath, my lord,
And sin to break it.
But pardon me, I am too sudden-bold:
To teach a teacher ill beseech me.
Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming,
And suddenly resolve me in my suit.

King. Madam, I will, if suddenly I may.

Prin. You will the sooner that I was away,
For you'll prove perjur'd if you make me stay.

Berowne. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Ros. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Berowne. I know you did.

Ros. How needless was it then
To ask the question!

Berowne. You must not be so quick.
Ros. 'Tis long of you that spur me with such questions.

Berowne. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, twill tire.

Ros. Not till it leave the rider in the mire.

Berowne. What time o' day?

Ros. The hour that fools should ask.

Berowne. Now fair befall your mask!

Ros. Fair fall the face it covers!

Berowne. And send you many lovers!
Ros. Amen, so you be none.

Berowne. Nay, then will I be gone.

King. Madam, your father here doth intimate
The payment of a hundred thousand crowns;
Being but the one half of an entire sum
Disbursted by my father in his wars.
But say that he or we, as neither have,
Receiv'd that sum, yet there remains unpaid
A hundred thousand more; in insue of which,
One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
Although not valued to the money's worth.
If then the king your father will restore
But that one half which is unsatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fair friendship with his majesty.

But that, it seems, he little purposeth,
For here he doth demand to have repaid
A hundred thousand crowns; and not demands,
On payment of a hundred thousand crowns,
To have his title live in Aquitaine;
Which we much rather had depart withal,
And have the money by our father lent,
Than Aquitaine, so gilded as it is.

Dear princess, were not his requests so far
From reason's yielding, your fair self should make
A yielding 'gainst some reason in my breast,
And go well satisfied to France again.

Prin. You do the king my father too much
And wrong the reputation of your name,
In so unseeming to confess receipt
Of that which hath so faithfully been paid.

King. I do protest I never heard of it;
And if you prove it, I'll repay it back
Or yield up Aquitaine.

Prin. We arrest your word.

Boyet, you can produce acquittances
For such a sum from special officers
Of Charles his father.

King. Satisfy me so.

Boyet. So please your grace, the packet is not come
Where that and other specialties are bound:
To-morrow you shall have a sight of them.

King. It shall suffice me: at which interview
All liberal reason I will yield unto.

Meantime, receive such welcome at my hand
As honour, without breach of honour, may
Make tender of to thy true worthiness.

You may not come, fair princess, in my gates;
But here without you shall be so receiv'd,
As you shall deem yourself lodg'd in my heart,
Though so denied fair harbour in my house.

Your own good thoughts excuse me, and farewell:
To-morrow shall we visit you again.

Prin. Sweet health and fair desires consort your grace!

King. Thy own wish wish I thee in every place!

Berowne. Lady, I will commend you to mine own heart.

Ros. Pray you, do my commendations; I would be glad to see it.

Berowne. I would you heard it groan.

Ros. Is the fool sick?

Berowne. Sick at the heart.
Ros. Alack! let it blood.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—The King of Navarre's Park.

Enter Armado and Moth.

Arm. Warble, child: make passionate my sense of hearing.

Moth. Singing.

Concordel—

Arm. Sweet air! Go, tenderness of years take this key, give enlargement to the swain bring him festinately hither; I must employ him in a letter to my love.

Moth. Master, will you win your love with French brawl?

Arm. How meanest thou? brawling in French Moth. No, my complete master; but to jig o a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with you feet, humour it with turning up your eyelid; sigh a note and sing a note, sometime through the throat, as if you swallowed love with singing love, sometime through the nose, as if you sniffed up love by smelling love; with your hexa- house-like o'er the shop of your eyes; wit your hare oppressed on your thin belly-doublet like a rabbit on a spit; or your hands in your pocke like a man after the old painting; and keep no too long in one tune, but a snip and away. The are complements, these are humours, these betro- nice wenches, that would be betrayed without these; and make them men of note,—do ye note me?—that most are affected to these.

Arm. How hast thou purchased this experience Moth. By my penny of observation.

Arm. But O,—but O,—

Moth. 'The hobby-horse is forgot.'
Arm. Cullst thou my love 'hobby-horse'?
Moth. No, master; the hobby-horse is but a bit, and your love perhaps a hackney. But have you forgot your love?
Arm. Almost I had.
Moth. Negligent student! learn her by heart.
Arm. By heart, and in heart, boy.
Moth. And out of heart, master: all those recesses will I prove.
Arm. What will thou prove?
Moth. A man, if I live; and this, by in, and thout, upon the instant: by heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her; in art you love her, because your heart is in love thither; and out of heart you love her, being fond of heart that you cannot enjoy her.
Arm. I am all these three.
Moth. And three times as much more, and yet thing at all.
Arm. Fetch this: the swain: he must carry a letter.
Moth. A message well sympathized: a horse be ambassador for an ass.
Arm. Ha, ha! what sayest thou?
Moth. Marry, sir, you must send the ass upon a horse, for he is very slow-gaited. But I go.
Arm. The way is but short: away!
Moth. As swift as lead, sir.
Arm. Thy meaning, pretty ingenious?
repeates me a cannon; and the bullet, that's he:
not thee at the swain.
Moth. Thump then, and I fly.
Exit.
Arm. A most acute juvenile; voluble and free of grace!
Ev'ry favour, sweet wellkin, I must sigh in thy face:
't rude melancholy, valour gives thee place.
herald is return'd.

Re-enter MOTh with COSTARD.

Arm. Some enigma, some riddle: come, thy
'movo; begin.

Cost. No eguna, no riddle, no l'envoy / no salve
he mail, sir. O! sir, plantain, a plain plantain;
l'envoy, no l'envoy / no salve, sir, but a plantain.
Arm. By virtue, thou enforcet laughter; thy thought, my spleen; the heaving of my
's provokes me to ridiculous smiling: O! par-me, my stars! Doth the inconsiderate take e for l'envoy, and the word l'envoy for a salve?
Moth. Do the wise think them other? is not e salve a salve?
Arm. No page; it is an epilogue or discourse, to make plain
the obscure preceedence that hath tofore been

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.
re's the moral. Now the l'envoy.

Moth. I will add the l'envoy. Say the moral again.
Arm. The fox, the ape, the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.
Moth. Until the fox came out of door,
And stay'd the odds by adding four.
Now will I begin your moral, and do you follow with my l'envoy.
The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.
Arm. Until the fox came out of door,
Staying the odds by adding four.
Moth. A good l'envoy, ending in the goose.
Would you desire more?
Cost. The boy hath sold him a bargain, a goose,
that's flat.
Sir, your pennyworth is good an your goose be fat.
To sell a bargain well is as cunning as fast and loose:
Let me see; a fat l'envoy; ay, that's a fat
goose.
Arm. Come hither, come hither. How did this argument begin?
Moth. By saying that a costard was broken in a shin.
Then call'd you for the l'envoy.
Cost. True, and I for a plantain: thus came your argument in;
Then the boy's fat l'envoy, the goose that you bought;
And he ended the market.
Arm. But tell me; how was there a costard broken in a shin?
Moth. I will tell you sensibly.
Cost. Thou hast no feeling of it, Moth: I will speak that l'envoy:
I, Costard, running out, that was safely within.
Fell over the threshold and broke my shin.
Arm. We will talk no more of this matter.
Cost. Till there be more matter in the shin.
Arm. Sirrah Costard, I will enfranchise thee.
Cost. O! marry me to one Frances: I smell some l'envoy, some goose, in this.
Arm. By my sweet soul, I mean setting thee at liberty, enfrancid the thy person; thou wert immured, restrained, captivated, bound.
Cost. True, true, and now you will be my purgation and let me loose.
Arm. I give thee thy liberty, set thee from durance; and, in lieu thereof, impose on thee nothing but this: bear this significant

Moth. Like the sequel, I. Signior Costard, adien.
Cost. My sweet ounce of man's flesh! my incony Jew!
Exit Moth.
Now will I look to his remuneration. Reumeration! O! that's the Latin word for three farthings: three farthings, remuneration.
What's the price of this inkle? 'One penny':
'No, I'll give you a remuneration': why, it carries it. Remuneration! why it is a fairer name than French crown. I will never buy and sell out of this word,
Enter Berowne.

Berowne. O! my good knave Costard, exceedingly well met.

Cost. Pray you, sir, how much carnation ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?

Berowne. What is a remuneration? 130

Cost. Marry, sir, halfpenny farthing.

Berowne. Why then, three-farthings worth of silk.

Cost. I thank your worship. God be wi' you! 132

Berowne. Stay, slave; I must employ thee; 133

As thou wilt win my favour, good my knife,
Do one thing for me that I shall entreat.

Cost. When would you have it done, sir?

Berowne. This afternoon.

Cost. Well, I will do it, sir. Fare you well. 161

Berowne. Thou knowest not what it is.

Cost. I shall know, sir, when I have done it.

Berowne. Why, villain, thou must know first.

Cost. I will come to your worship to-morrow morning.

Berowne. It must be done this afternoon.

Hark, slave, it is but this:

The princess comes to hunt here in the park,
And in her train there is a gentle lady;
When tongues speak sweetly, then they name her name,
And Rosaline they call her: ask for her,
And to her white hand see thou do commend
This seal'd-up counsel. There's thy gaerdon:

Give him a shilling. 134

Cost. Gordon, O sweet garden! better than remuneration; a'leven-pence farthing better.

Most sweet garden! I will do it, sir, in print.

Garden! Remuneration! 135

Berowne. And I—

Forsworn in love! I, that have been love's whip;

A very beadle to a humorous sigh; 189

A critic, nay, a night-watch constable,

A domineering pedant o'er the boy,

Than whom no mortal so magnificent!

This wimpred, whining, purblind, wayward boy,

This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid;

Regent of love-rimes, lord of folded arms,

The anointed sovereign of sighs and groans,

Liege of all loiterers and malecontents,

Dread prince of plackets, king of codpieces,

Sole imperator and great general

Of trotting 'paritores: O my little heart!

And I to be a corporal of his field,

And wear his colours like a tumbler's hoop!

What, if! I love! I see! I seek a wife!

A woman, that is like a German clock,

Still a-repairing, ever out of frame,

And never going aright, being a watch,

But being watch'd that it may still go right!

Nay, to be perjur'd, which is worst of all;

And, among three, to love the worst of all; 209

Aライトly wanton with a velvet brow,

With two pitch-balls stuck in her face for eyes;

Ay, and, by heaven, one that will do the deed

Though Argus were her eunuch and her guard:

And I to sigh for her! to watch for her!

To pray for her! Go to; it is a plague

That Cupid will impose for my neglect

Of his almighty dreadful little might.

Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue, and groan:

Some men must love my lady, and some Joan.

Exit.

ACT IV.

Scene I.—The King of Navarre's Park.

Enter the Princess, Rosaline, Maria, Katharine,

Boyet, Lords, Attendants, and a Forest.

Prin. Was that the king, that spurr'd his horse so hard

Against the steep uprising of the hill?

Boyet. I know not; but I think it was not

Well, lords, to-day we shall have our dispatch.

On Saturday we will return to France.

Boyet. Do not curst wives hold that self-

Only for praise' sake, when they strive to be

Lords o'er their lords?

Prin. Only for praise; and praise we

Enter Costard.

Boyet. Here comes a member of the court wealth.

Cost. God dig-you-den all! Pray you, we

We, as I doubt, may serve to make thee the funniest of all the ladies.

Why, why? They did not mean to write a love-letter.

The message is a mere jest, I dare say.

The prude's girdle for your waist should fit.

To a lady of France that he call'd Rosaline.

Thou hast mistaken his letter. Come, lords, away.

Here, sweet, put up this: 'twill be thine another day.

Who is the suitor? who is the suitor?

Shall I teach you to know?

Ay, my continent of beauty.

Why, she that bears the bow.

Put off your caps. Boyet.

My lady goes to kill horses; but if thou marry,

Hang me by the neck if horns that year miscarry.

Put off your caps, indeed!

You still wrangle with her, Boyet, and she strikes at the brow.

But she herself is hit lower: have I hit her now?

Shall I come upon thee with an old saying, that was a woman when King Pepin of France was a little boy,

as touching the hit it?

So I may answer thee with one as old,

that was a woman when Queen Guinever of Britain was a little wench,

as touching the hit it.

Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it.

Then will she get the upshoot by cleaving the pin.

Come, come, you talk greedily; your lips grow foul.

She's too hard for you at pricks, sir: challenge her to bowl.

I fear too much rubbing. Good night, my good owl.

Boyet. Why, you must shoot nearer, or he'll ne'er hit the clout.

Boyet. If my hand be out, then belike your hand is in.

Cost. Then will she get the upshoot by cleaving the pin.

Cost. She's too hard for you at pricks, sir: challenge her to bowl.

Boyet. I fear too much rubbing. Good night, my good owl.

Cost. By my soul, a swain! a most simple clown!

Lord, Lord, how the ladies and I have put him down!

O' my troth, most sweet jests! most incouy vulgar wit!

When it comes so smoothly off, so obscenely, as it were, so fit.

Armado o' the one side, O! a most dainty man,
To see him walk before a lady and to bear her fan!
To see him kiss his hand! and how most sweetly
a' will swear!
And his page o' the other side, that handful of wit! Ah! heavens, it is a most pathetical nit.
Sola, sola!

Shouting within. 10

Exit COSTARD, running.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter HOLOFERNES, Sir NATHANIEL, and DULL.

Nath. Very reverend sport, truly: and done in the testimony of a good conscience.

Hol. The deer was, as you know, sanguine, in blood; ripe as the pomegranate, who now hangeth like a jewel in the car of cælo, the sky; the welkin, the heaven; and anon falleth like a crab on the face of terris, the soil, the land, the earth.

Nath. Truly. Master Holofernes, the epithets are sweetly varied, like a scholar at the least: but, sir, I assure ye, it was a buck of the first head.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, hand credo.

Dull. 'Twas not a hand credo, 'twas a pricket.

Hol. Most barbarous inclination! yet a kind of insinuation, as it were, in via, in way of explication; fucere, as it were, replication, or, rather, ostentare, to show, as it were, his inclination,—after his undressed, unpolished, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or rather unlettered, or ratherest, unconfirmed fashion,—to insert again my hand credo for a deer.

Dull. I said the deer was not a hand credo; 'twas a pricket.

Hol. Twice-sod simplicity, his octus!

O! thou monster Ignorance, how deform'd dost thou look.

Nath. Sir, he hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a book;
he hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink: his intellect is not replenished; he is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts; And such barren plants are set before us, that we thankful should be,
Which we of taste and feeling are, for those parts that do frustrify in us more than he;
For as it would ill become me to be vain, indiscreet, or a fool,
So, were there a patch set on learning, to see him in a school:
But, omne bene, say I; being of an old Father's mind,
Many can brook the weather that love not the wind.

Dull. You two are book-men: can you tell me by your wit
What was a month old at Cain's birth, that's not five weeks old as yet?

Dull. What is Dictynna?

Nath. A title to Phiœbo, to Luna, to the moon.

Hol. The moon was a month old when Adam was no more;
And caught not to five weeks when he came to five-score.
The allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. 'Tis true indeed: the allusion holds in the exchange.

Hol. God comfort thy capacity! I say the allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. And I say the allusion holds in the exchange, for the moon is never but a month old; and I say beside that, 'twas a pricket to the princess killed.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an epitaph on the death of the deer? and humour the ignorant, call I the deer the princess killed, a pricket.

Nath. Perge, good Master Holofernes, per it shall please you to abrogate scrull.

Hol. I will something affect the letter; fo argues facility.

The princess picta'd and prick'd a pleasing pricket;
Some say a sore; but not a sore, till now in sore with shooting.
The dogs did yell; put L to sore, then sore jot from thicket;
Or pricket sore, or else sorel; the people a-hooting.

If sore be sore, then L to sore makes fifty sore a one.
Of one sore I am hundred made, by adding but more L.

Nath. A rare talent!

Dull. If a talent be a claw, look how he chews him with a talent.

Hol. This is a gift that I have, simple, sim a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms, figs, shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, motifs; revolutions: these are begot in the ventric memory, nourished in the womb of pia mater, and delivered upon the mellowing of occasion. But the gift is good in those in whom it is act, and I am thankful for it.

Nath. Sir, I praise the Lord for you, and may my parishioners; for their sons are tutored by you, and their daughters profit greatly under you; you are a good membe the commonwealth.

Hol. Mikere! if their sons be ingenuous, shall want no instruction; if their daughters capable, I will put it to them. But vir sapientissimus loquitur. A soul feminine saluteth us.

Enter JACQUENETTA and COSTARD.

Jaq. God give you good morrow, Master pa-

Hol. Master parson, quasi pers-on. An it should be pierced, which is the one?

Cost. Marry, Master schoolmaster, he that likest to a hogshead.

Hol. Piercing a hogshead! a good lusty conceit in a turf of earth; fire enough for a pearl enough for a swine: 'tis pretty; it is

Jaq. Good Master parson, be so good as me this letter: it was given me by Costard sent me from Don Armado: I beseech you to read it.

Hol. Fauste, precor ylida quando pecus omne umbra Rumanat, and so forth. Ah! good Mantuan. I may speak of thee as the true doth of Venice:

Venetia, Venetia,
Chi non ti vede, non ti prega.

Old Mantuan! old Mantuan! who understand thee not, loves thee not. Ut, ve, sol, la, mi.
Under pardon, sir, what are the contents rather, as Horace says in his—What, my verses?

Nath. Ay, sir, and very learned.

Hol. Let me hear a staff, a stanza, a verse, domine.
If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?

My never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd;

With all those pleasures live that art would command:

To love's sweet and, i' the place where thou art,

Witn all that is to see and to be, to thee or to others was bow'd.

Yet his bias leaves and makes his book thine eyes,

There all those pleasures live that art would command:

More edifying to see thee without wonder;

Which is to me some praise that I thy parts admire.

Eye love's lightning bears, thy voice is dreadful thunder.

Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire.

Staid as thou art, O! pardon love this wrong,

I say heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue.

I do you not the apostrophes, and so the accent; let me supervise the canzonet.

Scene III.—The Same.

Enter Berowne, with a paper.

Berowne. The king he is hunting the deer; I

Am couring myself: they have pitched a toil;

I am toiling in a pitch,—pitch that defies:

Defile: a fool word. Well, sit thee down, sorrow!

For so they say the fool said, and so say I, and

I the fool: well proved, wit! By the Lord, this

Love is as mad as Ajax: it kills sheep; it kills me,

I a sheep: well proved again o' my side! I

Will not love; if she do, let me; i' faith, I will not.

O! but her eye,—by this light, but for her eye,

I would not love her; yes, for her two eyes.

Well, I do nothing in the world, but lie, and lie

In my throat. By heaven, I do love, and it hath Taught me to rime, and to be melancholy; and

Here is part of my rime, and here my melancholy.

Well, she hath one o' my somnets already; the Clown bore it; the fool sent it; and the ladies hast:

Sweet clown, sweeter fool, sweetest lady! By

The world, I would not care a pin if the other

Three were in. Here comes one with a paper:

God give him grace to groan!

Gets up into a tree.

Enter the King, with a paper.

King. Ay me!

Berowne. Shot, by heaven! Proceed, sweet

Cupid: thou hast thumped him with thy bird-

Bolt under the left pap. In faith, secrets!

King. So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not.

To those fresh morning dews upon the rose,

As thy eye-beams, when their fresh rays have smote

The night of dew that on my cheeks down flows:

Nor shines the silver moon one half so bright.

Through the transparent bosom of the deep,

As doth thy face through tears of mine give light;

Thou shin'st in every tear that I do weep:

No drop but as a clown doth carry thee;

So rised thou triumphing in my toe.

Do but behold the tears that swell in me,

And they thy glory through my grief will show;

But do not love thyself; then thou wilt keep

My tears for glasses, and still make me weep.

O queen of queens! how far dost thou exceed

Of thought can think; nor tongue of mortal tell.

How shall she know my griefs? I'll drop the Paper:

Sweet leaves, shade folly. Who is he comes here?

Steps aside.

What, Longaville! and reading! listen, ear.

Enter Longaville, with a paper.

Longaville. Now, in thy likeness, one more fool

Appear!

Long. Ay me! I am forsworn.

Berowne. Why, he comes in like a perjurie,

Wearing papers.

King. In love, I hope: sweet fellowship in

Shame!

Berowne. One drunkard loves another of the Name.

Long. Am I the first that have been perjur'd so?
Beroine. I could put thee in comfort; not by two that I know.
Yet mak'st the trimmervir, the corner-cap of society.
The shape of love's Tyburn, that hangs up simplicity.
Long. I fear these stubborn lines lack power to move.
O sweet Maria, empress of my love!
These numbers will I tear, and write in prose.
Beroine. O! rimes are guards on wanton Cupid's hose:
Disfigure not his slop.
Long. This same shall go
Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world cannot hold argument,
Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but I will prove,
That being a goddess, I forswore not thee:
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;
Thy grace, being gain'd, cures all disgrace in me.
Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is:
Then thou, fair sun, which on my earth dost shine,
Eclatst this vapour-vow; in thee it is:
If broken, then it is no fault of mine:
If by me broke, what fault is so wise
To lose an oath to win a paradise?
Beroine. This is the liver-vein, which makes flesh a deity;
A green goose a goddess; pure, pure idolatry.
God amend us, God amend! we are much out of the way.
Long. By whom shall I send this?—Company! stay.
Steps aside.
Beroine. All hid, all hid; an old infant play.
Like a demi-god here sit I in the sky,
And wretched fools' secrets heedfully o'er-eye.
More sacks to the mill! O heavens! I have my wish:

Enter DUMAINE, with a paper.

Dumaine transform'd: four woodcocks in a dish!
Dum. O most divine Kate!
Beroine. O most profane corxomb!
Dum. By heaven, the wonder of a mortal eye!
Beroine. By earth, she is but corporal; there you lie.
Dum. Her amber hairs for foul have amber quoted.
Beroine. An amber-colour'd raven was well noted.
Dum. As upright as the cedar.
Beroine. Stoop, I say;
Her shoulder is with child.
Dum. As fair as day.
Beroine. Ay, as some days; but then no sun must shine.
Dum. O! that I had my wish.
Long. And I had mine!
King. And I mine too, good Lord!
Beroine. Amen, so I had mine. Is not that a good word?
Dum. I would forget her; but a fever she Reigns in my blood, and will remember'd be.
Beroine. A fever in your blood! why, then incision
Would let her out in saucers: sweet misprision!
Dum. Once more I'll mark how love vary wit.

Beroine. Once more I'll mark how love vary wit.
Dum. On a day, alack the day!
Love, whose month is ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.
Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But alack! my hand is sworn
Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack! for youth unmeet,
Youth so apt to pluck a sweet.
Do not call it sin in me,
That I am forsworn for thee;
Thou for whom even Jove would swear
Juno but an Ethiop were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.

This will I send, and something else more plenteous,
That shall express my true love's fasting pain.
O! would the king, Beroine, and Longaville
Were lovers too. Ill, to example ill.
Would from my forehead wipe a purjer'd note
For none offend where all alike do dote.

Long. Advancing. Dumaine, thy love is from charity,
That in love's grief desir'd society:
You may look pale, but I should blush, I know
To be o'erheard and taken napping so.

King. Advancing. Come, sir, you blush; as your case is such;
You chide at him, offending twice as much.
You do not love Maria; Longaville
Did never sonnet for her sake compile,
Nor never lay his wretched arms athwart
His loving bosom to keep down his heart.
I have been closely shrouded in this bush,
And mark'd you both, and for you both did I
Hear your guilty rimes, observ'd your fash
Saw sighs reek from you, noted well your pass
Ay me! says one; O Jove! the other cries
One, her hairs were gold, crystal the other's.

To LONGAVILLE. You would for paradise, for faith and troth;
To DUMAINE. And Jove, for your love, without
To infringe an oath.
What will Beroine say when that he shall
A faith infringed, which such zeal did swear?
How will he scorn! how will he spend his
How will he triumph, leap, and laugh at it?
For all the wealth that ever I did see,
I would not have him know so much by me.

Beroine. Now stop I forth to whip hypocrisy.

Descends from the heavens:
Ah! good my liege, I pray thee, pardon me.
Good heart! what grace hast thou, thus to reprove me.
These words do warm love; that art most in it.
Your eyes do make no coaches; in your teeth;
There is no certain princess that appears:
You'll not be perjur'd, tis a hateful thing:
Tush! none but minstrels like of someting.
But are you not ashamed? nay, are you not
All three of you, to be thus much o'ershot?
You found his note; the king your note did
But I a beam to find in each of three.
Enter JAQUENETTA and COSTARD.

Jaq. God bless the king!

King. What present hast thou there?

Cost. Some certain treason.

King. What makes treason here?

Cost. Nay, it makes nothing, sir.

King. If it mar nothing neither,

e treason and you go in peace away together.

Jaq. I beseech your grace, let this letter beread:

r person misdoubts it; 'twas treason, he said.

King. Berowne, read it over.

Berno. Gives him the paper.

Costard hadst thou it?

Qg. Of Costard.

King. Where hadst thou it?

Cost. Of Dun Adamadrio, Dun Adamadio.

Berowne tears the letter.

Berno. A toy, my liege, a toy: your grace needs not fear it.

Lyon. It did move him to passion, and therefore let's hear it.

Dunn. Picking up the pieces. It is Berowne's writing, and here is his name.

Berowne. To Costard. Ah! you whoreson loggerhead, you were born to do me shame, filthy, my lord, guilty! I confess, I confess.

King. What!

Berno. That you three fools lack'd me, fool, to make up the mess;

he, and you, and you, my liege, and I,

pick-purses in love, and we deserve to die.

Dismiss this audience, and I shall tell you more.

Dunn. Now the number is even.

Berno. True, true; we are four.

Qf. these turtles be gone?

King. Hence, sirs; away!

Cost. Walk aside the true folk, and let the traitors stay.

Berno. Sweet lords, sweet lovers, O! let us embrace.

As true we are as flesh and blood can be:

The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his face;

Young blood doth not obey an old decree:

We cannot cross the cause why we are born;

Therefore, of all hands must we be forsworn.

King. What! did these rent lines show some love of thine?

Berno. 'Did they?' quoth you. Who sees the heavenly Rosaline,

That, like a rude and savage man of Inde,

At the first opening of the gorgeous east,

Bows not his vassal head, and, stricken blind,

Kisses the base ground with obedient breast?

What peremptory eagle-sighted eye

Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,

That is not blinded by her majesty?

King. What zeal, what fury hath inspir'd thee now?

My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon;

She an attending star, scarce seen a light.

Berno. My eyes are the other eyes, nor I Berowne:

O! but for my love, day would turn to night.

Of all complexions the culd's sovereignty.

Do meet, as at a fair, in her fair check;

Where several worthies make one dignity,

Where nothing wants that want itself doth seek.

Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues.

Fie, painted rhetoric! O! she needs it not:

To things of sale a seller's praise belongs;

She passes praise; then praise too short doth blot.

A witherd' hermit, five-score winters worn,

Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye:

Beauty doth varnish age, as if new-born,

And gives the crutch the craddle's infancy.

O! 'tis the sun that maketh all things shine.

King. By heaven, thy love is black as ebony.

Berno. Is ebony like her? O wood divine!

A wife of such wood were felicity.

O! who can give an oath? where is a book?

That I may swear beauty doth beauty lack,

If that she learn not of her eye to look:

No face is fair that is not full so black.

King. O paradox! Black is the badge of hell,

The hue of dungeons and the scowl of night;

And beauty's crest becomes the heavens well.

Berno. Devils soonest tempt, resembling spirits of light.

O! if in black my lady's brows be deck'd,

It morns that painting and usurping hair

Should ravish doters with a false aspect;

And therefore is she born to make black fair.

Her favour turns the fashion of the days,

For native blood is counted painting now;

And therefore red, that would avoid disgrace,

Paints itself black, to imitate her brow.

Dunn. To look liker her chimney-sweepers black.

Long. And since her time are colliers counted bright.

King. And Ethiops of their sweet complexion crack.

Dunn. Dark needs no candles now, for dark is light.

Berno. Your mistresses dare never come in rain,

For fear their colours should be wash'd away.

King. 'Twere good, yours did; for, sir, to tell you plain,

I'll find a fairer face not wash'd to-day.
A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound,
When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd;
Love's feeling is more soft and sensible
Than are the tender horns of cocked snails:
Love's tongue proves dainty Bacchus gross in taste.
For valour, is not Love a Hercules,
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?
Subtle as Sphinx; as sweet and musical
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair;
And when Love speaks, the voice of all the gods
Make heaven drowsy with the harmony.
Never durst poet touch a pen to write
Until his ink were temper'd with Love's sighs
O! then his lines would ravish savage ears,
And plant in tyrants mild humility.
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They sparkle still the right Promethean fire;
They are the books, the arts, the academies,
That show, contain, and nourish all the world.
Else none at all in aught proves excellent.
Then fools you were these women to forswear
Or, keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools
For wisdom's sake, a word that all men love,
Or for love's sake, a word that loves all men,
Or for men's sake, the authors of these women
Or women's sake, by whom we are men,
Let us once lose our oaths to find ourselves,
Or else we lose ourselves to keep our oaths.
It is religion to be thus forsworn;
For charity itself fulfils the law;
And who can sever love from charity?

King. Saint Cupid, then! and, soldiers, to the field!

Berowne. Advance your standards, and up them, lords!
Pell-mell, down with them! but be first advis'd
In conflict that you get the sun of them.

Long. Now to plain-dealing; lay these glozes
Shall we resolve to woo these girls of France?

King. And win them too: therefore let devise
Some entertainment for them in their tents.

Berowne. First, from the park let us confound them thither;
Then homeward every man attach the band  Of his fair mistress: in the afternoon
We will with some strange pastime solace the Such as the shortness of the time can shape
For revels, dances, marks, and merry hours,
Forewarned love, stirring her way with flowers

King. Away, away! no time shall be omitted
That will be time, and may by us be fitted.

Berowne. Allons! Allons! Sow'd cockle reap no corn;
And justice always whirls in equal measure
Light wench's may prove plagues to men unsworn;
If so, our copper buys no better treasure.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The King of Navarre's Park.

Enter Holofernes, Sir Nathaniel, and Dulcinea.

Hol. Satis quod subicit.
Nath. I praise God for you, sir: your roads at dinner have been sharp and sententious; peaceful without surliness, witty without affectation.
idocious without impudence, learned without union, and strange without heresy. I did averse this quocdam day with a companion the king's, who is intituled, nominated, or called, Don Adriano de Armado.

Hol. "Novi hominem tangam te; his humour is fly, his discourse peremptory, his tongue filed,
"eye ambitious, his gait majestical, and his neral behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thrascal. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected,
'o odd, as it were, too peregrinate, as I may ll it.

Nath. A most singular and choice epithet.

Draws out his table-book.

Hol. He draweth out the thread of his versity finer than the staple of his argument.
abor such fanatical phantasmes, such insociale and point-devise companions; such rackers ography, as to speak dout, fine, when he ould say doubt; det, when he should pro-ence debt,—d, e, b, t, not d, e, t; he cleareth call, cauf; half, hauf; neighbour vocatur bour; neigh abbreviated ne. This is abominiable, which he would call abominable, it inmeth me of insanie: anne intelligis, domine?
make frantic, lunatic.

Nath. Laus Deo, bone intelligo.

Hol. Bone? bone for bene: Priscian a little atched; 'twill serve.

Enter ARMADO, MOTH, and COSTARD.

Nath. Videsne quis venit?

Hol. Vidro, et gaudeo.

Arm. To MOTH. Shirrah!

Hol. Quare chirrah, not sirrah?

Arm. Men of peace, well encountered.

Hol. Most military sir, salutation.

Moth. They have been at a great feast of uages, and stolen the scraps.

Cost. O! they have lived long on the alms-ket of words. I marvel thy master hath not en thee for a word; for thou art not so long ad the head as hominiseptadinitivatus: thou asier swallowed than a flap-dragon.

Moth. Peace! the peal begins.

Arm. To HOLOFERNES. Monsieur, are you not tered?

Moth. Yes, yes, he teaches boys the horn-book.
hat is a, b, spelt backward with the horn on head?

Hol. Ba, pueritia, with a horn added.

Moth. Ba! most silly sheep with a horn. You ar his learning.

Hol. Quis, quis, thou consonant?

Moth. The third of the five vowels, if you et them; or the fifth, if I.

Hol. I will repeat them; a, e, i,—

Moth. The sheep: the other two concludes it;

Arm. Now, by the salt wave of the Medineum, a sweet touch, a quick venew of wit!
, snap, quick and home! it rejoiceth my felt; true wit!

Moth. Offered by a child to an old man;
h is wit-old.

Hol. What is the figure? what is the figure?

Moth. Horns.

Hol. Thou disputest like an infant: go, whip
y gig.

Moth. Lend me your horn to make one, and I will whip about your infancy circumsirca. A gig of a cuckold's horn!

Cost. An I had but one penny in the world, then should 'st have it to buy gingerbread. Hold, there is the very remuneration I had of thy master, thou halfpenny purse of wit, thou pigeon-egg of discretion. O! an the heavens were so pleased that thou wert but my bastard, what a joyful father would'st thou make me. Go to; thou hast it ad dunghill, at the fingers' ends, as they say.

Hol. O! I smell false Latin; dunghill for unguem.

Arm. Arts-man, presaambula: we will be sungled from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth the charge-house on the top of the mountain?

Hol. Or mens, the hill.

Arm. At your sweet pleasure, for the mountain.

Hol. I do, sans question.

Arm. Sir, it is the king's most sweet pleasure and affecion to congratulate the princess at her pavilion in the posteriors of this day, which the rude multitude call the afternoon.

Hol. The posterior of the day, most generous is, liable, congruent, and measurable for the afternoon: the word is well culled, chose, sweet and apt, I do assure you, sir: I do assure.

Arm. Sir, the king is a noble gentleman, and my familiar, I do assure ye, very good friend.
For what is inward between us, let it pass. I do beseech thee, remember thy courtesy; I beseech thee, apparel thy head; and among other importante and most serious designs, and of great import indeed, too, but let that pass; for I must tell thee, it will please his grace, by the world, sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder, and with his royal finger, thus, daily with my excrement, with my mustachio: but, sweet heart, let that pass. By the world, I recount no fable:
some certain special honours it pleaseth his greatness to impart to Armado, a soldier, a man of travel, that hath seen the world: but let that pass. The very all of all is, but, sweet heart, I do implore secrecy, that the king would have me present the princess, sweet chuck, with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antick, or fire-work. Now, understanding that the curate and your sweet self are good at such eructions and sudden breaking out of mirth, as it were, I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crave your assistance.

Hol. Sir, you shall present before her the Nine Worthies. Sir Nathaniel, as concerning some entertainment of time, some shown the posterior of this day, to be rendered by our assistance, at the king's command, and this most gallant, illustrate, and learned gentleman; before the princess, I say, none so fit as to present the Nine Worthies.

Nath. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?

Hol. Joshua, yourself; myself, or this gal-Cgentleman, Judas Maccabaeus; this swain, because of his great limb or joint, shall pass
Pompey the Great; the place, Hercules—

Arm. Pardon, sir; error: he is not quantity enough for that Worthy's thumb: he is not so big as the end of his club.

Hol. Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strangling a snake; and I will have an apology for that purpose.

Moth. An excellent device! so, if any of the audience hiss, you may cry 'Well done, Hercules! now thou crushest the snake!' that is the way to make an offence gracious, though few have the grace to do it.

Arm. For the rest of the Worthies?

Hol. I will play three myself.

Moth. Thrice-worthy gentleman!

Arm. Shall I tell you a thing?

Hol. We attend.

Arm. We will have, if this fadge not, an antick. I beseech you, follow.

Hol. Via, goodman Dull! thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull. Nor understood none neither, sir.

Hol. Allons! we will employ thee.

Dull. I'll make one in a dance, or so; or I will play.

On the tabor to the Worthies, and let them dance the hay.

Hol. Most dull, honest Dull. To our sport, away!

Exeunt.

Scene II. The Same. Before the Princess's Pavilion.

Enter the Princess, Katharine, Rosaline, and Maria.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart.

If fairings come thus plentifully in;
A lady would about with diamonds!
Look you what I have from the loving king.

Rosaline. Madam, came nothing else along with that?

Prin. Nothing but this! yes; as much love in rime
As would be cram'd up in a sheet of paper,
Writ o' both sides the leave, margent and all,
That he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.

Rosaline. That was the way to make his goodhead wax;

For he hath been five thousand years a boy.

Kath. Ay, and a shred unhappy gallow too.

Rosaline. You'll ne'er be friends with him: a kill'd your sister.

Kath. He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy;
And so she died; had she been light, like you, Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit,
She might ha' been a grandam ere she died;

And so may you, for a light heart lives long.

Rosaline. What's your dark meaning, mouse, of this light word?

Kath. A light condition in a beauty dark.

Rosaline. We need more light to find your meaning out.

Kath. You'll mar the light by taking it in snuff;
Therefore I'll darkly end the argument.

Rosaline. Look, what you do, you do it still i' the dark.

Kath. So do not you, for you are a light wench.

Rosaline. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light.

Kath. You weigh me not? O! that's you care not for me.

Rosaline. Great reason; for 'past care is still past care.'

Prin. Well bandied both; a set of wit well play'd.

But, Rosaline, you have a favour too:
Who sent it? and what is it?

Rosal. I would you knew
An if my face were but as fair as yours,
My favour were as great; be witness this.

Nay, I have verses too, I thank Berowne:
The numbers true; and, were the numbering too,
I were the fairest goddess on the ground:
I am compar'd to twenty thousand fairs.

O! he hath draw'd my picture in his letter.

Prin. Any thing like?

Rosal. Much in the letters, nothing in the praise.

Prin. Beautious as ink; a good conclusion.

Kath. Fair as a text B in a copy-book.

Rosal. 'Ware pencils, ho! let me not die ye debtor,

My red dominal, my golden letter:

O! that your face were not so full of O's.

Prin. A pox of that jest! and I beseech you shrows!

But, Katharine, what was sent to you from Sir Du mains?

Kath. Madam, this glove.

Prin. Did he not send you twain?

Kath. Yes, madam; and moreover,

Some thousand verses of a faithful lover;
A huge translation of hypocrisy.

Mar. This, and these pearls to me sent Longville:

The letter is too long by half a mile.

Prin. I think no less. Dost thou not wish heart

The chain were longer and the letter short?

Mar. Ay, or I would these hands might new part.

Prin. We are wise girls to mock our lovers.

Rosaline. They are worse fools to purchase mock ing so.

That same Berowne I'll torture ere I go.
O! that I knew he were but in by the week.

How I would make him fawn, and beg, and serve.
And wait the season, and observe the times,
And spend his prodigal wits in bootless rime,
And shape his service wholly to my hests,
And make him proud to make me proud that jest.

So pertinace-like would I o'ersway his state
That he should be my fool, and I his fate.

Prin. None are so surely caught, when thy are catch'd,

As wit turn'd fool: folly, in wisdom hatch'd.

Hath wisdom's warrant and the help of school;

And wit's own grace to grace a learned fool.

Rosaline. The blood of youth burns not with such excess
As gravity's revolt to wantonness.

Mar. Folly in fools bears not so strong a root As foolery in the wise, when wit doth dote;

Since all the power thereof it doth apply To prove, by wit, worth in simplicity.

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Here comes Boyet, and mirth is in his face.

Boyet. O! I am stabb'd with laughter. Who's her grace?

Prin. Thy news, Boyet?

Boyet. Prepare, madam, prepare!

Arm, wenches, arm! encounters mounted are Against your peace: Love doth approach disguis'd, Edward in arguments; you'll be surpris'd:
unfer your wits; stand in your own defence;
hide your heads like cowards, and fly hence.

Prin. Saint Denis to Saint Cupid! What are they but charge their breath against us? say, scout,
say.

Boyet. Under the cool shade of a sycamore thought to close mine eyes some half an hour, then, lo! to interrupt my purpos'd rest.
award that shade I might behold address his and his companions: warily stole into a neighbour thicket by,
and overheard what you shall overhear;
and, by and by, disguised they will be here.

Heir herald is a pretty knavish page,
that well by heart hath con'd his embassage;
insinuation and accented did they teach him there;
you must then speak, and thus thy body bear:
and ever anon they made a doubt of some majestical would put him out;
for, quoth the king, 'an angel shalt thou see;
et fear not thou, but speak audaciously.'

The boy replied, 'An angel is not evil;
should have fear'd her had she been a devil.'

'In that all laugh'd and clapp'd him on the shoulder,
aking the bold wag by their praises bolder.

One rubb'd his elbow thus, and fleer'd, and swore better speech was never spoke before;
other, with his finger and his thumb,
y'd 'Tis! we will do 't, come what will come;
third he caper'd, and cried, 'All goes well.'
fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell,
that, they all did tumble on the ground,
such a zealous laughter, so profound,
that in this spleen ridiculous appears,
check their folly, passion's solemn tears.

Prin. But what, but what, come they to visit us?

Boyet. They do, they do; and are apparell'd thus, novest Muscovites, or Russians, as I guess.

For their purpose is to parade, to court and dance;
every one his love-feat will advance his several mistress, which they'll know favour several which they did bestow.

Prin. And will they so? the gallants shall be task'd;
and, ladies, we will every one be mask'd,
and not a man of them shall have the grace,
spite of suit, to see a lady's face.

Old, Rosaline, this favour thou shalt wear,
then the king will court thee for his dear:
old, take thou this, my sweet, and give me thine, shall Berowne take me for Rosaline.

change you favours too; so shall your loves no contrary, deceiv'd by these removes.

Ros. Come on then; wear the favours most in sight.

Kath. But in this changing what is your intent?

Prin. The effect of my intent is to cross theirs:
ye do it but in mocking merriment;
mock for mock is only my intent.

several counsels they unbosom shall loves mistook, and so be mock'd within on the next occasion that we meet, with visages display'd, to talk and greet.

Ros. But shall we dance, if they desire us to t't?

Prin. No; to the death, we will not move a

Nor to their penn'd speech render we no grace;
But while 'tis spoke each turn away her face.

Boyet. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart,
And quite divorce his memory from his part.

Prin. Therefore I do it; and I make no doubt
The rest will ne'er come in, if he be out.

There's nosuch sport as sport by sport o'erthrown,
To make theirs ours and ours none but our own:
So shall we stay, mocking intended game,
And they, well mock'd, depart away with shame.

Trumpsounds within.

Boyet. The trumpet sounds: be mask'd; the maskers come.

Enter Blackamoors with music; Moth, the King, Berowne, Longaville, and Dumaine, in Russian habits, and masked.

Moth. All hail, the richest beauties on the earth!
Boyet. Beauties no richer than rich taffeta.

Moth. A holy parcel of the fairest dames;

The Ladies turn their backs to him.

That ever turn'd their—backs—to mortal views!

Berowne. 'Their eyes,' villain, 'their eyes.'

Moth. That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal views!

Out—

Boyet. True; ' out' indeed.

Moth. Out of your favours, heavenly spirits, vouchsafe
Not to behold—

Berowne. 'Once to behold,' rogue.

Moth. Once to behold with your sun-beamed eyes,
— with your sun-beamed eyes—

Boyet. They will not answer to that epithet;
You were best call it 'daughter-beamed eyes.'

Moth. They do not mark me, and that brings me out.

Berowne. Is this your perfectness? be gone, you rogue!

Exit Moth.

Ros. What would these strangers know their minds, Boyet.
If they do speak our language, 'tis our will
That some plain man recount their purposes:
Know what they would.

Boyet. What would you with the princess?

Berowne. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.

Ros. What would they, say they?

Boyet. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.

Ros. Why, that they have; and bid them so be gone.

Boyet. She says, you have it, and you may be gone.

King. Say to her, we have measured many miles
To tread a measure with her on this grass.

Boyet. They say, they have measured many a mile
To tread a measure with you on this grass.

Ros. It is not so. Ask them how many inches
Is in one mile? if they have measured many,
The measure then of one is easily told.

Boyet. If, to come hither, you have measured miles,
And many miles, the princess bids you tell
How many inches do fill up one mile.

Berowne. Tell her we measure them by weary steps.

Boyet. She hears herself.

Ros. How many weary steps,
Of many weary miles you have o'ergone,
Are number'd in the travel of one mile?

Beroivne. We number nothing that we spend for you:

Our duty is so rich, so infinite,

That we may do it still without accord.

Vouchsafe to show the sunshine of your face,

That we, like savages, may worship it.

Ros. My face is but a moon, and clouded too.

King. Blessed are clouds, to do as such clouds do!

Vouchsafe, bright moon, and these thy stars, to shine,

Those clouds remov'd, upon our watery eyes.

Ros. O vain petitioner! beg a greater matter;

Thou now request'st but moonshine in the water.

King. Then, in our measure vouchsafe but one change.

Thou bidd'st me beg; this begging is not strange.

Ros. Play, music; then! nay, you must do it soon.

Music plays. 21

Not yet! no dance! thus change I like the moon.

King. Will you not dance? How come you thus estranged?

Ros. You took the moon at full, but now she's changed.

King. Yet still she is the moon, and I the man.

The music plays; vouchsafe some motion to it.

Ros. Our ears vouchsafe it.

King. But your legs should do it.

Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here by chance,

We'll not be nice: take hands:—we will not dance.

King. Why take we hands then?

Ros. Only to part friends. 22

Court'sy, sweet hearts; and so the measure ends.

King. More measure of this measure: be not nice.

Ros. We can afford no more at such a price.

King. Prize you yourselves? What buys your company?

Ros. Your absence only.

King. That can never be.

Ros. Then cannot we be bought; and so adieu:

Twice to your visor, and half once to you!

King. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.

Ros. In private then.

King. I am best pleas'd with that.

They converse apart.

Beroivne. White-handed mistress, one sweet word with thee.

Prin. Honey, and milk, and sugar; there is three.

Beroivne. Nay then, two treys, an if you grow so nice,

Metheglin, wort, and maltmey: well rum, dice! There's half-a-dozen sweets.

Prin. Seventh sweet, adieu.

Since you can cog, I'll play no more with you.

Beroivne. One word in secret.

Prin. Let it not be sweet.

Beroivne. Thou griev'st my gait.

Prin. Gall! bitter.

Beroivne. Therefore meet.

They converse apart.

Dum. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a word?

Mar. Name it.

Dum. Fair lady,—

Mar. Say you so? Fair lord,

Take that for your fair lady.

Dum. Please it you, sir

As much in private, and I'll bid adieu.

They converse apart.

Kath. What! was your visor made without tongue?

Long. I know the reason, lady, why you ask.

Kath. Oh! for your reason; quickly, sir; I long to have you a double tongue within your mask.

And would afford my speechless visor half.

Kath. 'Veal,' quoth the Dutchman. Is not 'veal' a calf?

Long. A calf, fair lady!

Kath. No, a fair lord calf.

Long. Let's part the word.

Kath. No, 'tis not my half.

Take all, and wean it; it may prove an ox.

Long. Look, how you butt yourself in the sharp mock.

Will you give horns, chaste lady? do not so.

Kath. Then die a calf, before your horns grow.

Long. One word in private with you, ere I do.

Kath. Blest softly then; the butcher hear you cry.

They converse apart.

Boyet. The tongues of mocking wenches are keen

As is the razor's edge invisible,

Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen,

Above the sense of sense; so sensible

Seemeth their conference; their conceits how wings

Fleeter than arrows, bullets, wind, though

Swifter things.

Ros. Not one word more, my maids: break off;

Berowne. By heaven, all dry-beaten with scoff!

King. Farewell, mad wenches: you have simp

Prin. Twenty adieus, my frozen Muscovite

Ere we part, Lords, Music and Attendance.

Are these the breed of wits so wonder'd at?

Boyet. Tapers they are, with your sweet breath

Buff'd out.

Ros. Well-liking wits they have; gross, gross

Fat, fat.

Prin. O poverty in wit, kingly-poor flute!

Will they not, think you, hang themselves night?

Or ever, but in visors, show their faces?

This pert Berowne was out of countenance quite.

Ros. O! they were all in lamentable cases.

The king was weeping-ripe for a good word.

Prin. Berowne did swear himself out of all sense;

Mar. Dumaine was at my service, and his s

'No point,' quoth I; my servant straight was mute.

Kath. Lord Longaville said, I came o'er his heart;

And try you what he call'd me?

Prin. Qualm, perhaps.

Kath. Yes, in good faith.

Prin. Go, sickness as thou art!

Ros. Well, better wits have worn plain state-caps,

But will you hear? the king is my love sworn

Prin. And quick Berowne hath plighted faith to me.
Scene II.

Love's Labour's Lost.

Cath. And Longaville was for my service born.
Mar. Domained mine is, as sure as bark on tree.
Boyet. Madam, and pretty mistresses, give ear. immediately they will again be here a their own shapes; for it can never be they will digest this harsh indignity.
Prin. Will they return?
Boyet. They will, they will, God knows; and leap for joy, though they are lame with blows:
herefore change favours; and when they repair, low like sweet roses in this summer air.
Boyet. Fair ladies, mask'd, are roses in their bud: mask'd, their damask sweet.commodity shown, re angels vailing clouds, or roses blown.
Prin. Avarant, perplexity! What shall we do return in their own shapes to woo?
Ros. Good madam, if by me you'll be advis'd, et's mock them still, as well known as dis guis'd.
et us complain to them what fools were here, disguis'd like Muscovites, in shapeless gear; and wonder what they were, and to what end heir shallow shows and prologue vilely penn'd, and their rough carriage so ridiculous, could be presented at our tent to us.
Boyet. Ladies; withdraw; the gallants are at hand.
Prin. Whip to our tents, as roes run over land.

Excud PRINCESS, ROSALINE, KATHARINE, and MARIA.

Re-enter the PRINCESS, ushered by BOYET; ROSALINE, MARIA, KATHARINE, and ATTENDANTS.

Berowue. See where it comes! Behaviour, what wert thou
Till this man show'd thee? and what art thou now?
King. All hail, sweet madam, and fair time of day!
Prin. 'Fair' in 'all hail' is foul, as I conceive.
King. Construe my speeches better, if you may.
Prin. Then wish me better: I will give you leave.
King. We came to visit you, and purpose now
To lead you to our court: vouchsafe it then.
Prin. This field shall hold me, and so hold your vow:
Nor God, nor I, delights in perjur'd men.
King. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke:
The virtue of your eye must break my oath.
Prin. Your nickname virtue; vice you should have spoke:
For virtue's office never breaks men's truth.
Now, by my maiden honour, yet as pure
As the unsullied lily, I protest,
A world of torments though I should endure,
I would not yield to be your house's guest;
So much I hate a breaking cause to be
Of heavenly oaths, vow'd with integrity.
King. O! you have liv'd in desolation here,
Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame.
Prin. Not so, my lord; 'tis not so, I swear:
We have had pastimes here and pleasant game.
A mess of Russians left us but of late.
King. How, madam! Russians!
Prin. Ay, in truth, my lord;
Trim gallants, full of courtship and of state.
Ros. Madam, speak true. It is not so, my lord:
My lady, to the manner of the days,
In courtesy gives undeserving praise.
We four, indeed, confronted were with four
In Russian habit: here they stay'd an hour,
And talk'd apace; and in that hour, my lord,
They did not bless us with one happy word.
I dare not call them fools; but this I think,
When they are thirsty, fools would fain have drink.
Berowue. This jest is dry to me. Fair gentle sweet,
Your wit makes wise things foolish: when we greet,
With eyes best seeing, heaven's fiery eye,
By light we lose light: your capacity
Is that of nature that to your huge store
Wise things seem foolish and rich things but poor.
Ros. This proves you wise and rich, for in my eye,— Berowue. I am a fool, and full of poverty.
Ros. But that you take what doth to you belong.
It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.
Berowue. O! I am yours, and all that I possess.
Ros. All the fool mine?
Berowue. I cannot give you less.
Ros. Which of the visors was it that you wore?
Berowue. Where? when? what visor? why demand you this?
Ros. There, then, that visor; that superfluous case
That hid the worse and show'd the better face.
King. We are descried: they'll mock us now downright.
Dum. Let us confess, and turn it to a jest.

Prin. Amaz'd, my lord? Why looks your highness sad?

Ros. Help! hold his brows! he'll swoon.
Why look you pale?

Sea-sick, I think, coming from Muscovy.

Berowne. Thus pour the stars down plagues for perjury.
Can any face of brass hold longer out?
Here stand I, lady; dart thy skill at me;
Bruse me with scorn, confound me with a fount;
Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my ignorance;
Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit;
And I will wish thee never more to dance,
Nor never more in Russian habit wait.
O! never will I trust to speeches penn'd,
Nor to the motion of a school-boy's tongue,
Nor never come in visor to my friend,
Nor woo in rime, like a blind harper's song,
Taffeta phrases, silk-en terms precise,
Three-pill'd hyperboles, spruce affectation,
Figures pedantical; these summer-flies
Have blown me full of maggots ostentation:
I do forswear them; and I here protest,
By this white glove,—how white the hand,
God knows,
Henceforth my wooing mind shall be express'd
In russet years and honest kersey noes:
And, to begin, wench,—so God help me, la!—
My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw.

Ros. Sans "sans," I pray you.

Berowne. Yet I have a trick
Of the old rage: bear with me, I am sick;
I'll leave it by degrees. Soft! let us see:
Write 'Lord have mercy on us' on these three;
They are infected, in their hearts it lies;
They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes:
These lords are visited; you are not free,
For the Lord's tokens on you do I see.

Prin. No, they are free that gave these tokens to us.

Berowne. Our states are forfeit: seek not to undo us.

Ros. It is not so. For how can this be true,
That you stand forfeit, being those that sue?

Berowne. Peace! for I will not have to do with you.

Ros. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.

Berowne. Speak for yourselves: my wit is at an end.

King. Teach us, sweet madam, for our rude transgression
Some fair excuse.

Prin. The fairest is confession.

Were you not here, but even now, disguis'd?

King. Madam, I was.

Prin. And were you well advis'd?

King. I was, fair madam.

Prin. When you then were here,

What did you whisper in your lady's ear?

King. That more than all the world I did respect her.

Prin. When she shall challenge this, you will reject her.

King. Upon mine honour, no.

Prin. Peace! peace! forbear:
Your oath once broke, you force not to forswear.

King. Despise me, when I break this oath of mine.

Prin. I will; and therefore keep it. Rosaline,

What did the Russian whisper in your ear?

Ros. Madam, he swore that he did hold me de
As precious eyesight, and did value me
Above this world; adding thereto, moreover,
That he would wed me, or else die my lover.

Prin. God give thee joy of him! the noble lady
Most honourably doth uphold his word.

King. What mean you, madam? I by my life,

I never swore this lady such an oath.

Ros. By heaven, you did; and to confirm plain,
You gave me this: but take it, sir, again.

King. My faith and this the princess I do give:
I knew her by this jewel on her sleeve.

Prin. Pardon me, sir, this jewel did she wear.

And Lord Berowne, I thank him, is my dear.

What, will you have me, or your pearl again?

Berowne. Neither of either; I renit both twa.

I see the trick on't: here was a consent,
Knowing beforehand of our merriment,
To dash it like a Christmas comedy.

Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slip-

Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick,

That smiles his cheek in years, and knows the tr

I have done.

Enter Costard.

Welcome, pure wit! thou part'st a fair fray

Cost. O Lord, sir, they would know,
Whether the three Worthies shall come in on Berowne. What, are there but three?

Cost. No, sir; but it is vara

For every one pursents three.

Berowne. And three times thricethis is n

Cost. Not so, sir; under correction, sir, I it is not so.

You cannot beg us, sir, I can assure you, w
we know what we know:

I hope, sir, three times thricethis, sir,—

Berowne. Is not

Cost. Under correction, sir, we know we until it doth amount.

Berowne. By Jove, I always took three th for nine.

Cost. O Lord, sir! it were pity you should y your living by reckoning, sir.
BEROWNE. How much is it?

Cost. O Lord, sir! the parties themselves, the actors, sir, will show whereunto it doth amount: or mine own part, I am, as they say, but to perfect one man in one poor man, Pompée the great, sir.

BEROWNE. Art thou one of the Worthies?

Cost. It pleased them to think me worthy of prominent the Great; for mine own part, I know not the degree of the Worthy, but I am to stand or him.

BEROWNE. Go, bid them prepare.

Cost. We will turn it finely off, sir; we will take some care.

KING. Berowne, they will shame us; let them not approach.

BEROWNE. We are shame-proof, my lord; and 'tis some policy to have one show worse than the king's and his company.

KING. I say they shall not come.

PRIN. Nay, my good lord, let me o'er-rule you now.

Hat sport best pleases that doth least know how: Where zeal strives to content, and the contents lies in the zeal of that which it presents; their form confounded makes most form in mirth, When great things labouring perish in their birth.

BEROWNE. A right description of our sport, my lord.

Enter ARMADO.

ARM. Anointed, I implore so much expense of my royal sweet breath as will utter a brace of words. ARMADO converses with the KING, and delivers a paper to him.

PRIN. Doth this man serve God?

BEROWNE. Why ask you?

PRIN. He speaks not like a man of God's making.

ARM. That's all one, my fair, sweet, honey monarch; for, I protest, the schoolmaster is ceasing fantastical; too, too vain; too, too thin: but we will put it, as they say, to fortuna la guerra. I wish you the peace of mind, cost royal couplement!

Exit. KING. Here is like to be a good presence of Worthies. He presents Hector of Troy; the vain, Pompée the Great; the parish curate, Alexander; Armado's page, Hercules; the peant, Judas Maccabæus.

If these four Worthies in their first show thrive, these four will change habits, and present the other five.

BEROWNE. There is five in the first show.

KING. You are deceived, 'tis not so.

BEROWNE. The pedant, the braggart, the hedgesmier, the fool, and the boy: hence throw at novum, and the whole world again cannot pick out five such, take each one in his vein.

KING. The ship is under sail, and here she comes again.

Enter COSTARD armed, for Pompée.

COSTARD. You lie, you are not he.

BEROWNE. Well said, old mocker: I must needs be friends with thee.

Cost. I POMPEY am, Pompée surnam'd the Big,—

DUN. The Great.

Cost. It is 'Great,' sir; Pompée surnam'd the Great;

That oft in field, with targe and shield, did make my foe to sweat:

And travelling along this coast, I here am come by chance,

And lay my arms before the legs of this sweet latch of France.

If your ladyship would say, 'Thanks, Pompée,' I had done.

PRIN. Great thanks, great Pompée.

Cost. 'Tis not so much worth; but I hope I was perfect. I made a little fault in 'Great.'

BEROWNE. My hat to a halfpenny, Pompée proves the best Worthy.

Enter SIR NATHANIEL armed, for Alexander.

NATH. When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;

By east, west, north, and south, I spread my conquering might:

My scutcheon plain declares that I am Alisander.—

BOYET. Your nose says, no, you are not; for it stands too right.

BEROWNE. Your nose smells 'no,' in this, most tender-smelling knight.

PRIN. The conqueror is dismay'd. Proceed, good Alexander.

NATH. When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander,—

BOYET. Most true; 'tis right: you were so, Alisander.

BEROWNE. Pompée the Great,—

Cost. Your servant, and Costard.

BEROWNE. Take away the conqueror, take away Alisander.

Cost. To NATHANIEL. O! sir, you have overthrown Alisander the conqueror. You will be scraped out of the painted cloth for this: your lion, that holds his poll-axe sitting on a close-stool, will be given to Ajax: he will be the ninth Worthy. A conqueror, and afraid to speak! run away for shame, Alisander.

NATHANIEL retires.

There, an't shall please you: a foolish mild man; an honest man, look you, and soon dashed! He is a marvellous neighbour, faith, and a very good bowler; but, for Alisander,—alas! you see how 'tis,—a little o'erparted. But there are Worthies a-coming will speak their mind in some other sort.

PRIN. Stand aside, good Pompée.

Enter Holofernes armed, for Judas, and MOTH armed, for Hercules.

HOL. Great Hercules is presented by this imp,

Whose club bedil'd Cerberus, that three-headed canine:
And, when he was a baby, a child, a shrimp,
Thus did he stride serpents in his manus.

Quamvis he seemeth in minority, Ergo I come with this apology.

Keep some state in thy exit, and vanish.

MOTh retires.

JUDAS I AM,—

DUN. A Judas!

HOL. Not Iscariot, sir.

JUDAS I AM, yeaped Maccabæus.
LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Dum. Judas Maccabeus clipt is plain Judas.

Berowne. A kissing traitor. How art thou prov'd Judas?

Hol. Judas I am.—

Dum. The more shame for you, Judas.

Hol. What mean you, sir?

Boyet. To make Judas hang himself.

Hol. Begin, sir: you are my elder.

Berowne. Well follow'd: Judas was hang'd on an elder.

Hol. I will not be put out of countenance.

Berowne. Because thou hast no face.

Hol. What is this?

Boyet. A citizen-head.

Dum. The head of a bodkin.

Berowne. A death's face in a ring.

Long. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce seen.

Boyet. The pommel of Caesar's falchion:

Dum. The carved-bone face on a flask.

Berowne. Saint George's half-check in a brooch.

Dum. Ay, and in a brooch of lead.

Berowne. Ay, and worn in the cap of a tooth-drawer.

And now, forward; for we have put thee in countenance.

Hol. You have put me out of countenance.

Berowne. False: we have given thee faces.

Hol. But you have out-faced them all.

Berowne. An thou wert a lion, we would do so.

Boyet. Therefore, as he is an ass, let him go.

And so adieu, sweet Jude! nay, why dost thou stay?

Dum. For the latter end of his name.

Berowne. For the ass to the Jude? give it him:—

—Jud-as, away!

Hol. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.

Boyet. A light for Monsieur Judas! it grows dark, he may stumble.

HOLOPERNES retires.

Prin. Alas! poor Maccabeus, how hath he been baited.

Enter ARMADO armed, for Hector.

Dum. Though my mocks come home by me.

I will now be merry.

King. Hector was but a Trojan in respect of this.

Boyet. But is this Hector?

King. I think Hector was not so clean-tembered.

Long. His leg is too big for Hector's.

Dum. More calf, certain.

Boyet. No; he is best indned in the small.

Berowne. This cannot be Hector.

Dum. He's a god or a painter; for he makes faces.

Arm. The armipotent Mars, of lances the almyghty,

Gave Hector a gift,—

Dum. A gilt nutmeg.

Berowne. A lemon.

Long. Stuck with cloves.

Dum. No, cloven.

Arm. Peace!

The armipotent Mars, of lances the almyghty,

Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Ilion;

A man so breath'd, that certain he would fight ye,

From morn till night, out of his pavilion.

I am that flower,—

Dum. That columbia.

Arm. Sweet Lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.

Long. I must rather give it the rein, for runs against Hector.

Dum. Ay, and Hector's a greyhound.

Arm. The sweet war-man is dead and rotten sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried when he breathed, he was a man. But I will forward with my device. Sweet royalty, bestow on me the sense of hearing.

Prin. Speak, brave Hector; we are much delighted.

Arm. I do adore thy sweet grace's slipper.

Boyet. Aside to DOMAINE. Loves her by the foot.

Dum. Aside to BOYET. He may not by the yard.

Arm. This Hector for surmounted Hamnilar,—

Cost. The party is gone: fellow Hector, she gone; she is two months on her way.

Arm. What meanest thou?

Cost. Faith, unless you play the honest Troya, the poor wench is cast away: she's quick; this child brags in her belly already: 'tis yours.

Arm. Dost thou inframone me among pote-tates? Thou shalt die.

Cost. Then shall Hector be whipped for Jaquentetta that is quick by him, and hanged! Pompey that is dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey!

Boyet. Renowned Pompey!

Berowne. Greater than great, great, great Pompey! Pompey the Huge!

Dum. Hector trembles.

Berowne. Pompey is moved. More Ates, me Ates! stir them on! stir them on!

Dum. Hector will challenge him.

Berowne. Ay, if a' have no more man's blood in his belly than will sup a flea.

Arm. By the north pole, I do challenge the Cost. I will not fight with a pole, like northern man; I'll slash; I will do by the sword I bepray you, let me borrow my arms again.

Dum. Room for the incensed Worthies!

Cost. I'll do it in my shirt.

Dum. Most resolute Pompey!

Moth. Master, let me take you a button-he lower.

Do you not see Pompey is uncasing for the combat?

What mean you? you will lose your reputation.

Arm. Gentlemen and soldiers, pardon me will not combat in my shirt.

Dum. You may not deny it; Pompey has made the challenge.

Arm. Sweet bloods, I both may and will.

Berowne. What reason have you for 't?

Arm. The naked truth of it is, I have no shi go woolward for penance.

Boyet. True, and it was enjoined him in Rome want of linen; since when, I'll be sworn, was none but a disheult of Jaquenetta's, as she bears in his next heart for a favour.

Enter Monsieur MARCADER, a Messenger.

Mar. God save you, madam.

Prin. Welcome, Marcade,

But that thou interrupt'st our merriment.

Mar. I am sorry, madam; for the news I bring is heavy in my tongue. The king your father-
Prin. Dead, for my life!
Mar. Even so: my tale is told.
Berowne. Worthies, away! The scene begins cloud.

Arm. For mine own part, I breathe free breath.
Have seen the day of wrong through the little de of discretion, and I will right myself like a idler.

Exeunt Worthies.

King. How fares your majesty?
Prin. Boyet, prepare: I will away to-night.

King. Madam, not so; I do beseech you, say.
Prin. Prepare, I say. I thank you, gracious
lords,
or all your fair endeavours; and entreat,
at of a new-sad soul, that you vouchsafe
a your rich wisdom to excuse or hide
the liberal opposition of our spirits, over-boldly we have borne ourselves in the converse of breath; your gentleness as guilty of it. Farewell, worthy lord!
heavy heart bears not a nimble tongue.
xcuse me so, coming too short of thanks or my great suit so easily obtain'd.

King. The extreme parts of time extremely forms
Il causes to the purpose of his speed, nd often, at his very loose, decides hat which long process could not arbitrate:
d though the mourning brow of progeny orbid the smiling courtesy of love he holy suit which fan it would convince et, since love's argument was first on foot, et not the cloud of sorrow justle it rom what it purpos'd; since, to wait friends lost not by much so wholesome-profitable
s to rejoice at friends but newly found.

Prin. I understand you not: my griefs are double.

Berowne. Honest plain words best pierce the ear of grief;
nd by these badges understand the king,
for your sakes have we neglected time, ay'd foul play with our oaths. Your beauty,
ladies,
ath much deform'd us, fashioning our humour ven to the opposed end of our intents;
nd what in us hath seem'd ridiculous,— love is full of unfeiting straits ll wanton as a child, skipping and vain;
ord'd by the eye, and therefore, like the eye,
all of strange shapes, of habits and of forms, arving in subjects, as the eye doth roll
very varied object in his glance:
ich parti-coated presence of loose love
ut on by us, if, in your heavenly eyes, ave misbecom'd our oaths and greatness,
hose heavenly eyes, that look into these faults, aggested us to make. Therefore, ladies, our love being yours, the error that love makes likewise yours: we to ourselves prove false,
y being once false for ever to be true
o those that make us both,—fair ladies, you:
nd even that falsehood, in itself a sin,
us purifies itself and turns to grace.

Prin. We have receiv'd your letters full of
love;
our favours, the ambassadors of love;
nd, in our maiden council, rated them
courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy,
s bombast and as lining to the time.

But more devout than this in our respects
Have we not been; and therefore met your loves
In their own fashion, like a merriment.

Dun. Our letters, madam, show'd much more than jest.
Long. So did our looks.
Ros. We did not quote them so.
King. Now, at the latest minute of the hour,
Grant us your loves.

Prin. A time, methinks, too short
To make a world-without-end bargain in.
No, no, my lord, your grace is perjur'd much,
Full of dear guiltiness; and therefore this:
If for my love, as there is no such cause,
You will do aught, this shall you do for me:
Your oath I will not trust; but go with speed
To some forlorn and naked hermitage,
Remote from all the pleasures of the world;
There stay, until the twelve celestial signs
Have brought about their annual reckoning.
If this austere insociable life
Change not your offer made in heat of blood;
If frosts and fasts, hard lodging and thin weeds,
Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your love,
But that it bear this trial and last love;
Then, at the expiration of the year,
Come challenge me, challenge me by these deserts,
And, by this virgin palm now kissing thine,
I will be thine; and, till that instant, shut
My woeeful self up in a mourning house,
Raining the tears of lamentation
For the remembrance of my father's death.
If this thou do deny, let our hands part;-
Neither entitled in the other's heart.

King. If this, or more than this, I would deny,
To flatter up these powers of mine with rest,
The sudden hand of death close up mine eye!
Hence ever then my heart is in thy breast.

Berowne. And what to me, my love? and what to me?
Ros. You must be purged too, your sins are rack'd:
You are attain'd with faults and perjury;
Therefore, if you my favour mean to get
A twelvemonth shall you spend, and never rest,
But seek the weary beds of people sick.

Dun. But what to me, my love? but what to me?
Kath. A wife? A beard, fair health, and honesty;
With three-fold love I wish you all these three.
Dun. O! shall I say I thank you, gentle wife?
Kath. Not so, my lord. A twelvemonth and a
day
I'll mark no words that smooth-faced wooers say;
Come when the king doth to my lady come;
Then, if I have much love, I'll give you some.
Dun. I'll serve the queen and faithfully till then.
Kath. Yet swear not, lest you be forsworn again.
Long. What says Maria?
Mar. At the twelvemonth's end
I'll change my black gown for a faithful friend.
Long. I'll stay with patience; but the time is long.
Mar. The liker you; few taller are so young.
Berowne. Studies my lady? mistress, look on me.
Behold the window of my heart, mine eye,
What humble suit attends thy answer there;
Impose some service on me for thy love.

Ros. Oft have I heard of you, my lord Berowne,
Before I saw you, and the world's large tongue
Proclaims you for a man replete with mocks;
Full of comparisons and wounding flouts,
Which you on all estates will execute
That lie within the mercy of your wit:
To weed this wormwood from your fruitful brain,
And therewithal to win me, if you please,
Without which the I am not to be won
You shall this twelvemonth term, from day to day,
Visit the speechless sick, and still converse
With groaning wretches; and your task shall be,
With all the fierce endeavour of your wit
To enforce the pain'd impotent to smile.

Biron. To move wild laughter in the throat
Of death?
It cannot be; it is impossible:
Mirth cannot move a soul in agony.

Ros. Why, that's the way to choke a gibing spirit.
Whose influence is begot of that loose grace
Which shallow laughing hearers give to fools.
A jest's prosperity lies in the ear
Of him that hears it, never in the tongue
Of him that makes it: then, if sickly ears,
Deaf'd with the clamours of their own dear groans,
Will hear your idle scorns, continue then,
And I will have you and that fault withal;
But if they will not, throw away that spirit,
And I shall find you empty of that fault,
Right joyful of your reformation.

Biron. A twelvemonth! well, befall what will befall,
I'll jest a twelvemonth in an hospital.

Prin. To the King. Ay, sweet my lord; and so I take my leave.

King. No, madam; we will bring you on your way.

Biron. Our wooing doth not end like an old play;
Jack hath not Jill: these ladies' courtesy
Might well have made our sport a comedy.

King. Come, sir, it wants a twelvemonth and a day,
And then 'twill end.

Biron. That's too long for a play.

Re-enter Armado.

Arm. Sweet majesty, vouchsafe me,—

Prin. Was not that Hector?

Dum. The worthy knight of Troy.

Arm. I will kiss thy royal finger, and take leave. I am a votary; I have vowed to Jaquenetta to hold the plough for her sweet love three years. But, most esteemed greatness, will you hear the dialogue that the two learned men have compiled in praise of the owl and the cuckoo? it should have followed in the end of our show.

King. Call them forth quickly; we will do Arm. Holla! approach.

Re-enter Holofernes, Nathaniel, Moth Costard, and others.

This side is Hicenus, Winter, this Ver, the Spring the one maintained by the owl, the other the cuckoo. Ver, begin.

Spring:

I.

When daisies pied and violets blue
And lady-smocks all silver-white
And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue
Do paint the meadows with delight,
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men; for thus sings he.

Cuckoo;

Cuckoo, cuckoo: O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

II.

When shepherds pipe on oatens straws,
And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks,
When turtles tread, and rooks, and daws,
And maidens bleach their summer smocks
The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men; for thus sings he,

Cuckoo;

Cuckoo, cuckoo: O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

Winter.

III.

When icicles hang by the wall,
And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,
And Tom bears logs into the hall,
And milk comes frozen home in pail,
When blood is nipp'd, and ways be foul,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,

Tu-whit;

Tu-who, a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

IV.

When all alound the wind doth blow,
And coughing draws the parson's saw,
And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marian's nose looks red and raw,
When roasted crabs kiss in the bool,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,

Tu-whit;

Tu-who, a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

Arm. The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo. You, that way: we, this way.

Exeunt.

SCENE.—Athens, and a Wood near it.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Athens. The Palace of Theseus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Philostrate, and Attendants.

The. Now, fair Hippolyta, our nuptial hour draws on apace; four happy days bring in another moon; but, O! methinks, how slow this old moon wanes; she lingers my desires, like to a step-dame or a dowager long withering out a young man's revenue.

Hipp. Four days will quickly steep themselves in night; our nights will quickly dream away the time; and then the moon, like to a silver bow new-bent in heaven, shall behold the night of our solemnities.

The. Go, Philostrate, stir up the Athenian youth to merriments; awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth; turn melancholy forth to funerals; the pale companion is not for our pomp.

Exit Philostrate.

Hippolyta, I woo'd thee with my sword, and won thy love doing thee injuries; but I will wed thee in another key, with pomp, with triumph, and with reveling.

Enter Egeus, Hermia, Lysander, and Demetrius.

Ege. Happy be Theseus, our renowned duke! The. Thanks, good Egeus: what's the news with thee?

Ege. Full of vexation come I, with complaint against my child, my daughter Hermia. Stand forth, Demetrius. My noble lord, this man hath my consent to marry her. Stand forth, Lysander: and, my gracious duke, this man hath bewitch'd the bosom of my child.

Thou, thou, Lysander, thou hast given her rimes, and interchang'd love-tokens with my child; Thou hast by moonlight at her window sung, With feigning voice, verses of feigning love; And stol'n the impression of her fancy With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gawds, conceits, Knacks, trifles, nosegays, sweetmeats, messengers Of strong prevailment in unharden'd youth; With cunning hast thou fill'd my daughter's heart, Turn'd her obedience, which is due to me, To stubborn harshness. And, my gracious duke, Be it so she will not here before your grace Consent to marry with Demetrius, I beg the ancient privilege of Athens, As she is mine, I may dispose of her; Which shall be either to this gentleman, Or to her death, according to our law Immediately provided in that case.

The. What say you, Hermia? be advis'd, fair maid.

To your father should be as a god;
One that compos'd your beauties, yea, and one
To whom you are but as a form in wax
By him imprinted, and within his power
To leave the figure or disfigure it.
Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.

Her. So is Lysander.

The. In himself he is;
But in this kind, wanting your father's voice,
The other must be held the worthier.

Her. I would my father look'd but with my eyes.

The. Rather your eyes must with his judgment look.

Her. I do entreat your grace to pardon me.
I know not by what power I am made bold,
Nor how it may concern my modesty
In such a presence here to plead my thoughts;
But I beseech your grace that I may know
The worst that may befall me in this case,
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

_The._ Either to die the death, or to abjure
For ever the society of men.
Therefore, fair Hermia, question your desires;
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether, if you yield not to your father's choice,
You can endure the livery of a nun.
For are to be in shady cloister mew'd,
To live a barren sister all your life,
Chanting faint hymns to the cold fruitless moon.
Thrice blessed they that master so their blood,
To undergo such maiden pilgrimaje;
But earthlier happy is the rose distill'd,
Than that which withering on the virgin thorn
Grows, lives, and dies, in single blessedness.
_Herm._ So will I grow, so live, so die, my lord,
Ere I will yield my virgin patent up.
Unto his lordship, whose unwished yoke
My soul consents not to give sovereignty.

_The._ Take time to pause; and by the next new moon,
The sealing-day betwixt my love and me
For everlasting bond of fellowship,
Upon that day either prepare to die
For disobedience to your father's will,
Or else to wed Demetrius, as he would;
Or on Diana's altar to protest
For are austerity and single life.

_Dem._ Relent, sweet Hermia; and, Lysander, yield
Thy crazed title to my certain right.

_Lys._ You have her father's love, Demetrius;
Let me have Hermia's: do you marry him.
_Ege._ Scornful Lysander! true, he hath my love,
And what is mine my love shall render him.
And she is mine, and all my right of her
I do estate unto Demetrius.

_Lys._ I am, my lord, as well deriv'd as he,
As well possess'd; my love is more than his;
My fortunes every way as fairly rank'd,
If not with vantage, as Demetrius';
And, which is more than all these boasts can be,
I am belov'd of beauteous Hermia.
Why should not I then prosecute my right?
Demetrius, I'll avouch it to his head,
Made love to Nedar's daughter, Helena,
And won her soul; and she, sweet lady, dotes,
Devoutly dotes, dotes in idolatry,
Upon this spotted and inconstant man.

_The._ I must confess that I have heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought to have spoke thereof;
But, being over-full of self-affairs,
My mind did lose it. But, Demetrius, come;
And come, Egeus; you shall go with me.
I have some private schooling for you both.
For you, fair Hermia, look you arm yourself
To fit your fancies to your father's will,
Or else the law of Athens yields you up,
Which by no means we may extenuate.
To death, or to a vow of single life.
Come, my Hippolyta: what cheer, my love?
Demetrius and Egeus, go along:
I must employ you in some business
Against our nuptial, and confer with you
Of something nearly that concerns yourselves.
_Ege._ With duty and desire we follow you.

_Execut._ THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, EGEUS,
DEMETRIUS, and TRAIN.

_Lys._ How now, my love! Why is your cheek
So pale?
How chance the roses there do fade so fast?
_Herm._ Belike for want of rain, which I could we betoom them from the tempest of mine eyes.
_Lys._ Ay me! for aught that ever I could read,
Could ever hear by tale or history,
The course of true love never did run smooth;
But, either it was different in blood,—
_Herm._ O cross! too high to be enthrall'd to love.
_Lys._ Or else disgraced in respect of ages,—
_Herm._ O spite! too old to be engag'd to you.
_Lys._ Or else it stood upon the choice of friends,
_Herm._ O hell! to choose love by another's eye.
_Lys._ Or, if there were a sympathy in choice,
War, death, or sickness did lay siege to it,
Making it momentary as a sound,
Swift as a shadow, short as any dream,
Brief as the lightning in the collied night:
That, in a spleen, unfolds both heaven and earth,
And ere a man hath power to say 'Behold!'
The jaws of darkness do devour it up:
So quick bright things come to confusion.

_Herm._ If then true lovers have been ever cross,
It stands as an edict in destiny:
Then let us teach our trial patience,
Because it is a customary cross,
As due to love as thoughts and dreams and sighs,
Wishes and tears, poor fancy's followers.

_Lys._ A good persuasion: therefore, hear me.
Hermia.

I have a widow aunt, a dowager
Of great revenue, and she hath no child:
From Athens is her house remote seven league
And she respects me as her only son.
There, gentle Hermia, may I marry thee,
And to that place the sharp Athenian law
Cannot pursue us. If thou lov'st me then,
Steal forth thy father's house to-morrow night
And in the wood, a league without the town,
Where I did meet thee once with Helena,
To do observance to a morn of May,
There will I stay for thee.

_Herm._ My good Lysander,
I swear to thee by Cupid's strongest bow,
By his best arrow with the golden head,
By the simplicity of Venus' doves,
By that which knitteth souls and provers love
And by that fire which burn'd the Cartha queen,
When the false Trojan under sail was seen,
By all the vows that ever men have broke,
In number more than ever women spoke.
In that same place thou hast appointed me,
To-morrow truly will I meet with thee.

_Lys._ Keep promise, love. Look, here com Helena.

_Enter Helena._

_Herm._ God speed fair Helena! Whither away?
_Hel._ Call you me fair? that fair again unsay!
Demetrius loves your fair: O happy fair!
Your eyes are lode-stars, and your tongue
Sweet air
More tuneable than lark to shepherd's ear,
When wheat is green, when hawthorn but appear.
Sickness is catching: O! were favour so,
Yours would I catch, fair Hermia, ere I go;
year should catch your voice, my eye your eye, your tongue should catch your tongue's sweet melody.

ere the world mine, Demetrius being bated, I rest I'd give to be to you translated.

teach me how you look, and with what art to sway the motion of Demetrius' heart.

Her. I frown upon him, yet he loves me still.

Hel. O! that your frowns would teach my smiles such skill.

Hel. I give him curses, yet he gives me love.

Hel. O! that my prayers could such affection move.

Hel. The more I hate, the more he follows me.

Hel. The more I love, the more he hate me.

Her. His folly, Helena, is no fault of mine.

Hel. None, but your beauty: would that fault were mine!

Her. Take comfort: he no more shall see my face; Lysander and myself will fly this place.

fore the time I did Lysander see, em'd Athens as a paradise to me: then, what grace in my love do dwell, at he hath turn'd a heaven unto a hell.

Lys. Helen, to you our minds we will unfold.
morrow night, when Phoebe doth behold a silver visage in the wat'ry glass, sinking with liquid pearl the bladed grass, time that lovers' flights doth still conceal, rough Athens' gates have we devise'd to steal.

Her. And in the wood, where often you and I son faint primrose-beds were wont to lie, up'tying our bosoms of their counsel sweet, ere my Lysander and myself shall meet; thence from Athens turn away our eyes, seek new friends and stranger companies.

ewell, sweet playfellow: pray thou for us; a good luck grant thee thy Demetrius!

word, Lysander: we must starve our sight in lovers' food till morrow deep midnight.

I, will, my Hermia. Exit HERMIA.

Helena, adieu:

you on him, Demetrius dote on you! Exit. Exit.

Hel. How happy some o'er other some can be! rough Athens I am thought as fair as she; t what of that! Demetrius thinks not so; will not know what all but he do know; d as he errs, doting on Hermia's eyes,

I, admiring of his qualities.

ings base and vile, holding no quantity, we can transpose to form and dignity. we look not with the eyes, but with the mind, d therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind. rath Love's mind of any judgment taste; gg and no eyes figure unheedly haste: d therefore is Love said to be a child, nause in choice he is so oft beguiled.

waggish boys in game themselves forsaw, the boy Love is perjur'd every where; ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia's eye, hail'd down oaths that he was only mine; l when this hail some heat from Hermia felt, he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths did melt, ingo tell him of fair Hermia's flight: m to the wood he will to-morrow night sue her; and for this intelligence have thanks, it is a dear expense: herein mean I to enrich my pain, have his sight thither and back again. Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in Quince's House.

Enter QUINCE, SNUG, BOTTOM, FLUTE, SNOUT, and STARVELING.

Quin. Is all our company here?

Bot. You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the scrip.

Quin. Here is the scroll of every man's name, which is thought fit, through all Athens, to play in our interlude before the duke and duchess on his wedding-day at night.

Bot. First, good Peter Quince, say what the play treats on; then read the names of the actors, and so grow to a point.

Quin. Marry, our play is, The most lamentable comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisby.

Bot. A very good piece of work, I assure you, and a merry. Now, good Peter Quince, call forth your actors by the scroll. Masters, spread yourselves.

Quin. Answer as I call you. Nick Bottom, the weaver.

Bot. Ready. Name what part I am for, and proceed.

Quin. You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Pyramus.

Bot. What is Pyramus? a lover, or a tyrant?

Quin. A lover, that kills himself most gallantly for love.

Bot. That will ask some tears in the true performing of it: if I do it, let the audience look to their eyes; I will move storms, I will condole in some measure. To the rest; yet my chief humour is for a tyrant: I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to tear a cat in, to make all split.

The raging rocks
And shivering shocks
Shall break the locks
Of prison gates:
And Phibbus' car
Shall shine from far
And make and mar
The foolish Fates.

This was lofty! Now name the rest of the players. This is Ercles' vein, a tyrant's vein; a lover is more condoling.

Quin. Francis Flute, the bellows-mender.

Flu. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You must take Thisby on you.

Flu. What is Thisby? a wandering knight?

Quin. It is the lady that Pyramus must love.

Flu. Nay, faith, let not me play a woman; I have a beard coming.

Quin. That's all one: you shall play it in a mask, and you may speak as small as you will.

Bot. An I may hide my face, let me play Thisby too. I'll speak in a monstrous little voice, 'Thysic, Thysic,' 'Ah! Pyramus, my lover dear; thy Thisby dear, and lady dear!'

Quin. No, no; you must play Pyramus; and, Flute, you Thisby.

Bot. Well, proceed.

Quin. Robin Starveling, the tailor.

Star. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. Robin Starveling, you must play Thisby's mother. Tom Snout, the tinker.

Snout. Here, Peter Quince.
Quin. You, Pyramus' father; myself, Thisby's father. sung, the joiner, you, the lion's part; and, I hope, here is a play fitted.

Sung. Have you the lion's part written? pray you, if it be, give it me, for I am slow of study.

Quin. You may do it extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let me play the lion too. I will roar, that I will do any man's heart good to hear me; I will roar, that I will make the duke say, 'Let him roar again, let him roar again.'

Quin. An you should do it too terribly, you would fright the duchess and the ladies, that they would shriek; and that were enough to hang us all.

All. That would hang us, every mother's son. 80

Bot. I grant you friends, if that you should fright the ladies out of their wits, they would have no more discretion but to hang us; but I will aggravate my voice so that I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove; I will roar you an 'twere any nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus; for Pyramus is a sweet-faced man; a proper man, as one shall see in a summer's day; a most lovely, gentlemanlike man; therefore you must needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What beard were I best to play it in?

Quin. Why, what you will.

Bot. I will discharge it in either your straw-colour beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, or your French-crown-colour beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French crowns have no hair at all, and then you will play bare-faced.

Bot. But, masters, here are your parts; and I am to entreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to-morrow night, and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the town, by moonlight: there will we rehearse; for if we meet in the city, we shall be dogged with company, and our devices known. In the meantime I will draw a bill of properties, such as our play wants. I pray you, fail me not.

Bot. We will meet; and there we may rehearse most obscenely and courageously. Take pains; be perfect; adieu.

Quin. At the duke's oak we meet.

Bot. Enough; hold, or cut bow-strings.

Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Wood near Athens.

Enter A Fairy and Puck from opposite sides.

Puck. How now, spirit! whither wander you?

Fai. Over hill, over dale,
Thorough bush, thorough brier,
Over park, over pale,
Thorough flood, thorough fire,
I do wander every where,
Swifter than the moone's sphere;
And I serve the fairest queen,
To dew her orbs upon the green:
The cowslips tali her pensioners be;
In their gold coats spots you see;
Those be rubies, fairy favours,
In those freightles live their savours:

I must go seek some dew-drops here,
And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear.
Farewell, thou lob of spirits: I'll be gone;
Our queen and all her elves come here anon.

Puck. The king doth keep his revels here to night.

Take heed the queen come not within his sight.
For Oberon is passing fell and wrath,
Because that she as her attendant hath
A lovely boy, stol'n from an Indian king;
She never had so sweet a changeling;
And jealous Oberon would have the child
Knight of his train, to trace the forests wild:
But she, perfurse, withholds the loved boy, Crown's him with flowers, and makes him a her joy.

And now they never meet in grove, or green,
By fountain clear, or spangled starlight sheen.
But they do square; that all their elves, for fear,
Creep into acorn-cups and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mistake your shape and make it quite,
Or else you are that shrewd and knavish spirit
Call'd Robin Goodfellow: are not you he
That fright the maidens of the villagery
Skim milk, and sometimes labour in the queen
And bootless make the breathless housewife churn;
And sometime make the drink to bear no barn
Mislead night-wanderers, laughing at their barn.
Those that Hobgoblin call you and sweet Puck,
You do their work, and they shall have go luck:

Are not you he?

Puck. Thou speak'st aright; I am that merry wanderer of the night.
I jest to Oberon, and make him smile.
When I a fat and bean-fed horse beguile,
Neighing in likeness of a silly foal;
And sometime lurk I in a gossip's bowl,
In very likeness of a roasted crab;
And when she drinks, against her lips I bob
And on her wether's dewlap pour the ale.
The wisest heart, telling the saddest tale,
Sometime for three-foot stool mistaketh me;
Then slip I from her bum, down topples she,
And 'tainer cries, and falls into a cough;
And then the whole quire hold their hips a laugh,
And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and sneeze
A merrier hour was never wasted there.
But room, fairy! here comes Oberon.

Fai. And here my mistress. Would that were gone!

Enter Oberon from one side, with his Train, a
TITANIA from the other, with hers.

Oberon. Ill met by moonlight, proud Titania.
Titania. What! jealous Oberon. Fairies, s'
hence:
I have forsworn his bed and company.

Oberon. Tarry, rash wanton! am not I thy lord?
Titania. Then I must be thy lady; but I know
When thou hast stol'n away from fairy land,
And in the shape of Corin sat all day,
Playing on pipes of corn, and versing love
To amorous Philida. Why art thou here,
Come from the furthest steppe of India?
But that, forsooth, the bounding Amazon,
Your buskin'd mistress and your warrior low Thesews must be wedded, and you come give their bed joy and prosperity.

Ode. How canst thou thus for shame, Titania, ince at my credit with Hippolyta,
owing I know thy love to Thesews?
For thou not lead him through the gimmerning night
on Perigenia, whom he ravished?
d make him with fair Ege break his faith,
th Ariadne, and Antiopa?

Tita. These are the forgeries of jealousy:
d never, since the middle summer's spring,
t we on hill, in dale, forest, or mead,
paved fountain, or by rushy brook,
in the beached margen of the sea,
dance our ringlets to the whistling wind,
ith thy brawls thou hast disturb'd our sport.
erore the winds, piping to us in pain,
in revenge, have suck'd up from the sea stigious fogs; which falling in the land we every pelting river made so proud,
at they have overborne their continents:
 o ex hath therefore stretch'd his yoke in pain;
ploughman lost his sweat, and the green corn throttled ere his youth attain'd a beard:
old stands empty in the drowned field,
crows are fatted with the murrain flock,
e nine men's morris is fill'd up with mad,
c the quaint mazes in the wanton green
ack of tread are undistinguishable:

human mortals want their winter here:
night is now with hymn or carol blest.
erore the moon, the governor of floods,
e in her anger, washes all the air,
erachnian diseases do abound:
ough this distemperature we see asons alter; hoary-headed frosts in the fresh lap of the crimson rose, on old Hiems' thin and icy crown odorous chaplet of sweet summer buds as in mockery, set. The spring, the summer, childing autumn, angry winter, change or wanted liversies, and the mazed world, their increase, now knows not which is which.
d this same progeny of evils comes on our debate, from our dissension:
s are their parents and original.

Obe. Do you amend it then; it lies in you,
you should Titania cross her Oberon?
but beg a little changeling boy,
be my henchman.

Tita. Set your heart at rest;
fairy land buys not the child of me.
mother was a votress of my order;
d, in the spiced Indian air, by night,
ill often hath she gossip'd by my side,
sat with me on Neptune's yellow sands, cing the embarking traders on the flood;
hen we have laugh'd to see the sails conceive grow big-bellied with the wanton wind;
ilch she, with pretty and with swimming gait, lowing—her womb then rich with my young quire—
uld imitate, and sail upon the land, fetch me trifles, and return again,
from a voyage, rich with merchandise.
t she, being mortal, of that boy did die;
d for her sake do I rear up her boy, d for her sake I will not part with him.

Obe. Howlong within this wood intend you stay?

Tita. Perchance, till after Thesew's wedding-
day.
If you will patiently dance in our round,
And see our moonlight revels, go with us;
If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.

Obe. Give me that boy, and I will go with thee.

Tita. Not for thy fairy kingdom. Fairies, away!

We shall chide downright, if I longer stay.

Exit TITA NIA, WITH her Train.

Obe. Well, go thy way: thou shalt not from this grove
Till I torment thee for this injury.
My gentle Puck, come hither: thou remember'st
Since once I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid on a dolphin's back.
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude sea grew civil at her song,
And certain stars shot madly from their spheres,
To hear the sea-maid's music.

Puck. I remember.

Obe. That very time I saw, but thou couldst not,
Flying between the cold moon and the earth,
Cupid all arm'd: a certain aim he took
At a fair vestal throne'd by the west.
And loos'd his love-shaft smartly from his bow,
As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts;
But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft
Quench'd in the chaste beams of the wat'ry moon,
And the imperial votaress passed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free.
Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell:
It fell upon a little western flower,
Before milk-white, now purple with love's wound,
And maidens call it Love-in-idleness.
Fetch me that flower; the herb I show'd thee
The juice of it on sleeping eyelids laid
Will make or man or woman madly dote
Upon the next live creature that it sees.
Fetch me this herb; and be thou here again
Ere the leviathan can swim a league.
Puck. I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes.

Exit.

Obe. Having once this juice
I'll watch Titania when she is asleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes:
The next thing then she waking looks upon,
Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull,
On meddling monkey, or on busy ape,
She shall pursue it with the soul of love:
And ere I take this charm off from her sight,
As I can take it with another herb,
I'll make her render up her page to me.
But who comes here? I am invisible,
And I will overhear their conference.

Enter DEMETRIUS, HELENA following him.

Dem. I love thee not, therefore pursue me not.
Where is Lysander and fair Hermia?
The one I'll say, the other slyeth me.
Thou told'st me they were stol'n unto this wood;
And here am I, and wood within this wood,
Because I cannot meet my Hermia.
Hence! get thee gone, and follow me no more.

Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted adamant:
But yet you draw not iron, for my heart
Is true as steel: leave you your power to draw,
And I shall have no power to follow you.

Dem. Do I entice you? do I speak you fair?
Or, rather, do I not in plainest truth
Tell you I do not nor I cannot love you?
    Hec. And even for that do I love you the more.
    I am your spaniel; and, Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawn on you:
    Use me but as your spaniel, spurn me, strike me,
    Neglect me, lose me; only give me leave,
    Unworthy as I am, to follow you.
What worser place can I beg in your love,
And yet a place of high respect with me,
    Than to be used as you use your dog?
    Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit,
    For I am sick when I do look on thee.
    Hec. And I am sick when I look not on you.
    Dem. You do impeach your modesty too much,
To leave the city, and commit yourself
Into the hands of one that loves you not;
    To trust the opportunity of night
    And the ill counsel of a desert place
    With the rich worth of your virginity.
    Hec. Your virtue is my privilege: for that
    It is not night when I do see your face,
    Therefore I think I am not in the night;
    Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company,
    For you in my respect are all the world:
Then how can it be said I am alone,
When all the world is here to look on me?
    Dem. I'll run from thee and hide me in the brakes,
    And leave thee to the mercy of wild beasts.
    Hec. The wildest hath not such a heart as you.
Run when you will, the story shall be chang'd;
    Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase;
    The dove pursues the griffin; the mild hind
    Makes speed to catch the tiger: bootless speed,
    When cowardice pursues and valour flies!
    Dem. I will not stay thy questions: let me go;
Or, if thou follow me, do not believe
But I shall do thee mischief in the wood.
    Hec. Ay, in the temple, in the town, the field,
    You do me mischief. Pie, Demetrius! Your wrongs do set a scandal on my sex.
    We cannot fight for love, as men may do.
    We should be woo'd and were not made to woo.
    Exit DEMETRIUS.
I'll follow thee and make a heaven of hell,
    To die upon the hand I love so well.
    Exit. Obe. Fare thee well, nymph: ere he do leave
    this grove,
    Thou shalt fly him, and he shall seek thy love.

Re-enter PUCK.

Hast thou the flower there? Welcome, wanderer.
    Puck. Ay, there it is.
    Obe. I pray thee, give it me.
I know a bank whereon the wild thyme blows,
    Where oxlips and the nodding violet grows,
    Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine,
    With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine;
    There sleeps Titania some time of the night,
    Lull'd in these flowers with dances and delight;
And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin,
    Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in:
    And with the juice of this I'll streak her eyes,
    And make her full of hateful fantasies.
Take thou some of it, and seek through this grove:
    A sweet Athenian lady is in love
    With a disdainful youth: anoint his eyes;
    But do it when the next thing he espies
    May be the lady. Thou shalt know the man
    By the Athenian garments he hath on.
Effect it with some care, that he may prove
    More fond on her than she upon her love.
And look thou meet me ere the first cock crow
    Puck. Fear not, my lord, your servant shall do so.

Scene II.—Another Part of the Wood.

Enter TITANIA, with her Train.

Tita. Come, now a roundel and a fairy song
Then, for the third part of a minute, hence;
    Some to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds,
    Some with rere-mice for their leathern win:
    To make my small elves costs, and some keep be
    The clamorous owl, that nightly hoots a ponder
    At our quaint spirits. Sing me now asleep;
Then to your offices, and let me rest.
    The Fairies sing.

I. You spotted snakes with double tongue,
    Thorny hedge-hogs, be not seen;
    Neats, and blind-worms, do no wrong;
    Come not near our fairy queen.
    Philomel, with melody
    Sing in our sweet lullaby;
    Lulla, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla, lullab
    Never harm,
    Nor spell nor charm,
    Come our lovely lady nigh;
    So, good night, with lullaby.

II. Weaving spiders, come not here;
    Hence, you long-tend'd spinners, hence;
    Beetles black, approach not near;
    Worm nor snail, do no offence.
    Philomel, with melody
    Sing in our sweet lullaby;
    Lulla, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla, lullaby
    Never harm,
    Nor spell nor charm,
    Come our lovely lady nigh;
    So, good night, with lullaby.

A Fairy. Hence, away! now all is well.
    One afool stand sentinel.
    Exeunt Fairies. TITANIA slee

Enter OBERON, and squeezes the flower on TITANIA'S eyelids.
    Obe. What thou seest when thou dost we
    Do it for thy true-love sake;
    Love and languish for his sake;
    Be it ounce, or cat, or bear,
    Pard, or boar with bristled hair,
    In thy eye that shall appear
    When thou wak'st, it is thy dear.
    Wake when some vile thing is near.

Enter LYSANDER and HERMIA.
    Lys. Fair love, you faint with wandering in wood;
And to speak troth, I have forgot our way
    We'll rest us, Hermia, if you think it good,
    And tarry for the comfort of the day.
    Her. Be it so, Lysander; find you out a be
    For I upon this bank will rest my head.
Enter Puck.

Puck. Through the forest have I gone,
But Athenian found I none,
On whose eyes I might approve
This flower's force in stirring love.
Night and silence! Who is here?
Weeds of Athens he doth wear:
This is he, my master said,
Despised the Athenian maid;
And here the maiden, sleeping sound,
On the dank and dirty ground.
Pretty soul! she durst not lie
Near this lack-love, this kill-courtly.
Churl, upon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charm doth owe.
When thou wak'st, let love forbid
Sleep his sent on thy eyelid:
So awake when I am gone;
For I must now to Oberon.
Exit.

Enter Demetrius and Hermia, running.

Hel. Stay, though thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.

Dem. I charge thee, hence, and do not haunt me thus.

Hel. O! wilt thou darkling leave me? do not so.

He more my prayer, the lesser is my grace.
Appy is Hermia, wheresoe'er she lies;
or she hath blessed and attractive eyes.
Ow came her eyes so bright? Not with salt tears:
So, my eyes are often wsh'd than hers.
O, no, I am as ugly as a bear;
or beasts that meet me run away for fear;
herefore no marvel though Demetrius
O, as a monster, fly my presence thus.
That wicked and dissembling glass of mine
ade me compare with Hermia's spery eye?
at who is here! Lysander! on the ground! end? or asleep? I see no blood, no wound.

Lysander, if you live, good sir, awake.

Lys. Awaking. And run through fire I will for thy sweet sake.

Transparent Helena! Nature shows art.

That through thy bosom makes me see thy heart.
Where is Demetrius? O! how fit a word
Is that vile name to perish on my sword.

Hel. Do not say so, Lysander; say not so.

What though he love your Hermia? Lord! what though?

Yet Hermia still loves you: then be content.

Lys. Content with Hermia! No: I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her have spent.

Not Hermia, but Helena I love:
Who will not change a raven for a dove?

The will of man is by his reason sway'd.

And reason says you are the worthier maid.

Things growing are not ripe until their season;
So I, being young, till now ripe not to reason;
And touching now the point of human skill,
Reason becomes the marshal to my will,
And leads me to your eyes; where I o'erlook
Love's stories written in love's richest book.

Hel. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?
When at your hands did I deserve this scorn?
Is 't not enough, 'tis not enough, young man,
That I did never, no, nor never can,
Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius' eye,
But you must flout my insufficiency?

Good troth, you do me wrong, good sooth, you do,
In such disdainful manner me to woo.

But fare you well: perforce I must confess
I thought you lord of more true gentleness.

O! that a lady of one man refus'd,
Should of another therefore be abus'd. Exit.

Lys. She sees not Hermia. Hermia, sleep thou there;
And never may 'st thou come Lysander near.

For, as a surfeit of the sweetest things
The deepest loathing to the stomach brings;
Or as the heresies that men do leave
Are hated most of those they did deceive:
So thou, my surfeit and my heresy,
Of all be hated, but the most of me!

And, all my powers, address your love and might
To honour Helen, and to be her knight. Exit.

Hel. Awaking. Help me, Lysander, help me!
do thy best
To pluck this crawling serpent from my breast.

Ay me, for pity! what a dream was here!

Lysander, look how I do quake with fear:
Methought a serpent eat my heart away,
And you sat smilling at his cruel prey.

Lysander! what! remov'd? Lysander! lord! What! out of hearing! gone! no sound, no word? Alack! where are you? speak, an if you hear:
Speak, of all loves! I swoon almost with fear.
No! then I well perceive you are not nigh:
Either death or you I'll find immediately. Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Wood. Titania lying asleep.

Enter Quince, Snug, Bottom, Flute, Snout, and Starveling.

Bot. Are we all met?

Quin. Pat, pat; and here's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal. This green plot shall be our stage, this hawthorn-brake our tiring-house; and we will do it in action as we will do it before the duke.

Bot. Peter Quince,—

Quin. What sayest thou, bully Bottom?

Bot. There are things in this comedy of Pyramus and Thisby that will never please. First, Pyramus must draw a sword to kill himself, which the ladies cannot abide. How answer you that?

Snout. By 'r lakin, a parlous fear.

Star. I believe we must leave the killing out, when all is done.

Bot. Not a whit: I have a device to make all well. Write me a prologue; and let the prologue seem to say, we will do no harm with our swords, and that Pyramus is not killed indeed; and, for the more better assurance, tell them, that I, Pyramus, am not Pyramus, but Bottom the weaver: this will put them out of fear.

Quin. Well, we will have such a prologue, and it shall be written in eight and six.

Bot. No, make it two more: let it be written in eight and eight.

Snout. Will not the ladies be afraid of the lion?

Star. I fear it, I promise you.

Bot. Masters, you ought to consider with yourselves: to bring in, God shield us! a lion among ladies, is a most dreadful thing; for there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lion living, and we ought to look to it.

Snout. Therefore, another prologue must tell he is not a lion.

Bot. Nay, you must name his name, and half his face must be seen through the lion's neck; and he himself must speak through, saying thus, or to the same defect: 'Ladies,' or 'Fair ladies, I would wish you,' or, 'I would request you,' or, 'I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a lion, it were p'ly of my life: no, I am no such thing: I am an man as other men are'; and there indeed let him name his name, and tell them plainly he is Smug the joiner.

Quin. Well, it shall be so. But there are two hard things: that is, to bring the moonlight into a chamber; for you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by moonlight.

Snug. Both the moon shine that night we play our play?

Bot. A calendar, a calendar! look in the almanac; find out moonshine, find out moonshine.

Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bot. Why, then you may leave a casement of the great chamber-window, where we play, open; and the moon may shine in at the casement.

Quin. Ay; or else one must come in with a bush of thorns and a lanthorn, and say he comes to disfigure, or to present, the person of Moonshine. Then, there is another thing: we must have a wall in the great chamber; for Pyramus and Thisby, says the story, did talk through the chink of a wall.

Snug. You can never bring in a wall. What say you, Bottom?

Bot. Some man or other must present Wall; and let him have some plaster, or some loam, or some rough-cast about him, to signify wall; and let him hold his fingers thus, and through that cranny shall Pyramus and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit down, every mother's son, and rehearse you parts. Pyramus, you begin: when you have spoken your speech, enter into that brake; and so every one according to his cue.

Enter Puck behind.

Puck. What, what a play now? is it not a play?—As true as truest horse that ever would never tire.

Bot. If I were fair, Thisby, I were only thine.

Quin. 'Ninus' tomb,' man. Why, you must not speak that yet; that you answer to Pyramus. You speak all your part at once, cues and all. Pyramus, enter: your cue is past; it is 'never tire.'

Re-enter Puck, and Bottom with an ass's head.

Plute. O!—As true as truest horse, that ye would never tire.

Bot. If I were fair, Thisby, I were only thine.

Quin. O monstrous! O strange! we are haunted.

Plute. Masters! fly, masters! help!

Bot. Why do they run away? this is a knave of them to make us afraid.

Re-enter Snout.

Snout. O Bottom, thou art changed! what do I see on thee?

Bot. What do you see? you see an ass-head of your own, do you?

Re-enter Quince.

Quin. Bless thee, Bottom! bless thee! the art translated.

Bot. I see their knavery: this is to make a ass of me; to fright me, if they could. But will not stir from this place, do what they say I will walk up and down here, and I will sit that they shall hear I am not afraid.
A MIDSUMMER-NIGHT’S DREAM.

Bot. I pray you, commend me to Mistress Squash, your mother, and to Master Peascod, your father. Good Master Pease-blossom, I shall desire you of more acquaintance too. Your name, I beseech you, sir?

Mus. Mustard-seed.

Bot. Good Master Mustard-seed, I know your patience well; that same cowardly, giant-like oxbeef hath devoured many a gentleman of your house. I promise you your kindred hath made eyes water ere now. I desire your more acquaintance, good Master Mustard-seed.

Tita. Come, wait upon him; lead him to my bowers: The moon and hawks looks with a watery eye; And when she weeps, weeps every little flower, Lamenting some enforced chastity.

Tie up my love’s tongue, bring him silently.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Wood.

Enter Oberon.

Ober. I wonder if Titania be awak’d; Then, what it was that next came in her eye, Which she must dote on in extremity.

Enter Puck.

Herecomes my messenger. How now, mad spirit! What night-rule now about this haunted grove?

Puck. My mistress with a monster is in love. Near to her close and consecrated bower, While she was in her dull and sleeping hour, A crew of patches, rude mechanicals, That work for bread upon Athenian stalls,

Were met together to rehearse a play

Intended for great Theseus’ nuptial day.

The shallowest thick-skin of that barren sort, Who Pyramus presented in their sport, Forsook his scene, and entered in a brake, When I did him at this advantage take; An ass’s nowl I fixed on his head; Anon his Thysbe must be answered, And forth my mimic comes. When they him spy, As wild geese that the creeping Fowler eye, Or russet-pated stoups, many in sort, Rising and cawing at the gun’s report, Sever themselves, and madly sweep the sky; So, at his sight, away his fellows fly, And, at our stamp, here o’er and o’er one falls; He murder cries, and help from Athens calls.

Their sense thus weak, lost with their fears thus strong,

Made senseless things begin to do them wrong; For briers and thorns at their apparel scratch; Some sleeves, some hats, from Yielders all things catch.

I led them on in this distracted fear,
And left sweet Pyramus translated there; When in that moment, so it came to pass, Titania wak’d and straightway lov’d an ass.

Ober. This falls out better than I could devise. But hast thou yet hatch’d the Athenian’s eyes With the love-juice, as I did bid thee do?

Puck. I took him sleeping, that is finish’d too, And the Athenian woman by his side; That, when he wak’d, of force he must be eyed.

Enter Demetrius and Hermia.

Ober. Stand close: this is the same Athenian. Puck. This is the woman; but not this the man.
Dem. O! why rebuke you him that loves you so? Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.

Her. Now I but chide; but I should use thee worse,
For thou, I fear, hast given me case to curse.
If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep,
Being o'er shoes in blood, plunge in the deep,
And kill me too.

The sun was not so true unto the day
As he to me. Would he had stol'n away
From sleeping Hermia? I'll believe as soon
This whole earth may be bor'd, and that the moon
May through the centre creep, and so displease
Her brother's noontide with the Antipodes.

It cannot be but thou hast murder'd him;
So should a murderer look, so dead, so grim.

Dem. So should the murder'd look, and so should I,
Pier'd through the heart with your stern cruelty;
Yet you, the murderer, look as bright, as clear,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering sphere.

Her. What's this to my Lysander? where is he?
Ah! good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me?

Dem. I had rather give his carcass to my hounds.

Her. Out, dog! out, cur! thou driv'st me past the bounds
Of maiden's patience. Hast thou slain him then?
Henceforth be never number'd among men! O!
one tell true, tell true, e'en for my sake;
Durst thou have look'd upon him when he was awake,
And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brave touch!
Could not a worm, an adder, do so much?
An adder did it; for with doubler tongue
Than thine, thou serpent, never adder stung.

Dem. You spend your passion on a mispris'd mood:
I am not guilty of Lysander's blood,
Nor is he dead, for naught that I can tell.

Her. I pray thee, tell me then that he is well.

Dem. An if I could, what should I get therefore?

Her. A privilege never to see me more.

And from thy hated presence part I so;
See me no more, whether he be dead or not.

Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vein
Here therefore for a while I will remain.
So sorrow's heaviness doth heavier grow
For debt that bankrupt sleep doth sorrow owe;
Which now in some slight measure it will pay,
If for his tender here I make some stay.

Lies down and sleeps.

Obe. What hast thou done? thou hast mistak'n quite,
And laid the love-juice on some true-love's sight:
Of thy misprision must perforse ensue
Some true love turn'd, and not a false turn'd true.

Puck. Then fate o'er-rules, that one man holding troth,
A million fail, confounding oath on oath.

Obe. About the wood go swifter than the wind,
And Helen of Athens look thou find:
All fancy-sick she is, and pale of cheer
With sighs of love, that cost the fresh blood dear.
By some illusion see thou bring her here:
I'll charm his eyes against she do appear.

Puck. I go, I go; look how I go;
Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow.

Obe. Flower of this purple dye,
Hit with Cupid's archery,
Sink in apple of his eye.
When his love he doth espy,
Let her shine as gloriously
As the Venus of the sky.
When thou wak'st, if she be by,
Beg of her for remedy.

Re-enter Puck.

Puck. Captain of our fairy band,
Helena is here at hand,
And the youth, mistook by me,
Pleading for a lover's fee.
Shall we their fond pageant see?
Lord, what fools these mortals be!

Obe. Stand aside: the noise they make
Will cause Demetrius to awake.

Puck. Then will two at once woe one;
That must needs be sport alone;
And those things do best please me
That befall preposterously.

Enter Lysander and Helena.

Lys. Why should you think that I should weep in scorn?
Scorn and derision never come in tears:
Look, when I vow, I weep; and vows so born,
In their nativity all truth appears.
How can these things in me seem scorn to you
Bearing the badge of faith to prove them true
Hel. You do advance your cunning more and more,
When truth kills truth, O devilish-loy ly fray!
These vows are Hermia's: will you give her o'er?

Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh:
Your vows, to her and me, put in two scales,
Will even weigh, and both as light as tales.
Lys. I had no judgment when to her I swor
Hel. Nor none, in my mind, now you give her o'er.

Lys. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not you.

Dem. Arising. O Helen! goddess, nymph,
Perfect, divine!
To what, my love, shall I compare thine eye?
Crystal is muddy. O! how rife in show
Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow
That pure congealed white, high Taurus' snow
Fann'd with the eastern wind, turns to a crow
When thou hol'd'st up thy hand. O! let me kiss
This princess of pure white, this seal of bliss.

Hel. O spite! O hell! I see you all are bent
To set against me for your merriment:
If you were civil and knew courtesy,
You would not do me thus much injury.
Can you not hate me, as I know you do,
But you must join in souls to mock me too?
If you were men, as men you are in show,
You would not use a gentle lady so:
To vow, and swear, and superlative my parts.
When I am sure you hate me with your hearts,
You both are rivals, and love Hermia,
And now both rivals, to mock Helena.
A trim exploit, a manly enterprise.
To conjure tears up in a poor maid's eyes
With your derision! none of noble sort
Would so offend a virgin, and extort
A poor soul's patience, all to make you sport.

Lys. You are unkind, Demetrius; be not so
For you love Hermia; this you know I know.
And here, with all good will, with all my heart,
In Hermia's love I yield you up my part;
And yours of Helena to me bequeath,
Whom I do love, and will do till my death.

Her. Never did mockers waste more idle breath.

Dem. Lysander, keep thy Hermia; I will none:
If e'er I lov'd her, all that love is gone.

My heart to her but as guest-wise sojourn'd,
And now to Helen is it home return'd,
There to remain.

Lys. Helen, it is not so.

Dem. Disparage not the faith thou dost not know,
Lest to thy peril thou aby it dear.
Look! where thy love comes: yonder is thy dear.

Re-enter Hermia.

Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes,
The ear more quick of apprehension makes;
Wherein it doth impair the seeing sense,
It pays the hearing double recompense.

Thou art not by mine eye, Lysander, found;
Mine ear can't thank it, brought me to thy sound.

But why unkindly didst thou leave me so?

Lys. Why should he stay, whom love doth press to go?

Her. What love could press Lysander from my side?

Lys. Lysander's love, that would not let him bide,
Fair Helena, who more engilds the night
Than all you fiery oes and eyes of light.

Why seek'st thou me? could not this make thee know,
The hate I bear thee made me leave thee so?

Her. You speak not as you think: it cannot be.

Lys. Lo! she is one of this confederacy.

Her. O, I perceive they have conjur'd all three to fashion this false sport in spite of me.

Lys. Injuries Hermia! most ungrateful maid!

Her. Give you conspir'd, have you with these contriv'd to bait me with this foul derision?

Lys. All the counsel that we two have shar'd, the sisters' vows, the hours that we have spent, when we have chid the hasty-footed time for parting us, O! is it all forgot?

All school-days' friendship, childhood innocence?
We, Hermia, like two artificial gods,
Have with our needles created both one flower,
Both on one sampler, sitting on one cushion,
Both warbling of one song, both in one key,
As if our hands, our sides, voices, and minds,
And been incorporate. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted,
But yet an union in partition:

Two lovely berries moulded on one stem;

so, with two seeming bodies, but one heart;

Two of the first, like coats in heraldry,
One but to one, and crowned with one crest.

And will you rend our ancient love asunder,
To join with men in scorning your poor friend?

Lys. Is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly:

Our sex, as well as I, may chide you for it,
Though I alone do feel the injury.

Her. I am amazed at your passionate words.

Lys. Have you not set Lysander, as in scorn,
'to follow me and praise my eyes and face,
And made your other love, Demetrius,

Who even but now did spurn me with his foot,
To call me goddess, nymph, divine, and rare,
Precious, celestial? Wherefore speaks he this
To her he hates? and wherefore doth Lysander

Deny your love, so rich within his soul,
And tender me, forsooth, affection,

But by your setting on, by your consent?

What though I be not so in grace as you,
So hung upon love, so fortunate,

But miserable most to love unlov'd,

This you should pity rather than despise.

Her. I understand not what you mean by this.

Lys. Ay, do, persever, counterfeit sad looks,
Make mouths upon me when I turn my back;

Wink each at other; hold the sweet jest up:

This sport, well carried, shall be chronicled.

If you have any pity, grace, or manners,
You would not make me such an argument.

But, fare ye well: 'tis partly my own fault,
Which death or absence soon shall remedy.

Lys. Stay, gentle Hermia! hear my excuse:

My love, my life, my soul, fair Hermia!

Lys. O excellent!

Her. Sweet, do not scorn her so.

Dem. If she cannot entertain, I can compel.

Lys. Thou canst compel no more than she entreat:

Thy threats have no more strength than her weak prayers.

Helen, I love thee; by my life, I do:

I swear by that which I will lose for thee,
To prove him false that says I love thee not.

Dem. I say I love thee more than he can do.

Lys. If thou say so, withdraw, and prove it too.

Dem. Quick, come!

Lys. Lysander, whereto tends all this?

Lys. Away, you Ethiop!

Dem. No, no, he'll...

Seem to break loose; take on as you would follow,
But yet come not: you are a tame man, go!

Hang off, thou cat, thou bair! vile thing, let loose.

Or I will shake thee from me like a serpent.

Her. Why are you grown so rude! what change is this?

Sweet love,—

Lys. Thy love! out, tawny Tartar, out! Out, loath'd medicine! hated potion, hence!

Her. Do you not jest?

Lys. Yes, so, and so do you.

Lys. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.

Dem. I would I had your bond, for I perceive

A weak bond holds you: I'll not trust your word.

Lys. What! should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead?

Although I hate her, I'll not harm her so.

Lys. What! can you do me greater harm than hate?

Hate me! wherefore? Ome! what news, my love?

Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lysander?

I am as fair now as I was erewhile.

Since night you lov'd me; yet since night you left me:

Why, then you left me—O, the gods forbid!—

In earnest, shall I say?

Lys. Ay, by my life;

And never did desire to see thee more.

Therefore, be out of hope, of question, of doubt;

Be certain, nothing truer: 'tis no jest,

That I do hate thee and love Helena.

SCENE II.]
Her. O me! you juggler! you canker-blossom! You Thief of love! what! have you come by night And stol’n my love’s heart from him?

Hel. Fine, i’ faith!

Have you no modesty, no maiden shame,
No touch of bashfulness? What! will you tear
Impatient answers from my gentle tongue?
Fie! fie! you counterfeet, you puppet you!

Her. Puppet! why so? Ay, that way goes the game.

Now I perceive that she hath made compare 250 Between our statures: she hath urg’d her height; And with her personage, her tall personage, Her height, forsooth, she hath prevail’d with him. And are you grown so high in his esteem, Because I am so dwarfish and so low?

How low am I, thou painted maypole! speak; How low am I! I am not yet so low
But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.

Hel. I pray you, though you mock me, gentlemen,
Let her not hurt me: I was never curst; 300 I have no gift at all in shrewishness;
I am a right maid for my cowardice:
Let her not strike me. You perhaps may think,
Because she is something lower than myself,
That I can match her.

Her. Lower! hark, again.

Hel. Good Hermia, do not be so bitter with me.
I evermore did love you, Hermia,
Did ever keep your counsels, never wrong’d you;
Save that, in love unto Demetrius,
I told him of your stealth unto this wood. 350 He follow’d you; for love I follow’d him;
But he hath chid me hence, and threaten’d me
To strike me, spurn me, nay, to kill me too:
And now, so you will let me quiet go,
To Athens will I bear my folly back,
And follow you no further: let me go:
You see how simple and how fond I am.

Her. Why, get you gone. Who is’t that hinders you?

Hel. A foolish heart, that I leave here behind,
Her. What! with Lysander?

Hel. With Demetrius. 329
Lys. Be not afraid; she shall not harm thee, Helena.

Dem. No, sir; she shall not, though you take her part.

Hel. O! when she’s angry, she is keen and shrewd.
She was a vixen when she went to school;
And though she be but little, she is fierce.

Her. ‘Little’ again! nothing but ‘low’ and ‘little’!

Why will you suffer her to float me thus?
Let me come to her.

Lys. Get you gone, you dwarf;
You minimus, of hindering knot-grass made;
You bezal, you acorn.

Dem. You are too officious 380
In her behalf that scorns your services.
Let her alone; speak not of Helena;
Take not her part, for if thou dost intend
Never so little show of love to her,
Thou shalt aby it.

Lys. Now she holds me not;
Now follow, if thou darst, to try whose right,
Of thine or mine, is most in Helena.

Dem. Follow! nay, I’ll go with thee, check by jole.

Exeunt LYSANDER and DEMETRIUS.

Hel. You, mistress, all this coil is long of you:
Nay, go not back.

Her. I will not trust you, I, 340
Nor longer stay in your curst company.
Your hands than mine are quicker for a fray,
My legs are longer though, to run away.  Exit.

Her. I am amaz’d, and know not what to say.  Exit.

Obe. This is thy negligence: still thou mustak’s t,
Or else commit’s th thy knaverys wilfully.

Puck. Believe me, king of shadows, I mistook.
Did not you tell me I should know the man
By the Athenian garments he had on?
And so far blameless proves my enterprise,
That I have ‘pointed an Athenian’s eyes;
And so far am I glad it so did sort.
As this their jangling I esteem a sport.

Obe. Thou seest these lovers seek a place to fight:
He therefore, Robin, overcast the night;
The starry wekin cover thou anon
With drooping fog as black as Acheron;
And lead these testy rivals so astray,
As one come not within another’s way.
Like to Lysander sometime frame thy tongue,
Then stir Demetrius up with bitter wrong;
And sometime call thou like Demetrius;
And from each other look thou lead them thus,
Till o’er their bows death-counterfeiting sleep
With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep:
Then crush this herb into Lysander’s eye;
Whose liquor hath this virtuous property,
To take from thence all error with his might,
And make his eyeballs roll with wond’ed sight.
When they next wake, all this derision 370
Shall seem a dream and fruitless vision;
And back to Athens shall the lovers wend,
With league whose date till death shall never end.
While I in this affair do thee employ,
I’ll to my queen and beg her Indian boy;
And then I will her charmed eye release
From monster’s view, and all things shall be peace.

Puck. My fairy lord, this must be done with haste,
For night’s swift dragons cut the clouds full fast,
And yonder shines Aurora’s harbinger; 380
At whose approach, ghosts, wandering here and there,
Troop home to churchyards: damned spirits all,
That in crossways and floods have burial,
Already to their wormy beds are gone;
For fear lest day should look their shames upon,
They wilfully themselves exile from light,
And must foray consort with black-brow’d night.

Obe. But we are spirits of another sort.
I with the morning’s love have oft made sport;
And, like a forester, the groves may tread,
Even till the eastern gate, all fiery-red,
Opening on Neptune with fair blessed beams,
Turns into yellow gold his salt green streams.
But, notwithstanding, haste; make no delay:
We may effect this business yet ere day.  Exit.

Puck. Up and down, up and down;
I will lead them up and down:
I am fear’d in field and town;
Goblin, lead them up and down.

Here comes one.

Re-enter LYSANDER.

Lys. Where art thou, proud Demetrius? speak thou now.
Scene I.—A Wood.

LYSANDER, DEMETRIUS, HELENA AND HERMIA lying asleep. Enter TITANIA and BOTTOM. Fairies attending. OBERON behind unseen.

TITA. Come, sit thee down upon this flowery bed, While I thy amiable cheeks do coy, And stick musk-roses in thy sleek smooth head, And kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy.

BOT. Where's Pease-blossom?

PEASE. Ready.

BOT. Scratch my head, Pease-blossom. Where's Mounsieur Cobweb?

COB. Ready.

BOT. Mounsieur Cobweb, good mounsieur, get you your weapons in your hand, and kill me a red-hipped humble-bee on the top of a thistle; and, good mounsieur, bring me the honey-bag. Do not fret yourself too much in the action, mounsieur; and, good mounsieur, have a care the honey-bag break not: I would be loath to have you overflown with a honey-bag, signior. Where's Mounsieur Mustard-seed?

MUST. Ready.

BOT. Give me your neif, Mounsieur Mustard-seed. Pray you, leave your courtesy, good mounsieur.

MUST. What's your will?

BOT. Nothing, good mounsieur, but to help Cavalery Cobweb to scratch. I must to the barber's, mounsieur; for methinks I am marvellous hairy about the face; and I am such a tender ass, if my hair do but tickle me, I must scratch.

TITA. What, wilt thou hear some music, my sweet love?

BOT. I have a reasonable good ear in music; let's have the tongs and the bones.

TITA. Or say, sweet love, what thou desir'st to eat.

BOT. Truly, a peck of provender: I could munch your good dry oats. Methinks I have a great desire to a bottle of hay; good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow.

TITA. I have a venturous fairy that shall seek The squirrel's hoard, and fetch thee new nuts.
We the globe can compass soon,
Swifter than the wandering moon.

Tita. Come, my lord; and in our flight
Tell me how it came this night
That I sleeping here was found
With these mortals on the ground.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Now, when thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes peep.

Obe. Sound, music! Come, my queen, take hands with me,
And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be.
Now thou and I are new in amity,
And will to-morrow midnight solemnly
Dance in Duke Theseus' house triumphantly,
And bless it to all fair prosperity:
There shall the pairs of faithful lovers be
Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.

Puck. Fairy king, attend, and mark;
I do hear the morning lark.

Obe. Then, my queen, in silence sad.
Trip we after the night's shade;

Bot. I had rather have a handful or two of dried pease. But, I pray you, let none of your people stir me: I have an exposition of sleep come upon me.

Tita. Sleep thou, and I will wind thee in my arms.
Fairies, be gone, and be all ways away.

Exit Fairies.

So doth the woodbine the sweet honey-suckle
Gently entwist; the female ivy so
Enrings the barky fingers of the elm.
O! how I love thee; how I dote on thee!

They sleep.

Enter Puck.

Obe. Advancing. Welcome, good Robin. Seest thon this sweet sight?
Her dotage now I do begin to pity;
For, meeting her of late behind the wood,
Seeking sweet savours for this hateful fool,
I did upbraid her and fall out with her;
For she his hairy temples then had rounded
With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers;
And that same dew, which sometime on the buds
Was wont to swell like round and orient pearls,
Stood now within the pretty flowerets' eyes
Like tears that did their own disgrace bewail.
When I had at my pleasure taunted her,
And she in mild terms begg'd my patience,
I then did ask of her her changeling child;
Which straight she gave me, and her fairy sent to bear him to my bower in fairy land.
And now I have the boy, I will undo
This hateful imperfection of her eyes:
And, gentle Puck, take this transformed scalp
From off the head of this Athenian swain,
That, he awakening when the other do,
May all to Athens back again repair,
And think no more of this night's accidents
But as the fierce vexation of a dream.
But first I will release the fairy queen.
Be as thou wast wont to be;
See as thou wast wont to see;
Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower
Hath such force and blessed power.
Now, my Titania; wake you, my sweet queen.

Tita. My Oberon! what visions have I seen!
Methought I was enamour'd of an ass.

Obe. There lies your love.

Tita. How came these things to pass?
O! how mine eyes do loathe his visage now.

Obe. Silence awhile. Robin, take off this head.
Titania, music call; and strike more dead
Than common sleep of all these five the sense.

Tita. Music, ho! music! such as charmed sleep.

Music.

Puck. Now, when thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes peep.

Obe. Sound, music! Come, my queen, take
hands with me,
And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be.
Now thou and I are new in amity,
And will to-morrow midnight solemnly
Dance in Duke Theseus' house triumphantly,
And bless it to all fair prosperity:
There shall the pairs of faithful lovers be
Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.

Puck. Fairy king, attend, and mark;
I do hear the morning lark.

Obe. Then, my queen, in silence sad.
Trip we after the night's shade;

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Egeus, and Train.

The. Go, one of you, find out the forester;
For now our observation is perform'd;
And since we have the vaward of the day,
My love shall hear the music of my hounds.
Uncouple in the western valley; let them go
Dispacht, I say, and find the forester.
We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top,
And mark the musical confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

Hipp. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once
When in a wood of Crete they bay'd the bear
With hounds of Sparta; never did I hear
Such gallant chiding; for, besides the groves,
The skies, the fountains, every region near Seem'd all one mutual cry. I never heard
So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.

The. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kin,
So flaw'd, so sand'd; and their heads are hun
With ears that sweep away the morning dew;
Crook-knee'd, and dew-lapp'd like Thessallian bulbs;
Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like bell
Each under each. A cry more tunable
Was never holla'd to, nor cheer'd with horn.
In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly;
Judge when you hear. But, soft! what nymph are these?

Ege. My lord, this is my daughter here asleep.
And this, Lysander; this Demetrius is;
This Helena, old Nedar's Helena;
I wonder of their being here together.

The. No doubt they rose up early to observe
The rite of May, and, hearing our intent.
Came here in grace of our solemnity.
But speak, Egeus, is not this the day
That Hermia should give answer of her choice?

Ege. It is, my lord.

The. Go, bid the huntsmen wake them with their horns.

Horns, and shout within. Demetrius, Lysander, Hermia, and Helena wake and start up

Good morrow, friends. Saint Valentine is past
Begin these wood-birds but to couple now?

Lys. Pardon, my lord.

He and the rest kneel to Theseus.

The. I pray you all, stand up.

I know you two are rival enemies:
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is so far from jealousy,
To sleep by hate, and fear no eminence?

Lys. My lord, I shall reply amazedly,
Half sleep, half waking: but as yet, I swear,
I cannot truly say how I came here;
But, as I think,—for truly would I speak,
And now I do bethink me, so it is—
I came with Hermia hither: our intent
Was to be gone from Athens, where we might Without the peril of the Athenian law—
Enter QUINCE, FLUTE, SNOUT, and STARVELING.

Quin. Have you sent to Bottom's house? is he come home yet?

Star. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt he is transported.

Flute. If he come not then the play is marred: it goes not forward, doth it?

Quin. It is not possible: you have not a man in all Athens able to discharge Pyramus but he.

Flute. No; he hath simply the best wit of any handicraft man in Athens.

Quin. Yea, and the best person too; and he is a very paramour for a sweet voice.

Flute. You must say 'paramour': a paramour is, God bless us! a thing of naught.

Enter SNUG.

Snug. Masters, the duke is coming from the temple, and there is two or three lords and ladies more married: if our sport had gone forward, we had all been made men.

Flute. O sweet bully Bottom! Thus hath he lost sixpence a day during his life; he could not have 'scape sixpence a day: an the duke had not given him sixpence a day for playing Pyramus, I'll be hanged; he would have deserved it: sixpence a day in Pyramus, or nothing.

Enter BOTTOM.

Bot. Where are these lads? where are these hearts?

Quin. Bottom! O most courageous day! O most happy hour!

Bot. Masters, I am to discourse wonders, but ask me not what: for if I tell you, I am no true Athenian. I will tell you every thing, right as it fell out.

Quin. Let us hear, sweet Bottom.

Bot. Not a word of me. All that I will tell you is, that the duke hath dined. Get your apparel together good strings to your beards, new ribbons to your pumps; meet presently at the palace; every man look o'er his part; for the short and the long is, our play is preferred. In any case, let Thisby have clean linen, and let not him that plays the lion pare his nails, for they shall hang out for the lion's claws. And, most dear actors, eat no onions nor garlic, for we are to utter sweet breath, and I do not doubt but to hear them say, it is a sweet comedy. No more words: away! go; away!

Exeunt.
ACT V.

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Philostrate, Lords, and Attendants.

Hip. 'Tis strange, my Theseus, that these lovers speak of.

The. More strange than true: I never may believe

These antick fables, nor these fairy toys.

Lovers and madmen have such seething brains,

Such shaping fantasies, that apprehend

More than cool reason ever comprehends.

The lunatic, the lover, and the poet,

Are of imagination all compact:

One sees more devils than vast hell can hold,

That is the madman; the lover, all as frantic,

Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt:

The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,

Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth
to heaven;

And, as imagination bodies forth

The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen

Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy nothing

A local habitation and a name.

Such tricks hath strong imagination.

That, if it would but apprehend some joy,

It comprehends some bringer of that joy;

Or in the night, imagining some fear,

How easy is a bush suppos'd a bear!

Hip. But all the story of the night told over,

And all their minds transfigur'd so together,

More witnesseth than fancy's images,

And grows to something of great constancy,

But, howsoever, strange and admirable.

The. Here come the lovers, full of joy and mirth.

Enter Lysander, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena.

Joy, gentle friends! joy and fresh days of love

Accomp'y our hearts!

Lys. More than to us.

Wait in your royal walks, your board, your bed!

The. Come now; what masques, what dances shall we have,

To bear away this long life of three hours

Between our after-supper and bed-time?

Where is our usual manager of mirth?

What revels are in hand? Is there no play,

To ease the anguish of a torturing hour?

Call Philostrate.

Phil. Here, mighty Theseus.

The. Say, what abridgement have you for this evening?

What masque, what music? How shall we beguile

The lazy time, if not with some delight?

Phil. There is a brief how many sports are ripe;

Make choice of which your highness will see first.

Gives a paper.

The. The battle with the Centaurs, to be sung

By an Athenian enchanter to the harp.

We'll none of that: that have I told my love,

In glory of my kinsman Hercules.

The riot of the tipsy Bacchanals,

Tearing the Thracian singer in their rage.

That is an old device; and it was play'd

When I from Thebes came last a conqueror,

The three wise Muses mourning for the death

Of Learning, late deceas'd in begovany.

That is some satire keen and critical,

Not sorting with a nuptial ceremony.

A tedious brief scene of young Pyramus

And his love Thaisa; very tragical mirth.

Merry and tragical! tedious and brief!

That is, hot ice and wonderous strange snow.

How shall we find the concord of this discord?

Phil. A play there is, my lord, some ten wo long,

Which is as brief as I have known a play;

But by ten words, my lord, it is too long,

Which makes it tedious; for in all the play

There is not one word apt, one player fitted.

And tragical, my noble lord, it is,

For Pyramus therein doth kill himself.

Which when I saw rehears'd, I must confess

Made mine eyes water; but more merry treat

The passion of loud laughter never shed.

The. What are they that do play it?

Phil. Hard-handed men, that work in Athens here,

Which never labour'd in their minds till now

And now have told't their unbreath'd memory

With this same play, against your nuptial.

The. And we will hear it.

Phil. No, my noble lord;

It is not for you: I have heard it over,

And it is nothing, nothing in the world;

Unless you can find sport in their intents,

Extremely stretch'd and conn'd with cruel pen

To do you service.

The. I will hear that play;

For never any thing can be amiss,

When simplicity and duty tender it.

Go, bring them in: and take your places, ladies.

Exit Philostrate.

Hip. I love not to see wretchedness charg'd,

And duty in his service perishing.

The. Why, gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing.

Hip. He says they can do nothing in a kind.

The. The kinder we, to give them thank's nothing.

Our sport shall be to take what they mistake

And what poor duty cannot do, noble respect

Takes it in might, not merit.

Where I have come, great clerks have purport

To meet me with premeditated welcomes;

Where I have seen them shiver and look pale

Make periods in the midst of sentences,

Throttle their practis'd accent in their fears.

And, in conclusion, dumbly have broke off,

Not paying me a welcome. Trust me, sweet,

Out of this silence yet I pick'd a welcome;

And in the modesty of fearful duty

I read as much as from the rattling tongue

Of saucy and audacious eloquence.

Love, therefore, and tongue-tied simplicity

In least speak most, to my capacity.

Re-enter Philostrate.

Phil. So please your grace, the Prologue's address'd.

The. Let him approach.

{Flourish of trumpets}
Enter Quince for the Prologue.

If we offend, it is with our good will. 110
But if you think, we come not to offend, with good will. To show our simple skill, it is the true beginning of our end.

Enter Pyramus.

Pyr. O grim-look'd night! 0 night with hue so black!
O night, which ever art when day is not! 0 night! O night! alack, alack, alack!
I fear my Thisby's promise is forgot.

Enter Thisby.

This. O wall! full often hast thou heard my moans,
For parting my fair Pyramus and me:
My cherry lips have often kiss'd thy stones,
Thy stones with lime and hair knit up in thee.

Pyr. I see a voice; now will I to the chink,
To spy on I can hear my Thisby's face.
Thisby!

This. My love! thou art my love, I think.

Pyr. Think what thou wilt, I am thy lover's grace;
And, like Limander, am I trusty still.

This. And I like Helen, till the Fates me kill.

Pyr. Not Shafalus to Procrus so true.

This. As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you.

Pyr. 0! kiss me through the hole of this vile wall.
This. I kiss the wall's hole, not your lips at all.

Pyramus and Thisbe, Wall, Moonshine, and Lion, as in dumb-show.

Enter Prologue, Thisbe, Lion, and Moonshine.

I wonder if the lion be to speak.

No wonder, my lord: one lion may,
a many ass's do.

In this same interlude it doth befall,
I, one Snout by name, present a wall;
such a wall, as I would have you think,
had in it a crannied hole or chink, ugly which the lovers, Pyramus and Thisby, whisper often very secretly.

Lion, you, whose gentle hearts do fear
The smallest monstrous mouse that creeps on floor,
May now perchance both quake and tremble here,
When lion rough in wildest rage doth roar.

Dem. It is the wittiest partition that ever I heard discourse, my lord.

Enter Juno.

Juno. 0, thus to love is a divine art,
0, to be true, a godlike part.
If men do so, they shall be wise;
Then shall they both be happy and wise.

Enter Lion and Moonshine.

Lion. You, ladies, yow, whose gentle hearts do fear
The smallest monstrous mouse that creeps on floor,
May now perchance both quake and tremble here,
When lion rough in wildest rage doth roar.

Enter Thisbe.

This. O wall! full often hast thou heard my moans,
For parting my fair Pyramus and me:
My cherry lips have often kiss'd thy stones,
Thy stones with lime and hair knit up in thee.

Pyr. I see a voice; now will I to the chink,
To spy on I can hear my Thisby's face.
Thisby!

This. My love! thou art my love, I think.

Pyr. Think what thou wilt, I am thy lover's grace;
And, like Limander, am I trusty still.

This. And I like Helen, till the Fates me kill.

Pyr. Not Shafalus to Procrus so true.

This. As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you.

Pyr. 0! kiss me through the hole of this vile wall.
This. I kiss the wall's hole, not your lips at all.

Pyramus and Thisbe, Wall, Moonshine, and Lion, as in dumb-show.
Then know, that I, one Snug the joiner, am
A lion fell, nor else no lion's dam:
For, if I should as lion come in strife
Into this place, 'twere pity on my life.

The. A very gentle beast, and of a good con-sience.

Dem. The very best at a beast, my lord, that e'er I saw.

Lys. This lion is a very fox for his valour.

The. True; and a goose for his discretion.

Dem. Not so, my lord; for his valour cannot carry his discretion, and the fox carries the goose.

The. His discretion, I am sure, cannot carry his valour, for the goose carries not the fox. It is well: leave it to his discretion, and let us listen to the moon.

Moon. This lantern doth the horned moon present:

Dem. He should have worn the horns on his head.

The. He is no crescent, and his horns are invisible within the circumference.

Moon. This lantern doth the horned moon present;

Myself the man 'tis the moon do seem to be.

The. This is the greatest error of all the rest.
The man should be put into the lantern: how is it else the man 'tis the moon?

Dem. He dares not come there for the candle;
for, you see, it is already in snuff.

Hin. I am awearie of this moon; would he would change!

The. It appears, by his small light of discretion, that he is in the wane; but yet, in courtesy, in all reason, we must stay the time.

Lys. Proceed, Moon.

Moon. All that I have to say, is, to tell you that the lantern is the moon: I, the man in the moon; this thorn-bush, my thorn-bush; and this dog, my dog.

Dem. Why, all these should be in the lantern; for all these are in the moon. But, silence! here comes Thisbe.

Enter Thisbe.

This. This is old Ninny's tomb. Where is my love?
Lion. Oh—

The lion roars. Thisbe runs off.

Dem. Well roared, Lion.

The. Well run, Thisbe.

Hip. Well shone, Moon. Truly, the moon shines with a good grace.

The Lion tears Thisbe's mantle, and exit.

The. Well moused, Lion.

Lys. And so the lion vanished.

Dem. And then came Pyramus.

Enter Pyramus.

Pyr. Sweet moon, I thank thee for thy sunny beams;
I thank thee, moon, for shining now so bright;
For, by thy gracious, golden, glittering gleams,
I trust to taste of truest Thisbe's sight.

But stay, O spite!

But mark, poor knight,

What dreadful dole is here!

Eyes, do you see?

How can it be?

O dainty duck! O dear!

Thy mantle good,

What! stain'd with blood!

Approach, ye Furies fell!

O Fates, come, come!

Cut thread and thrum;

Quail, crush, conclude, and quell!

The. This passion, and the death of a friend, would go near to make a man look

Hip. Beshrew my heart, but I pity the na-

Which is—no, no—which was the fairest dam.

Come, tears, confound;

This die I, thus, thus, thus.

Now am I dead,

Now am I fed;

My soul is in the sky:

Tongue, lose thy light!

Moon, take thy right!

Exit Moon.

Now die, die, die, die, die.

Dem. No die, but an ace, for him; for but one.

Lys. Less than an ace, man, for he is dead

he is nothing.

The. With the help of a surgeon he might recover, and yet prove an ass.

Hip. How chance Moonshine is gone by?

Thisbe comes back and finds her lover!

The. She will find him by starlight, or she comes; and her passion ends the play.

Re-enter Thisbe.

Hip. Methinks she should not use a lover for such a Pyramus: I hope she will be but

Dem. A mote will turn the balance, vid

Lys. She hath spied him already with her sweet eyes.

Dem. And thus she means, videlicet:—

This.

Asleep, my love?

What, dead, my dove?

O Pyramus, arise!

Speak, speak! Quite dam'd?

Dead, dead! A tomb

Must cover thy sweet eyes.

These flow'rs I lay.

This cherry nose,

These yellow cowslip checks,

Are gone, are gone.

Lovers, make mourning!

His eyes were green as leeks.

O Sisters Three,

Come, come to me.

With hands as pale as milk;

Lay them in gore,

Since you have shore

With shears his thread of silk.

Tongue, not a word:

Come, trusty sword;
Come, blade, my breast imbure;
And farewell, friends;
Thus Thisby ends:
Adieu, adieu, adieu.
Dies.

The Moonshine and Lion are left to bury a dead.
Dem. Ay, and Wall too.
Bot. Starting up. No, I assure you; the wall down that parted their fathers. Will it please you to see the epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask dance between two of our company?
The. No epilogue, I pray you; for your plays no excuse. Never excuse; for when the ayers are all dead, there need none to be amended. Marry, if he that writ it had played amus, and hanged himself in Thisbe’s garter, would have been a fine tragedy; and so it is, nly, and very notably discharged. But come, ur Bergomask: let your epilogue alone.

A dance.
The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve
Vers, to bed; ’tis almost fairy time.
Fear we shall out-sleep the coming morn
As much as we this night have overwatch’d,
As palpable-gross play hath well beguil’d
The heavy gait of night. Sweet friends, to bed.
Fortnight hold we this solemnity,
Nightly revels, and new jollity.

Enter Puck.
Puck. Now the hungry lion roars,
And the wolf behows the moon;
Whilst the heavy ploughman snares,
All with weary task fordone.
Now the wasted brands do glow,
Whilst the screech-owl, screeching loud,
Puts the wretch that lies in woe
In remembrance of a shroud.
Now it is the time of night
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his spirit,
In the church-way paths to glide:
And we fairies, that do run
By the triple Hecate’s team,
From the presence of the sun,
Following darkness like a dream,
Now are frolic; not a mouse
Shall disturb this hallow’d house:
I am sent with broom before,
To sweep the dust behind the door.

Enter Oberon and Titania, with their Train.
Obe. Through the house give glimmering light
By the dead and drowsy fire;
Every elf and fairy sprite
Hop as light as bird from brier;
And this ditty after me
Sing, and dance it trippingly.

Tita. First, rehearse your song by rote,
To each word a warbling note:
Hand in hand, with fairy grace,
Will we sing, and bless this place.

Song and dance.
Obe. Now, until the break of day,
Through this house each fairy stray.
To the best bride-bed will we,
Which by us shall blessed be;
And the issue there create
Ever shall be fortunate.
So shall all the couples three Ever true and loving be;
And the blots of Nature’s hand
Shall not in their issue stand:
Never mole, hare-lip, nor scar,
Nor mark prodigious, such as are Despised in natiuity,
Shall upon their children be.
With this field-dew consecrate,
Every fairy take his gait,
And each several chamber bless,
Through this palace with sweet peace;
And the owner of it blest,
Ever shall in safety rest.

Trip away;
Make no stay;
Meet me all by break of day.

Exeunt Oberon, Titania, and Train.
Puck. If we shadows have offended,
Think but this, and all is mended,
That you have but slumber'd here
While these visions did appear.
And this weak and idle theme,
No more yielding but a dream,
Gentles, do not reprehend:
If you pardon, we will mend.
And, as I am an honest Puck,
If we have unearned luck
Now to 'scape the serpent's tongue,
We will make amends ere long;
Else the Puck a liar call:
So, good night unto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin shall restore amends.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter ANTONIO, SALARINO, and SALANIO.

Ant. In sooth, I know not why I am so sad: It wearies me; you say it wearies you; But how I caught it, found it, or came by it, What stuff 'tis made of, whereof it is born, I am to learn; And such a want-wit sadness makes of me, That I have much ado to know myself.

Sal. Your mind is tossing on the ocean; There, where your argosies with portly sail, Like signiors and rich burghers on the flood, Or, as it were, the pageants of the sea, Do overpeer the petty traffickers, That court'ry to them, do them reverence, As they fly by them with their woven wings.

Salan. Believe me, sir, had I such venture forth, The better part of my affections would Be with my hopes abroad. I should still be still Plucking the grass to know where sits the wind, Peering in maps for ports, and piers, and roads; And every object that might make me fear Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt Would make me sad.

Salan. My wind, cooling my broth, Would blow me to an ague, when I thought What harm a wind too great might do at sea. I should not see the sandy hour-glass run But I should think of shallows and of flats, And see my wealthy Andrew, dock'd in sand, Vailing her high-top lower than her ribs To kiss her burial. Should I go to church And see the holy edifice of stone, And not bethink me straight of dangerous rocks, Which touching but my gentle vessel's side, Would scatter all her spices on the stream, Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks,

And, in a word, but even now worth this, And now worth nothing? Shall I have been thought To think on this, and shall I lack the thought That such a thing becahne'd would make me mad? But tell not me: I know Antonio Is sad to think upon his merchandise.

Ant. Believe me, no: I thank my fortune well My ventures are not in one bottom trusted Nor to one place; nor is my whole estate Upon the fortune of this present year: Therefore my merchandise makes me not sad.

Sal. Why, then you are in love.

Ant. Fie, so! Sal. Not in love neither? Then let us see how you are sad, Because you are not merry; and 'twere as well For you to laugh, and leap, and say you are merry, Because you are not sad. Now, by two-heeler Janus, Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her eye! Some that will evermore peep through their eyes And laugh like parrots at a bag-piper; And other of such vinegar aspect That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile. Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.

Enter BASSANIO, LORENZO, and GRATIANO.

Salan. Here comes Bassanio, your most noble kinsman, Gratiano, and Lorenzo. Fare ye well: We leave you now with better company. Salan. I would have stay'd till I had seen you merry, If worthier friends had not prevented me.

Ant. Your worth is very dear in my regard. I take it, your own business calls on you, And you embrace the occasion to depart.

Salan. Good morrow, my good lords.
ass. Good signors both, when shall we laugh?
  say, when?
   grow exceeding strange: must it be so?
alar. We'll make our pleasures to attend on your. Exeunt SALARINO and SALANIO.
    My Lord Bassanio, since you have found
    Antonio,  two will leave you; but at dinner-time, you have in mind what we must meet.
  ass. I will not fuly you.
  ra. You look not well, Signior Antonio;
    too much respect upon the world:
    lose it that do buy it with much care:
    love me, you are marvellously chang'd.
nt. I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano;
    age where every man must play a part,
    mine a sad one.
ra. Let me play the fool:
  mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come,
  let my liver rather heat with wine
  my heart cool with mortifying groans.
  should a man, whose blood is warm within,
    like his grandsire cut in alabaster?
ra. When he wakes, and creeps into the jaundice being peevish? I tell thee what, Antonio, thee, and it is my love that speaks.
  are a sort of men whose visages make and mantle like a standing pond,
    I do a wilful stillness entertain,
    purpose to be dress'd in an opinion wisdom, gravity, profound conceit;
    who should say, 'I am Sir Oracle, when I ope my lips let no dog bark!'
    my Antonio, I do know of these,
    therefore only are reputed wise saying nothing; when, I am very sure, should speak would almost damn those ears, hearing them, would call their brothers fools.
    thee more of this another time:
    fish not, with this melancholy bait,
    this fool-gudgeon, this opinion.
ra. Good Lorenzo. Fare ye well awhile:
    and my exhortation after dinner.
or. Well, we will leave you then till dinner-
    time:
    but one of these same dull wise men,
    Gratiano never let me speak.
ra. Well, keep me company but two years more, shall not know the sound of thine own tongue.
ra. Farewell: I'll grow a talker for this gear.
ra. Thanks, 'tis faith: for silence is only commendable.
ra. Meat's tongue dried and a maid not vendible.
    Gratiano and Lorenzo.
ra. Is that any thing now?
ass. Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of thing, more than any man in all Venice. His sons are as two grains of wheat hid in two hulls of chaff: you shall seek all day ere you them, and when you have them, they are worth the search.
ra. Well, tell me now, what lady is the same whom you swore a secret pilgrimage, ass. To-day promis'd to tell me of?
ra. 'Tis not unknown to you, Antonio, much I have disabled mine estate, something showing a more swelling port in my faint means would grant continuance:
  Nor do I now make man to be abridgd'\n    From such a noble rate; but my chief care
    Is to come fairly off from the great debts
    Wherein my time, something too prodigal,
    Hath left me gaged. To you, Antonio,
    I owe the most, in money and in love;
    And from your love I have a warranty
    To unburden all my plots and purposes
    How to get clear of all the debts I owe.
    Ans. I pray you, good Bassanio, let me know it;
    And if it stand, as you yourself still do,
    Within the eye of honour, be assur'd,
    My purse, my person, my extremest means,
    Lie all unlook'd for your occasions.
0. Bass. In my school-days, when I had lost one shaft,
    I shot his fellow of the selfsame flight
    The selfsame way with more advised watch,
    To find the other forth, and by adventuring both,
    I oft found both. I urge this childhood proof,
    Because what follows is pure innocence.
    Owe you much, and, like a wilful youth,
    That which I owe is lost; but if you please
    To shoot another arrow that self way
    Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt,
    As I will watch the aim, or to find both,
    Or bring your latter hazard back again,
    And thankfully rest debtor for the first.
    Ans. You know me well, and herein spend but time
    To wind about my love with circumstance;
    And, out of doubt, you do me now more wrong
    In making question of my uttermost.
    Than if you had made waste of all I have:
    Then do but say to me what I should do
    That in your knowledge may be done, and
    And I am prest unto it: therefore speak.
    Bass. In Belmont is a lady richly left,
    And she is fair, and, fairer than that word,
    Of wondrous virtues: sometimes from her eyes
    I did receive fair speechless messages:
    Her name is Portia; nothing undervalued
    To Cato's daughter, Brutus' Portia;
    Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth,
    For the four winds blow in from every coast
    Renowned suitors; and her sunny locks
    Hang on her temples like a golden fleece;
    Which makes her seat of Belmont Colchus' strand.
    And many Jasions come in quest of her.
    O my Antonio! had I but the means
    To hold a rival place with one of them,
    I have a mind presages me such thrift,
    That I should questionless be fortunate.
    Ans. Thou know'st that all my fortunes are at sea;
    Neither have I money, nor commodity
    To raise a present sum: therefore go forth;
    Try what my credit can in Venice do:
    That shall be rack'd, even to the uttermost,
    To furnish thee to Belmont, to fair Portia.
    Go, presently inquire, and so will I,
    Where money is, and I no question make
    To have it of my trust or for my sake. Exeunt.

Scene II.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Enter Portia and Nerissa.

Por. By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is aweary of this great world.
Ner. You would be, sweet madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are: and yet, for aught I see, they are as sick that surfeit with too much as they that starve with nothing. It is no mean happiness therefore, to be seated in the mean: superfluity comes sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer.

Por. Good sentences and well pronounced.

Ner. They would be better if well followed.

Por. If you do as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instructions: I can easier teach twenty what were good to do, than be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching. The brain may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper leaps o'er a cold decree: such a hate is madness the youth, to skip o'er the meshes of good counsel the cripple. But this reasoning is not in the fashion to choose me a husband. O no! no, on the word 'choose!' I may neither choose whom I would, nor refuse whom I dislike; so is the will of a living daughter curbed by the will of a dead father. Is it not hard, Nerissa, that I cannot choose one nor refuse none?

Ner. Your father was ever virtuous, and holy men at their death have good inspirations: therefore the lottery that he hath devised in these three chests of gold, silver, and lead, whereby who chooses his meaning chooses you, will, no doubt, never be chosen by any rightly but one who you shall rightly love. But what warmth is there in your affection towards any of these princely suitors that are already come?

Por. I pray thee, over-name them, and as thou namest them, I will describe them; and, according to my description, level at my affection.

Ner. First, there is the Neapolitan prince.

Por. Ay, that's a colt indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse; and he makes it a great appropriation to his own good parts that he can shoe him himself. I am much afraid my lady his mother played false with a smith.

Ner. Then is there the County Palatine.

Por. He doth nothing but frown, as who should say, 'If you will not have me, choose.' He hears merry tales, and smiles not: I fear he will prove the weeping philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmanly sadness in his youth. I had rather be married to a death's-head with a bone in his mouth than to either of these. God defend me from these two!

Ner. How say you by the French lord, Monsieur Le Bon?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man. In truth, I know it is a sin to be a mockor; but, he! why, he hath a horse better than the Neapolitan's, a better bad habit of frowning than the Count Palatine; he is every man in no man; if a throstle sing, he falls straight a-capering; he will fence with his own shadow: if I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands. If he would despise me, I would forgive him, for if he love me to madness, I shall never requite him.

Ner. What say you then to Falconbridge, the young baron of England?

Por. You know I say nothing to him, for I understand not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian, and you will come into the court and swear that I have a pennyworth in the English. He is a pre man's picture, but, alas! who can converse with a dumb-show? How oddly he is suited! I tell you he bought his doublet in Italy, his round is in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour everywhere.

Ner. What think you of the Scottish lord's neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him, for he borrowed a box of the earl of England, and swore he would pay him again when he was able; I think the Frenchman beats his surety and sealed under for another.

Ner. How like you the young German, Duke of Saxony's nephew?

Por. Very vilely in the morning, when I sober, and most vilely in the afternoon, when he is drunk: when he is best, he is a little worse than a man, and when he is worst, he is better than a beast. An the worst fall that fell, I hope I shall make shift to go without.

Ner. If he should offer to choose, and chuse the right casket, you should refuse to perform his father's will, if you should refuse to accept it.

Por. Therefore, for fear of the worst, I, to thee, set a deep glass of Rhenish wine on a contrary casket, for if the devil be within that temptation without, I know he will cast it. I will do anything, Nerissa, ere I am married to a sponge.

Ner. You need not fear, lady, the having of these lords: they have acquainted me with the determinations; which is, indeed, to return their home and to trouble you with no more unless you may be won by some other sort to your father's imposition depending on the caskets.

Por. If I live to be as old as Sibylla, I will as chaste as Diana, unless I be obtained by manner of my father's will. I am glad this pack of wooers are so reasonable, for there is not among them but I dote on his very absence. I pray God grant them a fair departure.

Ner. Do you not remember, lady, in father's time, a Venetian, a scholar and a soothsayer, that came hither in company of the Marquis of Montferrat?

Por. Yes, yes: it was Bassanio; as I think he was so called.

Ner. True, madam: he, of all the men ever my foolish eyes looked upon, was the deserving a fair lady.

Por. I remember him well, and I remember him worthy of thy praise.

Enter a Servant.

How now! what news?

Serc. The four strangers seek for you, mean to take their leave; and there is a forerunner come from a fifth, the Prince of Morocco, brings word the prince his master will be to-night.

Por. If I could bid the fifth welcome with a good heart as I can bid the other four fairest, I should be glad of his approach: if he have a condition of a saint and the complexion of a man, I had rather he should strive me than were
Some, Nerissa. Sirrah, go before.

\[14\] While we shut the gate upon one woover, another knocks at the door.

\[15\]

\[16\] Exequit.

\[17\]

\[18\] \[\textbf{Scene III.}\] Venice. A public Place.

\[19\] Enter \textbf{Bassanio} and \textbf{Shylock}.

\[20\] \textbf{Shy.} Three thousand ducats; well?
\textbf{Bass.} Ay, sir, for three months.

\[21\] \textbf{Shy.} For three months; well?
\textbf{Bass.} For which, as I told you, Antonio will be bound.

\[22\] \textbf{Shy.} Antonio shall become bound; well?
\textbf{Bass.} May you stade me? Will you pleasure me? Shall I know your answer?

\[23\] \textbf{Shy.} Three thousand ducats, for three months, \textbf{Bass.} Your answer to that.

\[24\] \textbf{Shy.} Antonio is a good man.
\textbf{Bass.} Have you heard any imputation to the contrary?

\[25\] \textbf{Shy.} Oh, no, no, no; my meaning in saying is a good man is to have you understand me at he is sufficient.
Yet his means are in supposition: he hath an argosy bound to Tripolis, other to the Indies; I understand moreover in the Rialto, he hath a third at Mexico, a urth for England, and other ventures he hath; whereupon he wanders abroad. But ships are but boards, flors but men: there be land-rats and water-thieves, land-thieves, I mean rates:
and then there is the peril of waters, ads, rocks. The man is, notwithstanding,
that which he will answer;
Three thousand ducats; I think I

\[26\] \textbf{Bass.} Be assured you may.

\[27\] \textbf{Shy.} I will be assured I may; and, that I may assured, I will bethink me. \textbf{May I speak in Antonio?}

\[28\] \textbf{Bass.} If it please you to dine with us.

\[29\] \textbf{Shy.} Yes, to smell pork; to eat of the habitat-a which your prophet the Nazarene conjured a devil into. I will buy with you, sell with, talk with you, walk with you, and so follow;
but I will not eat with you, drink with you,
pray with you. What news on the Rialto?
ho is he comes here?

\[30\]

\[31\] \[\textbf{Enter Antonio.}\]

\[32\] \textbf{Bass.} This is Signior Antonio.

\[33\] \textbf{Shy.} Aside. How like a fawning publican he looks!

\[34\] Rate him for he is a Christian;

t more for that in low simplicity lends out money gratis, and brings down
e rate of usance, here with us in Venice.
I can catch him once upon the lip,
fill fed fat the ancient grudge I bear him.
lates our sacred nation, and he rails,
en there where merchants most do congregate, me, my bargains, and my well-won thrift, in which he calls interest. Cursed be my tribe,
I forgive him!

\[35\] \textbf{Bass.} Shylock, do you hear?

\[36\] \textbf{Shy.} I am debating of my present store, d, by the near guess of my memory,
annot instantly raise up the gross full three thousand ducats. What of that?
old, a wealthy Hebrew of my tribe,

\[37\] Will furnish me. But soft! how many months
Do you desire? \textbf{To Antonio.} Rest you fair, good signior;

\[38\] Your worship was the last man in our mouths.

\[39\] \textbf{Ant.} Shylock, albeit I neither lend nor borrow
By taking nor by giving of excess,
Yet, to supply the ripe wants of my friend,
I'll break a custom. Is he yet possess'd
How much ye would?

\[40\] \textbf{Shy.} \textbf{Ay, ay}, three thousand ducats.

\[41\] \textbf{Ant.} And for three months.

\[42\] \textbf{Shy.} I had forgot; three months; you told me so.

\[43\] Well then, your bond; and let me see. But hear you;

\[44\] Methought you said you neither lend nor borrow Upon advantage.

\[45\] \textbf{Ant.} I do never use it.

\[46\] \textbf{Shy.} When Jacob graz'd his uncle Laban's sheep—

\[47\] This Jacob from our holy Abram was,
As his wise mother wrought in l is behalf,
The third possessor: ay, he was the third,—

\[48\] \textbf{Ant.} And what of him? did he take interest?

\[49\] \textbf{Shy.} No; not take interest; not, as you would say,

\[50\] \textbf{Directly interest: mark what Jacob did.}
When Laban and himself were compromis'd,
That all the canals which were streak'd and pied
Should fall as Jacob's hire, the eves, being rank,
In end of autumn turned to the rams;

\[51\] And, when the work of generation was

\[52\] Between these woolly breeders in the act,
The skilful shepherd peal'd me certain wands,
And, in the doing of the deed of kind,
He stuck them up before the fulsome eves,
Who, then conceiving, did in eaning time
Fall parti-colour'd lambs, and those were Jacob's.

\[53\] This was a way to thrive, and he was best:
And thr'st is blessing, if men steal it not.

\[54\] \textbf{Ant.} This was a venture, sir, that Jacob serv'd for;

\[55\] A thing not in his power to bring to pass,
But sway'd and fashion'd by the hand of heaven.
Was this inserted to make interest good?
Or is your gold and silver eves and rams?

\[56\] \textbf{Shy.} I cannot tell; I make it breed as fast:
But note me, signior.

\[57\] \textbf{Ant.} Mark you this, Bassanio,
The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose.
An evil soul, producing holy witness,

\[58\] \textbf{Is like a villain with a smiling cheek,}
A kindly apple rotten at the heart.
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!

\[59\] \textbf{Shy.} Three thousand ducats; 'tis a good round sum.

\[60\] Three months from twelve, then let me see the rate.

\[61\] \textbf{Ant.} Well, Shylock, shall we be beholding to
you?

\[62\] \textbf{Shy.} Signior Antonio, many a time and oft
In the Rialto you have rated me
About my moneys and my usances:
Still have I borne it with a patient shrug,
For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe.
You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And spit upon my Jewish gaberline,
And all for use of that which is mine own.
Well then, it now appears you need my help:
Go to then; you come to me, and you say,
Act One Scene One

A Room in Portia’s House

Flourish of Cornets. Enter the Prince of Morocco and his Followers; Portia, Nerissa, a others of her Train.

Mor. Mislike me not for my complexion, The shadow’d livery of the burnish’d sun, To whom I am a neighbour and near bred. Bring me the fairest creature northward born Where Phoebus’ fire scarce thaws the icicles, And let us make incision for your love, To prove whose blood is reddest, his or mine I tell thee, lady, this aspect of mine Hath fear’d the valiant: by my love, I swear The best-regarded virgins of our clime Have lov’d it too: I would not change this h Except to steal your thoughts, my gentle que Por. Mor. Even for that I thank you Therefore, I pray you, lead me to the casket To try my fortune. By this scimitar, That slew the Sophy, and a Persian prince That won three fields of Sultan Solymar, I would outstare the sternest eye that look. Outbrave the heart most daring on the earth! Pluck the young sucking cubs from the she-b Yea, mock the lion when he roars for prey, To win thee, lady. But, alas the while! If Hercules and Lichias play at dice Which is the better man, the greater throw May turn by fortune from the weaker hand So is Alcides beaten by his page; And so may I, blind fortune leading me, Miss that which one unworthy may attain And die with grieving. Scene II. Venice. A Street.

Enter Launcelot Gobbo.

Laun. Certainly my conscience will serve to run from this Jew my master. The fier at mine elbow, and tempts me, saying to ‘Gobbo, Launcelot Gobbo, good Launcelot... good Gobbo, or ‘good Launcelot Gobbo, use our legs, take the start, run away.’ My conscience says, ‘No; take heed, honest Launcelot; take heed, honest Gobbo’; or, as aforesaid, honest Launcelot Gobbo; do not run; scorn running with thy heels.' Well, the most courageous fiend bids me pack: ‘Fie! says the fiend; ‘away!’ says the fiend; ‘for the heavens, once up a brave mind; says the fiend, ‘and run.’ Well, my conscience, hanging about the neck of my heart, says very wisely to me, ‘My honest friend Launcelot, being an honest man’s son,’ or rather an honest woman’s son; for, indeed, my father did something snacker, something grow to, e had a kind of taste; well, my conscience says, Launcelot, budge not.’ ‘Budge,’ says the fiend: ‘budge not,’ says my conscience. ‘Conscience,’ say I, ‘you counsel well’; ‘fiend,’ say I, ‘you counsel well: to be ruled by my conscience, I could stay with the Jew my master, who, God less the mark! is a kind of devil; and, to run way from the Jew, I should be ruled by the end, who, saving your reverence, is the devil himself. Certainly the Jew is the very devil inhuman; and, in my conscience, my conscience is at a kind of hard conscience, to offer to counsel me to stay with the Jew. The fiend gives the more friendly counsel: I will run, fiend; my ells are at your commandment; I will run.

Enter Old Gobbo, with a basket.

Gob. Master young man, you; I pray you, which is the way to Master Jew’s?

Laun. Aside. O heavens! this is my true-better father, who, being more than sand-blind, gh gravel-blind, knows me not: I will try consenions with him.

Gob. Master young gentleman, I pray you, which is the way to Master Jew’s?

Laun. Turn up on your right hand at the next turning, but at the next turning all of you; marry, at the very next turning, turn of no 15 and, but turn down indirectly to the Jew’s house.

Gob. By God’s sotties, ’twill be a hard way to. Can you tell me whether one Launcelot, that dwells with him, dwell with him or no?

Laun. Talk you of young Master Launcelot? side. Mark me now; how will I raise the waters, shall you of young Master Launcelot?

Gob. No master, sir, but a poor man’s son: father, though I say it, is an honest exceeding poor man, and, God be thanked, well to live.

Laun. Well, let his father be what at will, we 20 talk of young Master Launcelot.

Gob. Your worship’s friend, and Launcelot, sir.

Laun. But I pray you, ergo, old man, ergo, I see you, talk you of young Master Launcelot? 25 Gob. Of Launcelot, an’t please your master-

Laun. Ergo, Master Launcelot. Talk not of 30 master Launcelot, father; for the young gentleman, according to Fates and Destinies and such la sayings, the Sisters Three and such branches learning, is indeed deceased; or, as you would y in plain terms, gone to heaven.

Gob. Marry, God forbid! the boy was the very aff of my age, my very prop.

Laun. Do I look like a cudgel or a hovel-post, staff or a prop? Do you know me, father?

Gob. Alack the day! I know you not, young gentleman; but, I pray you, tell me, is my boy, God rest his soul! alive or dead?

Laun. Do you not know me, father?

Gob. Alack, sir, I am sand-blind; I know you not.

Laun. Nay, indeed, if you had your eyes, you might fall of the knowing me: it is a wise father that knows his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your son. Give me your blessing; truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid long; a man’s son may, but in the end truth will out.

Gob. Pray you, sir, stand up. I am sure you are not Launcelot, my boy.

Laun. Pray you, let’s have no more fooling 65 about it, but give me your blessing: I am Launcelot, your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think you are my son.

Laun. I know not what I shall think of that; but I am Launcelot, the Jew’s man, and I am sure Margery your wife is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery, indeed: I’ll be sworn, if thou be Launcelot, thou art mine own flesh and blood. Lord worshipped might he be! what a beard hast thou got? thou hast got more hair on thy chin than Dobbin my thill-horse has on his tail.

Laun. It should seem then that Dobbin’s tail grows backward: I am sure he had more hair of his tail than I have of my face, when I last saw him.

Gob. Lord! how art thou changed. How dost thou and thy master agree? I have brought him a present. How gree you now?

Laun. Well, well; but, for mine own part, as I have set up my rest to run away, so I will not rest till I have run some ground. My master’s a very Jew: give him a present! give him a halter: I am famished in his service; you may tell every finger I have with my ribs. Father, I am glad you are come: give me your present to one Master Bassanio, who, indeed, gives rare new liveries. If I serve not him, I will run as far as God has any ground. O rare fortune! here comes the man: to him, father; for I am a Jew, if I serve the Jew any longer.

Enter Bassanio, with Leonardo, and other Followers.

Bass. You may do so; but let it be so hasted that supper be ready at the furthest by five of the clock. See these letters delivered; put the liveries to making, and desire Gratiano to come anon to my lodging. Exit a Servant.

Laun. To him, father.

Gob. God bless your worship!

Bass. Gramercy! Would’st thou thought with me?

Gob. Here’s my son, sir, a poor boy,—

Laun. Not a poor boy, sir, but the rich Jew’s man; that would, sir, as my father shall specify,—

Gob. He hath a great infection, sir, as one would say, to serve—

Laun. Indeed, the short and the long is, I serve the Jew, and have a desire, as my father shall specify,—

Gob. His master and he, saving your worship’s reverence, are scarce.cater-cousins,— Laun. To be brief, the very truth is that the Jew, having done me wrong, doth cause me, as my father, being, I hope, an old man, shall frutify unto you,—

Gob. I have here a dish of doves that I would bestow upon your worship, and my suit is,—

Laun. In very brief, the suit is impertinent to myself, as your worship shall know by this honest old man; and though I say it, though old man, yet poor man, my father.

Bass. One speak for both. What would you?

Laun. Serve you, sir.

Gob. That is the very defect of the man, sir.

Bass. I know thee well; thou hast obtain’d thy suit:

Shylock thy master spoke with me this day, And hath prepar’d thee, if it be prepar’d To leave a rich Jew’s service, to become The follower of so poor a gentleman.

Laun. The old proverb is very well parted between my master Shylock and you, sir: you have the grace of God, sir, and he hath enough.

Bass. Thou speak’st it well. Go, father, with thy son.

Take leave of thy old master, and inquire My lodging out. Give him a livery

More guarded than his fellows: see it done.

Laun. Father, in. I cannot get a service, no; I have ne’er a tongue in my head. Well; if any man in Italy have a fairer table which doth offer to swear upon a book, I shall have good fortune. Go to; here’s a simple line of life: here’s a small tripe of wives: alas! fifteen wives is nothing: a leven widows and nine maids is a simple coming-in for one man; and then to ‘scape drowning thrice, and to be in peril of my life with the edge of a feather-bed; here are simple ‘scapes. Well, if Fortune be a woman, she’s a good wrench for this gear. Father, come; I’ll take my leave of the Jew in the twinkling of an eye.

Exeunt Launcelot and Old Bobbo.

Bass. I pray thee, good Leonardo, think on this. These things being bought, and orderly bestow’d, Return in haste, for I do feast to-night

My best-esteem’d acquaintance: be thee, go.

Leon. My best endeavours shall be done herein.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Where is your master?

Leon. Yonder, sir, he walks. Exit.

Gra. Signior Bassanio!

Bass. Gratiano!

Gra. I have a suit to you.

Bass. You have obtain’d it.

Gra. You must not deny me: I must go with you to Belmont.

Bass. Why, then you must. But hear thee, Gratiano;

Thou art too wild, too rude and bold of voice; Parts that become thee happily enough, And in such eyes as ours appear not faults; But where thou art not known, why, there they show

Something too liberal. Pray thee, take pain To allay with some cold drops of modesty Thy skipping spirit, lest through thy wild behaviour I be misconstrued in the place I go to, And lose my hopes.
and whiter than the paper it writ on
; the fair hand that writ.

Gra. Love news, in faith.

Lor. Whither goest thou?

Lau. Marry, sir, to bid my old master, the ow, to sup to-night with my new master, the

Gra. Hold here, take this: tell gentle Jessica will not fail her; speak it privately.

Lau. Sir, I shall take her from her father's house;
hat gold and jewels she is furnish'd with;
that page's suit she hath in readiness.

e'er the Jew her father come to heaven,
will be for his gentle daughter's sake;
nd never dare misfortune cross her foot,
less she do it under this excuse,
that she is issue to a faithless Jew.

Lau. I, Jessica, will be your messenger.

Gra. Tis good we do so.

Exeunt SALARINO and SALANIO.

Gra. Was not that letter from fair Jessica?

Lau. I must needs tell thee all. She hath directed ow I shall take her from her father's house;
hat gold and jewels she is furnish'd with;
that page's suit she hath in readiness.

e'er the Jew her father come to heaven,
will be for his gentle daughter's sake;
nd never dare misfortune cross her foot,
less she do it under this excuse,
that she is issue to a faithless Jew.

Lau. Me, go with me: persuade this as thou goest.

Sir, Jessica shall be my torch-bearer. Exeunt.

ACT V.—Scene One.

Enter SHYLOCK and LAUNCELOT.

Shy. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be thy judge.

Lau. A difference of old Shylock and Bassoiano:—
hat, Jessica!—thou shalt not gormandize, that thou hast done with me;—What, Jessica!— nd sleep and snore, and rend apparel out—hy, Jessica, I say!

Lau. Why, Jessica!

Lau. Your worship was wont to tell me I did do nothing without bidding.

Enter JESSICA.

Jes. Call you? What is your will?

Shy. I am bid forth to supper, Jessica:
ere are my keys. But wherefore should I go?
im not bid for love; they flatter me:
ret I'll go in hate, to feele upon prodigal Christian, Jessica, my girl, o to my house. I am right loath to go:
er is some ill a-brewing towards my rest,
I did dream of money-bags to-night.

Lau. I beseech you, sir, go: my young master expect your reappr.

Shy. So do I his.

Lau. And they have conspired together: I not say you shall see a masque; but if you then it was not for nothing that my nose fell feeding on Black-Monday last, at six o'clock the morning, falling out that year on Ash-dnesday was four year in the afternoon.

Shy. What! are there masques? Hear you me, Jessica:
Lock up my doors; and when you hear the drum,
And the vile squeaking of the wry-neck'd fife,
Chamber not you up to the casements then,
Nor thrust your head into the public street
To gaze on Christian fools with varnish'd faces,
But stop my house's ears, I mean my casements;
Let not the sound of shallow foppery enter
My sober house. By Jacob's staff I swear
I have no mind of feasting forth to-night;
But I will go. No you before me, sirrah;
Say I will come.

Lau. I will go before, sir. Mistress, look out at window, for all this;—
There will come a Christian by,
Will be worth a Jewess' eye.

Shy. What says that fool of Hagar's offspring,

Jes. His words were, 'Farewell, mistress';
nothing else.

Shy. The patch is kind enough, but a huge feeder.

Snail-slow in profit, and he sleeps by day
More than the wild-cat: drones hive not with me;
Therefore I part with him, and part with him
To one that I would have him help to waste
His borrow'd purse. Well, Jessica, go in:
Perhaps I will return immediately:
Do as I bid you; shut doors after you:
Fast bind, fast find;
A proverb never stale in thirfty mind.

Shy. Jes. Farewell; and if my fortune be not cross,
I have a father, you a daughter, lost.

Scene Six.—The Same.

Enter GRATIANO and SALARINO, masqued.

Gra. This is the penthouse under which Lorenzo
Desir'd us to make stand.

Salar. His hour is almost past.

Gra. And it is marvel he outdwells his hour,
For lovers ever run before the clock.

Salar. O! ten times faster Venus' pigeons fly to seallove's bonds new made, than they are wont to keep obliged fate unfeared.

Gra. That ever holds; who riseth from a feast
With that keen appetite that he sits down?
Where is the horse that doth unrend again
His tedious measures with the unbated fire
That he did pace them first? All things that are,
Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd.
How like a younger or a prodigal
The scarfed bark puts from her native bay,
Hugg'd and embraced by the strumpet wind!
How like the prodigal doth she return,
With over-weather'd ribs and ragged sails.
Lean, rent, and beggar'd by the strumpet wind!

Enter LORENZO.

Salar. Here comes Lorenzo: more of this hereafter.

Lor. Sweet friends, your patience for my long abode;
Not I, but my affairs, have made you wait:
When you shall please to play the thieves for wives,
I'll watch as long for you then. Approach;
Here dwells my father Jew. Ho! who's within?
Enter Jessica above, in boy's clothes.

Jes. Who are you? Tell me for more certainty, Albeit I'll swear that I do know your tongue. Lor. Lorenzo, and thy love. Jes. Lorenzo, certain; and my love indeed, For who love I so much? And now who knows But you, Lorenzo, whether I am yours? 31 Lor. Heaven and thy thoughts are witness that thou art. Jes. Here, catch this casket; it is worth the pains. I am glad 'tis night, you do not look on me, For I am much asham'd of my exchange; But love is blind, and lovers cannot see The pretty follies that themselves commit; For if they could, Cupid himself would blush To see me thus transformed to a boy. 39 Lor. Descend, for you must be my torch-bearer. Jes. What! must I hold a candle to my shames? They in themselves, good sooth, are too too light. Why, 'tis an office of discovery, love, And I should be obscure'd.

Lor. So are you, sweet, Even in the lovely garnish of a boy. But come at once; For the close night doth play the runaway, And we are stay'd for at Bassanio's feast. Jes. I will make fast the doors, and gild myself With some more ducats, and be with you straight. Exit above.

Gra. Now, by my hood, a Gentile, and no Jew. Lor. Beshrew me, but I love her heartily; 52 For she is wise, if I can judge of her, And fair she is, if that mine eyes be true, And true she is, as she hath prov'd herself; And therefore, like herself, wise, fair, and true, Shall she be placed in my constant soul.

Enter Jessica.

What, art thou come? On, gentlemen; away! Our masquing mates by this time for us stay. Exit with Jessica and Salarino.

Enter Antonio.

Ant. Who's there?  60 Gra. Signior Antonio!

Ant. Fie, fie, Gratiano! where are all the rest? 'Tis nine o'clock; our friends all stay for you. No masque to-night: the wind is come about; Bassanio presently will go aboard; I have sent twenty out to seek for you. Gra. I am glad on't: I desire no more delight Than to be under sail and gone to-night.

Exeunt.

Scene VII.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

F Reward of Cornets. Enter Portia, with the Prince of Morocco, and their Trains.

Por. Go, draw aside the curtains, and discover The several caskets to this noble prince. Now make your choice.

Mor. The first, of gold, who this inscription bears:

Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire.
The second, silver, which this promise carries:

Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves.

This third, dull lead, with warning all as blun

Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath.

How shall I know if I do choose the right?

Por. The one of them contains my picture prince;

If you choose that, then I am yours withal.

Mor. Some god direct my judgment! Let me see;

I will survey the inscriptions back again:

What says this leaden casket?

Who chooseth me shall give and hazard all he hath.

Must give: for what? for lead? hazard for lead. This casket threatens. Men that hazard all Do it in hope of fair advantages: A golden mind stoops not to show of dross; I'll then not give nor hazard aught for lead. What says the silver with her virgin hue?

Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves As much as he deserves! Pause there, Morocco And weigh thy value with an even hand. If thou be'st rated by thy estimation, Thou dost deserve enough; and yet enough May not extend so far as to the lady: And yet to be afraid of my deserving Were but a weak disabling of myself. As much as I deserve! Why, that's the lady I do in birth desire her, and in fortunes, In graces, and in qualities of breeding; But more than these, in love I do deserve. What if I stay'd no further, but chose here? Let's see once more this saying graved in gold: Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire. Why, that's the lady: all the world desires her. From the four corners of the earth they come To kiss this shrine, this mortal-breathing saint. The Hyrcanian deserts and the vasty wilds Of wide Arabia are as throughfairs now, For princes to come view fair Portia: The watery kingdom, whose ambitious head Spits in the face of heaven, is no bar To stop the foreign spirits, but they come, As o'er a brook, to see fair Portia. One of these three contains her heavenly picture: Is't like that lead contains her? 'Twere damnation To think so base a thought: it were too gross To rib her cerecloth in the obscure grave. Or shall I think in silver she's immur'd, Being ten times undervalued to tried gold? O sinful thought! Never so rich a gem Was set in worse than gold. They have England A coin that bears the figure of an angel Stamped in gold, but that's insculped upon; But here an angel in a golden bed Lies all within. Deliver me the key: Here do I choose, and thrive I as I may!

Por. There, take it, prince; and if my fel low there, Then I am yours. He unlocks the golden casket.

Mor. O hell! what have we here? A carrion Death, within whose empty eye There is a written scroll. I'll read the writ:

All that givers is not gold;

Often have you heard that told:

Many a man his life hath sold

But my outside to behold:
THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

I pray thee, let us go and find him out,
And quicken his embraced heaviness
With some delight or other.
Salar. Do we so. Exeunt.

Scene IX.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Enter Nerissa with a Scrivitor.

Ner. Quick, quick, I pray thee; draw the curtain straight.
The Prince of Arragon hath ta'en his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Flourish of Cornets. Enter the Prince of Arragon, Portia, and their Trains.

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets, noble prince.
If you choose that wherein I am contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptial rites be solemniz'd;
But if you fail, without more speech, my lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.
Ar. I am enjoin'd by oath to observe three things:
First, never to unfold to any one
That casket 'twas I chose; next, if I fail
Of the right casket, never in my life
To woo a maid in way of marriage;
Lastly,
If I do fail in fortune of my choice,
Immediately to leave you and be gone.
Por. To these injunctions every one doth swear
That comes to hazard for my worthless self.
Ar. And so have I address'd me. Fortune now
To my heart's hope! Gold, silver, and base lead.
Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath:
You shall look fairer, ere I give or hazard.
What says the golden chest? ha! let me see:
Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire.

What many men desire! that 'many' may be Meant
By the foil multitude, that choose by show,
Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach;
Which prises not to the interior, but, like the Marliet,
Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
Even in the force and road of casualty.
I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.
Why then to thee, then silver treasure-house;
Tell me once more what title thou dost bear:
Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves.

And well said too; for who shall go about
To cozen fortune and be honourable
Without the stamp of merit? Let none presume
To wear an undeserved dignity.
0 ! that estates, degrees, and offices
Were not deriv'd corruptly, and that clear honour
Were purchas'd by the merit of the wearer.
How many then should cover that stand bare;
How many be commanded that command;
How much low peasantry would then be glean'd
From the true seed of honour; and how much honour
Pick'd from the stench and ruin of the times
To be new-varnish'd! Well, but to my choice:

Scene VIII.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Salario and Salanio.

Sal. Why, man, I saw Bassanio under sail:
O, he is Gratiano gone along;
In their ship I'm sure Lorenzo is not.

Sal. The villain Jew with outcries rais'd the duke,
O went with him to search Bassanio's ship.
Sal. He came too late, the ship was under sail:
There the duke was given to understand
In a gondola were seen together
Enzo and his amorous Jessica.

Inde, Antonio certified the duke
That they were not with Bassanio in his ship.
Sal. I never heard a passion so confus'd,
Strange, outrageous, and so variable,
The dog Jew did utter in the streets:
Daughter! O my ducats! O my daughter!
With a Christian! O my Christian ducats!
Nay! the law! my ducats, and my daughter!
Sailed bag; two sealed bags of ducats,
Double ducats, stolen from me by my daughter!
Jewels! two stones, two rich and precious stones,
In by my daughter! Justice! find the girl;
What is the stones upon her, and the ducats.
Sal. Why, all the boys in Venice follow him,
In his stones, his daughter, and his ducats.
Sal. Let good Antonio look he keep his day,
He shall pay for this.
Sal. Marry, well remember'd.
Ason'd with a Frenchman yesterday,
O told me, in the narrow seas that part
French and English, there miscarried
A vessel of our country richly fraught
Bought upon Antonio when he told me,
I wish'd in silence that it were not his.
Sal. You were best tell Antonio what you hear;
Do not suddenly, for it may grieve him.
Sal. A kinder gentleman trends not the earth,
As Bassanio and Antonio part:
Sanio told him he would make some speed
His return: he answer'd 'Do not so;
Be not business for my sake, Bassanio,
Stay the very ripening of the time;
For the Jew's bond which he hath of me,
It not enter in your mind of love:
Merry, and employ your chiefest thoughts
Courtship and such fair o'ert'sents of love
Shall conveniently become you there:
Even there, his eye being big with tears,
Sing his face, he put his hand behind him,
With affection wondrous sensible
Wrong Bassanio's hand; and so they parted.
Sal. I think he only loves the world for him.
THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

ACT III.

Scene I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter SALANIO and SALARINO.

SALANIO. Now, what news on the Rialto?

SALARINO. Why, yet it lives there unchecked that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wrecked on the narrow seas; the Goodwins, I think they call the place; a very dangerous flat, and far where the carac-sus of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossip Report be an honest woman of her word.

SALANIO. I would she were as lying a gossip, that as ever knapped ginger, or made her neighbours believe she kept for the death of third husband. But it is true, without any show of privity or crossing the plain highway talk, that the good Antonio, the honest Antinó—O, that I had a title good enough to keep name company!—

SALARINO. Come, the full stop.

SALANIO. Ha! what sayest thou? Why, the eye is, he hath lost a ship.

SALARINO. I would it might prove the end of his losses.

SALANIO. Let me say ‘amen’ betimes, lest the devil cross my prayer, for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew.

Enter SHYLOCK.

How now, Shylock! what news among the merchants?

SHYLOCK. You knew, none so well, none so well you, of my daughter’s flight.

SALARINO. That’s certain: I, for my part, knew the tailor that made the wings she flew withal.

SALANIO. And Shylock, for his own part, knew the bird was fledged; and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the dam.

SHYLOCK. She is damned for it.

SALARINO. That’s certain, if the devil may be judge.

SHYLOCK. My own flesh and blood to rebel! SALANIO. Out upon it, old carrion! rebels it these years?

SHYLOCK. I say my daughter is my flesh and blood.

SALARINO. There is more difference between flesh and hers than between jet and ivory; more between your bloods than there is between Rhenish and Rhenish. But tell us, do you know whether Antonio have any loss at sea or no?

SHYLOCK. There I have another bad match: a bawb, a prodigal, who dare scarce show his head on the Rialto; a beggar, that used to come smug upon the mart; let him look to his bowl; he was wont to call me usurer; let him look at his bowl: he was wont to lend money for Christian courtesy; let him look to his bowl.

SALARINO. Why, I am sure, if he forfeit, thou wilt not take his flesh; what’s that good for?

SHYLOCK. To bait fish withal: if it will feed a thing else, it will feed my revenge. He hath disgraced me, and hindered me half a million laughed at my losses, mocked at my gait scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and what was his reason? I am a Jew. Hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, sens affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same medicines, warm and cooled by the same winter and summer, a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? if you tickle us, do we not laugh? if you poison us, do we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? If we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that. If a Jew were Christian, what is his humility? Revenge. If Christian wrong a Jew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example? Why, revenge, he villain you teach me I will execute, and it all go hard but I will better the instruction.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Gentlemen, my ma'ter Antonio is at his ease, and desires to speak with you both.

Sal. We have been up and down to seek him.

Enter Tubal.

Sal. I here comes another of the tribe: a bird cannot be matched, unless the devil him-if turn Jew.

Exeunt Salano, Salarino, and Servant.

Sky. How now, Tubal! what news from Genoa? hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I come often where I did hear of her, it cannot find her.

Sky. Why, there, there, there, there! a amond, gone cost me two thousand ducats in rankfort! The curse never fell upon our nation I now; I never felt it till now: two thousand cats in that; and other precious, precious ills. I would my daughter were dead at my ot, and the jewels in her ear! would she were arised at my foot, and the ducats in her coffin! of news of them? Why, so: and I know not that's spent in the search: why, thou—loss son! the thief gone with so much, and so uch to find the thief; and no satisfaction, no venge: nor ill luck stirring but what lights my shoulders; no sighs but of my breathing; tears but of my shedding.

Tub. Yes, other men have ill luck too. Antonio, I heard in Genoa—

Tub. I thank God! I thank God! Is't true? t true?

Sky. I spoke with some of the sailors that caped the wreck.

Tub. I thank thee, good Tubal. Good news, od news! ha! ha! Where? in Genoa?

Tub. Thy daughter spent in Genoa, as I heard, one night fourscore ducats.

Sky. Thou sticket a dagger in me: I shall ver see my gold again: fourscore ducats at a ting! fourscore ducats!

Tub. There came divers of Antonio's creditors my company to Venice, that swear he cannot oose but break.

Sky. I am very glad of it: I'll plague him; I torture him: I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them showed me a ring that he dey of your daughter for a monkey.

Sky. Out upon her! Thou mortest me, del; it was my tobacco; I had it of Leah en I was a bachelor: I would not have given for a wilderness of monkeys.

Tub. But Antonio is certainly undone.

Sky. Nay, that's true, that's very true. Go, bal, fee me an officer; bespeak him a fort right before. I will have the heart of him, if forfeit; for were he out of Venice, I can see what merchandise I will. Go, go, Tubal; meet me at our synagogue: go, go Tubal; our synagogue, Tubal.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Belmont. A Room in Portia's House.

Por. I pray you, tarry: pause a day or two before you hazard; for, in choosing wrong, lose your company: therefore forbear awhile. There's something tells me, but it is not love, I would not lose you; and you know yourself, hate counsels not in such a quality. But lest you should not understand me well,—And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought,—I would detain you here some month or two before you venture for me. I could teach you how to choose right, but then I am forewarned;—So will I never be: so may you miss me; but if you do, you'll make me wish a sin, That I had been forewarned. Beshrew your eyes, They have o'look'd me and divided me: One half of me is yours, the other half yours, My own, I would say; but if mine, then yours, And so all yours. O! these naughty times Put bars between the owners and their rights; And so, though yours, not yours. Prove it so, Let fortune o'er half for it, not I. I speak too long; but 'tis to raise the time, To eke it and to draw it out in length, To stay you from election.

Bass. Let me choose.

Por. For as I am, I live upon the rack.

Bass. Upon the rack. Bassano! then confess what treason there is mingled with your love.

Por. Bass. None but that ugly treason of mistrust, which makes me fear the enjoying of my love: there may as well be amity and life 'tween snow and fire, as treason and my love.

Por. Ay, but I fear you speak upon the rack, Where men enforced do speak any thing.

Bass. Promise me life, and I'll confess the truth.

Por. Well then, confess and live.

Bass. 'Confess' and 'love', had been the very sum of my confession: o happy torment, when my torturer doth teach me answers for deliverance! but let me to my fortune and the caskets.

Por. Away then! I am lock'd in one of them: if you do love me, you will find me out. Nerissa and the rest, stand all aloof.

Por. Let music sound while he doth make his choice; then, if he lose, he makes a swan-like end, fading in music: that the comparison may stand more proper, my eye shall be the stream and watery death-bed for him. He may win; and what is music then? then music is even as the flourish when true subjects bow to a new-crowned monarch: such it is.

As are those dulce sounds in break of day that creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear, and summon him to marriage. Now he goes, with no less presence, but with much more love, than young Alcides, when he did redeem the virgin tribute paid by howling Troy to the sea-monster: I stand for sacrifice; the rest aloof are the Dardanian wives, with blear'd visages, come forth to view the issue of the exploit. Go, Hercules! live thou, I live: with much, much more dismay I view the fight than thou mak'st the fray.
A Song, whilst Bassanio comments on the caskets to himself.

Tell me where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart or in the head?
How beget, how nourished?

Reply, reply,
It is engender'd in the eyes,
With gazing fed; and fancy dies
In the cradle where it lies.
Let us all vying fancy's knell:
I'll begin it,—Ding, dong, bell.

All. Ding, dong, bell.

Bass. So may the outward shows be least themselves; The world is still decid'v with ornament. In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt But, being season'd with a gracious voice, Obscures the show of evil? In religion, What damned error, but some sober brow Will bless it and approve it with a text. Hiding the grossness with fair ornament? There is no vice so simple but assumes Some mark of virtue on his outward parts. How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false As stairs of sand, wear yet upon their chins The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars, Who, inward search'd, have livers white as milk; And these assume but valour's excrement To render them redoubled! Look on beauty, And you shall see 'tis purchas'd by the weight; Which therein works a miracle in nature, Making them lightest that wear most of it: So are those cradled snaky golden locks Which make such wanton gambols with the wind, Upon supposed fairness, often known To be the dowry of a second head, The scull that bred them in the sepulchre. Thus ornament is but the gilded shore To a most dangerous sea; the beauteous scarf Veiling an Indian beauty; in a word, The seeming truth which cunning times put on To entrap the wisest. Therefore, thou gaudy gold,

Hard food for Midas, I will none of thee; Nor none of thee, thou pale and common drudge 'Tween man and man; but thou, thou meagre lead, Which rather threat'nest than dost promiseught, Thy plainness moves me more than eloquence, And here choose I: joy be the consequence!

Fair Portia's counterfeit! What demi god Hath come so near creation? Move these eyes? Or whether, riding on the balls of mine, Seem they in motion? Here are sever'd lips, Parted with sugar breath; so sweet a bar Should sunder such sweet friends. Here in her hairs

The painter plays the spider, and hath woven A golden mesh to entrap the hearts of men Faster than grats in cobwebs: but her eyes—

How could he see to do them? having made on Methinks it should have power to steal both in And leave itself unfinish'd: yet look, how far The substance of my praise doth wrong th' shadow In underprizing it, so far this shadow Doth limp behind the substance. Here's th' scroll, The continent and summary of my fortune. You that choose not by the view, Chance as fair and choose as true! Since this fortune falls to you, Be content and seek no new. If you be will pleas'd with this And hold your fortune for your bliss, Turn you where your lady is And claim her with a loving kiss.

A gentle scroll. Fair lady, by your leave; I come by note, to give and to receive. Like one of two contending in a prize, That thinks he hath done well in people's eye Hearing applause and universal shout, Giddy in spirit, still gazing in a doubt Whether those peals of praise be his or no; So, thrice-fair lady, stand I, even so, As doubtful whether what I see be true, Until confirm'd, sign'd, ratifyed by you.

Por. You see me, Lord Bassanio, where I stan Such as I am: though for myself alone I would not be ambitious in my wish, To wish myself much better; yet for you I would be trebled twenty times myself; A thousand times more fair, ten thousand times More rich; That only to stand high in your account, I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends, Exceed account: but the full sum of me Is sum of nothing; which, to term in gross, Is an unlesson'd girl, unschool'd, unpractis'd; Happy in this, she is not yet so old But she may learn; happier than this, She is not bred so dull but she can learn; Happiest of all is that her gentle spirit Commits itself to yours to be directed, As from her lord, her governor, her king. Myself and what is mine to you and yours Is now converted: but now I was the lord Of this fair mansion, master of my servants, Queen o'er myself; and even now, but now, This house, these servants, and this same myself Are yours, my lord. I give them with this ring: Which when you part from, lose, or give away Let it press the ruin of your love, And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

Bass. Madam, you have bereft me of all word Only my blood speaks to you in my veins; And there is such confusion in my powers, As, after some oration fairly spoke By a beloved prince, there doth appear Among the buzzing pleased multitude; Where every something, being bent together, Turns to a wild of nothing, save of joy, Express'd and not express'd. But when this rift Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence O! then be bold to say Bassanio's dead. Ner. My lord and lady, it is now our time, That have stood by and seen our wishes pros. To cry, good joy. Good joy, my lord and lady.
THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

190 wish you all the joy that you can wish;
195 or I am sure you can wish none from me:
200 ad when your honours mean to solemnize
205 the bargain of your faith, I do beseech you,
210 en at that time I may be married too.

Bass. With all my heart, so thou canst get a wife.

Gra. I thank your lordship, you have got me one.

Bass. Eyes, my lord, can look as swift as yours:
220 a saw the mistress, I beheld the maid;
225 and, lo! I lov'd for intermission.

Gra. I am more pertains to me, my lord, than you.

Bass. Our fortune stood upon the caskets there;
230 d so did mine too, as the matter falls;
235 r no wooing here until I sweat again,
240 d swearing till my very roof was dry
245 th oaths of love, at last, if promise last,
250 not a promise of this fair one here
255 have her love, provided that your fortune lie'd her mistress.

Por. Is this true, Nerissa?

Ner. Madam, it is, so stand pleas'd withal.

Bass. And do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?

Por. Yes, faith, my lord.

Bass. Our feast shall be much honour'd in your marriage.

Por. We'll play with them the first boy for a Susan ducats.

Ner. What! and stake down?

Por. No; we shall ne'er win at that sport, and be done.

t who comes here? Lorenzo, and his infidel! bat! and my old Venetian friend Salanio?

Enter Lorenzo, Jessica, and Salanio.

Por. Lorenzo, and Salanio, welcome hither, that the youth of my new interest here 290 power to bid you welcome. By your leave, my very friends and countrymen, et Portia, welcome.

Por. So do I, my lord:
295 ey are entirely welcome.

Por. I thank your honour. For my part, my lord, purpose was not to have seen you here;
t meeting with Salanio by the way,
did entreat me, past all saying nay,
come with him along.

Salan. I did, my lord, d I have reason for it. Signor Antonio 305 mends him to you. Gives BASSANIO a letter.

Bass. Ere I ope his letter, say you, tell me how my good friend doth.

Salan. Not sick, my lord, unless it be in mind;
310 well, unless in mind: his letter there ill show you his estate.

Por. Nerissa, cheer you stranger; bid her welcome.
315 ur hand, Salanio. What's the news from Venice?

Salan. I would you had won the fleece that he hath lost.

Por. There are some shrewd contents in you same paper, at steals the colour from Bassanio's cheek;
330 the dear friend dead, else nothing in the world
335 Could turn so much the constitution
340 Of any constant man. What, worse and worse!
With leave, Bassanio; I am half yourself,
And I must freely have the half of any thing
That this same paper brings you.

Bass. O sweet Portia!

Por. Here are a few of the unpleasant'st words
350 That ever blotted paper. Gentle lady,
When I did first impart my love to you,
355 I freely told you all the wealth I had 360 Ran in my veins, I was a gentleman:
And then I told you true; and yet, dear lady,
365 Rating myself at nothing, you shall see
How much I was a braggart. When I told you
370 My state was nothing, I should then have told you
375 That I was worse than nothing; for, indeed,
380 I have engag'd myself to a dear friend,
Engag'd my friend to his mere enemy,
385 To feed my means. Here is a letter, lady;
The paper as the body of my friend,
And every word in it a gaging wound,
390 Issuing life-blood. But is it true, Salanio?
395 Have all his ventures fail'd? What! not one hit?
398 From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England,
400 From Lisbon, Barbary, and India?
And not one vessel 'scape the dreadful touch
405 Of merchant-marrying rocks?

Salan. Not one, my lord.

Besides, it should appear, that if he had
The present money to discharge the Jew,
415 He would not take it. Never did I know
A creature, that did bear the shape of man,
So keen and greedy to confound a man.
He plies the duke at morning and at night,
And doth impeach the freedom of the state,
If they deny him justice: twenty merchants,
The duke himself, and the magnificoes
420 Of greatest port, have all persuad'd with him;
But none can drive him from the envious plea
Of forfeiture, of justice, and his bond.

Tes. When I was with him, I have heard him swear
To Tubal and to Chus, his countrymen,
That he would rather have Antonio's flesh
Than twenty times the value of the sum
That he did owe him; and I know, my lord,
If law, authority, and power deny not,
430 It will go hard with poor Antonio.

Por. Is it your dear friend that is thus in trouble?

Bass. The dearest friend to me, the kindest man,
The best-condition'd and unwearied spirit
In doing courtesies, and one in whom
The ancient Roman honour more appears 440 Than any that draws breath in Italy.

Por. What sum owes he the Jew?

Bass. For me, three thousand ducats.

Por. What! no more?

Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond:
Double six thousand, and then treble that,
445 Before a friend of this description
Shall lose a hair through Bassanio's fault.
First go with me to church and call me wife,
And then away to Venice to your friend;
For never shall you lie by Portia's side
With an unquiet soul. You shall have gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times over:
When it is paid, bring your true friend along.
My maid Nerissa and myself meantime
Will live as maids and widows. Come, away! 310
For you shall hence upon your wedding-day.
Bid your friends welcome, show a merry cheer;
Since you are dear bought, I will love you dear.
But let me hear the letter of your friend.

Bass. Sweet Bassanio, my ships have all miscarried, my creditors grow cruel, my estate is very low, my bond to the Jew is forfeit; and since, in praying it, it is impossible I should live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might but see you at my death. Notwithstanding, use your pleasure: if your love do not persuade you to come, let not my letter.

Por. O love, dispatch all business, and be gone! 322
Bass. Since I have your good leave to go away,
I will make haste; but till I come again,
No bed shall e'er be guilty of my stay;
Nor rest be interposer 'twixt us twain.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Venice. A Street.

Enter Shylock, Salarino, Antonio, and Gaoler.

Shy. Gaoler, look to him: tell not me of mercy; This is the fool that lent out money gratis: Gaoler, look to him.

Ant. Hear me yet, good Shylock.

Shy. I'll have my bond; speak not against my bond:
I have sworn an oath that I will have my bond,
Thou calld'st me dog before thou hast'd a cause,
But, since I am a dog, beware my fangs:
The duke shall grant me justice. I do wonder,
Thou naughtly gaoler, that thou art so fond
To come abroad with him at his request.

Ant. I pray thee, hear me speak.

Shy. I'll have my bond; I will not hear thee speak:
I'll have my bond, and therefore speak no more.
I'll not be made a soft and dull-eyed fool,
To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessors. Follow not;
I'll have no speaking; I will have my bond.

Salar. It is the most impenetrable cur That ever kept with men.

Ant. Let him alone:
I'll follow him no more with bootless prayers.
He seeks my life; his reason well I know.
I oft deliver'd from his forfeitures
Many that have at times made monn to me;
Therefore he hates me.

Salar. I am sure the duke Will never grant this forfeit to hold.

Ant. 'The duke cannot deny the course of law:
For the commodity that strangers have With us in Venice, if it be denied,
Will much impeach the justice of his state;
Since that the trade and profit of the city Consisteth of all nations. Therefore, go:
These griefs and losses have so bated me,
That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh
To-morrow to my bloody creditor.
Well, gaoler, on. Pray God, Bassanio come To see me pay his debt, and then I care not!

Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — Belmont. A Room in Portia House.

Enter Portia, Nerissa, Lorenzo, Jessica and Balthazar.

Lor. Madam, although I speak it in your presence,
You have a noble and a true conceit
Of god-like amity; which appears most strong In bearing thus the absence of your lord.
But if you know to whom you show this honor, How true a gentleman you send relief,
How dear a lover of my lord your husband, I know you would be prouder of the work Than customary bounty can enforce you.

Por. I never did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now: for in companions That do converse and waste the time together Whose souls do bear an equal yoke of love,
There must be needs a like proportion Of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit; Which makes me think that this Antonio, Being the bosom lover of my lord,
Must needs be like my lord. If it be so,
How little is the cost I have bestow'd In purchasing the semblance of my soul From out the state of hellish cruelty! This comes too near the praising of myself; Therefore no more of it: hear other things.
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands The husbandry and manage of my house Until my lord's return; for mine own part, I have toward heaven breathed a secret vow To live in prayer and contemplation, Only attended by Nerissa here, Until her husband and my lord's return. There is a monastery two miles off, And there we will abide. I do desire you Not to deny this imposition,
The which my love and some necessity Now lays upon you.

Lor. Madam, with all my heart I shall obey you in all fair commands.
Por. My people do already know my mind, And will acknowledge you and Jessica In place of Lord Bassanio and myself. So fare you well till we shall meet again.

Lor. Fair thoughts and happy hours attend you!

Jes. I wish your ladyship all heart's content
Por. I thank you for your wish, and am we pleas'd
To wish it back on you: fare you well, Jessica

Exeunt JESSICA and LORENZO.

Now, Balthazar, As I have ever found thee honest-true, So let me find thee still. Take this same letter And use thou all the endeavours of a man In speed to Padua: see thou render this Into my cousin's hand, Doctor Bellario; And, look, what notes and garments he doth give thee,
Bring them, I pray thee, with imagin'd speed Unto the tryst, to the common ferry Which trades to Venice. Waste no time in wor.
But get thee gone: I shall be there before th
Bal. Madam, I go with all convenient speed.

Por. Come on, Nerissa: I have work in ha
The Merchant of Venice.

Scene V.—The Same. A Garden.

Enter Launcelot and Jessica.

Laun. Yes, truly; for, look you, the sins of the father are to be laid upon the children; therefore, I promise you, I fear you. I was always with you, and so now I speak my agitation; the matter: therefore, be of good cheer; for I think you are damned. There is but one in it that can do you any good, and that is a kind of bastard hope neither.

Jes. And what hope is that, I pray thee?

Laun. Marry, you may partly hope that your mother got you not, that you are not the Jew’s lighter.

Jes. That were a kind of bastard hope, indeed: the sins of my mother should be visited upon me.

Laun. Truly then I fear you are damned both father and mother: thus when I shun Seylla, ur father, I fall into Charybdis, your mother: all you are gone both ways.

Jes. I shall be saved by my husband; he hath done me a Christian.

Laun. Truly, the more to blame he: we were Christians enow before; e’en as many as could live one by another. This making of Christians will raise the price of hogs: if we grow all be pork-eaters, we shall not shortly have a breather on the coals for money.

Jes. I’ll tell my husband, Launcelot, what you say: here he comes.

Enter Lorenzo.

Lor. I shall grow jealous of you shortly, uncle; if you thus get my wife into corners.

Jes. Nay, you need not fear us, Lorenzo: uncle and I are out. He tells me flatly, there is no mercy for me in heaven, because I am a Jew’s daughter: and he says you are no member of the commonwealth, for in converting Jews to Christians, you raise the price of pork.

Lor. I shall answer that better to the commonwealth than you can. for the getting up of the negro’s belly: the Moor is with child by you, Launcelot.

Laun. It is much that the Moor should be more than reason; but if she be less than an honest woman, she is indeed more than I took her for.

Lor. How every fool can play upon the word! I think the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence, and discourse grow commendable in none only but parrots. Go in, sirrah: bid them prepare for dinner.

Laun. That is done, sir; they have all stomachs.

Lor. Goodly Lord, what a wit-snapper are you! then bid them prepare dinner.

Laun. That is done too, sir; only ‘cover’ is the word.

Lor. Will you cover then, sir?

Laun. Not so, sir, neither; I know my duty.

Lor. Yet more quarrelling with occasion! Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant? I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning: go to thy fellows; bid them cover the table, serve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

Laun. For the table, sir, it shall be served in; for the meat, sir, it shall be covered; for your coming in to dinner, sir, why, let it be as humours and conceits shall govern.

Exit.

Lor. O dear discretion, how his words are suited! The fool hath planted in his memory An army of good words; and I do know A many fools, that stand in better place, Garnish’d like him, that for a tricksy word Defy the matter. How cheer’st thou, Jessica? And now, good sweet, say thy opinion; How dost thou like the Lord Bassanio’s wife? Jes. Past all expressing. It is very meet The Lord Bassanio live an upright life, For, having such a blessing in his lady, He finds the joys of heaven here on earth; And if on earth he do not mean it, then In reason he should never come to heaven. Why, if two gods should play some heavenly match, And on the wager lay two earthly women, And Portia there, must be something else Pawn’d with the other, for the poor rude world Hath not her fellow.

Lor. Even such a husband Hast thou of me as she is for a wife.

Jes. Nay, but ask my opinion too of that.

Lor. I will anon; first, let us go to dinner.

Jes. Nay, let me praise you while I have a stomach.

Lor. No, pray thee, let it serve for table-talk; Then howsoe’er thou speak’st, ‘mong other things I shall digest it.

Jes. Well, I’ll set you forth.

Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Scene I.—Venice. A Court of Justice.

Enter the Duke; the Magnificoes; Antonio, Bassanio, Gratiano, Salario, Salanio, and others.

Duke. What, is Antonio here?

Ant. Ready, so please your grace.
Duke. I am sorry for thee: thou art come to answer
A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch
Uncapable of pity, void and empty
From any dram of mercy.

And. I have heard
Your grace hath ta’en great pains to qualify
His rigorous course; but since he stands obdurate,
And that no lawful means can carry me
Out of his envy’s reach, I do oppose
My patience to his fury, and arm’d
To suffer with a quietness of spirit
The very tyranny and rage of his.

Duke. Go one, and call the Jew into the court.
Salar. He’s ready at the door: becomes, my lord.

Enter Shylock.

Duke. Make room, and let him stand before our face.
Shylock, the world thinks, and I think so too,
That thou but lead’st this fashion of thy malice
To the last hour of act; and then ‘tis thought
Thou’lt show thy mercy and remorse more strange
Than is thy strange apparent cruelty;
And where thou now exact’st the penalty,
Which is a pound of this poor merchant’s flesh,
Thou wilt not only lose the forfeiture,
But, touch’d with human gentleness and love,
Forgive a moiety of the principal;
Glancing an eye of pity on his losses,
That have of late so huddled on his back,
Even to press a royal merchant down,
And pluck commiseration of his state
From brass-y bosoms and rough hearts of flint,
From stubborn Turks and Tartars, never train’d to offices of tender courtesy.
We all expect a gentle answer, Jew.

Shy. I have possess’d your grace of what I purpose;
And by our holy Sabbath have I sworn
To have the due and forfeit of my bond:
If you deny it, let the danger light
Upon your charter and your city’s freedom.
You’ll ask me, why I rather choose to have
A weight of carrion flesh than to receive
Three thousand ducats: I’ll not answer that:
But, say, it is my humour: is it answer’d?
What if my house be troubled with a rat,
And I be pleas’d to give ten thousand ducats
To have it ban’d? What, are you answer’d yet?
Some men there are love not a gaping pig;
Some, that are mad if they behold a cat;
And others, when the bagpipe sings i’ the nose,
Cannot contain their urine: for affection,
Mistress of passion, sways it to the mood
Of what it likes, or loathes. Now, for your answer:
As there is no firm reason to be rendered,
Why he cannot abide a gaping pig;
Why he, a harmless necessary cat;
Why he, a woollen bagpipe; but of force
Must yield to such inevitable shame
As to offend, himself being offended;
So can I give no reason, nor I will not,
More than a lodg’d hate and a certain loathing
I bear Antonio, that I follow thus
A losing suit against him. Are you answer’d?

Bass. This is no answer, thou unfeeling man,
To excuse the current of thy cruelty.

Shy. I am not bound to please thee with my answer.

Bass. Do all men kill the things they do not love?
Shy. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?
Bass. Every offence is not a hate at first.
Shy. What wouldst thou have a serpent sit and rise twice?

Ant. I pray you, think you question with the Jew:
You may as well go stand upon the beach,
And bid the main flood bathe his usual height
You may as well use question with the wolf,
Why he bath made the ewe bleat for the lamb?
You may as well forbid the mountain pines
To wag their high tops, and to make no noise
When they are fretted with the gusts of heaven,
You may as well do any thing most hard,
As seek to soften that—than which what harder?

His Jewish heart: therefore, I do beseech you
Make no more offers, use no further means;
But with all brief and plain convenience,
Let me have judgment, and the Jew his will.
Bass. For thy three thousand ducats here is:
Shy. If every ducat in six thousand ducats
Were in six parts, and every part a ducat,
I would not draw them. I would have my bond.
Duke. How shall thou hope for mercy, rending none?

Shy. What judgment shall I dread, doing no wrong?
You have among you many as purchas’d slave
Which, like your asses and your dogs and mules,
You use in abject and in slavish parts,
Because you bought them: shall I say to you,
Let them be free, marry them to your heirs?
Why sweat they under burdens? let their bee made as soft as yours, and let their palate
Be season’d with such vandals! You will answer,
The slaves are ours: so do I answer you:
The pound of flesh, which I demand of him,
Is dearly bought; ‘tis mine, and I will have
It, if you deny me, fie upon your law!
There is no force in the decrees of Venice.
I shall for judgment: answer, shall I have
Duke. Upon my power I may dismiss this cause.
Unless Bellario, a learned doctor,
Whom I have sent for to determine this,
Come here to-day.

Salar. My lord, here stays with a messenger
A letter from Padua.

Duke. Bring us the letters: call the messenger.
Bass. Good cheer, Antonio! What, man, con-age yet?
The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and Ere thou shalt lose for me one drop of blood.

Ant. I am a tainted waster of the flock,
Meetest for death: the weakest kind of fruit
Drops earliest to the ground, and so let me:
You cannot better be employ’d, Bassanio,
Than to live still, and write mine epitaph.

Enter Nerissa, dressed like a lawyer’s clerk.

Duke. Came you from Padua, from Bellario?
Ner. From both, my lord. Bellario greets your grace.

Present a letter?

Bass. Why dost thou whet thy knife so use-estly?
Shy. To cut the forfeiture from that bankrupt there.
Por. Then must the Jew be merciful.

Shy. On what compulsion must I? tell me that.

Por. The quality of mercy is not strain'd,
It dropeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath: it is twice bless'd;
It blesseth him that gives and him that takes:
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown;
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
But mercy is above this sceptred sway,
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself,
And earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy season'd justice. Therefore, Jew,
Though justice be thy plea, consider this,
That in the course of justice none of us
Should see salvation: we do pray for mercy,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy. I have spoke thus much
To mitigate the justice of thy plea,
Which if thou follow, this strict court of Venice
Must needs give sentence 'gainst the merchant there.

Shy. My deeds upon my head! I crave the law,
The penalty and forfeit of my bond.

Por. Is he not able to discharge the money?

Bass. Yes, here I tender it for him in the court;
Yea, twice the sum: if that will not suffice,
I will be bound to pay it ten times o'er.

Por. On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart.
If this will not suffice, it must appear
That malice bears down truth. And I beseech you,
Wrest once the law to your authority:
To do a great right, do a little wrong,
And curb this cruel devil of his will.

Por. It must not be. There is no power in Venice
Can alter a decree established:
Twill be recorded for a precedent,
And many an error by the same example.

Por. Will rush into the state. It cannot be.

Shy. A Daniel come to judgment! yea, a Daniel!
O wise young judge, how do I honour thee!

Por. I pray you, let me look upon the bond.

Shy. Here 'tis, most reverend doctor; here it is.

Por. Shylock, there's thrice thy money offer'd thee.

Shy. An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven:
Shall I lay perjury upon my soul?
No, not for Venice.

Por. Why, this bond is forfeit;

And lawfully by this the Jew may claim

A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off

Nearest the merchant's heart. Be mercifull:
Take thrice thy money; bid me tear the bond.

Shy. When it is paid according to the tenour,
It doth appear ye are a worthy judge;
You know the law, your exposition
Hath been most sound: I charge you by the law,
Whereof you are a well-deserving pillar,
Proceed to judgment: by my soul I swear
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me. I stay here on my bond.

Ant. Most heartily I do beseech the court to give the judgment.

Por. Why then, thus it is:
You must prepare your bosom for his knife.
Shy. O noble judge! O excellent young man!
Por. For the intent and purpose of the law
Hath full relation to the penalty,
Which here appeareth due upon the bond.
Shy. 'Tis very true. O wise and upright judge!
How much more elder art thou than thy looks?
Por. Therefore lay bare thy bosom.
Shy. Ay, his breast; 251
So says the bond: doth it not, noble judge?
'Nearest his heart': those are the very words.
Por. It is so. Are there balance here to weigh
The flesh?
Shy. I have them ready.
Por. Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on thy charge,
To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death.
Shy. Is it so nominated in the bond?
Por. It is not so express'd; but what of that?
'Twere good you do so much for charity. 261
Shy. I cannot find it: 'tis not in the bond.
Por. You, merchant, have you any thing to say?
Ant. But little: I am arm'd and well prepar'd.
Give me your hand, Bassanio: fare you well! Grieve not that I am fallen to this for you;
For herein Fortune shows herself more kind
Than is her custom: it is still her use
To let the wretched man outlive his wealth,
To view with hollow eye and wrinkled brow
An age of poverty; from which lingering penance
Of such a misery doth she cut me off.
Commend me to your honourable wife:
Tell her the process of Antonio's end;
Say how I lov'd you, speak me fair in death;
And, when the tale is told, bid her be judge
Whether Bassanio had not once a love.
Repent but you that you shall lose your friend,
And he repents not that he pays your debt;
For if the Jew do cut but deep enough,
I'll pay it instantly with all my heart.
Bass. Antonio, I am married to a wife
Which is as dear to me as life itself;
But life itself, my wife, and all the world,
Are not with me esteem'd above thy life:
I would lose all, ay, sacrifice them all,
Here to this devil, to deliver you.
Por. Your wife would give you little thanks for that,
If she were by to hear you make the offer.
Gra. I have a wife, whom, I protest, I love:
I would she were in heaven, so she could 259
Entreat some power to change this curish Jew.
Ner. 'Tis well you offer it behind her back;
The wish would make else an unquiet house.
Shy. These be the Christian husbands! I have a daughter;
Would any of the stock of Barrabas
Had been her husband rather than a Christian!
We trifle time; I pray thee, pursue sentence.
Por. A pound of that same merchant's flesh is thine:
The court awards it, and the law doth give it.
Shy. Most rightful judge!
Por. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast:
The law allows it, and the court awards it.
Shy. Most learned judge! A sentence! Come, prepare!
Por. Tarry a little: there is something else.
This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood;
The words expressly are 'a pound of flesh':
THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

To BASSANIO. And, for your love, I’ll take this ring from you. Do not draw back your hand; I’ll take no more; And you in love shall not deny me this.

Bass. This ring, good sir! alas! it is a trifle; I will not shame myself to give you this.

Por. I will have nothing else but this; And now methinks I have a mind to it.

Bass. There’s more depends on this than on the value, The dearest ring in Venice will I give you, And find it out by proclamation; Only for this, I pray you, pardon me.

Por. I see, sir, you are liberal in offers: You taught me first to beg, and now methinks You teach me how a beggar should be answer’d.

Bass. Good sir, this ring was given me by my wife; And when she put it on, she made me vow That I should neither sell nor give nor lose it.

Por. That ‘scuse serves many men to save their gifts. An if your wife be not a mad-woman, And know well I have deserved the ring, She would not hold out enemy for ever, For giving it to me. Well, peace be with you.

Exit PORTIA and NERISSA.

Ant. My Lord Bassanio, let him have the ring; Let his deservings and my love withal 400 Be valued against your wife’s commandment.

Bass. Go, Gratiano; run and overtake him; Give him the ring, and bring him, if thou canst, Unto Antonio’s house. Away! make haste.

Exit Gratiano.

Come, you and I will thither presently, And in the morning early will we both Fly toward Belmont. Come, Antonio.

Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street.

Enter PORTIA and NERISSA.

Por. Inquire the Jew’s house out, give him this deed, And let him sign it. We’ll away to-night, And be a day before our husbands home: This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Fair sir, you are well o’erta’en. My Lord Bassanio upon more advice Hath sent you here this ring, and doth entreat Your company at dinner.

Por. That cannot be:
His ring I do accept most thankfully; And so, I pray you, tell him: furthermore, I pray you, show my youth old Shylock’s house.

Gra. That will I do.

Ner. Sir, I would speak with you.

Aside to Portia. I’ll see if I can get my husband’s ring, Which I did make him swear to keep for ever.

Por. Thou may’st, I warrant. We shall have old swearing That they did give the rings away to men; But we’ll outface them, and outswear them too. Away! make haste: thou know’st where I will tarry.

Ner. Come, good sir, will you show me to this house?

Exit.
ACT V.

SCENE I.—Belmont. The Avenue to Portia’s House.

Enter Lorenzo and Jessica.

Lor. The moon shines bright: in such a night as this,
When the sweet wind did gently kiss the trees
And they did make no noise, in such a night
Troilus methinks mounted the Trojan walls,
And sigh’d his soul toward the Grecian tents,
Where Cressid lay that night.

Jes. In such a night
Did Thisbe fearfully o’ertrip the dew,
And saw the lion’s shadow ere himself,
And ran dismay’d away.

Lor. In such a night
Stood Dido with a willow in her hand
Upon the wild sea-banks, and wav’d her love,
To come again to Carthage.

Jes. In such a night
Medea gather’d the enchanted herbs
That did renew old Jason.

Lor. In such a night
Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew,
And with an untir’d love did run from Venice,
As far as Belmont.

Jes. In such a night
Did young Lorenzo swear he lov’d her well,
Stealing her soul with many vows of faith,
And ne’er a true one.

Lor. In such a night
Did pretty Jessica, like a little shrew,
Slender her love, and he forgave it her.

Jes. I would out-night you, did no body come;
But hark! I hear the footing of a man.

Enter Stephano.

Lor. Who comes so fast in such a silence of the night?
Ste. A friend.

Lor. A friend! what friend? your name, I pray you, friend?
Ste. Stephano is my name; and I bring word
My mistress will before the break of day
Be here at Belmont: she doth stray about
By holy crosses, where she kneels and prays
For happy wedlock hours.

Lor. Who comes with her?
Ste. None but a holy hermit and her maid.
I pray you, is my master yet return’d?

Lor. He is not, nor we have not heard from him.

Ste. But go we in, I pray thee, Jessica,
And ceremoniously let us prepare
Some welcome for the mistress of the house.

Enter Launcelot.

Lau.’ Sola, sola! wo ha, ho! sola, sola!
Lor. Who calls?

Lau. Sola! did you see Master Lorenzo?
Mas’tor Lorenzo! sola, sola!
Lor. Leave halloaing, man; here.

Lau. Sola! where? where?
Lor. Here.

Lau. Tell him there’s a post come from my master, with his horn full of good news: my master will be here ere morning. Exit.

Lor. Sweet soul, let’s in, and there expect their coming.

And yet no matter; why should we go in?
My friend Stephano, signify, I pray you,
Within the house, your mistress is at hand;
And bring your music forth into the air.

Exit Stephano.

How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bed,
Here will we sit, and let the sounds of musick
Creep in our ears: soft stillness and the night
Become the touches of sweet harmony.

Sit, Jessica: look how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold:
There’s not the smallest orb which thou behold’st,
But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins;
Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But, whilst this muddy venture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.

Enter Musicians.

Come, ho! and wake Diana with a horn:
With sweetest touches pierce your mistress’ ear,
And draw her home with music.

Jes. I am never merry when I hear sweet music.

Lor. The reason is, your spirits are attentive.
For do but note a wild and wanton herd,
Or race of youthful and unconduite colts,
fetching mad bounds, bellowing and neighing loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blood;
If they but hear a perchance a trumpet sound
Or any air of music touch their ears,
You shall perceive they make a mutual stare,
Their savage eyes turn’d to a modest gaze
By the sweet power of music: therefore the Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones,
flods;
Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage
But music for the time doth change his nature:
The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not mov’d with concord of sweet sons
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils;
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus;
Let no such man be trusted. Mark the music.

Enter Portia and Nerissa, at a distance.

Por. That light which we see is burning in my house.
How far that little candle throws his beams,
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

Ner. When the moon shines, we did not need the candle.

Por. So doth the greater glory dim the less.
A substitute shines brightly as a king
Until a king be by, and then his state
Empties itself, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters. Music! lark!

Ner. It is your music, madam, of the hour;
Por. Nothing is good, I see, without respect.
Methinks, it sounds much sweeter than by

Ner. Silence bestows that virtue on it, madam.

Por. The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark.
When neither is attended, and I think
The nightingale, if she should sing by day,
When every goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a musician than the wren.

How many things by season season’s are
To their right praise and true perfection?

Peace, ho! the moon sleeps with Endymion,
And would not be awak’d. Music ceases.
The Merchant of Venice.

Lor. That is the voice, I am much deceiv'd, of Portia.
Por. He knows me as the blind man knows the cuckoo, the bad voice.
Lor. Dear lady, welcome home.
Por. We have been praying for our husbands' welfare, with speed, we hope, the better for our words, as they return'd?
Lor. Madam, they are not yet; if there is come a messenger before, signify their coming.
Por. Go in, Nerissa: we order to my servants that they take note at all of our being absent hence; you, Lorenzo; Jessica, nor you.

Aucket sounded.
Lor. Your husband is at hand; I hear his trumpet.
Por. This night methinks is but the daylight sick; looks a little paler; 'tis a day, as the day is when the sun is hid.

Bassanio, Antonio, Gratiano, and their Followers.

Bass. We should hold day with the Antipodes, you would walk in absence of the sun.
Por. Let me give light, but let me not be light; a light wife doth make a heavy husband, I never be Bassanio so for me: God sort all! You are welcome home, my lord.
Bass. I thank you, madam. Give welcome to my friend:

is the man, this is Antonio, whom I am so infinitely bound.
Por. You should in all sense be much bound to him, as I hear, he was much bound for you.
Por. No more than I am well acquitt'd for.
Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house: must appear in other ways than words, refore I scant this breathing courtesy.
Por. To Nerissa. By yonder moon I swear you do me wrong;
aih, I gave it to the judge's clerk: did he were get that had it, for my part, e you do take it, love, so much at heart.
Por. A quarrel, ho, already! what's the matter?
Por. About a hoop of gold, a pauly ring she did give me, whose poesy was all the world like cutlers' poetry a knife, 'Love me, and leave me not.'
Por. What talk you of the posy, or the value? swore to me, when I did give it you, you would wear it till your hour of death, that should lie with you in your grave: much not for me, yet for your vehement oaths, should have been respective and have kept it: it a judge's clerk! no, God's my judge, clerk will not wear hair on face that had it.
Por. He will, an if he live to be a man.
Por. Ay, if a woman live to be a man.
Por. Now, by this hand, I gave it to a youth, ad of boy, a little scrubbed boy, igher than thyself, the judge's clerk, sting boy, that begg'd it as a fee: did not for my heart deny it him.

Por. You were to blame, I must be plain with you, to part so slightly with your wife's first gift; A thing stuck on with oaths upon your finger, And so riveted with faith unto your flesh, I gave my love a ring and made him swear. Never to part with it; and here he stands; I dare be sworn for him he would not leave it. Nor pluck it from his finger for the wealth. That the world masters. Now, in faith, Gratiano, You give your wife too unkind a cause of grief: An 'twere to me, I should be mad at it.

Bass. Aside. Why, I was best to cut my left hand off,
And swear I lost the ring defending it.

Gra. My Lord Bassanio gave his ring away Unto the judge that begg'd it, and indeed De-erv'd it too; and then the boy, his clerk, That took some pains in writing, be begg'd mine; And neither man nor master would take aught But the two rings.
Por. What ring gave you, my lord?

Not that, I hope, which you receiv'd of me.
Bass. If I could add a lie unto a fault,
I would deny it; but you see my finger Hath not the ring upon it; it is gone.
Por. Even so void is your false heart of truth. By heaven, I will ne'er come in your bed Until I see the ring.

Ner. Nor I in yours
Till I again see mine.

Bass. Sweet Portia,
If you did know to whom I gave the ring,
If you did know for whom I gave the ring,
And would conceive for what I gave the ring,
And how unwillingly I left the ring,
When nought would be accepted but the ring,
You would abate the strength of your displeasure.
Por. If you had known the virtue of the ring,
Or half her worthiness that gave the ring,
Or your own honour to contain the ring,
You would not then have parted with the ring.
What man is there so much unreasonable,
If you had pleas'd to have defended it
With any terms of zeal, wanted the modesty
To urge the thing held as a ceremony!
Nerissa teaches me what to believe:
I'll die for't, but some woman had the ring.

Bass. No, by mine honour, Portia, by my soul,
No woman had it; but a civil doctor,
Which did refuse three thousand ducats of me,
And begg'd the ring, the which I did deny him,
And suffer'd him to go displeas'd away;
Even he that did uphold the very life
Of my dearest friend. What should I say, sweet lady?
I was enforc'd to send it after him;
I was beset with shame and courtesy;
My honour would not let ingratitude
So much besmear it. Pardon me, good lady,
For, by these blessed candles of the night,
Had you been there, I think you would have begg'd
The ring of me to give the worthy doctor.
Por. Let not that doctor e'er come near my house.
Since he hath got the jewel that I lov'd,
And that which you did swear to keep for me,
I will become as liberal as you;
I'll not deny him any thing I have;
No, not my body, nor my husband's bed.
Know him I shall, I am well sure of it:
Lie not a night from home; watch me like Argus:
If you do not, if I be left alone,
Now, by mine honour, which is yet mine own,
I'll have that doctor for my bedfellow.

_Ner._ And I his clerk; therefore, be well advis'd
How you do leave me to mine own protection.

_Gra._ Well, do you so: let not me take him
then;

For if I do, I 'll mar the young clerk's pen.

_Ant._ I am the unhappy subject of these quarrels.

_Por._ Sir, I grieve not you; you are welcome no otherwise.

_Bass._ Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong;
And in the hearing of these many friends,
I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes,
Wherein I see myself.—

_Por._ Mark you but that!
In both my eyes he doubly sees himself;
In each eye, one: swear by your double self,
And there's an oath of credit.

_Bass._ Nay, but hear me:
Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear
I never more will break an oath with thee.

_Ant._ I once did lend my body for his wealth,
Which, but for him that had your husband's ring,
Had quite miscarried: I dare be bound again,
My soul upon the forfeit, that your lord
Will never more break faith advisedly.

_Por._ Then you shall be his surety. Give him this.
And bid him keep it better than the other.

_Ant._ Here, Lord Bassanio; swear to keep this ring

_Bass._ By heaven! it is the same I gave the doctor.

_Por._ I had it of him: pardon me, Bassanio.
For, by this ring, the doctor lay with me.

_Ner._ And pardon me, my gentle Gratiano.
For that same scrubbed boy, the doctor's clerk,
In lieu of this last night did lie with me.

_Gra._ Why, this is like the mending of highways
In summer, where the ways are fair enough.
What! are we cuckolds ere we have deserved it?

_Por._ Speak not so grossly. You are all amaz'd:
Here is a letter; read it at your leisure;

It comes from Padua, from Bellario:
There you shall find that Portia was the doctor.

_Nerissa._ There, her clerk: Lorenzo here
Shall witness I set forth as soon as you
And even but now return'd; I have not yet
Enter'd my house. Antonio, you are welcome.
And I have better news in store for you
Than you expect: unseal this letter soon;
There you shall find three of your argosies
Are richly come to harbour suddenly.
You shall not know by what strange accident
I chanced on this letter.

_Ant._ I am dumb.

_Bass._ Were you the doctor and I knew you not?

_Gra._ Were you the clerk that is to make cuckold?

_Ner._ Ay; but the clerk that never means
do it,
Unless he live until he be a man.

_Bass._ Sweet doctor, you shall be my bedfellow.
When I am absent, then lie with my wife.

_Ant._ Sweet lady, you have given me life living.
For here I read for certain that my ships
Are safely come to road.

_Por._ How now, Lorenzo

My clerk hath some good comforts too for you

_Ner._ Ay, and I'll give them him without fee.

There do I give to you and Jessica,
From the rich Jew, a special deed of gift,
After his death, of all he dies possess'd of.

_Lor._ Fair ladies, you drop manna in the way
Of starved people.

_Por._ It is almost morning,
And yet I am sure you are not satisfied
Of these events at full. Let us go in;
And charge us there upon interrogatories,
And we will answer all things faithfully.

_Gra._ Let it be so: the first interrogatory
That my Nerissa shall be sworn on is,
Whether till the next night she had rather
Or go to bed now, being two hours to day:
But were the day come, I should wish it day,
That I were couching with the doctor's clerk.
Well, while I live I'll fear no other thing
So sore as keeping safe Nerissa's ring.
AS YOU LIKE IT.

SCENE.—First, near Oliver's House; afterwards, in the Usurper's Court, and in the Forest of Arden.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—An Orchard, near OLIVER'S House.

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM.

Orl. As I remember, Adam, it was upon this son bequeathed me by will but poor a thou- sand crowns; and, as thou sayest, charged my brother on his blessing, to breed me well: and we begin my sadness. My brother Jaques keeps at school, and report speaks goldenly of profit: for my part, he keeps rustically home, or, to speak more properly, stays me at home unkept; for call you that keeping a gentleman of my birth, that differs not in the stalling of an ox? His horses are bred better; for, besides that they are fair with their dung, they are taught their manage, and to end riders dearly hired: but I, his brother, am nothing under him but growth, for the ich his animals on his dunghills are as much and to him as I. Besides this nothing that so plentifully gives me, the something that were gave me, his countenance seems to take me: he lets me feed with his hinds, bars the place of a brother, and, as much as in a lies, mines my gentility with my education. Is is it, Adam, that grieves me; and the spirit my father, which I think is within me, begins mutiny against this servitude. I will no longer ture it, though yet I know no wise remedy to avoid it.

Adam. Yonder comes my master, your brother. Orl. Go apart, Adam, and thou shalt hear how will shake me up.

Enter OLIVER.

OLIVER MARTEXT, a Vicar.
CORIN, Shepherds.
WILLIAM, a Country Fellow, in love with Audrey.
A person presenting HYMEN.
ROSALIND, Daughter to the banished Duke.
CELLA, Daughter to Frederick.
PHERE, a Shepherdess.
AUDREY, a Country Wench.
Lords, Pages, Foresters, and Attendants.
gen lemon-like qualities: the spirit of my father grows strong in me, and I will no longer endure it; therefore, allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor allot-tery my father left me by testament; with that I will go buy my fortunes.

Oli. And what wilt thou do? beg, when that is spent? Well, sir, get you in: I will not long be troubled with you; you shall have some part of your will: I pray you, leave me.

Orl. I will no further offend you than becomes me for your good.

Oli. Get you with him, you old dog.

Adam. Is 'old dog' my reward? Most true, I have lost my teeth in your service. God be with my old master! he would not have spoke such a word.

Exeunt Orlando and Adam. 9

Oli. Is it even so? begin you to grow upon me? I will physic your rankness, and yet give no thousand crowns neither. Holla, Dennis!

Enter Dennis.

Den. Calls your worship?

Oli. Was not Charles, the duke's wrestler, here to speak with me?

Den. So please you, he is here at the door, and importunes access to you.

Oli. Call him in.

Exit Dennis.

Tw'll be a good way; and to-morrow the wrestling is.

Enter Charles.

Chas. Good morrow to your worship.

Oli. Good Monsieur Charles, what's the new news at the new court?

Chas. There's no news at the court, sir, but the old news: that is, the old duke is banished by his younger brother the new duke; and three or four loving lords have put themselves into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and revenues enrich the new duke; therefore he gives them good leave to wander.

Oli. Can you tell if Rosalind, the duke's daughter, be banished with her father?

Chas. O, no; for the duke's daughter, her cousin, so loves her, being ever from their cradles bred together, that she would have followed her exiled, or have died to stay behind her. She is at the court, and no less beloved of her uncle than his own daughter; and never two ladies loved as they do.

Oli. Where will the old duke live?

Chas. They say he is already in the forest of Arden, and a many merry men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Hood of England. They say many young gentlemen flock to him every day, and fleet the time carelessly, as they did in the golden world.

Oli. What! you wrestle to-morrow before the new duke?

Chas. Marry, do I, sir; and I came to acquaint you with a matter. I am given, sir, secretly to understand that your younger brother Orlando hath a disposition to come in disguised against me to try a fall. To-morrow, sir, I wrestle for my credit, and he that escapes me without some broken limb shall acquit him well. Your brother is but young and tender; and, for your love, I would be loath to foil him as I must, for my own honour, if he come in: therefore, out of my love to you, I came hither to acquaint you with that either you might stay him from his intent, or brook such disgrace well as he shall run into, in that it is a thing of his own sect and altogether against my will.

Oli. Charles, I thank thee for thy love to which thou shalt find I will most kindly requite. I had myself notice of my brother's pur- ishment, and have by underhand means laboured to dissuade him from it, but he is resolute. Tell thee, Charles, it is the stubbornest youth fellow of France; full of ambition, an emulator of every man's good parts, a so and villainous contriver against me his nat- brother: therefore use thy discretion. I had relieved his break his neck as his finger, thou wert best look to 't; for if thou dost any slight disgrace, or if he do not disgrace himself on thee, he will practise against thee by poison, entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath thy life by some indirect means or other; I assure thee, and almost with tears I speak there is not one so young and so villainous this living. I speak but brotherly of him; but she I anatomiize him to thee as he is, I must blush and weep, and thou must look pale and wonder.

Chas. I am heartily glad I came hither to thee. If he come to-morrow, I'll give him my present; if ever he go alone again, I'll not wrestle for prize more; and so God keep your worship!

Oli. Farewell, good Charles. Now will I this hester. I hope. I shall see an end of him; for my soul, let I know not why, he nothing more than he. Yet he's gentle, not schooled and yet learned, full of noble device of all sorts enchantingly beloved, and indeed much in the heart of the world, and especial of my own people, who best know him, than am altogether misprised. But it shall not be long; this wrestler shall clear all: nothing mains but that I kindle the boy thisther, who now I'll go about.

Exit.

SCENE II.—A Lawn before the Duke's Palace.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Cel. I pray thee, Rosalind, sweet my com- mery.

Ros. Dear Celia, I show more mirth than in mistrust of, and would you yet I were merry. Unless you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learn me how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

Cel. Herein I see thou lovest me not with full weight that I love thee. If my uncle, banished father, had banished thy uncle, duke my father, so thou hadst been still with me, I could have taught thy love to take father for mine: so wouldst thou, if the terms of thy love to me were so righteously temper as mine is to thee.

Ros. Well, I will forget the condition of estate, to rejoice in yours.

Cel. You know my father hath no child by nor none is like to have; and, truly, when he thou shalt be his heir: for what he hath I away from thy father perchance, I will render again in affection; by mine honour, I will;
men I break that oath, let me turn monster. Therefore, my sweet Rose, my dear Rose, be merry.
Ros. From henceforth I will, coz, and devise arts. Let me see; what think you of falling love?
Cel. Marry, I prithee, do, to make sport withal: I love no man in good earnest; nor no further sport neither, than with safety of a pure blush or mayest in honour come off again.
Ros. What shall be our sport then?
Cel. Let us sit and mock the good housewife fortune from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be bestowed equally.
Ros. I would we could do so, for her benefits mightily misplaced, and the bountiful blind man doth most mistake in his gifts to women.
Cel. 'Tis true; for those that she makes fair scarce makes honest, and those that she kes honest she makes very ill-favouredly.

Enter Touchstone.
Cel. No? when Nature hath made a fair nature, may she not by Fortune fall into the ? Though Nature hath given us wit to flout Fortune, hath not Fortune sent in this fool cut off the argument?
Ros. Indeed, there is Fortune too hard for tear, when Fortune makes Nature's natural cutter-off of Nature's wit.
Cel. Peradventure this is not Fortune's work ther, but Nature's; who perceiving our natural so dull to reason of such goddesses, hath this natural for our whetstone: for always dulness of the fool is the whetstone of the wits. How now, wit! whither wander you?
Touch. Mistress, you must come away to your shelter.
Cel. Were you made the messenger?
Touch. No, by mine honour; but I was bid for you.
Ros. Where learned you that oath, fool?
Touch. Of a certain knight that swore by his father they were good pancakes, and swore by honour the mustard was naught: now, I'll ad it to you, the pancakes were naught and the mustard was good, and yet was not the knight worn.
Cel. How prove you that, in the great heap of knowledge?
Ros. Ay, marry: now unmuzzle your wisdom. Touch. Stand you both forth now: stroke your axes, and swear by your beards that I am a knave.
Cel. By our beards, if we had them, thou art. Touch. By my knavery, if I had it, then I were: if you swear by that that is not, you are not worn: no more was this knight, swearing his honour, for he never had any; or if he had sworn it away before he saw those pancakes or that mustard.
Ros. Prithee, who is that thou meanest?
Touch. One that old Frederick, your father, loves. Cel. My father's love is enough to honour him. Enough! speak no more of him; you'll be pipped for taxation one of these days.
Touch. The more pity, that fools may not speak what wise men do foolishly.
Cel. By my troth, thou sayest true; for since the little wit that fools have was silenced, the little foolery that wise men have makes a great show. Here comes Monsieur Le Beau.
Ros. With his mouth full of news.
Cel. Which he will put on us, as pigeons feed their young.
Ros. Then shall we be news-crammed.
Cel. All the better; we shall be the more marketable.

Enter Le Beau.

Bon jour, Monsieur Le Beau: what's the news? Le Beau. Fair princess, you have lost much good sport.
Cel. Sport! Of what colour?
Le Beau. What colour, madam! How shall I answer you?
Ros. As wit and fortune will.
Touch. Or as the Destinies decree.
Cel. Well said: that was laid on with a trawl. Touch. Nay, if I keep not my rank,—
Ros. Thou losest thy old smell.
Le Beau. You amaze me, ladies: I would have told you of good wrestling, which you have lost the sight of.
Ros. Yet tell us the manner of the wrestling.
Le Beau. I will tell you the beginning; and, if it please your ladyships, you may see the end, for the best is yet to do; and here, where you are, they are coming to perform it.
Cel. Well, the beginning, that is dead and buried. Le Beau. There comes an old man and his three sons.—
Cel. I could match this beginning with an old tale.
Le Beau. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence;—
Ros. With bills on their necks, 'Tis known unto all men by these presents.'
Le Beau. The eldest of the three wrestled with Charles, the duke's wrestler; which Charles in a moment threw him and broke three of his ribs, that there is little hope of life in him: so he served the second, and so the third. Yonder they lie; the poor old man, their father, making such pitiful dole over them that all the beholders take his part with weeping.
Ros. Alas! Touch. But what is the sport, monsieur, that the ladies have lost?
Le Beau. Why, this that I speak of.
Touch. Thus men may grow wiser every day: it is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribs was sport for ladies.
Cel. Or I, I promise thee.
Ros. But is there any else longs to see th' broken music in his sides? is there yet another dotes upon rib-breaking? Shall we see this wrestling cousin?
Le Beau. You must, if you stay here; for here is the place appointed for the wrestling, and they are ready to perform it.
Cel. Yonder, sure, they are coming: let us new stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter Duke Frederick, Lords, Orlando, Charles, and Attendants.
Duke F. Come on: since the youth will not be entreated, his own peril on his forwardness.
Ros. Is yonder the man?
Le Beau. Even he, madam.

Cel. Alas! he is too young: yet he looks successfully.

Duke F. How now, daughter and cousin! art you crept hither to see the wrestling?

Ros. Ay, my liege, so please you give us leave.

Duke F. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is such odds in the man. In pity of the challenger's youth I would fain disfranchise him, but he will not be entreated. Speak to him, ladies; see if you can move him.

Cel. Call him hither, good Monsieur Le Beau.

Duke F. Do so: I'll not be by.

Duke goes apart.

Le Beau. Monsieur the challenger, the princesses call for you.

Orl. I attend them with all respect and duty.

Ros. Young man, have you challenged Charles the wrestler?

Orl. No, fair princess; he is the general challenger: I come but in, as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years. You have seen cruel proof of this man's strength: if you saw yourself with your eyes or knew yourself with your judgment, the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. We pray you, for your own sake, to embrace your own safety and give over this attempt.

Ros. Do, young sir: your reputation shall not therefore be misprised. We will make it our suit to the duke that the wrestling might not go forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts, wherein I confess me much guilty, to deny so fair and excellent ladies anything. But let your fair eyes and gentle wishes go with me to my trial: wherein if I be foiled, there is but one shame that was never gracious; if killed, but one dead that is willing to be so. I shall do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me: the world no injury, for in it I have nothing; only in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied when I have made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.

Cel. And mine, to eke out hers.

Ros. Fare you well. Pray heaven I be deceived in you!

Cel. Your heart's desires be with you!

Cha. Come, where is this young gallant that is so desirous to lie with his mother earth?

Orl. Ready, sir; but his will hath in it a more modest working.

Duke F. You shall try but one fall.

Cha. No, I warrant your grace, you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily persuaded him from a first.

Orl. You mean to mock me after: you should not have mocked me before; but come your ways.

Ros. Now Hercules be thy speed, young man!

Cel. I would I were invisible, to catch thestrong fellow by the leg.

CHARLES and ORLANDO wrestle.

Ros. O excellent young man!

Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye, I can tell who should down.

CHARLES is thrown. Shout.

Duke F. No more, no more.

Orl. Yes, I beseech your grace: I am not yet well breathed.

Duke F. How dost thou, Charles?

Le Beau. He cannot speak, my lord.

Duke F. Bear him away. What is thy name, young man?

Orl. Orlando, my liege; the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Boys.

Duke F. I would thou hadst been son to some man else:

The world esteem'd thy father honourable, but I did find him still mine enemy: Thou should'st have better pleas'd me with thee, hadst thou descended from another house. But fare thee well; thou art a gallant youth I would thou hadst told me of another youth.

Exeunt Duke FREDERICK, TRIOU, and LE BEAU.

Cel. Were I my father, coz, would I do this.

Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Rowland's son than any other: His youngest son; and would not change to calling.

To be adopted heir to Frederick.

Ros. My father lov'd Sir Rowland as his son.

And all the world was of my father's mind: Had I before known this young man his son, I should have given him tears unto entertain Ere he should have ventur'd.

Cel. Gentle cousin,

Let us go thank him and encourage him: My father's rough and envious disposition Sticks with his heart: Sir, you have well deserved If you do keep your promises in love But justly, as you have exceeded all promise Your mistress shall be happy.

Ros. Gentleman,

Giving him a chain from her neck Wear this for me, one out of suits with fortune That could give more, but that her hand in means.

Shall we go, coz?

Cel. Ay. Fare you well, fair gentleman.

Orl. Can I not say, I thank you? My best parts Are all thrown down, and that which here stands up Is but a quintain, a mere lifeless block.

Ros. He calls us back: my pride fell with fortunes;

I'll ask him what he would. Did you call, sir, you have wrestled well, and overthrown More than your enemies.

Cel. Will you go, coz?

Ros. Have with you. Fare you well.

Exeunt ROSALIND and CELIA

Orl. What passion hangs these weights up my tongue?

I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference O poor Orlando, thou art overthrown!

Or Charles or something weaker masters the Re-enter LE BEAU.

Le Beau. Good sir, I do in friendship counsel you To leave this place. Albeit you have deserved High commendation, true applause and love Yet such is now the duke's condition That he misconstrues all that you have don Enter Duke Frederick, with Lords.

Duke F. Mistress, dispatch you with your safest haste,
And get you from our court.
Ros. Me, uncle?

Duke F. You, cousin:
Within these ten days if that thou hast found
So near our public court as twenty miles,
Thou diest for it.
Ros. I do beseech your grace,
Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with me.
If with myself I hold intelligence,
Or have acquaintance with mine own desires,
That if I do not dream or be not frantic,
As I do trust I am not, then, dear uncle,
Never so much as in a thought unborn
Did I offend your highness.

Duke F. Thus do all traitors:
If their purgation did consist in words,
They are as innocent as grace itself:
Let it suffice thee that I trust thee not.
Ros. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a traitor:
Tell me whereon the likelihood depends.
Duke F. Thou art thy father's daughter;
there's enough.
Ros. So was I when your highness took his dukedom;
So was I when your highness banish'd him. 60
Treason is not inherited, my lord;
Or, if we did derive it from our friends,
What's that to me? my father was no traitor:
Then, good my liege, mistake me not so much
To think my poverty is treacherous.

Duke F. Ay, Celia; we stay'd her for your sake;
Else had she with her father rang'd along.
Cel. I did not then entreat to have her stay:
It was your pleasure and your own remorse.
I was too young that time to value her;
But now I know her; if she be a traitor,
Why so am I; we still have slept together,
Rose at an instant, learn'd, play'd, eat together;
And where so'er we went, like Juno's swans,
Still we went coupled and inseparable.
Duke F. She is too subtle for thee; and her smoothness,
Her very silence and her patience,
Speak to the people, and they pity her.
Thou art a fool: she robs thee of thy name; 70
And thou wilt show more bright and seem more virtuous
When she is gone. Then open not thy lips:
Firm and irrevocable is my doom.
Which I have pass'd upon her; she is banish'd.
Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me, my liege:
I cannot live out of her company.
Duke F. You are a fool. You, niece, provide yourself:
If you outstay the time, upon mine honour,
And in the greatness of my word, you die. 80

Excpt Duke Frederick and Lords.

Cel. O my poor Rosalind! whither wilt thou go?
Wilt thou change fathers? I will give thee mine.
I charge thee, be not thou more griev'd than
I am.
Ros. I have more cause.

Cel. Thou hast not, cousin;
Prithee, be cheerful: know'st thou not, the duke
Hath banish'd me, his daughter?

Ros. That he hath not.

Col. No, hath not? Rosalind lacks then the love
Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one:
Shall we be sunder'd? shall we part, sweet girl?
No: let my father seek another heir.
Therefore devise with me how we may fly,
Whither to go, and what to bear with us:
And do not seek to take your change upon you,
To bear your griefs yourself and leave me out;
For, by this heaven, now at our sorrows pale,
Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee.

Ros. Why, whither shall we go?

Col. To seek my uncle in the forest of Arden.

Ros. Alas, what danger will it be to us,
Maidens as we are, to travel forth so far!

Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.

Col. I'll put myself in poor and mean attire,
And with a kind ofumber smirch my face;
The like do you: so shall we pass along
And never stir assailants.

Ros. Were it not better,
Because that I am more than common tall,
That I did suit me all points like a man?
A gallant curtail-axe upon my thigh,
A bow-spear in my hand; and,—in my heart
Lie there what hidden woman's fear there will,— We'll have a swashing and a martial outside,
As many other mannish cowards have.

That do outface it with their semblances.

Col. What shall I call thee when thou art a man?

Ros. I'll have no worse a name than Jove's own page,
And therefore look you call me Ganymede.

But what will you be call'd?

Col. Something that hath a reference to my state:
No longer Celia, but Aliena.

Ros. But, cousin, what if we essay'd to steal
The clownish fool out of your father's court?

Would he not be a comfort to our travel?

Col. He'll go along o'er the wide world with me;
Leave me alone to woo him. Let's away,
And get our jewels and our wealth together,
Devise the fittest time and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be made
After my flight. Now go we in content
To liberty and not to banishment. Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Forest of Arden.

Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, and other Lords, like Foresters.

Duke S. Now, my co-mates and brothers in exile,
Hath not old custom made this life more sweet
Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods
More free from peril than the envious court?
Here feel we but the penalty of Adam,
The seasons' difference; as the icy fang
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind,
Which, when it bites and blows upon my body,
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile and say
'This is no flattery: these are counsellors
That feelingly persuade me what I am.'

Sweet are the uses of adversity,
Which like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head;
And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.
I would not change it.

Ami. Happy is your grace,
That can translate the stubbornness of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a style.

Duke S. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me, the poor dappled fools,
Being nativeburghers of this desert city,
Should, in their own confines, with forked head
Have their round haunches gored.

First Lord. Indeed, my lord,
The melancholy Jaques grieveth at that;
And, in that kind, swears you do more usurp
Than doth your brother that hath banish'd your dukedom.

To-day my Lord of Amiens and myself
Did steal behind him as he lay along
Under an oak whose antique root peeps out
Upon the brook that browses along this wood;
To the which place a poor sequester'd stag,
That from the hunter's aim had ta'en a hurt,
Did come to languish; and indeed, my lord,
The wretched animal he'veth forth such groans
That their discharge did stretch his leather coat
Almost to bursting, and the big round tears
Cours'd one another down his innocent nos
In piteous chase; and thus the hairy fool,
Much marked of the melancholy Jaques,
Stood on the extremest verge of the swift brook
Augmenting it with tears.

Duke S. But what said Jaques
Did he not moralize this spectacle?

First Lord. O, yes, into a thousand similes,
First, for his weeping into the needless stream
'Poor deer,' quoth he, 'thou mak'st a testamen
As workdings do, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much'; then, being the alone,
Left and abandon'd of his velvet friends;
'Tis right,' quoth he; 'thus misery doth part
The flux of company': anon, a careless herd
Full of the pasture, jumps along by him
And never stays to greet him; 'Aye,' quoth Jaques,
'Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens;
'Tis just the fashion; wherefore do you look Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?'
Thus most invectively he pierceth through
The body of the country, city, court,
Yea, and of this our life; swearing that we
Are mere usurpers, tyrants, and what's worse,
To fright the animals and to kill them up
In their assign'd and native dwelling-place.

Duke S. And did you leave him in this contemplation?

Second Lord. We did, my lord, weeping an commenting

Upon the sobbing deer.

Duke S. Show me the place.

I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.

Second Lord. I'll bring you to him straight.
SCENE II.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Duke FREDERICK, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Can it be possible that no man saw them?

I cannot be: some villains of my court are of consent and sufferance in this.

First Lord. I cannot hear of any that did see her.

She ladies, her attendants of her chamber, saw her a-bed; and in the morning early they found the bed untreasur'd of their mistresses.

Second Lord. My lord, the roynish clown, at whom so oft our grace was wont to laugh, is also missing: hepesia, the princess' gentlewoman, confesses that she secretly o'heard our daughter and her cousin much commend her parts and graces of the wrestler he fat but lately foil the sinewy Charles; and she believes, wherever they are gone, he youth is surely in their company.

Duke F. Send to his brother; fetch that gallant hither; he be absent, bring his brother to me; 'twill make him find him. Do this suddenly; and let not search and inquisition quail o bring again these foolish runaways. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Before Oliver's House.

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM, meeting.

Orl. Who's there?

Adam. What! my young master? O my gentle master!

my sweet master! O you memory old Sir Rowland! why, what make you here?

by you are virtuous? why do people love you?
and her are you gentle, strong, and valiant?

would you be so fond to overcome
as bonny priser of the humorous duke?
our praise is come too swiftly home before you.

now you not, master, to some kind of men heir graces serve them but as enemies!

o more do yours: your virtues, gentle master,
re sanctified and holy traitors to you.

what a world is this, when what is comely envious him that bears it!

Orl. Why, what's the matter?

Adam. O unhappy youth! come not within these doors; within this roof the enemy of all your graces lives.

our brother—no, no brother; yet the son—et not the son, I will not call him son. But I was about to call his father—thad heard your praises, and this night he means to burn the lodging where you use to lie, and you within it: if he fail of that, e will have other means to cut you off. Overheard him and his practices, as is no place; this house is but a butchery: bhor it, fear it, do not enter it.

Orl. Why, whither, Adam, wouldst thou have me go?

Adam. No matter whither, so you come not here.

Orl. What! wouldst thou have me go and beg my food?

with a base and boisterous sword enforce

A thievish living on the common road?

This I must do, or know not what to do: Yet this I will not do, do how I can. I rather will subject me to the malice Of a diverted blood and bloody brother.

Adam. But do not so. I have five hundred crowns,
The thrifty hire I sav'd under your father,
Which I did store to be my foster-nurse.

When service should in my old limbs lie lame,
And unregarded age in corners thrown.

Take that; and He that doth the ravens feed,
Yea, providently eaters for the sparrow,
Be comfort to my age! Here is the gold;
All this I give you. Let me be your servant:
Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood,
Nor did not with unbashful forehead woo
The means of weakness and debility;
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty, but kindly. Let me go with you;
I'll do the service of a younger man
In all your business and necessities.

Orl. O good old man! how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antique world,
When service sweat for duty, not for meed!
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweat but for promotion,
And having that, do choke their service up:
Even with the having: it is not so with thee.
But, poor old man, thou run'st a rotten tree,
That cannot so much as a blossom yield,
In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry.
But come thy ways, we'll go along together,
And ere we have thy youthful wages spent,
We'll light upon some settled low content.

Adam. Master, go on, and I will follow thee
To the last gap with truth and loyalty.

From seventeen years till now almost fourscore,
Here lived I, but now live here no more.

At seventeen years many their fortunes seek;
But at fourscore it is too late a week:
Yet fortune cannot recompense me better
Than to die well and not my master's debtor.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Forest of Arden.

Enter ROSALIND in boy's clothes, CELIA dressed like a shepherdess, and TOUCHSTONE.

Ros. O Jupiter! how weary are my spirits.

Touch. I care not for my spirits if my legs were not weary.

Ros. I could find in my heart to disgrace my man's apparel and to cry like a woman; but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doublet and hose ought to show itself courageous to petticoat: therefore, courage, good Aliena!

Orl. I pray you, bear with me: I cannot go no further.

Touch. For my part, I had rather bear with you than bear you; yet I should bear no cross if I did bear you, for I think you have no money in your purse.

Ros. Well, this is the forest of Arden.

Touch. Ay, now am I in Arden; the more fool I: when I was at home, I was in a better place: but travellers must be content.

Ros. Ay, be so good Touchstone. Look you, who comes here; a young man and an old in solemn talk.

Enter Corin and Silvius.

Cor. That is the way to make her scon ye still.
Sil. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her!

Cor. I partly draw, for I have lovd' er now.
Sil. No, Corin; being old, thou canst not guess.

Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow:
But if thy love were ever like to mine,
As sure I think did never man love so,
How many actions most ridiculous
Hast thou been drawn to by thy fancy?

Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.
Sil. O! thou didst then never love so heartily.
If thou remember'st not the slightest folly
That ever love did make thee run into,
Thou hast not lovd':
Or if thou hast not sat as I do now,
Wearing thee heavier in thy mistress' praise,
Thou hast not lovd':
Or if thou hast not broke from company
Abruptly, as my passion now makes me,
Thou hast not lovd'.

O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe!

Exit.

Ros. Alas, poor shepherd! searching of thy wound, I have by hard adventure found mine own.

Touch. And I mine. I remember, when I was in love I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming a night to Jane Smile; and I remember the kissing of her batlet, and the cow's dugs that her pretty chopped hands had milked; and I remember the wooring of a peascod instead of her, from whom I took two cods, and giving her them again, said, with weeping tears, 'Weare these for my sake.' We that are true lovers run into strange capers; but as all is mortal in nature, so is all nature in love mortal in folly.

Ros. Thou speakest wiser than thou art ware of.
Touch. Nay, I shall ne'er be ware of mine own wit till I break my shins against it.

Ros. Jove, Jove! this shepherd's passion
Is much upon my fashion.

Touch. And mine; but it grows something stale with me.

Cel. I pray you, one of you question yond man
If he for gold will give us any food:
I faint almost to death.

Touch. Holla, you clown!
Ros. Peace, fool; he's not thy kinsman.

Cor. Who calls?

Touch. Your betters, sir.

Cor. Else are they very wretched.
Ros. Peace, I say. Good even to you, friend.
Cor. And to you, gentle sir, and to you all.

Ros. I pritchie, shepherd, if that love or gold
Can in this desert place buy entertainment,
Bring us where we may rest ourselves and feed.
Here's a young maid with travel much oppress'd,
And fain's to succour.

Cor. Fair sir, I pity her,
And wish, for her sake more than for mine own,
My fortunes were more able to relieve her;
But I am shepherd to another man,
And do not shear the fleeces that I graze:
My master is of churlish disposition,
And little recks to find the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitality.
Besides, his cote, his flocks, and bounds of feo
Are now on sale; and at our sheepcote now,
By reason of his absence, there is nothing
That you will feed on; but what is, come see.
And in my voice most welcome shall you be.

Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock at pasture?
Cor. That young swain that you saw here before,
That little cares for buying any thing.

Ros. I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,
Buy thou the cottage, pasture, and the flock,
And thou shalt have to pay for it of us.

Cel. And we will mend thy wages. I like the place,
And willingly could waste my time in it.

Cor. Assuredly the thing is to be seld.
Go with me: if you like upon report
The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,
I will your very faithful feeder be,
And buy it with your gold right suddenly.

Scene V.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter Amiens, Jaques, and others.

Ami. Under the greenwood tree
Who loves to lie with me,
And turn his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat,
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see
No enemy
But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. More, more! I prithee, more.

Ami. It will make you melancholy, Monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. I hang it. More! I prithee, more; can suck melancholy out of a song as a weasels eggs. More! I prithee, more.

Ami. My voice is rag'd; I know I cannot please you.

Jaq. I do not desire you to please me; it is my desire to sing. Come, more; another stanza?

Call you 'em stanzas?

Ami. What you will, Monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing. Will you sing?

Ami. More at your request than to plem myself.

Jaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I thank you: but that they call compliment like the encounter of two dog-apes, and when man thanks me heartily, methinks I have give him a penny and he renders me the beggar thanks. Come, sing; and you that will noble hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, 1'll end the song. Sirs, cover the while; the duke will drink under this tree. I hath been all this day to look you.

Jaq. And I have been all this day to avoid him. He is too disputable for my company: I think as many matters as he, but I give heaven thank and make no boast of them. Come, warble; con.

All. Who doth ambition shun,
And loves to live i' the sun,
Seeking the food he eats,
And pleas'd with what he gets,
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see
No enemy
But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. I'll give you a verse to this note, that I ade yesterday in despite of my invention.
Ani. And I'll sing it.

Jaq. Thus it goes:
If it do come to pass
That any man turn ass,
Leaving his wealth and ease,
A stubborn will to please,
Dudcane, durcane, durcane:
Here shall he see
Gross fools as he,
An if he will come to me.

Ani. What's that durcane?

Jaq. 'Tis a Greek invocation to call fools into circle. I'll go sleep if I can; if I cannot, I'll gain all the first-born of Egypt.
Ani. And I'll go seek the duke: his banquet prepared.

Exeunt severally.

Scene VI.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no further: O! lie for food. Here lie I down, and measure my grave. Farewell, kind master.
Orl. Why, how now, Adam! no greater heart thou? Live a little; comfort a little; cheat yself a little. If this uncouth forest yield any savage, I will either be food for it, or bring food to thee. Thy conceit is nearer death than thy powers. For my sake be comfortable, and death awhile at the arm's end, I will here with thee presently, and if I bring thee not food to eat, I will give thee leave to die;
if thou diest before I come, thou art a mocker
my labour. Well said! thou lookest cheerly, did I'll be with thee quickly. Yet thou liest in a bleak air: come, I'll bear thee to some elcer, and thou shalt not die for lack of a shelter, if there live any thing in this desert.
Near, good Adam.

Exeunt.

Scene VII.—Another Part of the Forest.

Table set out. Enter Duke Senior, Amins,
Lords, and others.

Duke S. I think he be transform'd into a beast, or I can no where find him like a man.
First Lord. My lord, he is but even now gone
hence:
he was he merry, hearing of a song.
Duke S. If he, compact of jars, grow musical, shall have shortly discard in the spheres.
Seek him: tell him I would speak with him.
First Lord. He saves my labour by his own approach.

Enter Jaques.

Duke S. Why, how now, monsieur! what a life is this, at your poor friends must woo your company?
hat, you look merrily.

Jaq. A fool, a fool! I met a fool i' the forest,
A motley fool; a miserable world!
As I do live by food, I met a fool;
Who laid him down and bask'd him in the sun,
And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good terms;
In good set terms, and yet a motley fool.
'Good morrow, fool,' quoth I: 'No, sir,' quoth he,
'Call me not fool till heaven hath sent my fortune.'
And then he drew a dial from his pocket,
And looking at it with lack-lustre eye,
Says very wisely, 'It is ten o'clock:
Thus may we see,' quoth he, 'how the world wags:
'Tis but an hour ago since it was nine,
And after one hour more 'twill be eleven;
And so from hour to hour we ripe and ripe,
And then from hour to hour we rot and rot.
And thereby hangs a tale.' When I did hear
The motley fool thus moral on the time,
My lungs began to crow like chntileer,
That fools should be so deep-contemplative,
And I did laugh sans intermission.
An hour by his dial. O noble fool!
A worthy fool! Motley's the only wear.
Duke S. What fool is this?

Jaq. O worthy fool! One that hath been a courtier,
And says, if ladies be but young and fair,
They have the gift to know it; and in his brain,
Which is as dry as the remainder biscuit
After a voyage, he hath strange places cram'd
With observation, the which he vents
In mangled forms. O ! that I were a fool.
I am ambitious for a motley coat.
Duke S. Thou shalt have one.

Jaq. It is my only suit;
Provided that you weed your better judgments
Of all opinion that grows rank in them
That I am wise. I must have liberty.
Withal, as large a charter as the wind,
To blow on whom I please; for so fools have:
And they that are most galled with my folly,
They must must laugh. And why, sir, must they so?
The 'why' is plain as way to parish church:
He that a fool doth very wisely hit,
Both very foolishly, although he smart,
Not to seem senseless of the bob; if not,
The wise man's folly is anatomiz'd.
Even by the squandering glances of the fool.
Invest me in my motley; give me leave
To speak my mind, and I will through and through Cleanse the foul body of the infected world.
If they will patiently receive my medicine.
Duke S. Fie on thee! I can tell what thou wouldst do.

Jaq. What, for a counter, would I do but good?
Duke S. Most mischievous fool sin, in eluding
Fie:
For thou thyself hast been a libertine,
As sensual as the brutish sting itself;
And all the embossed sores and headed evils,
That thou with license of free foot hast sought,
Wouldst thou disgorging into the general world.

Jaq. Why, who cries out on pride,
That can therein tax any private party?
Doth it not flow as hugely as the sea,
Till that the weary very means do ebb?
What woman in the city do I name,
When that I say the city-woman bears
The cost of princes on unworthy shoulders?
Who can come in and say that I mean her,
When such a one as she such is her neighbour?
Or what is he of basest function
That says his bravery is not of my cost,
Thinking that I mean him, but therein suits
His folly to the metre of my speech?
There then; how then? what then? Let me see wherein
My tongue hath wrong’d him: if it do him right,
Then he hath wrong’d himself; if he be free,
Why then my taxing like a wild-goose flies,
Unclaim’d of any man. But who comes here?

Enter ORLANDO, with his sword drawn.

Orl. Forbear, and eat no more.

Jaq. Why, I have eat none yet.

Orl. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serv’d.

Jaq. Of what kind should this cock come of?

Duke S. Art thou thus bold’en, man, by thy distress,
Or else a rude despiser of good manners,
That in civility thou seem’st so empty?

Orl. You touch’d my vein at first: the thorny point
Of bare distress hath ta’en from me the show
Of smooth civility; yet am I in land bred,
And know some nurture. But forbear, I say:
He dies that touches any of this fruit
Till I and my affairs are answered.

Jaq. An you will not be answered with reason,
I must die.

Duke S. What would you have? Your gentleness shall force
More than your force move us to gentleness.

Orl. I almost die for food; and let me have it.

Duke S. Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table.

Orl. Speak you so gently? Pardon me, I pray you:
I thought that all things had been savage here,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of stern commandment. But whate’er you are
That in this desert inaccessible,
Under the shade of melancholy boughs,
Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time;
If ever you have look’d on b. tter days,
If ever been where hells have knoll’d to church,
If ever sat at any good man’s feast,
If ever from your eyelids wip’d a tear,
And know what ‘tis to pity, and be pitied,
Let gentleness my strong enforcement be:
In the which hope I blush, and hide my sword.

Duke S. True is it that we have seen better days,
And have with holy bell been knoll’d to church,
And sat at good men’s feasts, and wip’d our eyes
Of drops that sacred pity hath engend’rd;
And therefore sit you down in gentleness
And take upon command what help we have
That to your wanting may be minister’d.

Orl. Then but forbear your food a little while,
While’s, like a doe, I go to find my fawn
And give it food. There is an old poor man,
Who after me hath many a weary step
Limp’d in pure love: till he be first suffic’d,
Oppress’d with two weak evils, age and hunger,
I will not touch a bit.

Duke S. Go find him out,
And we will nothing waste till you return.

Orl. I thank ye; and be bless’d for your good comfort!

Exit.

Duke S. Thou seest we were not all one unhappy
This wide and universal theatre
Presents more woeful pageants than the scene
Wherein we play in.

Jaq. All the world’s a stage,
And all the men and women merely players:
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts.
His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse’s arms.
And then the whining school-boy, with his satchel,
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress’ eyebrow. Then a soldier
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the part
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon’s mouth. And then the justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lin’d,
With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shift,
Into the lean and slipper’d pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose and pouch on side,
His youthful hose well sav’d, a world too wide;
For his shrunk shank; and his big main vows
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes;
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history;
Is second childhood and more oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.

Re-enter ORLANDO with ADAM.

Duke S. Welcome. Set down your venerable burden,
And let him feed.

Orl. I thank you most for him.

Adam. So had you need:
I scarce can speak to thank you for myself.

Duke S. Welcome; fall to: I will not trouble you
As yet to question you about your fortunes.
Give us some music; and, good cousin, sing.

Ami. Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind
As man’s ingratitude;
Thy tooth is not so keen,
Because thou art not seen,
Although thy breath be rude.

Heigh-ho! sing, heigh-ho! unto the green holly:
Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere foll
Then heigh-ho, the holly!
This life is most jolly.
Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
That dost not bite so nigh
As benefits forgot:
Though thou the waters warp,
Thy sting is not so sharp
As friend remember’d not.

Heigh-ho! sing, heigh-ho! unto the green holly:
Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere foll
Then heigh-ho, the holly!
This life is most jolly.

Duke S. If that you were the good Sir Rowland’s son,
As you have whisper’d faithfully you were,
And as mine eye doth his effigies witness
Most truly limned'd and living in your face,"
be truly welcome hither: I am the duke
That lov'd your father; the residue of your fortune,
Glo to my cave and tell me. Good old man, thou art right welcome as thy master is.
support him by the arm. Give me your hand,
And let me all your fortunes understand.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Palace.

Enter Duke Frederick, Oliver, and Attendants.

Duke F. Not see him since! Sir, that cannot be:
but were I not the better part made merciful, should not seek an absent argument
if my revenge, thou present. But look to it:
and out t'ye brother, wheresoe'er he is;
see him with candle; bring him, dead or living.
Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more
't seek a living in our territory.
by hands and all things that thou dost call thine
'reat seizure, do we seize into our hands, till thou canst quit thee by thy brother's mouth of what we think against thee.

Oft, O, that your highness knew my heart in
this!
never lovd my brother in my life.
Duke F. More villain thou. Well, push him out of doors;
and let my officers of such a nature
ake an extent upon his house and lands.
this expeditiously and turn him going.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Forest of Arden.

Enter Orlando, with a paper.

O. Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love:
And thou, thrice-crowned queen of night, survey th' thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere
above,
Thy huntress' name, that my full life doth sway.
Rosalind! these trees shall be my books.
And in their barks my thoughts I'll character,
but every eye, which in this forest looks,
Shall see thy virtue witness'd every where.
un, run, Orlando: carve on every tree he fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she.

Exit.

Enter Corin and Touchstone.

Cor. And how like you this shepherd's life, ad Touchstone?

Touch. Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself, is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it solitary, I like it very well; but in respect at it is private, it is a very vile life. Now, in pect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well;
it in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious.
it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humour well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

Cor. No more but that I know the more one sickens the worse at case he is; and that he that wants money, means, and content, is without three good friends; that the property of rain is to wet, and fire to burn; that good pasture makes fat sheep, and that a great cause of the night is lack of the sun; that he that hath learned no wit by nature nor art may complain of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred.

Touch. Such a one is a natural philosopher.
Wast ever in court, shepherd?

Cor. No, truly.

Touch. Then thou art damned.

Cor. Nay, I hope.

Touch. Truly, thou art damned like an ill-roasted egg, all on one side.

Cor. For not being at court? Your reason.

Touch. Why, if thou never wast at court, thou never savest good manners; if thou never savest good manners, then thymanners must be wicked;
and wickedness is sin, and sin is damnation.
Thou art in a parious state, shepherd.

Cor. Not a whit, Touchstone: those that are good manners at the court are as ridiculous in the country as the behaviour of the country is most mockable at the court. You told me you salute not at the court, but you kiss your hands:
that courtesy would be uncleanly if courtiers were shepherds.

Touch. Instance, briefly: come, instance.

Cor. Why, we are still handling our ewes, and their fells, you know, are greasy.

Touch. Why, do not your courtier's hands sweat? and is not the grease of a mutton as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow. A better instance, I say; come.

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard.

Touch. Your lips will feel them the sooner:
shallow again. A more sounder instance; come.

Cor. And they are often tarred over with the surgery of our sheep; and would you have us kiss tar? The courtier's hands are perfumed with civet.

Touch. Most shallow man! Thou worms-meat, in respect of a good piece of flesh, indeed!
Learn of the wise, and perpend: civet is of a laser birth than tar; the very uncleanly flux of a cat. Mead the instance, shepherd.

Cor. You have too courtly a wit for me: I'll rest.

Touch. Wilt thou rest damned? God help thee, shallow man! God make incision in thee!
thou art raw.

Cor. Sir, I am a true labourer; I earn that I cat, get that I wear, owe no man hate, envy no man's happiness, glad of other men's good, content with my harm; and the greatest of my pride is to see my ewes graze and my lambs suck.

Touch. That is another simple sin in you, to bring the ewes and the rams together, and to offer to get your living by the copulation of cattle; to be bawd to a bell-wether, and to betray a she-lamb of a twelvemonth to a crooked-pated, old, cuckoldly ram, out of all reasonable match. If thou be'st not damned for this, the devil himself will have no shepherds: I cannot see else how thou shouldst 'scape.
Thus Rosalind of many parts
By heavenly synod was devis'd,
Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
To have the tongues nearest y'is'd.
Heaven would that she these gifts should have,
And I to live and die her slave. 141

Ros. O most gentle pulpitor! what tedious homily of love have you wearied your parishioners withal, and never cried, 'Have patience, good people!'

Cel. How now! back, friends! Shepherd, go off a little: go with him, sirrah.

Touch. Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.

Extract CORIN AND TOUCHSTONE.

Cel. Didst thou hear these verses?
Ros. O! yes, I heard them all, and more too; for some of them had in them more feet than the verses would bear.

Cel. That's no matter: the feet might bear the verses.
Ros. Ay, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou hear without wondering, how thy name should be hanged and carved upon these trees?

Ros. I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder before you came; for look here what I found on a palm-tree: I was never so be-armed since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Trow you who hath done this?
Ros. Is it a man?
Cel. And a chain, that you once wore, about his neck. Change you colour?

Ros. I prithee, who?
Cel. O Lord, Lord! it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but mountains may be removed with earthquakes, and so encounter.

Ros. Nay, but who is it?
Cel. Is it possible?
Ros. Nay, I prithee now with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O! wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful! and yet again wonderful and after that, out of all whooping!

Ros. Good my complexion! dost thou think I am caparisoned like a man, I have doublet and hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more is a South-sea of discovery; prithee, tell me who is it, quickly, and spread the space. I would thou could'st stammer, that thou might'st pour this concealed man out of thy mouth, as wine comes out of a narrow-mouthed bottle; either too much at once, or none at all. I prithee, take the cork out of the mouth, that I may drink thy tidings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.
Ros. Is he of God's making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat, or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.
Ros. Why, God will send more, if the man will be thankful. Let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando, that tripped up the Scene II.

As You Like It.

Ros. Nay, but the devil take mocking: speak, sad brow and true maid.

Cel. I' faith, cox, 'tis he.

Ros. Orlando?

Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the day! what shall I do with my doublet and hose? What did he when thou sawest him? What said he? How looked he? Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee, and when shalt thou see him again? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Gargantua's mouth first: 'tis a word too great for any mouth of this gpe's size. To say ay and no to these particulars s'more than to answer in a catechism.

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this forest and in man's apparel? Looks he as freshly as we did the day he wrestled?

Cel. It is as easy to count atoms as to resolve he propositions of a lover; but take a taste of thy finding him, and relish it with good observance. I found him under a tree, like a dropped corn.

Ros. It may well be called Jove's tree, when it roops forth such fruit.

Cel. Give me audience, good madam.

Ros. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he, stretched along like a rounded knight.

Ros. Though it be pity to see such a sight, well becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry 'holla!' to thy tongue, I prithee; it arvets unseasonably. He was furnished like aainter.

Ros. Ominous! he comes to kill my heart.

Cel. I would sing my song without a burthen: you bringest me out of tune.

Ros. Do you not know I am a woman? when think, I must speak. Sweet, say on.

Cel. You bring me out. Soft! comes he not here?

Ros. 'Tis he: click by, and note him.

Enter Orlando and Jaques.

Jaq. You have a nimble wit: I think 'twas made of Atalanta's heels. Will you sit down with me? and we two will rail against our mistress the world, and all our misery.

Orl. I will chide no brother in the world but myself, against whom I know most faults.

Jaq. The worst fault you have is to be in love.

Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not change for your best virtue. I am weary of you.

Jaq. By my troth, I was seeking for a fool when I found you.

Orl. He is drowned in the brook: look but in, and you shall see him.

Jaq. There shall I see mine own figure.

Orl. Which I take to be either a fool or a cipher.

Jaq. I'll tarry no longer with you. Farewell, good Signior Love.

Ros. I will speak to him like a saucy lackey, and under that habit play the knave with him. Do you hear, forester?

Orl. Very well: what would you?

Ros. I pray you, what is 't o'clock?

Orl. You should ask me what time o'day; there's no clock in the forest.

Ros. Then there is no true lover in the forest; else sighing every minute and groaning every hour would detect the lazy foot of Time as well as a clock.

Orl. And why not the swift foot of Time? had not that been as proper?

Ros. By no means, sir. Time travels in divers paces with divers persons. I'll tell you who Time ambles withal, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal.

Orl. I prithee, who doth he trot withal?

Ros. Marry, he trots hard with a young maid between the contract of her marriage and the day it is solemnized; if the interim be but a se'nnight, Time's pace is so hard that it seems the length of seven year.

Orl. Who ambles Time withal?

Ros. With a priest that lacks Latin, and a rich man that hath not the gout; for the one sleeps easily because he cannot study, and the other lives merrily because he feels no pain; the one lacking the burden of lean and wasteful learning, the other knowing no burden of heavy tedious penury. These Time ambles withal.

Orl. Who doth he gallop withal?

Ros. With a thief to the gallows; for though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Orl. Who stays it still withal?

Ros. With lawyers in the vacation; for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how Time moves.

Orl. Where dwell you, pretty youth?

Ros. With this shepherdess, my sister; here in the skirts of the forest, like fringe upon a peticoat.

Orl. Are you native of this place?

Ros. As the coy that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

Ros. I have been told so of many: but, indeed, an old religious uncle of mine taught me to speak,
AS YOU LIKE IT.

who was in his youth an inland man; one that knew courtship too well, for there he fell in love. I have heard him read many lectures against it; and I thank God I am not a woman, to be touched with so many giddy offences as he hath generally taxed their whole sex withal.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal evils that he laid to the charge of women?

Ros. There were none principal; they were all like one another as half-pence are; every one fault seeming monstrous till his fellow fault came to match it.

Orl. I prithee, recount some of them.

Ros. No; I will not cast away my physic but on those that are sick. There is a man haunts the forest, that abuses our young plants with carving 'Rosalind' on their barks; hangs odes upon hawthorns, and elegies on brambles; all, forsooth, defying the name of Rosalind: if I could meet that fancy-monger, I would give him some good counsel, for he seems to have the quotidian of love upon him.

Orl. I am he that is so love-shaken. I pray you, tell me your remedy.

Ros. There is none of my uncle's marks upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love; in which cage of rushes I am sure you are not prisoner.

Orl. What were his marks?

Ros. A lean cheek, which you have not; a blue eye and sunken, which you have not; an unquestionable spirit, which you have not; a beard neglected, which you have not: but I pardon you for that, for simply your having in beard is a younger brother's revenue. Then your nose should be unabartered, your bonnet unbanded, your sleeve unbuttoned, your shoe untied, and every thing about you demonstrating a careless desolation. But you are no such man: you are rather point-devisé in your accoutrements; as loving yourself than seeming the lover of any other.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I love.

Ros. Me believe it! you may as soon make her that you love believe it; which, I warrant, she is apter to do than to confess she does; that is one of the points in the which women still give the lie to their consciences. But, in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verses on the trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee, youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he.

Ros. But are you so much in love as your rimes speak?

Orl. Neither rime nor reason can express how much.

Ros. Love is merely a madness, and I tell you, deserves as well a dark house and a whip as madmen do; and the reason why they are not so punished and cured is, that the lunacy is so ordinary that the whippers are in love too. Yet I profess curing it by counsel.

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?

Ros. Yes, one; and in this manner. He was to imagine me his love, his mistress; and I set him every day to woo me: at which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effemnate, changeable, longing and liking, proud, effamatical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, full of smiles, for every passion something, and for no passion truly any thing, as boys and woman are for the most part, cattle of this colour; wou ow like him, now loathe him; then enter-ta him, then forswear him; now weep for him, th spit at him; that I drave my suitor from his humbour of love to a living humour of mad-which was, to forswear the full stream of the d, and to live in a nook merely monastic. A.

thus I cured him; and this way will I take up to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep;

heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in

Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Ros. I would cure you, if you would but com me Rosalind, and come every day to me and wo

me.

Orl. Now, by the faith of my love, I will: t me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it and I'll show it you;

and by the way you shall tell me where in the forest you live. Will you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Ros. Nay, you must call me Rosalind. Con-sister, will you go?

Exc. SCENE III.—Another Part of the Forest. Enter Touchstone and Audrey; Jaques behind.

Touch. Come apace, good Audrey: I will fetch up your goats, Audrey. And how, Audrey? Is the man yet? doth my simple feature content you?

Aud. Your features! Lord warrant us! we features!

Touch. I am here with thee and thy goats, and the most capricious poet, honest Ovid, as among the Goths.

Jaq. Aside. O knowledge ill-inhabited, worse than Jove in a thatched house!

Touch. When a man's verses cannot be moved so much for a man's good wit seconded with a forward child Understanding, it strikes a more dead than a great reckoning in a little room.

Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Aud. I do not know what 'poetical' is. Is it honest in deed and word? Is it a true thing?

Touch. No, truly, for the truest poetry is most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry, and what they swear in poetry may be said lovers they do feign.

Aud. Do you wish then that the gods made me poetical?

Touch. I do, truly; for thou swearest to be thou art honest: now, if thou wert a poet, might have some hope thou didst feign.

Aud. Would you not have me honest?

Touch. No, truly, unless thou wert highly favour'd; for honesty coupled to beauty is have honey a sauce to sugar.

Aud. Well, I am not fair, and therefore I pray the gods make me honest.

Touch. Truly, and to cast away honesty unto a foul slut were to put good meat into an clean dish.

Aud. I am not a slut, though I thank the god I am foul.

Touch. Well, praised be the gods for thy fitness! sluttishness may come hereafter. But as it may be, I will marry thee; and to that
I have been with Sir Oliver Martext, the vicar of the next village, who hath promised to meet me in this place of the forest, and to couple us.

Jaq. Aside. I waind fain see this meeting.

Aud. Well, the gods give us joy!

Touch. Amen. A man may, if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no temple but the wood, no assembly but horn-beasts. But what though! Courage! As horns are odious, they are necessary. It is said, 'many a man knows no end of his goods':—eight; many a man has good horns, and knows to end of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife; 'tis none of his own getting. Horns? Even so. Poor men alone! No, no; the noblest leer hath them as huge as the rascal. Is the ingle man therefore blessed? No: as a walled own is more worthier than a village, so is the orchest of a married man more honourable than his bare brow of a bachelor; and by how much licence is better than no skill, by so much is a horn more precious than to want. Here comes Sir Oliver.

Enter Sir Oliver Martext.

Sir Oli. This no matter: ne'er a fantastical knave of them all shall flout me out of my calling.

Exit. iii

Scene IV.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. Never talk to me: I will weep.

Cel. Do, I prithee; but yet have the grace to consider that tears do not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep?

Cel. As good cause as one would desire; therefore weep.

Ros. His very hair is of the dissembling colour.

Cel. Something browner than Judas's; marry, his kisses are Judas's own children.

Ros. I faith, his hair is of a good colour.

Cel. An excellent colour: your chestnut was ever the only colour.

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread.

Cel. He hath bought a pair of cast lips of Diana: a nun of winter's sisterhood kisses not more religiously; the very ics of chastity is in them.

Ros. But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not?

Cel. Nay, certainly, there is no truth in him.

Ros. Do you think so?

Cel. Yes: I think he is not a pick-purse nor a horse-stealer; but for his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a covered goblet or a worm-eaten nut.

Ros. Not true in love?

Cel. Yes, when he is in; but I think he is not in.

Ros. You have heard him swear downright he was.

Cel. 'Was' is not 'is': besides, the oath of a lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster; they are both the confirmers of false reckonings. He attends here in the forest on the duke your father.

Ros. I met the duke yesterday and had much question with him. He asked me of what parentage I was; I told him, of as good as he; so he laughed and let me go. But what talk we of fathers, when there is such a man as Orlando?

Cel. O! that's a brave man. He writes brave verses, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely, quite traverse, athwart the heart of his lover; as a puny tilt, that spurs his horse but on one side, breaks his staff like a noble goose. But all's brave that youth mounts and folly guides. Who comes here?

Enter Corin.

Cor. Mistress and master, you have oft inquir'd After the shepherd that complain'd of love, Who you saw sitting by me on the turf, Praising the proud disdainful shepherdess That was his mistress.

Cel. Well, and what of him?

Cor. If you will see a pageant truly play'd, Between the pale complexion of true love And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain, Go hence a little, and I shall conduct you, If you will mark it.

Ros. O! come, let us remove: The sight of lovers feedeth those in love. Bring us unto this sight, and you shall say I'll prove a busy actor in their play.

Exit.
 scene v.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Sil. Sweet Phebe, do not scorn me; do not, Phebe:
Say that you love me not, but say not so
In bitterness. The common executioner, Whose heart the accustomed sight of death
makes hard,
Falls not the axe upon the hallowed neck
But first begs pardon: will you sterner be
Than he that dies and lives by bloody drops?

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Corin, behind.

Phe. I would not be thy executioner:
I fly thee, for I would not injure thee.
Thou tell'st me there is murder in mine eye:
’Tis pretty, sure, and very probable,
That eyes, that are the frailst and softest things,
Who shut their coward gates on atomies,
Should be call’d tyrants, butchers, murderers!
Now do I frown on thee with all my heart;
And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee;
Now counterfeit to swoon; why now fall down;
Or, if thou canst not, O! for shame, for shame,
Lie not, to say mine eyes are murderers.
Now show the wound mine eye hath made in thee:
Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains
Some scar of it; lean but upon a rush,
The cicatrice and capable impression
Thy palm some moment keeps; but now mine eyes,
Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not,
Nor, I am sure, there is no force in eyes
That can do hurt.

Sil. O dear Phebe,
If ever, as that ever may be near,
You meet in some fresh cheek the power of fancy,
Then shall you know the wounds invisible
That love’s keen arrows make.

Phe. But till that time
Come not thou near me; and when that time comes,
Afflict me with thy mocks, pity me not;
As till that time I shall not pity thee.

Ros. And why, I pray you? Who might be your mother,
That you insult, exult, and all at once,
Over the wretched? What though you have no beauty—
As, by my faith, I see no more in you
Than without candle may go dark to bed—
Must you be therefore proud and pitiless?
Why, what means this? Why do you look on me?
I see no more in you than in the ordinary
Of nature’s sale-work. ’Od’s my little life!
I think she means to tangle my eyes too.
No, faith, proud mistress, hope not after it:
’Tis not your inky brows, your black silk hair,
Your bagle eyeballs, nor your cheek of cream,
That can ename my spirits to your worship.
You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follower,
Like foggy south puffing with wind and rain?
You are a thousand times a proper man
Than she a woman: ’tis such fools as you
That make the world full of ill-favoured children:
’Tis not her glass, but you, that flatters her;
And out of you she sees herself more proper

Than any of her lineaments can show her.
But, mistress, know yourself: down on your knee
And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man’s love
For I must tell you friendly in your ear,
Sell when you can; you are not for all market
Cry the man mercy; love him; take his offer.
Foul is most foul, being foul to be a scoffer.
So take her to thee, shepherd. Fare you well.

Phe. Sweet youth, I pray you, chide a yet together:
I had rather hear you chide than this man we.
Ros. He’s fallen in love with your foulness
And she’ll fall in love with my anger. If it be so, as fast as she answers thee with frownin’ looks,
I’ll cause her with bitter words. Will you look you so upon me?

Phe. For no ill will I bear you.

Ros. I pray you, do not fall in love with me
For I am fater than vows made in wine:
Besides, I like you not. If you will know a
house,
’Tis at the tuft of olives here hard by.
Will you go, sister? Shepherd, ply her hard.
Come, sister. Shepherdess, look on him better
And be not proud: though all the world could none could be so abus’d in sight as he.
Come, to our flock.

Exeunt Rosalind, Celia, and Corin.

Phe. Dead shepherd, now I find thy saw might:
’Who ever lov’d that lov’d not at first sight?
Sil. Sweet Phebe—

Phe. Ha! what say’st thou, Silvius?

Sil. Sweet Phebe, pity me.

Phe. Why, I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius.
Sil. Wherever sorrow is, relief would be:
If you do sorrow at my grief in love,
By giving love your sorrow and my grief
Were both extermin’d.

Phe. Thou hast my love: is not that neighbourly?

Sil. I would have you.

Phe. Why, that were covetous. Silvius, the time was that I hated thee,
And yet it is not that I bear thee love;
But since that thou canst talk of love so well
Thy company, which erst was irksome to me,
I will endure, and I’ll employ thee too;
But do not look for further recompense
Than thine own gladness that thou art employed.

Sil. So holy and so perfect is my love,
And I in such a poverty of grace,
That I shall think it a most plenteous crop
To glean the broken ears after the man
That the main harvest reaps: loose now and then
A scatter’d smile, and that I’ll live upon.

Phe. Know’st thou the youth that spoke me erewhile?

Sil. Not very well, but I have met him oft.
And he hath bought the cottage and the bough
That the old carlot once was master of.

Phe. Think not I love him, though I ask for him.
’Tis but a peevish boy; yet he talks well;
But what care I for words! yet words do we
When he that speaks them pleases those that hear.
It is a pretty youth: not very pretty:
But, sure, he’s proud; and yet his pride becomes him.

He’ll make a proper man: the best thing in him
Is his complexion; and faster than his tong
Enter Orlando.

Orl. Good day and happiness, dear Rosalind! You know me, you all know me, you. Blank verse.

Exit.

Ros. Farewell, Monsieur Traveller: look you well and wear strange suits, disable all the benefit of your own country, be out of love with your nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are: or I will scarce think you have sworn in a gondola. Why, how now, Orlando! where have you been all this while? You a lover! An you serve me such another trick, never come in my sight more.

Orl. My fair Rosalind, I come within an hour of my promise.

Rosalind. Break an hour's promise in love! He that will divide a minute into a thousand parts, and break but a part of the thousandth part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him that Cupid hath clapped him on the shoulder, but I'll warrant him heart-whole.

Orl. Pardon me, dear Rosalind.

Ros. Nay, an you be so tardy, come no more in my sight: I had as lief be wooed of a snail.

Orl. Of a snail?

Ros. Ay, of a snail; for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head; a better join-ture, I think, than you make a woman: besides, he brings his destiny with him.

Orl. What's that?

Ros. Why, horns; which such as you are fain to be beholding to your wives for: but he comes armed in his fortune and prevents the slander of his wife.

Orl. Virtue is no horn-maker; and my Rosalind is virtuous.

Ros. And I am your Rosalind.

Orl. It pleasing him to call you so: but he hath a Rosalind of a better leer than you.

Ros. Come, woo me, woo me; for now I am in a holiday humour, and like enough to consent.

What would you say to me now, an I were your very very Rosalind?

Orl. I would kiss before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speak first, and when you were gravelled for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kiss. Very good orators, when they are out, they will spit; and for lovers lacking—God warn us!—matter, the cleanest shift is to kiss.

Orl. How if the kiss be denied?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreaty, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloved mistress?

Ros. Marry, that should you, if I were your mistress, or I should think my honesty ranker than your wit.

Orl. What, of my suit?

Ros. Not out of your apparel, and yet out of your suit. Am not I your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Ros. Well. In her person I say I will not have you.

Orl. Then in mine own person I die.

Ros. No, faith, die by attorney. The poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his own person, videlicet, in a love-cause. Troilus had his brains dashed out with a Grecian club; yet he did what he could to die before, and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have lived many a fair year, though Herod had turned nun, if it had not been for a hot midsummer-night; for, good youth, he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont, and being taken with the cram was drowned; and the foolish coroners of that age found it was 'Hero of Sestos.' But these are all lies: men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind, for, I protest, her frown might kill me.

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a fly. But come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more coming-on disposition, and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalind.

Ros. Yes, faith, will I; Fridays and Saturdays and all.

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Ros. Ay, and twenty such.

Orl. What sayest thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so.

Ros. Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing? Come, sister, you shall be the priest and marry us. Give me your hand, Orlando. What do you say, sister?

Orl. Pray thee, marry us.

Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin, 'Will you, Orlando,'—

Cel. Go to. Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?

Orl. I will.

Ros. Ay, but when?

Orl. Why now; as fast as she can marry us.

Ros. Then you must say, 'I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.'

Orl. I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Ros. I might ask you for your commission; but I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband: there's a girl goes before the priest; and certainly a woman's thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts; they are winged.

Ros. Now tell me how long you would have her after you have possessed her.

Orl. For ever and a day.

Ros. Say 'a day,' without the 'ever.' No, no, Orlando; men are April when they woo. December when they wed; maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives. I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen; more clamorous than a parrot against rain; more new-fangled than an ape; more giddy in my desires than a monkey: I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry; I will laugh like a hyen, and that when thou art inclined to sleep.

Orl. But will my Rosalind do so?

Ros. By my life, she will do as I do.

Orl. O! but she is wise.

Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to do this; the wiser, the waywarder. Make the doors upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the casement; shut that, and 'twill out at the key-hole; stop that, 'twill fly with the smoke out of the chimney.

Orl. A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say, 'Wit, whither wilt?'

Ros. Nay, you might keep that check for it till you met your wife's wit going to your neighbour's bed.

Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuse that?

Ros. Marry, to say she came to seek you there.

You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue. O that woman that cannot make her fault her husband's occasion, let her never nurse her churlishness, for she will breed it like a fool.

Orl. For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee.

Ros. Alas! dear love. I cannot lack the two hours.

Orl. I must attend the duke at dinner; two o'clock I will be with thee again.

Ros. Ay, go your ways, go your ways; I knew what you would prove; my friends told me much, and I thought no less: that flatterer tongue of yours won me; 'tis but one cast away and so, come, death! Two o'clock is your hour.

Orl. Ay, sweet Rosalind.

Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, at so God mend me, and by all pretty oaths thae are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise or come one minute behind your hour I will think you the most pathetical break promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of you call Rosalind, that may chosen out of the gross band of the unfaithful. Therefore beware my censure, and keep your promise.

Orl. With no less religion than if thou we indeed my Rosalind: so, adieu.

Ros. Well, Time is the old justice that examines all such offenders, and lets Time try.

Adieu.

Exit ORLANDO

Cel. You have simply misused our sex in your love-prate: we must have your doublet and hose plucked over your head, and show the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.

Ros. O coz, coz, coz, my pretty little coz, thou didst know how many fathom deep I am love! But it cannot be sounded: my affect hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

Cel. Or rather, bottomless; that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out.

Ros. No; that same wicked bastard of Ver that was begot of thought, conceived of spleen and born of madness, that blind rascally boy that abuses every one's eyes because his own are o' let him be judge how deep I am in love. I tell thee, Alien, I cannot be out of the sight. Orlando: I'll go and find a shadow and sit till I come.

Cel. And I'll sleep.

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter JAQUES, Lords, and Foresters.

Jaq. Which is he that killed the deer?

First Lord. Sir, it was I.

Jaq. Let's present him to the duke, like Roman conqueror; and it would do well to the deer's horns upon his head for a brandish victory. Have you any song, forester, for the purpose?

Forester. Yes, sir.

Jaq. Sing it: 'tis no matter how it be in the sound: it makes noise enough.

For. What shall he have that kill'd the deer? His leather skin and horns to wear.

Then sing him home.

The rest shall bear this burl.
Take thou no scorn to wear the horn;
It was a crest ere thou wast born:
Thy father’s father wore it,
And thy father bore it.
The horn, the horn, the lusty horn
Is not a thing to laugh to scorn. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. How say you now? Is it not past two Stock’d, and here much Orlando!
Cel. I warrant you, with pure love and troubled rain, he hath ta’en his bow and arrows, and is one forth to sleep. Look, who comes here.

Enter Silvius.

Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth.
I gently Phebe bid me give you this:
know not the contents; but, as I guess the stern brow and waspish action which she did use as was writing of it, bears an angry tenour: pardon me;

am but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter, and play the swaggerer: bear this, bear all.

he says I am not fair; that I lack manners;
he calls me proud, and that she could not love me for more as rare as phœnix. ‘Od’s my will!
her love is not the hare that I do hunt;

writes she to me? Well, shepherd, well, his is a letter of your own device.

Sil. No, I protest, I know not the contents:
be he did write it.

Ros. Come, come, you are a fool, and turn’d into the extremity of love.
saw her hand: she has a leathern hand, freestone colour’d hand: I verily did think that her old gloves were on, but twas her hands;

has a housewife’s hand; but that’s no matter;
say she never did invent this letter;

is a man’s invention, and his hand.

Sil. Sure, it is hers.

Ros. Why, ‘tis a boisterous and a cruel style, style for challengers; why, she defies me.

Try Turk to Christian: women’s gentle brain could not drop forth such giant rude invention, rich Ethiope words, blacker in their effect than in their countenance. Will you hear the letter?

Sil. So please you, for I never heard it yet;

heard too much of Phebe’s cruelty.

Ros. She Phebes me. Mark how the tyrant writes.

Art thou god to shepherd turn’d,
That a maiden’s heart hath burn’d?
an woman rail thus?

Sil. Call you this railing?

Ros. Why, thy godhead laid apart,
Warr’s’t thou with a woman’s heart?

Id you ever hear such railing?

Whilest the eye of man did woo me,
That could do no vengeance to me.

causing me a beast.

If this scorn of your bright eye
Have power to raise such love in mine
Alack! in me what strange effect
Would they work in mild aspect.

Whiles you chid me, I did love;
How then might your prayers move?
He that brings this love to thee
Little knows this love in me:

And by him seal up thy mind;

Whether that thy youth and kind
Will the faithful offer take
Of me and all that I can make;

Or else by him my love deny,
And then I’ll study how to die.

Sil. Call you this chiding?

Cel. Alas, poor shepherd!

Ros. Do you pity him? no; he deserves no pity. Wilt thou love such a woman? What, to make thee an instrument and play false strains upon thee! not to be endured! Well, go your way to her, for I see love hath made thee a tame snake, and say this to her: that if she love me,
I charge her to love thee; if she will not, I will never have her unless thou entreat for her. If you be a true lover, hence, and not a word, for here comes more company. Exeunt Silvius.

Enter Oliver.

Oli. Good morrow, fair ones. Pray you, if you know,

Where in the purlieus of this forest stands
A sheepecote fenc’d about with olive-trees?

Cel. West of this place, down in the neighbour bottom:

The rank of osiers by the murmuring stream
Left on your right hand brings you to the place.
But at this hour the house doth keep itself;

There’s none within.

Oli. If that an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description;

Such garments and such years: ’The boy is fair;

Of female favour, and bestows himself
Like a ripe forester: the woman low,

And browner than her brother.’ Are not you
The owner of the house I did inquire for?

Oli. It is no boast, being ask’d, to say we are.

Oli. Orlando doth commend him to you both,

And to that youth he calls his Rosalind
He sends this bloody napkin. Are you he?

Ros. I am: what must we understand by this?

Oli. Some of my shame; if you will know

What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkercher was stain’d.

Cel. I pray you, tell it.

Oli. When last the young Orlando parted from you
He left a promise to return again

Within an hour; and pacing through the forest,

Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy,

Lo! what befell; he threw his eye aside,

And mark what object did present itself:

Under an oak, whose boughs were moss’d with age,

And high top bald with dry antiquity,

A wretched ragged man, o’ergrown with hair,

Lay sleeping on his back: about his neck

A green and gilded snake had wreath’d itself,

Who with her head nimble in threats approach’d

The opening of his mouth; but suddenly, in

Seeing Orlando, it unlink’d itself,

And with indented glides did slip away

Into a bush; under which bush’s shade
A lioness, with udders all drawn dry,
Lay couching, head on ground, with catlike watch;
When that the sleeping man should stir; for 'tis
The royal disposition of that beast
To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead:
This seen, Orlando did approach the man, 120
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.
Cel. O! I have heard him speak of that same brother;
And he did render him the most unnatural
That liv'd 'mongst men.
Oli. And well he might so do,
For well I know he was unnatural.
Ros. But, to Orlando: did he leave him there,
Food to the suck'd and hungry lioness?
Oli. Twice did he turn his back and purpos'd so;
But kindness, nobler ever than revenge,
And nature, stronger than his just occasion, 120
Made him give battle to the lioness,
Who quickly fell before him: in which hurtling
From miserable slumber I awak'd.
Cel. Are you his brother?
Ros. This was it you he rescued?
Cel. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?
Oli. Twas I; but 'tis not I. I do not shame
To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.
Ros. But, for the bloody napkin?
Oli. By and by.
When from the first to last, betwixt us two, 120
Tears our recountments had most kindly bath'd,
As how I came into that desert place:—
In brief, he led me to the gentle duke,
Who gave me fresh array and entertainment,
Committing me unto my brother's love;
Who led me instantly unto his cage,
There stripp'd himself; and here, upon his arm,
The lioness had torn some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted,
And cried, in fainting, upon Rosalind. 150
Brief, I recover'd him, bound up his wound;
And, after some small space, being strong at heart,
He sent me hither, stranger as I am,
To tell this story, that you might excuse
His broken promise; and to give this napkin,
Dy'd in his blood, unto the shepherd youth
That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.

ROSALIND SWEON.

Cel. Why, how now, Ganymede! sweet Ganymede!
Oli. Many will swooon when they do look on blood.
Cel. There is more in it. Cousin Ganymede!
Oli. Look, he recovers.
Cel. I would I were at home.
Cel. We'll lead you thither.
I pray you, will you take him by the arm?
Oli. Be of good cheer, youth. You a man! You lack a man's heart.
Ros. I do so, I confess it. Ah, sirrah! a body would think this was well counterfeit. I pray you, tell your brother how well I counterfeit.
Heigh-ho!
Oli. This was not counterfeit: there is too great testimony in your complexion that it was a passion of earnest.
CENE I.]

AS YOU LIKE IT.

Touch. He, sir, that must marry this woman, therefore, you clown, abandon—which is in the alleg, leave—the society, —which in the boorish company,—of this female,—which in the common is woman; which together is, abandon he society of this female, or, clown, thou wenchest; or, to thy better understanding, diest; r, to wit, I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life unto death, thy liberty into bondage, will deal in poison with thee, or in bastinado, in steel; I will bandy with thee in faction; will o'er-run thee with policy; I will kill thee hundred and fifty ways; therefore tremble, ad depart.

Enter Corin.

Cor. Our master and mistress seek you: come, way, away!

Touch. Trip, Audrey! trip, Audrey! I attend, attend.

Enter Orlando and Oliver.

Orl. Is't possible that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that but seeing, you should love her? and loving, woo? and wooing, she would grant? and will you persever to enjoy her? Orl. Neither call the giddiness of it in question, the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, y sudden wooing, nor her sudden consenting; it say with me, I love Aliena; say with her, that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other: it shall be to your good; for my father's house and all the revenue that is old sir Rowland's will I estate upon you, d here live and die a shepherd.

Ovl. You have my consent. Let your wedding to-morrow: thither will I invite the duke and his contented followers. Go you and prepare teams; for look you, here comes my Rosalind.

Enter Rosalind.

Ros. God save you, brother.

Ovl. And you, fair sister. —Exeunt.

Ros. O! my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf.

Ovl. It is my arm.

Ros. I thought thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion.

Ovl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counteracted to swoon when he showed me your handerker?

Ovl. Ay, and greater wonders than that.

Ros. O! I know where I am. Nay, 'tis true: there was never any thing so sudden but a fight of two rams, and Cesar's thronical tug of 'I came, saw, and overcame': for your other and my sister no sooner met but they stuck; no sooner looked but they looked; no sooner loved but they sighed; no sooner sighed at they asked one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason but they sought the remedy: did in these degrees have they made a pair of airs to marriage which they will climb inconvenient, or be inconvenient before marriage. They are in the very wrath of love, and they will together: clubs cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to-morrow, and I will bid the duke to the nuptial. But, O! how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes. By so much the more shall I to-morrow be at the height of heart-heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then, to-morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind?

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weary you then no longer with idle talking. Know of me then, for now I speak to some purpose, that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit. I speak not this that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, insomuch I say I know you are; neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do yourself good, and not to grace me. Believe then, if you please, that I can do strange things. I have, since I was three year old, conversed with a magician, most profound in his art and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalind so near the heart as your gesture cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena, shall you marry her. I know into what straits of fortune she is driven; and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to-morrow, human as she is, and without any danger.

Orl. Speakest thou in sober meanings?

Ros. By my life, I do; which I tender dearly, though I say I am a magician. Therefore, put you in your best array; bid your friends; for if you will be married to-morrow, you shall; and to Rosalind, if you will. Look, here comes a lover of mine, and a lover of hers.

Enter Silvius and Phoebe.

Phoe. Youth, you have done me much ungentleness. To show the letter that I writ to you.

Ros. I care not if I have: it is my study To seem despiteful and ungentle to you. You are there follow'd by a faithful shepherd: Look upon him, love him; he worships you.

Phoe. Good shepherd, tell this youth what 'tis to love.

Sil. It is to be all made of sighs and tears; And so am I for Phoebe.

Phoe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of faith and service; And so am I for Phoebe.

Phoe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasy, All made of passion, and all made of wishes; All adoration, duty, and observance; All humbleness, all patience, and impatience; All purity, all trial, all obedience; And so am I for Phoebe.

Phoe. And so am I for Ganymede.

Orl. And so am I for Rosalind.

Ros. And so am I for no woman.

Phoe. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?
Scene III.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Touch. To-morrow is the joyful day, Audrey; to-morrow will we be married.

Aud. I do desire it with all my heart, and I hope it is no dishonest desire to desire to be a woman of the world. Here come two of the banished duke's pages.

Enter two Pages.

First Page. Well met, honest gentleman.

Touch. By my troth, well met. Come, sit, sit, and a song.

Second Page. We are for you: sit i'the middle.

First Page. Shall we clap into 't roundly, without hawking or spitting, or saying we are hoarse, which are the only prologues to a bad voice?

Second Page. I' faith, i' faith; and both in a tune, like two gypsiis on a horse.

It was a lover and his lass,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
That o'er the green corn-field did pass,
In the spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding;
Sweet lovers love the spring.

Between the acres of the eye,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
These pretty country folks would lie,
In the spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding;
Sweet lovers love the spring.

This carol they began that hour,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
How that a life was but a flower
In the spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding;
Sweet lovers love the spring.

And therefore take the present time,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
For love is crowned with the prime
In the spring time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding;
Sweet lovers love the spring.

Touch. Truly, young gentlemen, though the was no great matter in the ditty, yet the no was very untuneable.

First Page. You are deceived, sir: we keep time; we lost not our time.

Touch. By my troth, yes; I count it but time to hear such a foolish song. God be with you; and God mend your voices! Come, Audrey.

Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter Duke Senior, Amiens, Jaques, Orlando, Oliver, and Celia.

Duke S. Dost thou believe, Orlando, that thy boy Can do all this that he hath promised?

Orl. I sometimes do believe, and sometim do not;

As those that fear they hope, and know they fel.

Enter Rosalind, Silvius, and Phebe.

Rosalind. Patience once more, whilst our company is urg'd.

You say, if I bring in your Rosalind, You will bestow her on Orlando here?

Duke S. That would I, had I kingdoms give with her.

Rosalind. And you say you will have her, when bring her?

Duke S. That would I, were I of all kingdoms kin.

Rosalind. You say you 'll marry me, if I be willing Phebe. That will I, should I die the hour after.

Rosalind. But if you do refuse to marry me, You 'll give yourself to this most faithfull shepherd.

Phebe. So is the bargain.

Rosalind. You say, that you 'll have Phebe, if she will.

Silvius. Though to have her and death were but one thing.

Rosalind. I have promised to make all this matter even.

Keep you your word, O duke, to give your daughter;

You yours, Orlando, to receive his daughter.

Keep you your word, Phebe, that you 'll marry

Orlando, if else, refusing me, to wed this shepherd;

Keep your word, Silvius, that you 'll marry he

If she refuse me: and from hence I go,

To make these doubts all even.

Exeunt Rosalind and Celia.

Duke S. I do remember in this shepherd boy Some lively touches of my daughter's favour.

Orl. My lord, the first time that I ever saw him M ethought he was a brother to your daughter.

But, my good lord, this boy is forest-born, And hath been tutor'd in the rudiments Of many desperate studies by his uncle, Whom he reports to be a great magician, Obscured in the circle of this forest.

Enter Touchstone and Audrey.

Jaques. There is, sure, another flood toward, at these couples are coming to the ark. Here come a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongs are called fools.

Touch. Salutation and greeting to you all!

Jaques. Good my lord, bid him welcome. This is the motley-minded gentleman that I have often met in the forest: he hath been a courtier he swears.
Touch. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation. I have trod a measure; I have uttered a lays; I have been politic with my friend, smooth with mine enemy; I have undone three tailors; I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Jaq. And how was that ta'en up? 50

Touch. Faith, we met, and found the quarrel as upon the seventh cause.

Jaq. How seventh cause? Good my lord, like us fellow.

Duke S. I like him very well.

Touch. God 'ild you, sir; I desire you of the king. I press in here, sir, amongst the rest of his country copulative, to swear and to forswear, according as marriage binds and blood breaks. A poor virgin, sir, an ill-favoured thing, r, but mine own: a poor humour of mine, sir, take that that no man else will. Rich honesty wells like a miser, sir, in a poor house, as your earl in your foul oyster.

Duke S. By my faith, he is very swift and sen tentious.

Touch. According to the fool's bolt, sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Jaq. But, for the seventh cause; how did you and the quarrel on the seventh cause? 70

Touch. Upon a lie seven times removed:—bear our body more seeming, Audrey:—as thus, sir, did dislike the cut of a certain courtier's beard: he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was: this is called re'tort courteous. If I sent him word again was not well cut, he would send me word he at it to please himself: this is called the 'quip modest.' If again, it was not well cut, he disputed my judgment: this is called the 'reply Turlish.' If again, it was not well cut, he would answer, I spoke not true: this is called the 'reproof valiant.' If again, it was not well cut, he would say, I lie: this is called the 'countercheck quarrelsome'; and so to the 'lie remnant,' and the 'lie direct.'

Jaq. And how oft did you say his beard was well cut?

Touch. I durst go no further than the 'lie remnant,' nor he durst not give me the 'lie direct'; and so we measured swords and arrows.

Jaq. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lie?

Touch. O sir, we quarrel in print; by the book, you have books for good manners: I will name the degrees. The first, the 'retort courteous'; the second, the 'quip modest'; the third, the 'reply churlish'; the fourth, the 'reproof valiant'; the fifth, the 'countercheck quarrelsome'; the sixth, the 'lie with circumstance'; the seventh, the 'lie direct.' All these you may void but the 'lie direct;' and you may avoid a lie, too, with an 'if.' I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel; but when the parties are met themselves, one of them thought but an 'if;' as 'if you said so, then I said so;' and they shook hands and swore brothers. Your 'if' is the only peacemaker; much virtue in it.

Jaq. Is not this a rare fellow, my lord? he's good at any thing, and yet a fool.

Duke S. He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, and under the presentation of that he shoots his wit.

Enter Hymen, leading Rosalind in woman's clothes, and Cellia.

Still Music.

Hymn. Then is there mirth in heaven, When earthly things made even

Good Duke, receive thy daughter;

Hymen from heaven brought her;

Yea, brought her hither,

That thou might'st join her hand with his,

Whose heart within her bosom is.

Ros. To Duke S. To you I give myself, for I am yours.

To Orlando. To you I give myself, for I am yours.

Duke S. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.

Phe. If sight and shape be true,

Why then, my love adieu!

Ros. To Duke S. I'll have no father, if you be not he:

To Orlando. I'll have no husband, if you be not he:

To Phebe. Nor ne'er wed woman, if you be not she.

Hymn. Peace, ho! I bar confusion

Of these most strange events:

Here's eight that must take hands

To join in Hymen's bands,

If truth holds true contents.

You and you no cross shall part:

You and you are heart in heart:

You to his love must accord,

Or have a woman to your lord:

You and you are sure together,

And every winter to foul weather.

While a wedlock-Hymen we sing,

Feed yourselves with questioning,

That reason wonder may diminish,

How thus we met, and these things finish.

Song.

Wedding is great Juno's crown;

O blessed bond of board and bed!

'Tis Hymen peoples every town;

High wedlock then be honoured.

Honour, high honour, and renown,

To Hymen, god of every town!

Duke S. O my dear niece! welcome thou art to me:

Even daughter, welcome in no less degree.

Phe. I will not eat my word, nor thou art mine; Thy faith my fancy to thee doth combine.

Enter Jaques de Boys.

Jaq. de B. Let me have audience for a word or two:

I am the second son of old Sir Rowland, 160

That bring these tidings to this fair assembly. Duke Frederick, hearing how that every day Men of great worth resorted to this forest, Address'd a mighty power, which were on foot.
In his own conduct, purposely to take
His brother here and put him to the sword:
And to the skirts of this wild wood he came,
Where, meeting with an old religious man,
After some question with him, was converted
Both from his enterprise and from the world:
His crown bequeathing to his banish'd brother,
And all their lands restor'd to them again
That were with him exil'd. This to be true,
I do engage my life.

Duke S. Welcome, young man;
Thou offer'st fairly to thy brothers' wedding:
To one, his lands withheld; and to the other,
A land itself at large, a potent dukedom.
First, in this forest, let us do those ends
That here were well begun and well begot;
And after, every of this happy number
That have endur'd shrew'd days and nights
with us,
Shall share the good of our returned fortune,
According to the measure of their states.
Meantime, forget this new-fall'n dignity,
And fall into our rustic revelry.
Play, music! and you brides and bridgroom's all,
With measure heap'd in joy, to the measures fall.

Jaq. Sir, by your patience. If I heard you rightly,
The duke hath put on a religious life,
And throwed into neglect the pompous court?

Jaq. de B. He hath.

Jaq. To him will I: out of these convertes
There is much matter to be heard and learn'd.
To DUKE S. You to your former honour I bequeath;
Your patience and your virtue well deserve it:
To ORLANDO. You to a love that your true faith
doth merit:
To OLIVER. You to your land, and love, and great allies:
To SILVIIUS. You to a long and well-deserved bed:

To TOUCHSTONE. And you to wrangling; if thy loving voyage
Is but for two months victual'd. So, to your pleasures:
I am for other than for dancing measures.

Duke S. Stay, Jaques, stay.
Jaq. To see no pastime, I: what you would have I'll stay to know at your abandon'd cave. Ex Duke S. Proceed, proceed: we will begin the rites,
As we do trust they'll end, in true delights.

A DANCE.

EPILOGUE

SPOKEN BY ROSALIND.

It is not the fashion to see the lady the epilogue but it is no more unhandsome than to see the the prologue. If it be true that good wine neer bush, 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue yet to good wine they do use good bushes, and go plays prove the better by the help of good epilogue.
What a case am I in, then, that am neither a go epilogue, nor cannot insinuate with you in the beho of a good play? I am not furnished like a begge therefore to beg will not become me: my way is conjure you, and I'll begin with the women, charge you, O women! for the love you bear to me to like as much of this play as please you: and charge you, O men! for the love you bear to some as I perceive by your simpering none of you ha them, that between you and the women the play me please. If I were a woman I would kiss as ma of you as had beards that pleased me, complexio that liked me, and breathe that I desir'd not; and am sure, as many as have good beards, or good fue or sweet breaths, will, for my kind offer, when make court'sy, bid me farewell.
THE TAMING OF THE SHREW.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

A Lord.
CHRISTOPHER SLY, a Tinker.
HOSTESS, PAGE, PLAYERS, HUNTS-MEN, and SERVANTS.

BAPTISTA, a rich Gentleman of Padua.
VINCENTIO, an old Gentleman of Pisa.
LUCENTIO, Son to Vincentio, in love with Bianca.
PETRUCHIO, a Gentleman of Verona, a suitor to Katharina.

Tailor, Haberdasher, and Servants attending on Baptista and Petruchio.

SCENE.—Sometimes in Padua, and sometimes in Petruchio's House in the Country.

INDUCTION.

SCENE I.—Before an Alehouse on a Heath.

Enter Hostess and SLY.

SLY. I'll pheeze you, in faith.
HOSTESS. A pair of stocks, you rogue! SLY. Y' are a baggage: the SLY's are no rogues; or in the chronicles; we came in with Richard squire. Therefore, pauca pallabris; let the slide. Sessa!
HOSTESS. You will not pay for the glasses you've burst?
SLY. No, not a denier. Go by, Jeronimy; go, why cold bed, and warm thee.
HOSTESS. I know my remedy: I must go fetch a third-borough.

Exit.

SLY. Third, or fourth, or fifth borough, I'll swer him by law. I'll not budge an inch, y: let him come, and kindly.

Lies down on the ground, and falls asleep.

Ors winded. Enter a Lord from hunting, with Huntsmen and Servants.

LORD. Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds:
arch Merriman, the poor cur is emboss'd, and couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd brach. w'st thou not, boy, how Silver made it good? the hedge-corner, in the coldest fault? would not lose the dog for twenty pound.

First Hun. Why, Belman is as good as he, my lord; cried upon it at the merest loss, twice to-day pick'd out the dullest scent: must, me, I take him for the better dog.

LORD. Thou art a fool: if Echo were as fleet, would esteem him worth a dozen such. at sup them well, and look unto them all: morrow I intend to hunt again.

First Hun. I will, my lord.
Persuade him that he hath been lunatic;
And, when he says he is—say that he dreams,
For he is nothing but a mighty lord.
This do, and do it kindly, gentle sirs:
It will be pastime passing excellent,
If it be husbanded with modesty.

First Hun. My lord, I warrant you we will play our part,
As he shall think, by our true diligence,
He is no less than what we say he is.
Lord. Take him up gently, and to bed with him,
And each one to his office when he wakes.

Sly is borne out. A trumpet sounds.
Sirrah, go see what trumpet 'tis that sounds:

Exit Servant.
Belike, some noble gentleman that means,
Travelling some journey, to repose him here.

Re-enter Servant.
How now! who is it?
Serv. An it please your honour,
Players that offer service to your lordship.
Lord. Bid them come near.

Enter Players.
Now, fellows, you are welcome.
Players. We thank your honour.
Lord. Do you intend to stay with me to-night?
A Player. So please your lordship to accept our duty.
Lord. With all my heart. This fellow I remember.
Since once he play'd a farmer's eldest son:
'Twas where you woo'd the gentlewoman so well.
I have forgot your name; but, sure, that part
Was aptly fitted and naturally perform'd.
A Player. I think 'twas Sotto that your honour means.
Lord. 'Tis very true: thou didst it excellent.
Well, you are come to me in happy time,
The rather for I have some sport in hand
Wherein your cunning can assist me much.
There is a lord who will hear you play to-night;
But I am doubtful of your modesties,
Lest, over-eyeing of his odd behaviour,
For yet his honour never heard a play,
You break into some merry passion
And so offend him; for I tell you, sirs,
If you should smile he grows impatient.
A Player. Fear not, my lord: we can contain ourselves
Were he the veriest antick in the world.
Lord. Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery,
And give them friendly welcome every one:
Let them want nothing that my house affords.

Exit one with the Players.
Sirrah, go you to Barthol'mew my page,
And see him dress'd in all suits like a lady:
That done, conduct him to the drunkard's chamber;
And call him 'madam'; do him obeisance.
Tell him from me, as he will win my love,
He bear himself with honourable action,
Such as he hath observ'd in many ladies
Unto their lords, by them accomplished:
Such duty to the drunkard let him do
With soft low tongue and lowly courtesy;
And say 'What is 't your honour will command,
Wherein your lady and your humble wife
May show her duty, and make known her love?'

And then, with kind embracements, tempt kisses,
And with declining head into his bosom,
Bid him shed tears, as being overjoy'd
To see her noble lord restor'd to health.
Who for this seven years hath esteem'd him
No better than a poor and loathsome beggar.
And if the boy have not a woman's gift
To rain a shower of commanded tears,
An onion will do well for such a shift,
Which in a napkin being close convey'd,
Shall in despite enforce a watery eye.
See this dispatch'd with all the haste thou can
Anon I'll give thee more instructions.

Exit Servant.
I know the boy will well usurp the grace,
Voice, gait, and action of a gentlewoman:
I long to hear him call the drunkard husband
And how my men will stay themselves from laughter
When they do homage to this simple peasant.
I'll in to counsel them: haply, my presence
May well abate the over-merry spleen
Which otherwise would grow into extremes.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber in the Lord's House.

Enter aloft SLY in a rich night-gown, with Attends;
some with apparel, others with basin,
and other appurtenances; and Lord, dress'd like a servant.

Sly. For God's sake! a pot of small ale.
First Serv. Will 't please your lordship drink a cup of sack?
Second Serv. Will 't please your honour take of these conserves?
Third Serv. What raiment will your home wear to-day?

Sly. I am Christopher Sly; call not me honor:
nor lordship: I ne'er drank sack in my life; and if you give me any conserves, give me conserves of beef. Ne'er ask me what raiment I will wear for I have no more doublets than backs, no more stockings than legs, nor no more shoes than feet, and sometimes more feet than shoes, or such shoes
as my toes look through the overleath.

Lord. Heaven cease this idle humour in your honour!
O! that a mighty man, of such descent,
Of such possessions, and so high esteem,
Should be infused with so foul a spirit.

Sly. What! would you make me mad? I am not Christopher Sly, old Sly's son of Bard-heath, by birth a pedlar, by education a calmaker, by transmutation a bear-herd, and by present profession a tinker? Ask Main Hackett, the fat ale-wife of Wincot, if she knew me not: if she say I am not fourteen pence the score for shee ale, score me up for the lyning knife in Christendom. What! I am not beastrought: here's—
First Serv. O! this it is that makes your mourn.
Second Serv. O! this it is that makes your servants droop.

Lord. Hence comes it your kindred shal your house,
As beaten hence by your strange lunacy.
O noble lord, bethink thee of thy birth, all home thy ancient thoughts from banishment, and banish these ancient lowly dreams.

look how thy servants do attend on thee, each in his office ready at thy beck:

Vill thou have music? hark! Apollo plays.

Music.

nd twenty caged nightingales do sing:

r wilt thou sleep? we'll have thee to a couch after and sweeter than the lustful bed

a purpose trim'd up for Semiramis.

ay thou wilt walk, we will bestrew the ground:

r wilt thou ride, thy horses shall be trap'd, thy heirn harps studded all with gold and pearl.

ost thou love hawking? thou hast hawks will see bove the morning lark: or wilt thou hunt?

y hounds shall make the welkin answer them, nd fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.

First Serv. Say thou wilt course; thy grey-hounds are as swift s breathed stags, ay, fletcher than the roe.

Second Serv. Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee straight.

donis painted by a running brook,

nd Cytherea all in sedges hid,

Which seem to move and wanton with her breath, ven as the waving sedges play with wind.

Lord. We'll show thee so as she was a maid, nd how she was beguiled and surpris'd, s lively painted as the deed was done.

Third Serv. Or Daphne roaming through a thorny wood,

cratching her legs that one shall swear she bleeds;

nd at that sight shall sad Apollo weep,

o workmanly the blood and tears are drawn.

Lord. Thou art a lord and nothing but a lord:

hou hast a lady far more beautiful han any woman in this waning age.

First Serv. And till the tears that she hath shed for thee

ke envious floods o'er-run her lovely face,

ew was the fairest creature in the world;

yet she is inferior to none.

Sly. Am I a lord? and have I such a lady?

Do I dream? or have I dream'd till now?

Do not sleep; I see, I hear, I speak;

smell sweet savours, and I feel soft things;

pon my life, I am a lord indeed,

nd not a tinker, nor Christophero Sly.

Tell, bring our lady hither to our sight;

nd once again, a pot o' the smallest ale.

Second Serv. Will 't please your mightiness to wash your hands?

Servants present an ewer, basin, and napkin.

I how we joy to see your wit restor'd, that once more you knew but what you are.

these fifteen years you have been in a dream,

r, when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.

Sly. These fifteen years! by my fay, a goody mar

ut did I never speak of all that time?

First Serv. O! yes, my lord, but very idle words; or though you lay here in this goody chamber, et would you say ye were beaten out of door,

nd rai upon the hostess of the house,

nd say you would present her at the leet, cause she brought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts.

sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket.

Sly. Ay, the woman's maid of the house.

Third Serv. Why, sir, you know no house, nor no such maid,

Nor no such men as you have reckon'd up.

As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Greece,

And Peter Turf, and Henry Pimpernell,

And twenty more such names and men as these,

Which never were nor no man ever saw.

Sly. Now, Lord be thanked for my good amends!

All. Amen.

Sly. I thank thee; thou shalt not lose by it.

Enter the Page, as a lady, with Attendants.

Page. How fares my noble lord?

Sly. Marry, I fare well, for here is cheer enough.

Where is my wife?

Page. Here, noble lord: what is thy will with her?

Sly. Are you my wife, and will not call me husband?

My men should call me lord: I am your goodman.

Page. My husband and my lord, my lord and husband;

I am your wife in all obedience.

Sly. I know it well. What must I call her?

Lord. Madam.

Sly. Alice madam, or Joan madam?

Lord. Madam, and nothing else: so lords call ladies.

Sly. Madam wife, they say that I have dream'd

And slept above some fifteen year or more.

Page. Ay, and the time seems thirty unto me,

Being all this time abandon'd from your bed.

Sly. 'Tis much. Servants, leave me and her alone.

Madam, undress you, and come now to bed.

Page. Thrice-noble lord, let me entreat of you

To pardon me yet for a night or two,

Or if not so, until the sun be set:

For your physicians have expressly charg'd,

In peril to incur your former malady,

That I should yet absent me from your bed:

I hope this reason stands for my excuse.

Sly. Ay, it stands so, that I may hardly tarry so long; but I would be loath to fall into my dreams again: I will therefore tarry in despite of the flesh and the blood.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Your honour's players, hearing your amendment,

Are come to play a pleasant comedy;

For so your doctors hold it very meet,

Seeing too much sadness hath congeald your blood,

And melancholy is the nurse of frenzy:

Therefore they thought it good you hear a play,

And frame your mind to mirth and Merriment,

Which bars a thousand harms and lengths life.

Sly. Marry, I will; let them play it. Is not a comony a Christmas gambold or a tumbling-trick?

Page. No, my good lord; it is more pleasing stuff.

Sly. What! household stuff?

Page. It is a kind of history.

Sly. Well, we'll see 't. Come, madam wife, sit by my side,

And let the world slip: we shall ne'er be younger.

Flourish.
ACT I.

SCENE I.—Padua. A public Place.

Enter Lucentio and Tranio.

Luc. Tranio, since for the great desire I had
To see fair Padua, nursery of arts,
I am arriv'd for fruitful Lombardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy;
And by my father's love and leave am arm'd
With his good will and thy good company,
My trusty servant, well approv'd in all,
Here let us breathe, and happily institute
A course of learning and ingenious studies.

Pisa, renowned for grave citizens,
Gave me my being and my father first,
A merchant of great traffic through the world,
Vincentio, come of the Bontivoli.
Vincentio's son, brought up in Florence,
It shall become to serve all hopes conceiv'd,
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds;
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study,
Virtue and that part of philosophy
Will I apply that treats of happiness
By virtue specially to be achieve'd.
Tell me thy mind; for I have Pisa left
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A shallow plash to plunge him in the deep,
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.

Tra. My perdonate, gentle master mine,
I am in all affected as yourself,
Glad that you thus continue your resolve
To suckail the sweets of sweet philosophy.
Only, good master, while we do admire
This virtue and this moral discipline,
Let's be no stoics nor no stocks, I pray;
Or so devote to Aristotle's checks
As Ovid be an outcast quite abjur'd.
Balk logic with acquaintance that you have,
And practise rhetoric in your common talk;
Music and poesy use to quicken you;
The mathematics and the metaphysics,
Fall to them as you find your stomach serves you;
No profit grows where is no pleasure ta'en:
In brief, sir, study what you most affect.

Luc. Gramercies, Tranio, well dost thou advise.
If, Blondello, thou wert come ashore,
We could at once put us in readiness,
And take a lodging fit to entertain
Such friends as time in Padua shall beget.
But stay awhile: what company is this?

Tra. Master, some show to welcome us to town.

Enter Baptista, Katharina, Bianca, Gremio, and Hortensio. Lucentio and Tranio stand aside.

Bap. Gentlemen, importune me no further,
For how I firmly am resolv'd you know;
That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter
Before I have a husband for the elder.
If either of you both love Katharina,
Because I know you well and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.

Gre. Aside. To cart her rather: she's too rough for me.

There, there, Hortensio, will you any wife?

Kath. I pray you, sir, is it your will
To make a stale of me amongst these mates?

Hor. Mates, maid! how mean you that!
mates for you,
Unless you were of gentler, milder mould.

Kath. I' faith, sir, you shall never need to fear
I wis it is not half way to her heart;
But if it were, doubt not her care should be
To comb your mould with a three-legg'd stool,
And paint your face, and use you like a fool.

Hor. From all such devils, good Lord deliver us.

Gre. And me too, good Lord!

Tra. Mash, master! here is some good pastime toward:
That wench is stark mad or wonderful froward.

Luc. But in the other's silence do I see Maid's mild behaviour and sobriety.

Peace, Tranio!

Tra. Well said, master; mum! and gaze your eye.

Bap. Gentlemen, that I may soon make good
What I have said.—Bianca, get you in;
And let it not displease thee, good Bianca,
For I will love thee ne'er the less, my girl.

Kath. A pretty peat! it is best
Put finger in the eye, an she knew why.

Bian. Sister, content you in my discontent.
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:
My books and instruments shall be my compal.
On them to look and practise by myself.

Luc. Hark, Tranio! thou may'st hear Minet speak.

Hor. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange
Sorry am I that our good will effects
Bianca's grief.

Gre. Why, will you mew her up,
Signior Baptista, for this fiend of hell,
And make her bear the pence of her tongue?

Bap. Gentlemen, content ye; I am resolv'd,
Go in, Bianca. Exit Bianca.

Hor. And for I know she taketh most delight
In music, instruments, and poetry,
Schoolmasters will I keep within my house,
Fit to instruct her youth. If you, Hortensio,
Or Signior Gremio, you, know any such,
Prescribe them either; for to cunning men
I will be very kind, and liberal.
To mine own children in good bringing-up;
And so farewell. Katharina, you may stay;
For I have more to commune with Bianca.

Kath. Why, and I trust I may go too; may not?
What! shall I be appointed hours, as thou, belike,
I knew not what to take, and what to leave?

Hor. May you go to the devil's dam: your gifts are so good, here's none will hold ye.
Their love is not so great, Hortensio, but he may blow our nails together, and fast it fly out: our cake's dough on both sides. Fair well: yet, for the love I bear my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means light on a fit man, teach her that wherein she delights, I will win him to her father.

Hor. So will I, Signior Gremio: but a word I pray. Though the nature of our quarrel never brooked parole, know now, upon advice I toucheth us both,—that we may yet again have access to our fair mistress and be happy rive in Bianca's love,—to labour and effect one thing especially.
GREMIO. What's that, I pray?

HOR. Marry, sir, to get a husband for her sister.

GREMIO. A husband! a devil.

HOR. I say, a husband.

GREMIO. I say, a devil. Thinkest thou, Hortensio, that her father be very rich, any man is so very a fool to be married to hell?

HOR. Tush, Gremio! though it pass your patience and mine to endure her loud alarums, hy, man, there be good fellows in the world, a man could light on them, would take her all faults, and money enough.

GREMIO. I cannot tell; but I had as lief take her wary with this condition, to be whipped at the g-h-cross every morning.

HOR. Faith, as you say, there's small choice rotten apples. But, come; since this bar in w makes us friends, it shall be so far forth kindly maintained, till by helping Baptista's dest daughter to a husband, we set his youngest ee for a husband, and then to 't refresh, sweet Bianca! Happy man be his dole! He sat runs fastest gets the ring. How say you, ignor Gremio?

GREMIO. I am agreed: and would I had given him his best horse in Padua to begin his wooing, at would thoroughly woo her, wed her, and rid her of the house. Come on.

Exeunt GREMIO and HORTENSIO.

TRA. I pray, sir, tell me, is it possible
I love should of a sudden take such hold?

Luc. O Tranio! till I found it to be true, never thought it possible or likely;
d see, while Ily I stood looking on,
found the effect of love in idleness;
nd now in plainness do confess to thee,
hat art to me as secret and as dear
Anna to the Queen of Carthage was,
Ari, I burn, I pine, I perish, Tranio, achieve not this young modest girl.

Unsell me, Tranio, for I know thou canst:

Sist me, Tranio, for I know thou wilt.

TRA. Master, it is no time to chide you now;
ction is not rated from the heart:
love have touch'd you, nought remains but so,
dime te captum quam quaeus minimo.

Luc. Gramercies, lad; go forward: this contents:
the rest will comfort, for thy counsel 's sound.

TRA. Master, you look'd so longly on the maid, haps you mark'd not what's the pith of all.

Luc. O yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face, ich as the daughter of Agenor had,
t made great Jove to humble him to her hand,
then with his knees he kiss'd the Cretan strand.

TRA. Saw you no more? mark'd you not how her sister egan to scold and raise up such a storm hat mortal ears might hardly endure the din?

Luc. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move, nd with her breath she did perfume the air;
ered and sweet was all I saw in her.

TRA. Nay, then, 'tis time to stir him from his trance.

pray, awake, sir; if you love the maid,
ed thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it stands:
er elder sister is so curt and shrewd,
th till the father rid his hands of her,
Master, your love must live a maid at home;
And therefore has he closely mew'd her up,
Because she will not be annoy'd with suitors.

Luc. Ah! Tranio, what a cruel father 's he;
But art thou not advis'd he took some care
Together her cunning schoolmasters to instruct her?

TRA. Ay, marry am I, sir; and now 'tis plotted.

Luc. I have it, Tranio.

TRA. Master, for my hand,
Both our inventions meet and jump in one.

Luc. Tell me thine first.

And undertake the teaching of the maid:
That 's your device.

Luc. It is: may it be done?

TRA. Not possible; for who shall bear your part,
And be in Padua here Vincentio's son;
Keep house and ply his book, welcome his friends,
Visit his countrymen, and banquet them?

Luc. Basta, content thee; for I have it full.

We have not yet been seen in any house,
Nor can we be distinguished by our faces
For man or master: then, it follows thus:
 Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead,
Keep house, and port, and servants, as I should:
I will some other be; some Florentine,
Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Pisa.
'Tis hatch'd and shall be so: Tranio, at once
Uncase thee, take my colour'd hat and cloak:
When Biondello comes, he waits on thee;
But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.

TRA. So had you need.

In brief then, sir, sith it your pleasure is,
And I am tied to be obedient;
For so your father charg'd me at our parting,
'Be serviceable to my son,' quoth he.
Although I think 'twas in another sense;
I am content to be Lucentio,
Because so well I love Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, be so, because Lucentio loves;
And let me be a slave, to achieve that maid
Whose sudden sight hath thrall'd my wounded eye.

Enter BIONDELO.

Here comes the rogue. Sirrah, where have you been?

BIOND. Where have I been! Nay, how now! where are you?

Master, has my fellow Tranio stoll'n your clothes?
Or you stoll'n his? or both? pray, what's the news?

Luc. Sirrah, come hither: 'tis no time to jest,
And therefore frame your manners to the time.
Your fellow Tranio here, to save my life,

Puts my apparel and my countenance on,
And I for my escape have put on his;
For in a quarrel since I came ashore
I kill'd a man, and fear I was descried.

Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes,
While I make way from hence to save my life:
You understand me?

BIOND. I, sir! ne'er a whist.

Luc. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth:
Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio.

BIOND. The better for him: would I were so too!

TRA. So could I, faith, boy, to have the next wish after,

That Lucentio indeed had Baptista's youngest daughter.
But, sirrah, not for my sake, but your master's, I advise you use your manners discreetly in all kind of companies:

When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio;
But in all places else your master Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, let's go. One thing more rests, that thyself execute, to make one among these wooers: if thou ask me why, sufficeth my reasons are both good and weighty.

The Presenters above speak.

First Serv. My lord, you nod; you do not mind the play.

Sly. Yes, by Saint Anne, do I. A good matter, surely: comes there any more of it?

Page. My lord, 'tis but begun.

Sly. 'Tis a very excellent piece of work, madam lady: would 'twere done! They sit and mark.

Scene II.—The Same. Before Hortensio's House.

Enter PetruChio and Grumio.

Pet. Verona, for a while I take my leave,
To see my friends in Padua; but of all
My best beloved and approved friend, Hortensio; and I treat this is his house.

Here, sirrah Grumio; knock, I say.

Grum. Knock, sir! whom should I knock? is there any man has rebused your worship?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me here soundly.

Grum. Knock you here, sir! why, sir, what am I, sir, that I should knock you here, sir? 10

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me at this gate; And rap me well, or I'll knock your knife's pate.

Grum. My master is grown quarrelsome. I should knock you first, And then I know after who comes by the worst.

Pet. Will it not be?

Faith, sirrah, an you'll not knock, I'll ring it: I'll try how you can sol fa, and sing it.

He wrings Grumio by the ears.

Grum. Help, masters, help! my master is mad.

Pet. Now, knock when I bid you, sirrah villain!

Enter Hortensio.

Hort. How now! what's the matter? My old friend Grumio, and my good friend PetruChio! How do you all at Verona? 22

Pet. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray?

Con tutto il Cuore ben trovato, may I say.

Hort. Alla nostra casa ben venuto; molto onorato signor mio PetruChio.

Rise, Grumio, rise: we will compound this quarrel.

Grum. Nay, 'tis no matter, sir, what he 'leges in Latin. If this be not a lawful cause for me to leave his service, look you, sir, he bid me knock him and rap him soundly; sir: well, was it fit for a servant to use his master so; being perhaps, for aught I see, two-and-thirty, a pip out! Whom would to God I had well knock'd at first, Then had not Grumio come by the worst.

Pet. A senseless villain! Good Hortensio, I bade the rascal knock upon your gate, And could not get him for my heart to do it.

Grum. Knock at the gate! O heavens! 40

Speak you not these words plain, 'Sirrah, know me here,

Rap me here, knock me well, and knock I soundly?'

And come you now with 'knocking at the gate?' Pet. Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise ye.

Hort. PetruChio, patience; I am Grumio pledge.

Why, this's a heavy chance 'twixt him and ye Your ancient, trusty, pleasant servant Grumio And tell me now, sweet friend, what happy gain Blows you to Padua here from old Verona?

Pet. Such wind as scatters young men throw the world

To seek their fortunes further than at home,

Where small experience grows. But in a few

Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me: Antonio, my father, is deceas'd, And I have thrust myself into this maze, Hapy to wise and thrive as best I may, Crowns in my purse I have and goods at home; And so am come abroad to see the world.

Hort. PetruChio, shall I then come roundly thee, And wish thee to a shrewd ill-favour'd wife? Thou'dst thank me but a little for my counsel And yet I will promise thee she shall be rich, And very rich: but thou'rt too much my friend, And I'll not wish thee to her.

Pet. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we

Few words suffice; and therefore, if thou ken One rich enough to be PetruChio's wife, As wealth is burthen of my wooing dance, Be she as foul as was Florentius' love, As old as Sibyl, and as curt and shrewd As Scipio's Xanthippe, or a worse; She moves me not, or not removes, at least, Affection's edge in me, were she as rough As are the swelling Adriatic seas: I come to wive it wealthily in Padua; If wealthily, then happily in Padua.

Grum. Nay, look you, sir, he tells you fatly with his mind is: why, give him gold enough to marry him to a puppet or an aglet-baby; or old trot with ne'er a tooth in her head, thou she have as many diseases as two-and-fifteen horses: why, nothing comes amiss, so more comes withal.

Hort. PetruChio, since we are stepp'd thus far, I will continue that I broach'd in jest.

I can, PetruChio, help thee to a wife With wealth enough, and young, and beautiful; Brought up as best becomes a gentlewoman: Her only fault, and that is faults enough, Is, that she is intolerable curt And shrewd and florid, so beyond all measure. That, were my state far worse than it is, I would not wed her for a mine of gold.

Pet. Hortensio, peace! thou know'st not gold effect.

Tell me her father's name, and 'tis enough; For I will board her, though she chide as loud As thunder when the clouds in autumn crack.

Hort. Her father is Baptista Minola, An affable and courteous gentleman; Her name is Katharina Minola, Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.

Pet. I know her father, though I know not he: And he knew my deceased father well.
Whither I am going? To Baptista Minola.
I promis'd to inquire carefully
About a schoolmaster for the fair Bianca;
And, by good fortune, I have lighted well
On this young man; for learning and behaviour
Fit for her turn; well read in poetry
And other books, good ones, I warrant ye.
Hor. 'Tis well; and I have met a gentleman
Hath promis'd me to help me to another,
A fine musician to instruct our mistress:
So shall I no whet be behind in duty
To fair Bianca, so belov'd of me.

Gru. Below'd of me, and that my deeds shall prove.

Gru. And that his bags shall prove.

Hor. Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our love:
Listen to me, and if you speak me fair,
I'll tell you news indifferent good for either.
Here is a gentleman whom by chance I met,
Upon agreement from us to his liking,
Will undertake to woo curst Katharine;
Yea, and to marry her, if her dowry please.

Gremio. So said, so done, is well.

Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?
Pet. I know she is an irksome, brawling scold:
If that be all, masters, I hear no harm.
Pet. No, say'st me so, friend? What countryman?

Pet. Born in Verona, old Antonio's son:
My father dead, my fortune lives for me;
And I do hope good days and long to see.
Pet. O! sir, such a life, with such a wife,
were strange;
But if you have a stomach, to 't i' God's name:
You shall have me assisting you in all.
But will you woo this wild-cat?

Pet. Will I live?

Gru. Will he woo her? ay, or I'll hang her.

Pet. Why came I hither but to that intent?
Think you a little din can daunt mine ears?
Have I not in my time heard lions roar?
Have I not heard the sea, puff'd up with winds,
Rage like an angry boar chafed with sweat?
Have I not heard great ordnance in the field,
And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies?
Have I not in a pitched battle heard
Loud 'larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets' clang?

And do you tell me of a woman's tongue,
That gives not half so great a blow to hear
As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?
Tush, tush! fear boys with bugs.

Gru. For he fears none.

Grei Hortensio, hark.
This gentleman is happily arriv'd,
My mind presumes, for his own good and ours.

Hor. I promis'd we would be contributors,
And bear his charge of wooing, whatsoe'er.

Gre. And so we will, provided that he win her.

Gru. I would I were as sure of a good dinner.

Enter Tranio, bravely apparell'd; and Biondello.

Tran. Gentlemen, God save you! If I may be bold,
Tell me, I beseech you, which is the readiest way
To the house of Signior Baptista Minola?—

Gre. He that has the two fair daughters; 'tis he you mean?

Tran. Even he. Biondello!
ACT II.

SCENE I.—Padua. A Room in Baptista’s House.

Enter Katharina and Bianca.

Bian. Good sister, wrong me not, nor wring yourself,
To make a bondmaid and a slave of me;
That I disdain: but for these other gawds,
Unbind my hands, I’ll pull them off myself,
Yea, all my raiment, to my petticoat;
Or what you will command me will I do,
So well I know my duty to my elders.

Kath. Of all thy suitors, here I charge thee, te Whom thou lov’st best: see thou dissemble none.

Bian. Believe me, sister, of all the men alive
I never yet beheld that special face
Which I could fancy more than any other.

Kath. Minion, thou liest. Is’t not Hortensio?

Bian. If you affect him, sister, here I swear I’ll plead for you myself, but you shall have his Kath. O! then, belike, you fancy riches more
You will have Hortensio to keep you fair.

Bian. Is it for him you do envy me so?

Kath. Nay then you jest; and now I well perceive
You have but jested with me all this while: I

Bian. I prithee, sister Kate, unlace my hands.

Kath. If that be jest, then all the rest was Enter Baptista.

Bap. Why, how now, dame! whence grow this insolence?

Bianca, stand aside. Poor girl! she weeps.

Go thy needle; meddle not with her.

For shame, thou hiding of a devilish spirit,
Why dost thou wrong her that did ne’er wrong thee?

When did she cross thee with a bitter word?

Kath. Her silence flouts me, and I’ll be reveng’d.

Enter Bianca.

Exit Bianca.

Kath. What! will you not suffer me? Na

Now I see
She is your treasure, she must have a husband
I must dance barefoot on her wedding-day,
And, for your love to her, lead apes in hell.

Talk not to me: I will go sit and weep
Till I can find occasion of revenge.

Bap. Was ever gentleman thus grieved as I

But who comes here?

Enter Gremio, with Lucentio in the habit of me man; Petruchio, with Hortensio

a musician; and Tranio, with Biondello bearing a lute and books.

Gre. Good morrow, neighbour Baptista.

Bap. Good morrow, neighbour Gremio. Go

save you, gentlemen!

Pet. And you, good sir. Pray, have you a daughter

Call’d Katharin, fair and virtuous?

Bap. I have a daughter, sir, call’d Katharin.

Gre. You are too blunt: go to it orderly.

Pet. You wrong me, Signior Gremio: give m

leave.

I am a gentleman of Verona, sir,
To my two daughters, and then tell them both
These are their tutors; bid them use them well.

Exit Servant, with Hortensio, Lucentio, and Biondello.

We will go walk a little in the orchard,
And then to dinner. You are passing welcome,
And so I pray you all to think yourselves.

Pet. Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste,
And every day I cannot come to woo.
You knew my father well, and in him me,
Left solely heir to all his lands and goods,
Which I have better'd rather than decreas'd:
Then tell me, if I get your daughter's love,
What dowry shall I have with her to wife?

Bap. After my death the one half of my lands,
And in possession twenty thousand crowns.

Pet. And, for that dowry, I'll assure her of
Her widowhood, be it that she survive me,
In all my lands and leases whatsoever.
Let specialties be therefore drawn between us,
That covenants may be kept on either hand.

Bap. Ay, when the special thing is wellobtain'd,
That is, her love; for that is all in all.

Pet. Why, that is nothing; for I tell you, father,
I am as peremptory as she proud-minded;
And where two raging fires meet together
They do consume the thing that feeds their fury:
Though little fire grows great with little wind,
Yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all;
So I to her and so she yields to me;
For I am rough and woo not like a babe.

Bap. Well may'st thou woo, and happy be thy speed!
But be thou arm'd for some unhappy words.

Pet. Ay, to the proof; as mountains are for winds,
That shake not, though they blow perpetually.

Re-enter Hortensio, with his head broke.

Bap. How now, my friend! why dost thou look so pale?

Hor. For fear, I promise you, if I look pale.

Bap. What, will my daughter prove a good musician?

Hor. I think she'll sooner prove a soldier:
Iron may hold with her, but never lutes.

Bap. Why, then thou canst not break her to the lute?

Hor. Why, no; for she hath broke the lute to me.
I did but tell her she mistook her frets,
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering:
When, with a most impatient devilish spirit, 'Frets call you these? ' quoth she; 'I'll fume with them:"
And with that word she struck me on the head,
And through the instrument my pate made way;
And there I stood amazed for a while,
As on a pillory, looking through the lute;
While she did call me rascal fiddler,
And twangling Jack; with twenty such vile terms,
As had she studied to misuse me so.

Pet. Now, by the world, it is a lusty wench! I love her ten times more than e'er I did:
O! how I long to have some chat with her.

Bap. Well, go with me, and be not so discomfited:
Proceed in practice with my younger daughter; She's apt to learn, and thankful for good turns.
Signior Petruchio, will you go with us,
Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you?
Pet. I pray you do; I will attend her here,
Even Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, and Hortensio.
And woo her with some spirit when she comes.
Say that she rail; why then I'll tell her plain
She sings as sweetly as a nightingale:
Say that she frown; I'll say she looks as clear
As morning roses newly wash'd with dew:
Say she be mute and will not speak a word;
Then I'll commend her volubility,
And say she uttereth piercing eloquence:
If she do bid me pack; I'll give her thanks,
As though she bid me stay by her a week:
If she deny to wed; I'll crave the day
When I shall ask the banns, and when be married.
But here she comes; and now, Petruchio, speak.

Enter Katharina.

Good-morrow, Kate; for that's your name, I hear.
Kath. Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing:
They call me Katharine that do talk of me.
Pet. You lie, in faith; for you are call'd plain Kate,
And bonny Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst;
But Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendom;
Kate of Kate-Hall, my super-dainty Kate,
For dainties are all cates: and therefore, Kate,
Take this of me, Kate of my consolation;
Hearing thy mildness prais'd in every town,
Thy virtues spoke of, and thy beauty sounding,
Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs,
Myself am mov'd to woo thee for my wife.
Kath. Mov'd! in good time; let him that mov'd you hither
Remove you hence. I knew you at the first,
You were a moveable.
Pet. Why, what's a moveable?
Kath. A joint-stool.
Pet. Thou hast hit it: come, sit on me.
Kath. Asses are made to bear, and so are you.
Pet. Women are made to bear, and so are you.
Kath. No such jade as bear you, if me you mean.
Pet. Alas! good Kate, I will not burden thee;
For, knowing thee to be but young and light,—
Kath. Too light for such a swain as you to catch,
And yet as heavy as my weight should be.
Pet. Should be! should buzz.
Kath. Well ta'en, and like a buzzard.
Pet. O slow-wing'd turtle! shall a buzzard take thee?
Kath. Ay, for a turtle, as he takes a buzzard.
Pet. Come, come, you wasp; I' faith, you are too angry.
Kath. If I be waspish, best beware my sting.
Pet. My remedy is then, to pluck it out.
Kath. Ay, if the fool could find it where it lies.
Pet. Who knows not where a wasp does wear his sting?
In his tail.
Kath. In his tongue.
Pet. Whose tongue?
Kath. Yours, if you talk of tails; and so fare-well.
Pet. What! with my tongue in your tail? nay, come again:
Good Kate, I am a gentleman.

Kath. That I'll try.
Pet. I swear I'll cuff you if you strike again.
Kath. So may you lose your arms:
If you strike me, you are no gentleman;
And if no gentleman, why then no arms.
Kath. What is your crest? a cockcomb?
Pet. A combless cock, so Kate will be my h.
Kath. No cock of mine; you crow too like a craven.
Pet. Nay, come, Kate, come; you must look so sour.
Kath. It is my fashion when I see a crab.
Pet. Why, here's no crab, and therefore let not sour.
Kath. There is, there is.
Pet. Then show it me.
Kath. Had I a glass, I wot.
Pet. What, you mean my face?
Kath. Well aim'd of such a young one.
Pet. Now, by Saint George, I am too yon for you.
Kath. Yet you are wither'd.
Pet. Kath. 'Tis with cares.
Kath. I chafe you if I tarry; let me go.
Pet. No, not a whitt: I find you passing gen.
'Twas told me you were rough and coy and sull,
And now I find report a very liar;
For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing cotes,
But slow in speech, yet sweet as spring-tide flowers.
Thou canst not frown, thou canst not look a-ance,
Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will;
Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk;
But thou with mildness entertain'st thy woo;
With gentle conference, soft and affable.
Why does the world report that Kate doth limit
O slanderous world! Kate, like the hazel-twig
Is straight and slender, and as brown in hue
As hazel-nuts, and sweeter than the kernels.
O! let me see thee walk: thou dost not hal.
Kath. Go, fool, and whom thou keep'st command.
Pet. Did ever Dian so become a grove
As Kate this chamber with her princely gait
O! be thou Dian, and let her be Kate,
And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sports.
Kath. Where did you study all this god's speech?
Pet. It is extempro, from my mother-wit.
Kath. A witty mother! witless else her so.
Pet. Am I not wise?
Kath. Yes; keep you warm.
Pet. Marry, so I mean, sweet Katharine thy bed.
And therefore, setting all this chat aside,
Thus in plain terms; your father hath consented
That you shall be my wife; your dowry 'greed;
And, will you, will you, I will marry you.
Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn;
For, by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,
Thy beauty that doth make me like thee we;
Thou must be married to no man but me:
For I am he am born to tame you, Kate, n\ bring you from a wild Kate to a Kate onformable as other household Kate.
ere comes your father: never make denial; must and will have Katharine to my wife.

Re-enter Baptista, Gremio, and Tranio.
Bap. Now, Signior Petruchio, how speed you with my daughter?
Pet. How but well, sir? how but well? were impossible I should speed amiss.
Bap. Why, how now, daughter Katharine! in your dumps?
Kath. Call you me daughter? now, I promise you, I have show'd a tender fatherly regard, wish me wed to one half lunaic; mad-cap ruffian and a swearing Jack, thinks with oaths to face the matter out.
Pet. Father, 'tis thus: yourself and all the world, talk'd of her, have talk'd amiss of her: she be curst, it is for policy, or she's not froward, but modest as the dove; is not hot, but temperate as the morn; or patience she will prove a second Grissel, and Roman Lucrece for her chastity; to conclude, we have 'greed so well together, upon Sunday is the wedding-day.
Kath. I'll see thee hang'd on Sunday first.
Gre. Petruchio: she says she'll see thee hang'd first.

Tra. Is this your speeding? nay then, good night our part.
Pet. Be patient, gentlemen; I choose her for myself: she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you? is bargain'd 'twixt us, being alone, she shall still be curst in company.
Tell you, 'tis incredible to believe ow much she loves me: O! the kindest Kate. hung about my neck, and kiss on kiss vied so fast, protesting oath on oath, in a twank she won me to her love. you are novices: 'tis a world to see, of tame, when men and women are alone, peacock wrritch can make the curst shrew, me thy hand. Kate: I will unto Venice by apparel against the wedding-day. aside the feast, father, and bid the guests; will be sure my Katharine shall be fine.
Bap. I know not what to say; but give me your hands:

send you joy, Petruchio! 'tis a match.
Gre. Tra. Amen. say we: we will be witnesses.
Pet. Father, and wife, and gentlemen, adieu. will to Venice; Sunday comes again; have will have rings, and things, and fine array; send me, Kate, we will be married o' Sunday.

Exeunt Petruchio and Katharina.

Gre. Was ever match clapp'd up so suddenly? Bap. Faith, gentlemen, now I play a merchant's part, venture madly on a desperate mart. Tra. 'Twas a commodity lay fretting by you: will bring you gain, or perish on the seas.
Bap. The gain I seek is, quiet in the match.
Gre. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch.

Now, Baptista, to your younger daughter. is the day we long have looked for: your neighbour, and was suitor first.

Tra. And I am one that love Bianca more Than words can witness, or your thoughts can guess.
Gre. Youngling, thou canst not love so dear as I.
Tra. Greybeard, thy love doth freeze.
Gre. But thine doth fry. Skipper, stand back: 'tis age that nourisheth.
Tra. But youth in ladies' eyes that flourisheth.
Bap. Content you, gentlemen; I will compound this strife:
'Tis deeds must win the prize; and he, of both, that can assure my daughter greatest dower Shall have my Bianca's love.
Say, Signior Gremio, what can you assure her?
Gre. First, as you know, my house within the city Is richly furnished with plate and gold: Basins and ewers to have her dainty hands; My hangings all of Tyrian tapestry; In ivory coffers I have stuff'd my crowns; In cypress chests my arras counterpoints, Cosily apparel, tents, and canopies. fine linen, Turkey cushions boss'd with pearl, Valance of Venice gold in needle-work, Pewter and brass, and all things that belong To house or housekeeping: then, at my farm I have a hundred milch-kine to the pair, Six score fat oxen standing in my stalls, And all things answerable to this portion, Myself am struck in years, I must confess; And if I die to-morrow, this is hers, If whilst I live she will be only mine.

Tra. That 'only' came well in. Sir, list to me: I am my father's heir and only son: If I may have your daughter to my wife, I'll leave her houses three or four as good, Within rich Pisa walls, as any one Old Signior Gremio has in Padua; Besides two thousand ducats by the year Of fruitful land, all which shall be her jointure. What, have I pinch'd you, Signior Gremio? Gre. Two thousand ducats by the year of land! My land amounts not to so much in all: That she shall have; besides an argosy, That now is lying in Marseilles' road. What, have I chok'd you with an argosy?

Tra. Gremio, 'tis known my father hath no less Than three great argosies, besides two galliasses, And twelve light galleys: these I will assure her, And twice as much, what'er thou offer'st next.
Gre. Nay, I have offer'd all, I have no more; And she can have no more than all I have: If you like me, she shall have me and mine.

Tra. Why, then the maid is mine from all the world, By your firm promise. Gremio is out-vied.
Bap. I must confess your offer is the best; And, let your father make her the assurance, She is your own; else, you must pardon me: If you should die before him, where's her dower? Tra. That's but a cavil: he is old, I young.
Gre. And may not young men die as well as old?
Bap. Well, gentlemen, I am thus resolv'd. On Sunday next, you know, My daughter Katharine is to be married: Now, on the Sunday following, shall Bianca Be bride to you, if you make this assurance; If not, to Signior Gremio:
And so I take my leave, and thank you both.

Scene I.—Padua. A Room in Baptista’s House.

Enter Lucentio, Hortensio, and Bianca.

Luc. Fiddler, forbear; you grow too forward, sir.

Have you so soon forgot the entertainment
Her sister Katharine welcomed you withal?

Hor. But, wrangling pedant, this is
The patroness of heavenly harmony;
Then give me leave to have prerogative;
And when in music we have spent an hour,
Your lecture shall have leisure for as much.

Preposterous ass, that never read so far
To know the cause why music was ordained!

Was it not to refresh the mind of man
After his studies or his usual pain?

Then give me leave to read philosophy,
And while I pause, serve in your harmony.

Hor. Sirrah, I will not bear these bravoes of thine.

Bian. Why, gentlemen, you do me double wrong.

To strive for that which resteth in my choice.
I am no breeching scholar in the schools;
I’ll not be tied to hours nor ‘pointed times,
But learn my lessons as I please myself.

And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down:
Take you your instrument, play you the whiles;
His lecture will be done ere you have tun’d.

Hor. You’ll leave his lecture when I am in tune!

Retires.

Luc. That will be never: tune your instrument.

Bian. Where left we last?

Luc. Here, madam:—

Hic ibat Simeo: hic est Sigeia tellus;
Hic steterat Priami regia celsa senis.

Bian. Construe them.

Luc. Hic ibat, as I told you before, Simeo, I am Lucentio, hic est, son unto Vincentio of Pisa, Sigeia tellus, disguised thus to get your love;
Hic steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a-wooing, Priami, is my man Tranio, regia, bearing my port,
celsa senis, that we might beguile the old pantaloons.

Hor. Returning. Madam, my instrument’s in tune.

Bian. Let’s hear.

Hortensio plays.

O fie! the treble jars.

Luc. Spit in the hole, man, and tune again.

Bian. Now let me see if I can construe it:
Hic ibat Simeo, I know you not; hic est Sigeia tellus, I trust you not;
Hic steterat Priami, take head he hear us not; regia, presume not; celsa, despair not.

Hor. Madam, ‘tis now in tune.

Luc. All but the base.

Hor. Aside. The base is right; ‘tis the base
knave that jars.

How fiery and forward our pedant is!

Now, for my life, the knave doth court my love.

Pedascale, I’ll watch you better yet.

Bian. In time I may believe, yet I mistrust

Luc. Mistrust it not; for, sure, Zacchides
Was Ajax, call’d so from his grandfather.

Bian. I must believe my master; else, I promise you,
I should be arguing still upon that doubt:
But let it rest. Now, Licio, to you.

Good masters, take it not unkindly, pray,
That I have been thus pleasant with you both.

Hor. You may go walk, and give me leave while:

My lessons make no music in three parts.

Luc. Are you so formal, sir? Aside. Well must wait,
And watch withal; for, but I be deceiv’d,
Our fine musician growth amorous.

Hor. Madam, before you touch the instrument,

To learn the order of my fingering,
I must begin with rudiments of art;
To teach you gamut in a brief sort,

More pleasant, pithy, and effectual,
Than hath been taught by any of my trade:
And there it is in writing, fairly drawn.

Bian. Why, I am past my gamut long ago.

Hor. Yet read the gamut of Hortensio.

Bian. ‘Gamut I am, the ground of all accord,

‘A re,’ to plead Hortensio’s passion

‘B mi,’ Bianca, take him for thy lord

‘O fa ut,’ that loves with all affection

‘D sol re,’ one clef, two notes have I:

‘E la mi,’ show pity, or I die.

Call you this gamut? taut! I like it not:

Old fashions please me best; I am not so nimble

To change true rules for odd inventions.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Mistress, your father prays you look your books,

And help to dress your sister’s chamber up:
You know to-morrow is the wedding-day.

Bian. Farewell, sweet masters both: I must be gone.

Exeunt Bianca and Servant.

Luc. Faith, mistress, then I have no cause to stay.

Hor. But I have cause to pry into this pedant,

Which thinks he looks as though he were in love.
Yet if thy thoughts, Bianca, be so humble,
To cast thy wandering eyes on every state;

Seize thee that list: if once I find thee range,

Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing.

Scene II.—The Same. Before Baptista’s House.

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, Katharina, Bianca, Lucentio, and Attendant.

Bap. To Tranio. Signior Lucentio, this is the pointed day

That Katharine and Petruchio should be married.
and yet we hear not of our son-in-law. What will be said? what mockery will it be o' want the bridegroom when the priest attends o speak the ceremonial rites of marriage! What says Lucentio to this shame of ours?
Kath. No shame but mine: I must, forsooth, be forc'd o' give my hand oppos'd against my heart into a mad-brain rudesby, full of spleen;
Who wou'd in haste and means to wed at leisure. told you, I, he was a frantic fool, hiding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour;
and to be noted for a merry man, l'll woo a thousand, 'point the day of marriage, fake friends, invite, and proclaim the bans;
't never means to wed where he hath woo'd. ow must the world lacken at poor Katharine, nd say, 'Lo! there is mad Petручio's wife, f it would please him come and marry her.'
Trava. Patience, good Katharine, and Blasph passports, pon my life, Petручio means but well, Whatever fortune stays him from his word: though he be blunt, I know him passing wise; hon'gh he be merry, yet withal he's honest. Kath. Would Katharine had never seen him though!
Exit, weeping, followed by Bianca and others.
Bap. Go, girl; I cannot blame thee now to weep, or such an injury would vex a very saint, such a more of a shrew of thy impatient humour.

Enter Biondello.
Bion. Master, master! old news, and such ews as you never heard of!
Bap. Is it new and old too? how may that be?
Bion. Why, is it not news to hear of Petручio's coming?
Bap. Is he come?
Bion. Why, no, sir.
Bap. What then?
Bion. He is coming.
Bap. When will he be here?
Bion. When he stands where I am and sees u there.
Trava. But say, what to thine old news?
Bion. Why, Petручio is coming, in a new hat an old jerkin; a pair of old breeches thrice armd; a pair of boots that have been candle-ases, one buckled, another laced; an old rusty word ta'en out of the town-armoury, with a roken hilt, and chapeel; with two broken oints: his horse hipped with an old mothy saddle and stirrups of no kindred; besides, possed with the glanders and like to mose in the hine; troubled with the lampass, infected with the fashions, full of windgalls, spied with spavins, ayed with the yellows, past cure of the flies, dark spoilt with the stagger, begnawn with ace bots, swayed in the back, and shoulder-botten; near-legged before, and with a half-hecked bit, and a head-stall of sheep's leather, which, being restrained to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst and now repaired with knots; one girth six times piece, and a woman's crupper of velour, which hath two letters for her name fairly set down in studs, nd here and there pieced with packthread.
Bap. Who comes with him?
Bion. O, sir! his lackey, for all the world aprisioned like the horse; with a linen stock on one leg and a kersey boot-hose on the other, gartered with a red and blue list; an old hat and the humour of forty fancies pricked in't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in apparel, and not like a Christian footboy or a gentleman's lackey.
Trava. 'Tis some odd humour pricks him to this fashion;
Yet oftentimes he goes but mean-apparel'd.
Bap. I am glad he is come, howsoever he comes.
Bion. Why, sir, he comes not.
Bap. Didst thou not say he comes?
Bion. Who? that Petручio came?
Bap. Ay, that Petrouchio came.
Bion. No, sir; I say his horse comes, with him on his back.
Bap. Why, that's all one.
Bion. Nay, by Saint Jamy, I hold you a penny, A horse and a man Is more than one, And yet not many.
Enter Petручio and Grumio.
Pet. Come, where be these gallants? who's at home?
Bap. You are welcome, sir.
Pet. And yet I come not well.
Bap. And yet you halt not.
Trava. Not so well apparel'd As I wish you were.
Pet. Were it better, I should rush in thus, But where is Kate? where is my lovely bride? How does my father? Gentles, methinks you frown: And wherefore gaze this goodly company, As if they saw some wondrous monument, Some comet, or unusual prodigy?
Bap. Why, sir, you know this is your wedding-day.
First were we sad, fearing you would not come;
Now sadder, that you come so unprovided.
Fie! doff this habit, shame to your estate,
An eye-sore to our solemn festival.
Trava. And tell us what occasion of import
Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife,
And sent you hither so unlike yourself?
Pet. Tedious it were to tell, and harsh to hear: Sufficeth, I am come to keep my word, Though in some part enforced to digress; Which, at more leisure, I will so excuse As you shall well be satisfied withal.
But where is Kate? I stay too long from her: The morning wears, 'tis time we were at church.
Trava. See not your bride in these unrepresentable robes:
Go to my chamber: put on clothes of mine.
Pet. Not I, believe me: thus I'll visit her.
Bap. But thus, I trust, you will not marry her.
Pet. Good sooth, even thus; therefore he'd done with words:
To me she's married, not unto my clothes. Could I repair what she will wear in me
As I can change these poor accoutrements, 'Twere well for Kate and better for myself. But what a fool am I to chat with you When I should bid good-morrow to my bride, And seal the title with a lovely kiss!

Exeunt Petrouchio, Grumio, and Biondello.
THE TAMING OF THE SHEREW.

[ACT II]

Pet. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your pains:
I know you think to dine with me to-day,
And have prepar'd great store of wedding cheer
But so it is, I haste doth call me hence,
And therefore here I mean to take my leave.

Bap. Is't possible you will away to-night?

Pet. I must away to-day, before night come
Make it no wonder: if you knew my business,
You would entreat me rather go than stay.
And, honest company, I thank you all,
That have beheld me give away myself,
To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife
Dine with my father, drink a health to me,
For I must hence; and farewell to you all.

Tra. Let us entreat you till after dinner.

Pet. It may not be.

Gre. Let me entreat you.

Pet. It cannot be.

Kath. Let me entreat you.

Pet. I am content.

Kath. Are you content to stay?

Pet. I am content you shall entreat me stay.

But yet not stay, entreat me how you can.

Kath. Now, if you love me, stay.

Pet. Grumio, my horse,

Gru. Ay, sir, they be ready: the oats ha' been eaten the horses.

Kath. Nay, then,

Do what thou canst, I will not go to-day;
No, nor to-morrow, nor till I please myself.
The door is open, sir, there lies your way,
You may be jogging whilst your boots are gree.
For me, I'll not be gone till I please myself.
'Tis like you'll prove a jolly sulky groom,
That take it on you at the first so roundly.

Pet. O, Kate! content thee: prithee, be not angry.

Kath. I will be angry: what hast thou to do?
Father, be quiet; he shall stay my leisure.

Gre. Ay, marry, sir, now it begins to work.

Kath. Gentlemen, forward to the bridal dinne
I see a woman may be made a fool,
If she had not a spirit to resist.

Pet. They shall go forward, Kate, at thy comand.

Obey the bride, you that attend on her;
Go to the feast, revel and domineer,
Carouse full measure to her maidenhead
Be mad and merry, or go hang yourselves.
But for my bonny Kate, she must with me,
Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret.
I will be master of what is mine own.
She is my goods, my chattels; she is my hou.
My household stuff, my field, my barn,
My horse, my ox, my ass, my anything;
And here she stands, touch her who e'er dare
I'll bring mine action on the proudest he
That stops my way in Padua. Grumio,
Draw forth thy weapon, we're beset with thieve.
Rescue thy mistress, if thou be a man.
Fear not, sweet wench; they shall not touch thee.

Pet. I'll buckler thee against a million.

Exeunt PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, BAPTISTA, HOFTENIO, GRUMIO, and Train.

Enter Petruchio, Katharina, Blanca, Baptista, Hortensio, Grumio, and Train.

Pet. If you be not pleased with this,
I'll make you change your minds.

Kath. Nay, then,

Do what thou canst, I will not go to-day;
No, nor to-morrow, nor till I please myself.
The door is open, sir, there lies your way,
You may be jogging whilst your boots are gree.
For me, I'll not be gone till I please myself.
'Tis like you'll prove a jolly sulky groom,
That take it on you at the first so roundly.

Pet. O, Kate! content thee: prithee, be not angry.

Kath. I will be angry: what hast thou to do?
Father, be quiet; he shall stay my leisure.

Gre. Ay, marry, sir, now it begins to work.

Kath. Gentlemen, forward to the bridal dinne
I see a woman may be made a fool,
If she had not a spirit to resist.

Rescue thy mistress, if thou be a man.
Fear not, sweet wench; they shall not touch thee.

Pet. I'll buckler thee against a million.
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Hall in Petruchio's Country House.

Enter Grumio.

Grum. Why therefore fire: for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the cook? is supper ready, the house trimmed, rushes strewn, cobwebs swept; the servingmen in their new fustian, their white stockings, and every officer his wedding-garment on! Be the jills fair within, the jills fair without, the carpets laid, and everything in order! 52

Curt. All ready; and therefore, I pray thee, news.

Grum. First, know, my horse is tired; my master and mistress fallen out.

Curt. How!

Grum. Out of their saddles into the dirt; and thereby hangs a tale.

Curt. Let's ha'nt, good Grumio.

Grum. Lend thine ear.

Curt. Here.

Curt. This is to feel a tale, not to hear a tale.

Grum. And therefore 'tis called a sensible tale; and this cuff was but to knock at your ear and beseeching listening. Now I begin: Imprimis; we came down a foul hill, my master riding behind my mistress,— Curt. Both of one horse?

Grum. What's that to thee?

Curt. Why, a horse.

Grum. Tell thou the tale: but hadst thou not crossed me thou should'st have heard how her horse fell, and she under her horse; thou should'st have heard in how miry a place, how she was bemoiled; how he left her with the horse upon her; how he beat me because her horse stumbled; how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me; how he swore; how she prayed, that never prayed before; how I cried; how the horses ran away; how her bridle was burst; how I lost my crupper; with many things of worthy memory, which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienced to thy grave. 65

Curt. By this reckoning he is more shrew than she.

Grum. Ay; and that thou and the proudest of you all shall find when he comes home. But what talk I of this? Call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugarsop, and the rest: let their heads be sleekly combed, their blue coats brushed, and their garters of an indifferent knit: let them court'sy with their left legs, and not presume to touch a hair of my master's horsetail till they kiss their hands. Are they all ready?

Curt. They are.

Grum. Call them forth.

Curt. Do you hear! ho! you must meet my master to countenance my mistress. 101

Grum. Why, she hath a face of her own.

Curt. Who knows not that?

Grum. Then, it seems, that callest for company to countenance her.

Curt. I call them forth to credit her.

Grum. Why, she comes to borrow nothing of them.

Enter several Servants.

Nath. Welcome home, Grumio!

Phil. How now, Grumio!

Jos. What, Grumio!

Nich. Fellow Grumio!
Nath. How now, old lad!

Gru. Welcome, you; how now, you; what, you; fellow, you; and thus much for greeting. Now, my spruce companions, is all ready, and all things neat?

Nath. All things is ready. How near is our master?

Gru. E'en at hand, alighted by this; and therefore be not—Cock's passion, silence! I hear my master.

Enter Petruchio and Katharina.

Pet. Where be these knaves? What! no man at door

To hold my stirrup nor to take my horses.

Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip?—

All Serv. Here, here, sir; here, sir.

Pet. Here, sir! here! here, sir! here, sir! here, sir!

You logger-headed and unpolish'd grooms!

What! no attendance! no regard! no duty?

Where is the foolish knave I sent before?

Gru. Here, sir; as foolish as I was before.

Pet. You peasant swain! you whoreson malthorse drudge!

Did I not bid thee meet me in the park,

And bring along these rascal knaves with thee?

Gru. Nathaniel's coat, sir, was not fully made,

And Gabriel's pumps were all unpink'd; the heel,

There was no link to colour Peter's hat,

And Walter's dagger was not come from sheathing,

There were none fine but Adam, Ralph, and Gregory;

The rest were ragged, old, and beggarly;

Yet, as they are, here are they come to meet you.

Pet. Go, rascals, go, and fetch my supper in.

Exeunt Servants.

Where is the life that late I led?

Where are those—? Sit down, Kate, and welcome.

Soud, soud, soud, soud!

Re-enter Servants, with supper.

Why, when, I say? Nay, good sweet Kate, be merry.

Off with my boots, you rogues, you villains!

When?

It was the friar of orders grey,

As he forth walked on his way:—

Out, you rogue! you pluck my foot awry:

Take that, and mend the plucking off the other.

Strike him.

Be merry, Kate. Some water, here; what, ho!

Where's my spaniel Troilus? Sirrah, get you hence

And bid my cousin Ferdinand come hither.

Exit Servant.

One, Kate, that you must kiss, and be acquainted with.

Where are my slippers? Shall I have some water?

Enter a Servant with a basin and ever.

Come, Kate, and wash, and welcome heartily.

You whoreson villain! will you let it fall?

Strike him.

Kath. Patience, I pray you; 'twas a fault unwilling.

Pet. A whoreson, beetle-headed, flap-eared knave!

Come, Kate, sit down; I know you have a stomat.

Will you give thanks, sweet Kate, or else shall

What's this? mutton?

First Serv. Ay.

Pet. Who brought it?

Peter. 'Tis burnt; and so is all the meat.

What dogs are these! Where is the rascal cook?

How durst you, villains, bring it from the dress,

And serve it thus to me that love it not!

There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all.

Throws the meat, etc. at the door.

You needless jolthead and unmannder'd slave!

What! do you grumble? I'll be with you straights.

Kath. I pray you, husband, be not so disquiet.

The meat was well if you were so contented.

Pet. I tell thee, Kate, 'twas burnt and drunk away.

And I expressly am forbid to touch it,

For it engenders choler, planteth anger;

And better 'twere that both of us did fast

Since, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric,

Than feed it with such over-roasted flesh.

Be patient; to-morrow 'tis shall be mended,

And for this night we'll fast for company.

Come, I will bring thee to thy bridal chamber.

Exeunt Petruchio, KatharinA. and Curt.

Nath. Peter, didst ever see the like?

Peter. He kills her in her own humour.

Re-enter Curtis.

Gru. Where is he?

Curt. In her chamber, making a sermon continency to her:

And rails, and swears, and rates, that she, poor soul,

Knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak:

And sits as one new-risen from a dream.

Away, away! for he is coming hither.

Exeunt.

Pet. Thus have I politicly begun my reign,

And 'tis my hope to end successfully.

My falcon now is sharp and passing empty,

And till she stoop she must not be full-gorg'd,

For then she never looks upon her lure.

Another way I have to man my haggard,

To make her come and know her keeper's call

That is, to watch her, as we watch these kites.

That bate and beat and will not be obedient.

She eat no meat to-day, nor none shall eat;

Last night she slept not, nor to-night she sh'll eat.

As with the meat, some undeserved fault

I'll find about the making of the bed;

And here I'll fling the pillow, there the bolster.

This way the coverlet, another way the sheets.

Ay, and amidst this hurry I intend

That all is done in reverent care of her;

And in conclusion she shall watch all night:

And if she chance to nod I'll rail and bawl,

And with the clamour keep her still awake.

This is a way to kill a wife with kindness;

And thus I'll curb her mad and headstrong humour.

He that knows better how to tame a shrew,

Now let him speak: 'tis charity to show. Ex
Enter Tranio and Hortensio.

Tr. Is't possible, friend Licio, that Mistress Bianca oth fancy any other but Lucentio?

Tell, sir, she bears me fair in hand.

Hor. Sir, to satisfy you in what I have said, and by, and mark the manner of his teaching.

They stand aside.

Enter Bianca and Lucentio.

Luc. Now, mistress, profit you in what you read.

Bian. What, master, read you? first resolve me that.

Luc. I read that I profess, the Art to Love.

Bian. And may you prove, sir, master of your art?

Luc. While you, sweet dear, prove mistress of my heart.

They retire.

Hor. Quick procedes, marry! Now tell me, I pray, on that durst swear that your mistress Bianca ord in the world so well as Lucentio.

Tr. O despitful love! unconstant womankind! tell thee, Licio, this is wonderful.

Hor. Mistake no more: I am not Licio, or a musician, as I seem to be, at one that scorns to live in this disguise, or such a one as leaves a gentleman, ad makes a god of such a cullion: now, sir, that I am call'd Hortensio.

Tr. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard your entire affection to Bianca; ad since mine eyes are witness of her lightness, will with you, if you be so contented, reswear Bianca and her love for ever.

Hor. See, how they kiss and court! Signior Lucentio, is my hand, and here I firmly vow to woo her more; but do reswear her, once unworthy all the former favours of I had fondly flatter'd her withal.

Tr. And here I take the like unfeigned oath, vete to marry with her though she would entreat, a on her I see how beastly she doth court him.

Hor. Would all the world but he had quite forsworn! me, that I may surely keep mine oath, will be married to a wealthy widow three days pass, which hath as long lov'd me I have lov'd this proud disdainful haggard, d so farewell, Signior Lucentio.

Exit.

Tr. Mistress Bianca, bless you with such grace 'lengthe to a lover's blessed case! y, I have ta'en you napping, gentle love, d have forsworn you with Hortensio.

Bian. Tranio, you jest. But have you both forsworn me?

Tr. Mistress, we have.

Luc. Then we are rid of Licio.

Tr. I faith, he'll have a lusty widow now, at shall be woo'd and wedded in a day.

Bian. God give him joy!

Tr. Ay, and he'1l tame her.

He says so, Tranio.

Tr. Faith, he is gone unto the taming-school.

Bian. The taming-school! what, is there such a place?

Tr. Ay, mistress, and Petruchio is the master; That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long, To tame a shrew, and charm her chattering tongue.

Tr. What is he, Bionello?

Bion. Master, a mercantile, or a pedant, I know not what; but formal in apparel, In gait and countenance surely like a father.

Luc. And what of him, Tranio?

Tr. If he be credulous and trust my tale, I'1l make him glad to seem Vincentio, And give assurance to Baptista Minola, As if he were the right Vincentio.

Take in your love, and then let me alone.

Exeunt Lucentio and Bianca.

Enter a Pedant.

Ped. God save you, sir!

Tr. And you, sir! you are welcome.

Travel you far on, or are you at the furthest?

Ped. Sir, at the furthest for a week or two; But then up further, and as far as Rome; And so to Tripoli, if God lend me life.

Tr. What countryman, I pray?

Ped. Of Mantua.

Tr. Of Mantua, sir? marry, God forbid!

And come to Padua, careless of your life?

Ped. My life, sir! how, I pray? for that goes hard.

Tr. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua To come to Padua. Know you not the cause?

Your ships are stay'd at Venice; and the duke, For private quarrel 'twixt your duke and him, Hath publish'd and proclaimed it openly. 'Tis marvel, but that you are but newly come, You might have heard it else proclaimed about.

Ped. Alas! sir, it is worse for me than so; For I have bills for money by exchange From Florence, and must here deliver them.

Tr. Well, sir, to do you courtesy, This will I do, and this I will advise you. First, tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?

Ped. Ay, sir, in Pisa have I often been; Pisa renowned for grave citizens.

Tr. Among them know you one Vincentio?

Ped. I know him not, but I have heard of him; A merchant of incomparable wealth.

Tr. He is my father, sir; and, sooth to say, In countenance somewhat doth resemble you.

Bion. Aside. As much as an apple doth an oyster, and all one.

Tr. To save your life in this extremity, This favour will I do you for his sake; And think it not the worst of all your fortunes That you are like to Sir Vincentio.

His name and credit shall you undertake, And in my house you shall be friendly lodg'd. Look that you take upon you as you should! You understand me, sir; so shall you stay Till you have done your business in the city.

If this be courtesy, sir, accept of it.
Scene III.—A Room in Petruchio's House.

Enter Katharina and Grumio.

Kath. No, no, forsooth; I dare not for my life.

Grum. What! did he marry me to famish me?

Kath. The more my wrong, the more his spit appears.

Grum. What say you to a neat's foot?

Kath. 'Tis passing good: I prithee let me have it.

Grum. I fear it is too choleric a meat.

Kath. How say you to a fat tripe finely broil'd?

Grum. I like it well: good Grumio, fetch it me.

Kath. I cannot tell; I fear 'tis choleric.

Grum. What say you to a piece of beef and mustard?

Kath. A dish that I do love to feed upon.

Grum. Ay, but the mustard is too hot a little.

Kath. Why then, the beef, and let the mustard rest.

Grum. Nay then, I will not: you shall have the mustard.

Kath. Then both, or one, or any thing thou wilt.

Grum. Why then, the mustard without the beef.

Kath. Go, get thee gone, thou false deluding slave,

That feed'st me with the very name of meat.

Grum. Sorr on thee and all the pack of you,
That triumph thus upon my misery!

Go, get thee gone, I say.

Enter Petruchio, with a dish of meat, and Hortensio.

Pet. How fares my Kate? What, sweeting, all am'rt?

Hort. Mistress, what cheer?

Pet. Pluck up thy spirits; look cheerfully upon me.

Here, love; thou seest how diligent I am
To dress thy meat myself and bring it thee:
I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindness merits thanks.

What! not a word? Nay, then thou lov'st it not,
And all my pains is sorted to no proof.
Here, take away this dish.

Kath. I pray you, let it stand.

Pet. The poorest service is repaid with thank
And so shall mine, before you touch the meat.

Kath. I thank you, sir.

Hort. Signior Petruchio, fie! you are to blame.
Come, Mistress Kate, I'll bear you company.

Pet. Aside. Eat it up all, Hortensio, if the lov'st me.

Much good do it unto thy gentle heart!
Kath. Eat, apace: and now, my honey love,

Will we return unto thy father's house,

And revel it as bravely as the best.

With silken coats and caps and golden rings,
With ruffs and cuffs and farthingales and thing,
With scarfs and fans and double change
bravery,

With amber bracelets, beads and all this knave.

What! hast thou din'd? The tailor stays to leisure,

To deck thy body with his ruffling treasure.

Enter Tailor.

Come, tailor, let us see these ornaments;

Lay forth the gown.

Enter Haberdasher.

What news with you, sir?

Hab. Here is the cap your worship did beseech.

Pet. Why, this was moulded on a perringe.

A velvet dish: fie, fie! 'tis lewd and filthy.

Why, 'tis a cockle or a walnut-shell,

A knock, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap:

Away with it! come, let me have a bigger.

Kath. I'll have no bigger; this doth fit thee.
And gentlewomen wear such caps as these.

Pet. When you are gentle, you shall have one too;

And not till then.

Hort. Aside. That will not be in haste.

Pet. Why, sir, I trust I may haveleave to spee.
And speak I will: I am no child, no babe.
Your betters have endur'd me say my mind,
And if you cannot, best you stop your ears.
My tongue will tell the anger of my heart,
Or else my heart, concealing it, will break:
And rather than it shall, I will be free,
Even to the uttermost, as I please, in words.

Pet. Why, thou say'st true; it is a paltry cap.
A custard-coffin, a bauble, a silken pie.
I love thee well in that thou lik'st it not.

Kath. Love me or love me not, I like thee the same.
And it I will have, or I will have none.

Exit Haberdasher.

O, mercy, God! what masquing stuff is here
What's this! a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-canoe.
What! up and down, car'd like an apple-ta.
Here's snip and nip and cut and slash and slie,
Like to a censer in a barber's shop.
What, what, I devil's name, tailor, call'st thou?

Hort. Aside. I see, she's like to have neit cap nor gown.

Pet. Thou bid me make it orderly and well.
According to the fashion and the time.

Pet. Marry, and did: but if you be remember.
I did not bid you mar it to the time.
Go, hop me over every kennel home,
For you shall hop without my custom, sir.
I'll none of it: hence! make your best of it.
Kath. I never saw a better-fashion’d gown, ore quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable, like you mean to make a puppet of me.

Pet. Why, true; he means to make a puppet of thee.

Tat. She says your worship means to make a puppet of her.

Pet. O monstrous arrogance! Thou liest, thou thread, thou thimble, thou yard, three-quarters, half-yard, quarter, inch, thou flea, thou nit, thou winter-cricket thou! I av’d in mine own house with a skin of thread! say thou rag, thou quantity, thou remnant, I shall so be mete thee with thy yard thou shalt think on prating whilst thou liest! I tell thee, I, that thou hast mar’d her gown.

Tat. Your worship is deceived: thou gown is made st as my master had direction. unio gave order how it should be done.

Gru. I gave him no order; I gave him the stuff.

Tat. But how did you desire it should be made?

Gru. Marry, sir, with needle and thread. Tat. But did you not request to have it cut?

Tat. Thou hast faced many things.

Pet. I have.

Tat. Face not me: thou hast brav’d many

To the Pedant. Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of.

I pray you, stand good father to me now,
Give me Bianca for my patrimony.

Ped. Soft, son!

Sir, by your leave: having come to Padua
To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio
Made me acquainted with a weighty cause
Of love between your daughter and himself:
And, for the good report I hear of you,
And for the love he beareth to your daughter,
And she to him, to stay him not too long,
I am content, in a good father's care,
To have him match'd; and if you please to like
No worse than I, upon some agreement
Me shall you find ready and willing
With one consent to have her so bestow'd;
For curious I cannot be with you,
Signior Baptist, of whom I hear so well.

Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I have to say:
Your plainness and your shortness please me well.
Right true it is, your son Lucentio here
Doth love my daughter and she loveth him,
Or both dissemble deeply their affections:
And therefore, if you say no more than this,
That like a father you will deal with him
And pass my daughter a sufficient dower,
The match is made, and all is done:
Your son shall have my daughter with consent.

Tra. I thank you, sir. Where then do you know best
We be allied and such assurance ta'en
As shall with either part's agreement stand?

Bap. Not in my house, Lucentio; for, you
know,
Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants.
Besides, old Gremio is hearkening still,
And happily we might be interrupted.

Tra. Then at my lodging an it like you:
There doth my father lie, and there this night
We'll pass the business privately and well.
Send for your daughter by your servant here;
My boy shall fetch the scrivener presently.
The worst is this, that so slender warning,
You're like to have a thin and slender pittance.

Bap. It likes me well: Cambio, be you home,
And bid Bianca make her ready straight;
And, if you will, tell what hath happened:
Lucentio's father is arriv'd in Padua,
And how she's like to be Lucentio's wife.

Bion. I pray the gods she may, with all my heart!

Tra. Daily not with the gods, but get thee gone.
Signior Baptist, shall I lead the way?
Welcome! one mess is like to be your cheer.

Come, sir; we will better it in Pisa.

Bap. I'll follow you.

Exeunt Tranio, Pedant, and BAPTISTA.

Bion. Cambio!

Luc. What sayest thou, Biondello?

Bion. You saw my master wink and laugh upon you?

Luc. Biondello, what of that?

Bion. Faith, nothing; but has left me here behind to expound the meaning or moral of his signs and tokens.

Luc. I pray thee, moralise them.

Bion. Then thus. Baptist is safe, talking with the deceiving father of a deceitful son.

Luc. And what of him?
'tell me, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too, fast thou beheld a fresher gentlewoman? such war of white and red within her cheeks! What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty, as those two eyes become that heavenly face? fair lovely maid, once more good day to thee. sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake. Hor. A' will make the man mad, to make a woman of him.

Kath. Young budding virgin, fair and fresh and sweet, Whither away, or where is thy abode? happy the parents of so fair a child; happier the man, whom favourable stars allotted thee for his lovely bed-fellow! Pet. Why, how now, Kate! I hope thou art not mad: this is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, wither'd, and not a maiden, as thou say'st he is.

Kath. Pardon, old father, my mistaking eyes, that have been so bedazzled with the sun that everything I look on seemeth green: now I perceive thou art a reverend father; pardon, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking.

Pet. Do, good old grandsire; and, withal make known Which way thou Travell'st: if along with us, we shall be joyful of thy company.

Vin. Fair sir, and you my merry mistress, that with your strange encounter much amaz'd me.

Pet. Happily met; the happier for thy son. And now by law, as well as reverend age, may entitle thee my loving father: be sister to my wife, this gentlewoman, my son by this hath married. Wonder not, or be not grieved: she is of good esteem, or dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth; side, so qualified as may become a spouse of any noble gentleman. At me embrace with old Vincentio; and wander we to see thy honest son, who will of thy arrival be full joyous. But is this true? or is it else your pleasure, like pleasant travellers, to break a jest upon the company you overtake?

Hor. I do assure thee, father, so it is.

Pet. Come, go along, and see the truth hereof; or our first errimenti hath made thee jealous.

Hor. To Vincentio. Why, how now, gentleman! Why, this is flat knavery, to take upon you another man's name.

Pet. Lay hands on the villain: I believe a' means to cozen somebody in this city under my countenance.

Re-enter Biondello.

Bion. I have seen them in the church together: God send 'em good shipping! But who is here? mine old master, Vincentio! now we are undone and brought to nothing.

Vin. Come hither, you rogue. What, have you forgot me?

Bion. Forgot you! no, sir: I could not forget you, for I never saw you before in all my life.

Vin. What, you notorious villain! didst thou never see thy master's father, Vincentio?

Bion. What, my old worshipful old master? yes, marry, sir; see where he looks out of the window.

Vin. Is't so, indeed? Beate Biondello.

Bion. Help, help, help! here's a madman will murder me.

Pet. Prithée, Kate, let's stand aside, and see the end of this controversy. They retire.
Enter PEMONT, BAPTISTA, TRANIO, and Servants.

Tra. Sir, what are you that offer to beat my servant?

Vin. What am I, sir? nay, what are you, sir? O immortal gods! O fine villain! A silken doublet! A velvet hose! a scarlet cloak! and a capotain hat! O, I am undone! I am undone! while I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the university.

Tra. How now! what's the matter?

Bap. What, is the man lunatic?

Tra. Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman by your habit, but your words show you a madman. Why, sir, what 'cerns it you if I wear pearl and gold? I thank my good father, I am able to maintain it.

Vin. Thy father! O villain! he is a sail-maker in Bergamo.

Bap. You mistake, sir; you mistake, sir. Pray, what do you think is his name?

Vin. His name! as if I knew not his name: I have brought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is Tranio.

Ped. Away, away, mad ass! his name is Lucentio; and he is mine only son, and heir to the lands of me, Signior Vincentio.

Vin. Lucentio! O! he hath murdered his master. Lay hold on him, I charge you, in the duke's name. O! my son, my son. Tell me, thou villain, where is my son Lucentio?

Tra. Call forth an officer.

Enter one with an Officer.

Carry this mad knave to the gaol. Father Baptista, I charge you see that he be forthcoming.

Vin. Carry me to the gaol!

Gre. Stay, officer; he shall not go to prison.

Bap. Talk not, Signior Gremio: I say he shall go to prison.

Gre. Take heed, Signior Baptista, lest you be cony-catch'd in this business: I dare swear this is the right Vincentio.

Ped. Swear, if thou darest.

Gre. Nay, I dare not swear it.

Tra. Then thou wert best say that I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be Signior Lucentio.

Bap. Away with the dotard! to the gaol with him!

Vin. Thus strangers may be haled and abused. O monstrous villain!

Re-enter BIONDELLO, with Lucentio and Blanca.

Bion. O! we are spoilt; and yonder he is: deny him, forswear him, or else we are all undone.

Luc. Pardon, sweet father.

Kneeling.

Vin. Lives my sweet son?

BIONDELLO, TRANIO, and PEMONT run out.

Bian. Pardon, dear father.

Kneeling.

Bap. How hast thou offended?

Where is Lucentio?

Luc. Here's Lucentio, right son to the right Vincentio:

That have by marriage made thy daughter mine,

While counterfeit supposes blear'd thine eye.

Gre. Here's packing, with a witness, to deceive us all!

Vin. Where is that dammed villain Tranio, that fact'd and brav'd me in this matter so?

Bap. Why, tell me, is not this my Cambio? Bian. Cambio is changed into Lucentio.

Luc. Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's love

Made me exchange my state with Tranio, while he did bear my countenance in the town, and happily I have arriv'd at last

Unto the wished haven of my bliss.

What Tranio did, myself enforce'd him to:

Then pardon him, sweet father, for my sake. Vin. I'll slit the villain's nose, that would have sent me to the gaol.

Bap. But do you hear, sir? Have you maried my daughter without asking my good will? Vin. Fear not, Baptista; we will content you goto: but I will in, to be reveenged for this villain.

Exeunt.

Bap. And I, to sound the depth of this knavery.

Luc. Look not pale, Bianca; thy father will not frown.

Exeunt LUCENTIO and BIANCA.

Gre. My cake is dough; but I'll in among the rest,

Out of hope of all, but my share of the feast.

Exeunt.

PETRUCHIO and KATHARINA advance.

Kath. Husband, let's follow, to see the end of this ado.

Pet. First kiss me, Kate, and we will.

Kath. What! in the midst of the street?

Pet. What! art thou ashamed of me?

Kath. No, sir, God forbid; but ashamed to kiss.

Pet. Why, then let's home again. Come sirrah, let's away.

Kath. Nay, I will give thee a kiss: now press, love, stay.

Pet. Is not this well? Come, my sweet Kate, better once than never, for never too late.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in Lucentio House.

A banquet set out. Enter Baptista, Vincenti Gremio, the Pedant, Lucentio, Bianco Petruchio, Katharina, Hortensio, as Widow; Tranio, Biondello, Grumio, as others, attending.

Luc. At last, though long, our jarring not agree:

And time it is, when raging war is done,

To smile at 'scapes and perils overblown. My fair Bianca, bid my father welcome,

While I with self-same kindness welcome thine

Brother Petruchio, sister Katharina,

And thou, Hortensio, with thy loving widow,

Feast with the best, and welcome to my house.

My banquet is to close our stomachs up,

After our great good cheer. Pray you, sit down.

For now we sit to chat as well as eat.

Pet. Nothing but sit and chat, and eat and eat. Bap. Padua affords this kindness, son Petruchio. Ped. Padua affords nothing but what is kin.

Hor. For both our sakes I would that we were true.

Pet. Now, for my life, Hortensio fears thy widow.

Wid. Then never trust me, if I be afraid.
THE TAMING OF THE SHREW.

Pet. You are very sensible, and yet you miss my sense:
I mean, Hortensio is afraid of you.

Wid. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round.

Kath. Mistress, how mean you that?

Wid. Thus I conceive by him.

Pet. Conceives by me? How likes Hortensio that?

Hor. My widow says, thus she conceives her tale.

Pet. Very well mended. Kiss him for that, good widow.

Kath. 'Tis he that is giddy the world turns round: I pray you, tell me what you meant by that.

Wid. Your husband, being troubled with a shrew,
Measures my husband's sorrow by his woe:
And now you know my meaning.

Kath. A very mean meaning.

Wid. Right, I mean you.

Kath. And I am mean, indeed, respecting you.

Pet. To her, Kate!

Hor. To her, widow!

Pet. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her down.

Hor. That's my office.

Pet. Spoke like an officer: ha' to thee, lad.

Drinks to Hortensio.

Bap. How likes Gremio these quick-witted folks?

Gre. Believe me, sir, they butt together well.

Bian. Head and butt! an hasty-witted body Would say your head and butt were head and horn.

Vin. Ay, mistress bride, hath that awakened you?

Bian. Ay, but not frightened me; therefore I'll sleep again.

Pet. Nay, that you shall not; since you have begun,
Have at you for a bitter jest or two.

Bian. Am I your bird! I mean to shift my bush;
And then pursue me as you draw your bow
You are welcome all.

Exeunt Bianca, Katharina, and Widow.

Pet. She hath prevented me. Here, Signior Tranio;
This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not:
Therefore a health to all that shot and miss'd.

Tra. O sir! Lucentio slipp'd me, like his greyhound,
Which runs himself, and catches for his master.

Pet. A good swift simile, but something curriish.

Tra. 'Tis well, sir, that you hunted for yourself:
'Tis thought your deer does hold you at a bay.

Bap. O ho, Petruchio! Tranio hits you now.

Luc. I thank thee for that gird, good Tranio.

Hor. Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here?

Pet. 'A has a little gall'd me, I confess; and, as the jest did glance away from me, Tis ten to one it maim'd you two outright.

Bap. Now, in good sadness, son Petruchio, think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.

Pet. Well, I say no; and therefore, forassurance, let's each one send unto his wife:
And he whose wife is most obedient,
To come at first when he doth send for her,
Shall win the wager which we will propose.

Hor. Content. What is the wager?

Luc. Twenty crowns!

Pet. Twenty crowns!
I'll venture so much of my hawk, or hound,
But twenty times so much upon my wife.

Luc. A hundred then.

Hor. Content.

Hor. Who shall begin?

Luc. That will I.

Go, Biondello, bid your mistress come to me.

Bion. I go.

Exit. Bap. Son, I will be your half. Bianca comes.

Luc. I'll have no halves; I'll bear it all myself.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

How now! what news?

Bion. Sir! my mistress sends you word
That she is busy and she cannot come.

Pet. How! she is busy, and she cannot come! Is that an answer?

Gre. Ay, and a kind one too:
Pray God, sir, your wife send you not a worse.

Pet. I hope, better.

Hor. Sirrah Biondello, go and entreat my wife
To come to me forthwith. Exit BIONDELLO.

Pet. O ho! entreat her!

Nay, then she must needs come.

Hor. I am afraid, sir,
Do what you can, yours will not be entreated.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

Now, where's my wife?

Bion. She says you have some goodly jest in hand:
She will not come: she bids you come to her.

Pet. Worse and worse; she will not come! O vile,
Intolerable, not to be endur'd!
Sirrah Grumio, go to your mistress; say,
I command her to come. Exit GRUMIO.

Hor. I know her answer.

Pet. What?

Hor. She will not.

Pet. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Enter KATHARINA.

Bap. Now, by my holidame, here comes Katharina!

Kath. What is your will, sir, that you send for me?

Pet. Where is your sister, and Hortensio's wife?

Kath. They sit conferring by the parlour fire.

Pet. Go fetch them hither: if they deny to come,
Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands.

Away, I say, and bring them hither straight.

Exit KATHARINA.

Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.

Hor. And so it is. I wonder what it bodes.

Pet. Marry, peace it bodes, and love, and quiet life,
An awful rule and right supremacy;
And, tobe short, whatnot that's sweetand happy!

Bap. Now fair befall thee, good Petruchio!
The wager thou hast won; and I will add
Unto their losses twenty thousand crowns;
Another dowry to another daughter,
For she is chang'd, as she had never been.

Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet,
And show more sign of her obedience,
Her new-built virtue of obedience.
See where she comes, and brings your froward wives 129
As prisoners to her womanly persuasion.

Re-enter Katharina, with Bianca and Widow.

Katharine, that cap of yours becomes you not: Off with that bauble, throw it under foot.

Katharina pulls off her cap, and throws it down.

Wid. Lord! let me never have a cause to sigh, Till I be brought to such a silly pass!

Bian. Fie! what a foolish duty call you this? Luc. I would your duty were as foolish too: The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca, Hath cost me an hundred crowns since supper-time.

Bian. The more fool you for laying on my duty.

Pet. Katharine, I charge thee, tell these headstrong women
What duty they do owe their lords and husbands.

Wid. Come, come, you’re mocking: we will have no telling.

Pet. Come on, I say; and first begin with her.

Wid. She shall not.

Pet. I say she shall: and first begin with her.

Kath. Fie, fie! unknit that threatening unkind brow,
And dart not scornful glances from those eyes, To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor: It blitz thy beauty as frosts do bite the meads, Confounds thy fame as whirlwinds shake fair buds, And in no sense is meet or amiable.

A woman mov’d is like a fountain troubled, Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty; And while it is so, none so dry or thirsty Will deign to sip or touch one drop of it. Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper, Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee, And for thy maintenance commits his body To painful labour both by sea and land, To watch the night in storms, the day in cold, Whilst thou liest warm at home, secure and safe; And craves no other tribute at thy hands

But love, fair looks, and true obedience; Too little payment for so great a debt; Such duty as the subject owes the prince, Even such a woman oweth to her husband; And when she’s froward, peevish, sullen, sour, And not obedient to his honest will, What is she but a foul contending rebel, And graceless traitor to her loving lord? I am ashamed that women are so simple
To offer war where they should kneel for peace, Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.
Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and smooth, Unapt to toil and trouble in the world, But that our soft conditions and our hearts Should well agree with our external parts? Come, come, you froward and unable worms! My mind hath been as big as one of yours, My heart as great, my reason haply more, To bandy word for word and frown for frown; But now I see our lances are but straws, Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare, That seeming to be most which we indeed least are.

Then vail your stomachs, for it is no boot, And place your hands below your husband’s foot: In token of which duty, if he please, My hand is ready; may it do him case.

Pet. Why, there’s a wenches! Come on, and kiss me, Kate.

Luc. Well, go thy ways, old lad, for thou shalt ha’.

Vin. ’Tis a good hearing when children are toward.

Luc. But a harsh hearing when women are froward.

Pet. Come, Kate, we’ll to bed.

We three are married, but you two are sped.

To Lucentio. ’Twas I won the wager, though you hit the white; And being a winner, God give you good night!

Exeunt Petruchio and Katharina.

Hor. Now go thy ways; thou hast tam’d a curst shrew.

Luc. ’Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tam’d so.

Exeunt.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

COUNTESS OF ROUSILLON, Mother to Bertram.
HELENA, a Gentlewoman protected by the Countess.
A Widow of Florence.

VIOLENTA, (Neighbours and Friends to the) MARIANA, Widow.

Lords, Officers, Soldiers, etc., French and Florentine.

SCENE.—Rousillon; Paris; Florence; Marseilles.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rousillon.  A Room in the Countess’s Palace.

Enter Bertram, the Countess of Rousillon,
HELENA, and LAFEU, all in black.

Count. In delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Ber. And I, in going, madam, weep o’er my father’s death anew; but I must attend his majesty’s command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the king a husband, madam; you, sir, a father. He that so generally is at all times good, must of necessity hold his virtue to you, whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted rather than lack it where there is such abundance.

Count. What hope is there of his majesty’s amendment?

Laf. He hath abandoned his physicians, madam; under whose practices he hath persecuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. This young gentlewoman had a father, —O, that ‘had’! how sad a passage ‘tis! —whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretched so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. Would, for the king’s sake, he were living! I think it would be the death of the king’s disease.

Laf. How called you the man you speak of, madam?

Count. He was famous, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so: Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent indeed, madam: the king very lately spoke of him admiringly and mourningly. He was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.

Ber. What is it, my good lord, the king languishes of?

Laf. A fistula, my lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious. Was this gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Count. His sole child, my lord; and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those hopes of her good that her education promises: her dispositions she inherits, which make fair gifts fairer; for where an unclean mind carries virtuous qualities, there commendations go with pity; they are virtues and traitors too: in her they are the better for their simpleness; she derives her honesty and achieves her goodness.

Laf. Your commendations, madam, get from her tears.

Count. ’Tis the best brine a maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her father never approaches her heart but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all livelihood from her cheek. No more of this, Helena; go to, to no more; lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow than have it.

Hel. I do affect a sorrow indeed, but I have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Count. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal.

Ber. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

Laf. How understand we that?

Count. Be thou blest, Bertram; and succeed thy father.

In manners, as in shape! thy blood and virtue Contend for empire in thee; and thy goodness Share with thy birthright! Love all, trust a few, Do wrong to none: be able for thine enemy Rather in power than use, and keep thy friend Under thy own life’s key: be check’d for silence, But never tax’d for speech. What heaven more will That thee may furnish, and my prayers pluck down, Fall on thy head! Farewell, my lord; 'Tis an unseason'd courtier; good my lord, Advise him.

Lof. He cannot want the best That shall attend his love. 89

Count. Heaven bless him! Farewell, Bertram.

Exit. Ber. To HELENA. The best wishes that can be forged in your thoughts be servants to you! Be comfortable to my mother, your mistress, and make much of her.

Lof. Farewell, pretty lady: you must hold the credit of your father.

Evneut Bertram and LAFEU. Hel. O! were all that. I think not on my father;

And these great tears grace his remembrance more Than those I shed for him. What was he like? I have forgot him: my imagination 91 Carries no favour in 't but Bertram's. I am undone: there is no living, none, If Bertram be away. It were all one That I should love a bright particular star And think to wed it, he is so above me: In his bright radiance and collateral light Must I be comforted, not in his sphere. The ambition in my love thus plagues itself: The hind that would be mated by the lion 100 Must die for love. 'Twas pretty, though a plague, To see him every hour; to sit and draw His arched brows, his hawk's eye, his curls, In our heart's table; heart too capable Of every line and trick of his sweet favour: But now he's gone, and my idiotarous fancy Must sanctify his relics. Who comes here? One that goes with him: I love him for his sake; And yet I know him a notorious liar, Think him a great way fool, solely a coward; 110 Yet these fix'd evils sit so fit in him, That they take place, when virtue's steely bones Look bleak i' the cold wind: withal, full oft we see Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. Save you, fair queen! Hel. And you, monarch!

Par. No.

Par. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginity? 119 Hel. Ay. You have some stain of soldier in you; let me ask you a question. Man is enemy to virginity; how may we barricado it against him? Par. Keep him out.

Hel. But he assails: and our virginity, though valiant in the defence, yet is weak. Unfold to us some war-like resistance.

Par. There is none: man, sitting down before you, will undermine you and blow you up.

Hel. Bless our poor virginity from underminers and blowers up! Is there no military policy, how virgins might blow up men? 131 Par. Virginity being blown down, man will quicklier be blown up: marry, in blowing him down again, with the breach yourselves made, you lose your city. It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature to preserve virginity. Loss of virginity is rational increase, and there was never virgin got till virginity was first lost. That you were made of is metal to make virgins. Virginity, by being once lost, may be ten times found: by being ever kept, it is ever lost. 'Tis too cold a companion: away with 't. 126 Hel. I will stand for 't a little, though therefore I die a virgin.

Par. There's little can be said in 't; 'tis against the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity is to accuse your mothers, which is most infallible disobedience. He that hangs himself is a virgin: virginity murders itself, and should be buried in highways, out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offendress against nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a cheese, consumes itself to the very paring, and so dies with feeding his own stomach. Besides, virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon. Keep it not; you cannot choose but lose by 't. Out with 't! within the year it will make itself two, which is a goodly increase, and the principal itself not much the worse. Away with 't. 140 Hel. How might one do, sir, to lose it to her own liking?

Par. Let me see: marry, ill, to like him that ne'er it likes. 'Tis a commodity will lose the gloss with lying; the longer kept, the less worth: off with 't while 'tis vendible; answer the time of request. Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion; richly suited, but unsuitable: just like the brooch and the toothpick, which wear not now. Your date is better in your pie and your porridge than in your cheek; and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French withered pears: it looks ill, it eats dryly; marry, 'tis a withered pear: it was formerly better; marry, yet 'tis a withered pear. Will you any thing with it?

Hel. Not my virginity yet.

There shall your master have a thousand loves, A mother, and a mistress, and a friend, A Phoenix, captain, and an enemy, A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign, A councillor, a traitress, and a dear; His humble ambition, proud humility, His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet, His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world Of pretty, fond, adoptious Christendoms, That blinking Cupid gossip. Now shall he— I know not what he shall. God send him well! The court's a learning-place, and he is one— Par. What one, 't faith?

Hel. That I wish well. 'Tis pity— Par. What's pity?

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in 't, Which might be felt; that we, the poorer born, Whose baser stars do shut us up in wishes, Might with effects of them follow our friends, And show what we alone must think, which never Returns us thanks.

Page. Monsieur Parolles, my lord calls for you

Exit Parolles.

Par. Little Helen, farewell: if I can remember thee, I will think of thee at court.

Hel. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star.

Par. Under Mars, I.

Hel. I especially think, under Mars.

Par. Why under Mars?
ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

CENE I.—Paris.  A Room in the King's Palace.

Flourish of cornets. Enter the King, with letters; Lords and others attending.

King. The Florentines and Senoys are by the ears; may fought with equal fortune, and continue bravest war.

First Lord. So 'tis reported, sir.

King. Nay, 'tis most credible: we have received receive certainty, vouch'd from our cousin Austria, with caution that the Florentine will move us for speedy aid; wherein our dearest friend judgeth the business, and would seem 'o have us make denial.

First Lord. His love and wisdom, sir; prov'd so to your majesty, may plead for ampest credence.

King. He hath arm'd our answer, and Florence is denied before he comes: 'et, for our gentlemen that mean to see the Tuscan service, freely have they leave to stand on either part.

Second Lord. It well may serve nursery to our gentry, who are sick of breathing and exploit.

King. What's he comes here?

Enter Bertram, Lafeu, and Parolles.

First Lord. It is the Count Rousillon, my good lord, young Bertram.

King. Youth, thou bear'st thy father's face; Frank nature, rather curious than in haste, hath well compos'd thee. Thy father's moral parts May'st thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your majesty's.

King. I would I had that corporal soundness now, as when thy father and myself in friendship First tried our soldiership! He did look far into the service of the time and was disciplined of the bravest: he lasted long; but on us both did haggish age steal on, and wore us out of act. It much repairs me to talk of your good father. In his youth I had the wit which I can well observe to-day in our young lords; but they may jest till their own scorn return to them unnoted ere they can hide their levity in honour. So like a courtier, contempt nor bitterness were in his pride or sharpness; if they were, his equal had awak'd them; and his honour, clock to itself, knew the true minute when exception bid him speak, and at this time his tongue obey'd his hand: who were below him he us'd as creatures of another place, and bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks, making them proud of his humility, in their poor praise he humbled. Such a man might be a copy to these younger times, which, follow'd well, would demonstrate them now but goes backward.

Ber. His good remembrance, sir, lies richer in your thoughts than on his tomb; so in approof lives not his epitaph as in your royal speech.

King. Would I were with him! He would always say, methinks I hear him now: his plausible words he scatter'd not in ears, but grafted them, to grow there and to bear; 'Let me not live,' thus his good melancholy oft began, on the catastrophe and heel of pastime, when it was out,—'Let me not live,' quoth he, 'After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses all but new things disdain; whose judgments are mere fathers of their garments; whose constancies expire before their fashions.' This he wish'd: I, after him, do after him wish too, since I nor wax nor honey can bring home, I quickly were dissolved from my hive, to give some labourers room.

Second Lord. You are lov'd, sir; they that least lend it you shall lack you first.

King. I fill a place, I know 't. How long is 't, count, since the physician at your father's die? He was much fam'd.

Ber. Some six months since, my lord.

King. If he were living, I would try him yet: lend me an arm; the rest have worn me out with several applications: nature and sickness debate it at their leisure. Welcome, count; my son's no dearer.

Ber. Thank your majesty.

Flourish.

Exeunt.
SCENE III.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess, Steward, and Clown.

Count. I will now hear: what say you of this gentlewoman?

Stew. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the calendar of my past endeavours; for then we wound our modesty and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we publish them.

Count. What does this knife here? Get you gone, sirrah: the complaints I have heard of you I do not all believe: 'tis my slowness that I do not; for I know you lack not folly to commit them, and have ability enough to make such knavery yours.

Clo. 'Tis not unknown to you, madam, I am a poor fellow.

Count. Well, sir.

Clo. No, madam, 'tis not so well that I am poor, though many of the rich are damned. But, if I may have your ladyship's good will to go to the world, Isbel the woman and I will do as we may.

Count. Will thou needs be a beggar?

Clo. I do beg your good will in this case.

Count. In what case?

Clo. In Isbel's case and mine own. Service is no heritage; and I think I shall never have the blessing of God till I have issue o' my body, for they say barnes are blessings.

Count. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marry.

Clo. My poor body, madam, requires it: I am driven on by the flesh; and he must needs go that the devil drives.

Count. Is this all your worship's reason?

Clo. Faith, madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

Count. May the world know them?

Clo. I have been, madam, a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are; and indeed, I do marry that I may repent.

Count. Thy marriage, sooner than thy wickedness.

Clo. I am out o' friends, madam; and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake.

Count. Such friends are thine enemies, knave.

Clo. You're shallow, madam, in great friends; for the knaves come to do that for which I am airy of. He that ears my land spares my team, and gives me leave to do the crop: if I be his cuckold, he's my drudge. He that comforts my wife is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; he that cherishes my flesh and blood loves my flesh and blood; he that loves my flesh and blood is my friend: ergo, he that kisses my wife is my friend. If men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage; for young Charbon the puritan, and old Poyson the papist, hosome'er their hearts are severed in religion, their heads are both one; they may jollishrows together, like any deer i' the herd.

Count. Will thou ever be a foul-mouthed and calumnious knave?

Clo. A prophet I, madam; and I speak the truth the next way:

For I the ballad will repeat,
Which men full true shall find;
Your marriage comes by destiny,
Your cuckoo sings by kind.

Count. Get you gone, sir: I'll talk with y more anon.

Stew. May it please you, madam, that he Helen come to you: of her I am to speak.

Count. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman I will speak with her; Helen I mean.

Clo. Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,
Why the Greeksians sacked Troy?
Fond done, done fond,
Was this King Priam's joy?
With that she sighed as she stood,
With that she sighed as she stood,
And gave this sentence then;
Among nine bad if one be good,
Among nine bad if one be good,
There's yet one good in ten.

Count. What! one good in ten? you corne
the song, sirrah.

Clo. One good woman in ten, madam; whi is a purifying o' the song. Would God we save the world so all the year! we'd find fault with the tithe-woman if I were the par
One in ten, quoth a! An we might have a go woman born but for every blazing star, or, at earthquake, 'twould mend the lottery well man may draw his heart out ere a pluck one.

Count. You'll be gone, sir knave, and do a command you!

Clo. That man should be at woman's command and yet no hurt done! Though honesty be pritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear surprize of humility over the black gown of big heart. I am going, forsooth: the busine is for Helen to come hither.

Exit.

Count. Well, now.

Stew. I know, madam, you love your gent woman entirely.

Count. Faith, I do: her father bequeathed to me; and she herself, without other advan
t, may lawfully make title to as much love as s finds: there is more owing her than is paid, a more shall be paid her than she'll demand.

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near than I thought she wished me: alone she was, a did communicate to herself her own words her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for h they touched not any stranger sense. Her mat was, she loved your son: Fortune, she said, w no goddess, that had put such difference betw t their two estates; Love, no god, that would extend his might, only where qualities were lev Dian, no queen of virgins, that would suffer i poor knight surprised, without rescue in the fr assault or ransom afterward. This she deliver in the most bitter touch of sorrow that e'er heard virgin exclaim in; which I held my dis speedily to acquaint you withal, sithence in t loss that may happen, it concerns you someti to know it...

Count. You have discharged this honesti keep it to yourself. Many likelihoods inform me of this before, which hung so tottering
the balance that I could neither believe nor m doubt. Pray you, leave me: stall this in yo

Our blood to us, this to our blood is born:

Hec. What is your pleasure, madam?
Count. You know, Helen, am a mother to you.
Hec. Mine honourable mistress.
Count. Nay, a mother: When I said 'a mother,' thought you saw a serpent: what's in 'mother'?
at you start at it? I say, I am your mother; put you in the catalogue of those

Hec. That I am not.
Count. I say, I am your mother.
Hec. Pardon, madam; ne Count Rousillon cannot be my brother:

note upon my parents, his all noble;
master, my dear lord he is; and I not be my brother.

Count. Nor I your mother?
Hec. You are my mother; madam: you would have,
that my lord your son was not my brother,
deed my mother! or were you both our mothers,
are no more for than I do for heaven, were not his sister. Can't no other,
at, I your daughter, he must be my brother?
Count. Yes, Helen, you might be my daughter-in-law, ied shield you mean it not! daughter and mother strive upon your pulse. What! pale again!
earth catch'd your fondness: new I see mystery of your loneliness, and find our salt tears' head: now to all sense 'tis gross lose my son: invention is a sham'd, against the proclamation of thy passion,
say thou dost not: therefore tell me true;
it tell me then, 'tis so: for, look, thy cheeks fuss it, the one to the other; and thine eyes it so grossly shown in thy behaviours at in their kind they speak it: only sin hellish obstinacy tic thy tongue, at truth should be suspected. Speak, is't so?
be so, you have wound a goodly claw;

If it be not, forswear 't: howe'er, I charge thee,
As heaven shall work in me for thine avail.
To tell me truly.

Hel. Good madam, pardon me!
Count. Do you love my son?
Hel. Your pardon, noble mistress!
Count. Love you my son?
Hel. Do not you love him, madam?
Count. Go not about; my love hath in't a bond.
Whereof the world takes note: come, come, disclose
The state of your affection, for your passions
Have to the full appeach'd.

Hel. Then, I confess,
Here on my knee, before high heaven and you,
That before you, and next unto high heaven,
love you your son.
My friends were poor, but honest; so 's my love:
Be not offended, for it hurts not him
That he is low'd of me: I follow him not
By any token of presumptuous suit;
Nor would I have him till I do deserve him;
Yet never know how that desert should be.
I know I love in vain, strive against hope;
Yet in this captious and intuble sieve
I still pour in the waters of my love,
And lack not to lose still. Thus, Indian-like,
Religious in mine error, I adore
The sun, that looks upon his worshiper,
But knows of him no more. My dearest madam,
Let not your hate encounter with my love
For loving where you do: but if yourself,
Whose aged honour cites a virtuous youth,
Did ever in so true a flame of liking
Wish chastely and love dearly, that your Dian
Was both herself and Love: 0! then, give pity
To her, whose state is such that cannot choose
But lend and give where she is sure to lose;
That seeks not to find that her search implies,
But riddle-like, lives sweetly where she dies.
Count. Had you not lately an intent, speak truly,
To go to Paris?
Hel. Madam, I had.
Count. Wherefore? tell true.
Hel. I will tell truth; by grace itself I swear.
You know my father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his reading
And manifest experience had collected
For general sovereignty; and that he will'd me
In heedfull'st reservation to bestow them,
As notes whose faculties inclusive were
More than they were in note. Amongst the rest,
There is a remedy approv'd, set down to cure the desperate languishings whereof
The king is render'd lost.
Count. This was your motive
For Paris, was it? speak.
Hel. My lord your son made me to think of this;
Else Paris, and the medicine, and the king,
Had from the conversation of my thoughts
Haply been absent then.
Count. But think you, Helen.
If you should tender your supposed aid,
He would receive it? He and his physicians
Are of a mind; he, that they cannot help him,
They, that they cannot help. How shall they credit
A poor unlearned virgin, when the schools,
Embowell'd of their doctrine, have left off
The danger to itself?
Hel. There's something in 't,
More than my father's skill, which was the greatest
Of his profession, that his good receipt
Shall for my legacy be sanctified
By the luckiest stars in heaven: and, would your honour
But give me leave to try success, 'I'd venture
The well-lost life of mine on his grace's cure
By such a day and hour.
Count. Dost thou believe 't? Hel. Ay, madam, knowingly.
Count. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave and love,
Means and attendants, and my loving greetings
To those of mine in court. I'll stay at home 250
And pray God's blessing into thy attempt.
Be gone to-morrow; and be sure of this,
What I can help thee to thou shalt not miss.

Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.

Flourish. Enter the King, with divers young Lords taking leave for the Florentine war; BERTRAM, PAROLLES, and Attendants.

King. Farewell, young lords: these war-like principles
Do not throw from you: and you, my lords, farewell:
Share the advice betwixt you; if both gain, all
The gift doth stretch itself as 'tis receiv'd,
And is enough for both.

First Lord. 'Tis our hope, sir, After well enter'd soldiers, to return
And find your grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confess he owes the malady
That doth my life besiege. Farewell, young lords;
Whether I live or die, be you the sons
Of worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy,
Those bated that inherit but the fall
Of the last monarch, see that you come
Not to woo honour, but to wed it; when
The bravest questant shrinks, find what you seek,
That fame may cry you loud: I say, farewell.

Second Lord. Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty!

King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them:
They say our French lack language to deny
If they demand: beware of being captives,
Before you serve.

Both. Our hearts receive your warnings.
King. Farewell. Come hither to me.

Exit, attended.

First Lord. O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us!
Par. 'Tis not his fault, the spark.

Par. Most admirable: I have seen those wars.
Ber. I am commanded here, and kept a coil with 'Too young,' and 'the next year,' and 'tis too early.'
Par. An thy mind stand to 't, boy, steal away bravely.

Ber. I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock,
Creaking my shoes on the plain masonry, Till honour be bought up and no sword worn

But one to dance with. By heaven! I'll stay away.

First Lord. There's honour in the theft.
Par. Commit it, cow. Second Lord. I am your accessory; and farewell.

Ber. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortured body.

First Lord. Farewell, captain. Second Lord. Sweet Mon sieur Parolles! Par. Noble heroes, my sword and yours, the kin. Good sparks and lustrous, a word, great metals, you shall find in the regiment of Spinii one Captain Spurio, with his cicatrice emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek: it this very sword entrenched it: say to him, I, and observe his reports for me.

Second Lord. We shall, noble captain.

Exeunt Lords.

Par. Mars dote on you for his novices! We will ye do?
Ber. Stay: the king—

Re-enter King. PAROLLES and BERTRAM re-enter.

Par. Use a more spacious ceremony to noble lords; you have restrained yourself within the list of too cold an adieu: be more express to them; for they wear themselves in the manner of the time, there do must true gilt, eat, sleep and move under the influence of the most received star; and though the devil lead the unsure, such are to be followed. After them, to take a more dilated farewell.

Ber. And I will do so.
Par. Worthy fellows; and like to prove sinewy swordmen.

Exeunt BERTRAM and PAROLLES.

Enter LAPEU.

Laf. Kneeling. Pardon, my lord, for me for my tidings.

King. I'll fee thee to stand up.

Laf. Then here's a man stands that has both his pardon. I would you had kneel'd, my lord, to ask his mercy. And here at my bidding you could so stand not. King. I would I had; so I had broke thy perch and ask'd thee mercy for't.

Laf. Good faith, across. But, my good lord, 'tis thus;
Will you be cur'd of your infirmity?

King. No.

Laf. O! will you eat no grapes, my royal eye? Yes, but you will my noble grapes an if My royal fox could reach them. I have seen a medicine
That's able to breathe life into a stone, Quick'en a rock, and make you dance canary With spritely fire and motion; whose single touch Is powerful to raise King Pepin, nay, To give great Charlemain a pen in's hand And write to her a love-line.

King. What ' her?' is this?
Laf. Why, Doctor She. My lord, there's arriv'd,
If you will see her: now, by my faith and honour. If seriously I may convey my thoughts In this my light deliverance, I have spoke
If judges have been babes; great floods have flown
From simple sources; and great seas have dried
When miracles have by the greatest been denied.
Oft expectation fails, and most oft there
Where most it promises; and oft it hits
Where hope is coldest and despair most fits.

King. I must not hear thee: fare thee well, kind maid.

Thy pains, not us’d, must by thyself be paid:
Proffers not took reap thanks for their reward.

Hel. Inspired merit so by breath is barr’d.
It is not so with him that all things knows,
As ‘tis with us that square our guess by shows;
But most it is presumption in us when
The help of heaven we count the act of men.
Dear sir, to my endeavours give consent;
Of heaven, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an impostor that proclaim
Myself against the level of mine aim;
But know I think, and think I know most sure,
My art is not past power nor you past cure.

King. Art thou so confident? Within what space
Hop’st thou my cure?

Hel. The great’st grace lending grace,
Ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring
Their fiery torcher his diurnal ring,
Ere twice in murr and occidental damp
Moist Hesperus hath quench’d his sleepy lamp,
Or four-and-twenty times the pilot’s glass
Hath told the thievish minutes how they pass,
What is infirm from your sound parts shall fly,
Health shall live free, and sickness freely die.

King. Upon thy certainty and confidence
What darst thou venture?

Hel. Tax of impudence,
A strumpet’s boldness, a divulged shame,
Traduc’d by odious ballads: my maiden’s name
Shall be the more, not worse, extended
With vilest torture let my life be ended.

King. Methinks in thee some blessed spirit doth speak
His powerful sound within an organ weak;
And what impossibility would slay
In common sense, sense saves another way.
Thy life is dear; for all that life can rate
Worth name of life in thee hath estimate;
Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, all
That happiness and prime can happy call:
Thou this to hazard needs must intimate
Skill infinite or monstrous desperate.
Sweet practiser, thy physic I will try,
That ministers thine own death if I die.

Hel. If I break time, or flinch in property
Of what I spoke, unpitied let me die,
And well deserv’d. Not helping, death’s my fee;
But, if I help, what do you promise me?

King. Make thy demand.

Hel. But will you make it even?

King. Ay, by my sceptre, and my hopes of heaven.

Hel. Then shalt thou give me with thy kingly hand
What husband in thy power I will command:
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To choose from forth the royal blood of France,
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy state;
scene ii.—rousillon. a room in the countess's palace.

enter countess and clown.

count. come on, sir; i shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

clo. i will show myself highly fed and lowly taught. i know my business is but to the court.

count. to the court! why, what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt? 'but to the court!'

clo. truly, madam, if god have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court: he that cannot make a leg, put off its cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither leg, hands, lip, nor cap; and indeed such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the court. but for me, i have an answer will serve all men.

count. marry, that's a bountiful answer that fits all questions.

clo. it is like a barber's chair that fits all buttocks; the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the brawn buttock, or any buttock.

count. will your answer serve fit to all questions?

clo. as fit as ten groats is for the hand of an attorney, as your french crown for your taffeta punk, as tib's rush for tom's forefinger, as a pancake for shrove-tuesday, a morris for may-day, as the nail to his hole, the cackold to his horn, as a scolding quen to a wrangling knife, as the nun's lip to the friar's mouth; nay, as the pudding to his skin.

count. have you, i say, an answer of such fitness for all questions?

clo. from below your duke to beneath your constable, it will fit any question.

count. it must be an answer of most monstrous size that must fit all demands.

clo. but a trifle neither, in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it. here it is, and all that belongs to 't: ask me if i am a courtier; it shall do you no harm to learn.

count. to be young again, if we could. i will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer. i pray you, sir, are you a courtier?

clo. o lord, sir! there's a simple putting off. more, more, a hundred of them.

count. sir, i am a poor friend of yours, that loves you.

clo. o lord, sir! thick, thick, spare not me.

count. i think, sir, you can eat none of this homely meat.

scene iii.—paris. a room in the king's palace.

enter bertram, lafeu, and parolli.

laf. they say miracles are past; and we our philosophical persons, to make matters familiar, things supernatural and cause. hence is it that we make trifles of them encroaching ourselves into seeming know when we should submit ourselves to an unknown fear.

laf. very hand of heaven.
Laf. Do all they deny her? An they were sons of mine I would have them whipped, or I would send them to the Turk to make enmarchs of.

Hel. Be not afraid that I your hand should take;
I'1l never do you wrong for your own sake:
Blessing upon your vows! and in your bed
Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!
Laf. These boys are boys of ice, they'll none have her: sure, they are bastards to the English;
the French ne'er got 'em.

Hel. You are too young, too happy, and too

To make yourself a son out of my blood.

Fourth Lord. Fair one, I think not so.
Laf. There's one grape yet; I am sure my father drank wine. But if thou be'st not an ass, I am a youth of fourteen: I have known thee already.

Hel. To Bertram. I dare not say I take you; but I give
Me and my service, ever whilst I live,
Into your guiding power. This is the man.

King. Why, then, young Bertram, take her;
she's thy wife.

Ber. My wife, my liege! I shall beseech your highness,
In such a business give me leave to use
The help of mine own eyes.

King. Know'st thou not, Bertram,
What she has done for me?

Ber. Yes, my good lord;
But never hope to know why I should marry her.

King. Thou know'st she has rais'd me from my sickly bed.

Ber. But follows it, my lord, to bring me down
Must answer for your raising? I know her well:
She had her breeding at my father's charge. A poor physician's daughter my wife! Disdain
Rather corrupt me ever!

King. 'Tis only title thou disdain'st in her, the which
I can build up. Strange is it that our bloods,
Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,
Would quite confound distinction, yet stand off
In differences so mighty. If she be
All that is virtuous, save what thou dislikest,
A poor physician's daughter, thou dislikest:
Of virtue for the name; but do not so: From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,
The place is dignifyed by the door's deed:
Where great additions swell's, and virtue none,
It is a dropped honour. Good alone
Is good without a name: vileness is so:
The property by what it is should go,
Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair;
In these to nature she's immediate heir,
And these breed honour: that is honour's scorn
Which challenges itself as honour's born,
And is not like the sire: honours thrive
When rather from our acts we them derive
Than our foregoers. The mere word's a slave,
Debosh'd on every tomb, on every grave
A lying trophy, and as oft is dumb
Where dust and damn'd oblivion is the tomb
Of honour'd bones indeed. What should be said?
If thou canst like this creature as a maid,
I can create the rest: virtue and she
Is her own dower; honour and wealth from me.

Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to do't.
King. Thou wrong'st thyself if thou should'st strive to choose.

Hel. That you are well restor'd, my lord, I'm glad:

Let the rest go.

King. My honour's at the stake, which to defeat

I must produce my power. Here, take her hand,

Proud scornful boy, unworthy this good gift,

That dost in vile misprision shake the up

My love and her desert; that canst not dream,

We, poising us in her defective scale,

Shall weigh thee to the beam; that wilt not know,

It is in us to plant thine honour where

We please to have it grow. Check thy contempt:

Obey our will, which travels in thy good:

Believe not thy disdain, but presently

Do thine own fortunes that obedient right

Which both thy duty owes and our power claims;

Or I will throw thee from my care for ever

Into the staggers and the careless lapse

Of youth and ignorance; both my revenge and hate

Loosing upon thee, in the name of justice,

Without all terms of pity. Speak; thine answer.

Ber. Pardon, my gracious lord; for I submit

My fancy to your eyes. When I consider

What great creation and what dole of honour

Flies where you bid it, I find that she, which late

Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now

The praised of the king; who, so ennobled,

Is, as 'twere, born so.

King. Take her by the hand,

And tell her she is thine to whom I promise

A counterpoise, if not to thy estate

A balance more replete.

Ber. I take her hand.

King. Good fortune and the favour of the king

Smile upon this contract; whose ceremony

Shall seem expedient on the now-born brief,

And be perform'd to-night: the solemn feast

Shall more attend upon the coming space,

Expecting absent friends. As thou lov'st her,

Thy love's to me religious; else, does err.

Exit King, Bertram, Helena, Lords, and Attendants.

Laf. Do you hear, monsieur? a word with you.

Par. Your pleasure, sir!

Laf. Your lord and master did well to make his recantation.

Par. Recantation! My lord! my master!

Laf. Ay; is it not a language I speak?

Par. A most harsh one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My master!

Laf. Are you companion to the Count Ronsillon?

Par. To any count; to all counts; to what is man.

Laf. To what is count's man: count's master is of another style.

Par. You are too old, sir, let it satisfy you, you are too old.

Laf I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man; to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Laf. I did think thee, for two ordinances, to be a pretty wise fellow: thou didst make toler-able vent of thy travel; it might pass: yet scars and the bannetings about thee did most sud-} fully dissemiue me from believing thee a very sae of too great a burden. I have now found the time when I lose thee again, I care not; yet art

good for nothing but taking up, and that the scarce

Laf. Do not plunge thyself too far in an of lattice, fare thee well: thy case men I not open, for I look through thee. Give me a hand.

Par. My lord, you give me most egregious indignity.

Laf. Ay, with all my heart; and thou art well of it.

Par. I have not, my lord, deserved it.

Laf. Yes, good faith, every dram of it: I will not bate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser.

Laf. E'en as soon as thou canst, for those to pull at a smack o' the contrary. If ever be beast bound in thy scarf and beaten, thou find what it is to be proud of thy bondage, have a desire to hold my acquaintance thee; or rather my knowledge, that I must in the default, he is a man I know.

Par. My lord, you do me most insupportable vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell-pains for thy, and my poor doing eternal: for doing a past; as I will by thee, in what motion age give me leave.

Par. Well, thou hast a son shall take the disgrace off me; scurril, old, filthy, scurril to

Well, I must be patient; there is no fettle of authority. I'll beat him, by my life, if I meet him with any convenience, an he be double and double a lord. I'll have no o pity of his age than I would have of — I'd him, an if I could but meet him again!

Re-enter LAFEU.

Laf. Sirrah, your lord and master's march there's news for you: you have a new master.

Par. I most unfeignedly beseech your lord to make some reservation of your wrong: it is my good lord: whom I serve above all master.

Laf. Who? God?

Par. Ay, sir.

Laf. Is the devil it is that's thy master. I dost thou gather up thy arms o' this fashion doest make hose of thy sleeves? do other seem so? Thou wert best set thy lower part on thy nose stands. By mine honour, if I were two hours younger, I'd beat thee; methinks thou art a general offence, and every man seen so to beat thee I think thou wast created for, to breathe themselves upon thee.

Par. This is hard and undeserved mean, my lord.

Laf. Go to, sir; you were beaten in Ita, picking a kernel out of a pomegranate; ye were a vagabond and no true traveller: you are saucy with lords and honourable personages: the commission of your birth and virtu-Scene IV.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter Helena and Cloten.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly: is she well? 10
Cl. She is not well; but yet she has her th: she's very merry; but yet she is not but thanks be given, she's very well, and is nothing 't the world; but yet she is not

Hel. If she be very well, what does she all she's not very well!

Cl. Truly, she's very well indeed, but for

Cl. What two things?

Hel. One, that she's not in heaven, whither send her quickly! the other, that she's in b, from whence God send her quickly!

Enter Parolles.

Hel. Bless you, my fortunate lady!

Cl. I hope, sir, I have your good will to have a own good fortunes.

Cl. You had my prayers to lead them on;
and to keep them on, have them still. O! my knave, how does my old lady?

Cl. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why, I say nothing.

Cl. Marry, you are the wiser man; for many a man's tongue shakes out his master's undoing.
To say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title; which is within a very little of nothing.

Par. Away! thou 'rt a knave.

Cl. You should have said, sir, before a knave thou 'rt a knave; that is, before me thou 'rt a knave: this had been truth, sir.

Par. Go to, thou art a witty fool; I have found thee.

Cl. Did you find me in yourself, sir, or were you taught to find me? The search, sir, was profitable; and much fool may you find in you, even to the world's pleasure and the increase of
laughter.

Par. A good knave, i' faith, and well fed.

Hel. What's his will else? 20

Par. That you will take your instant leave o' the king,
And make this haste as your own good proceeding;

Strongen'd with what apology you think
May make it probable need.

Hel. What more commands he?

Par. That, having this obtain'd, you presently Attend his further pleasure.

Hel. In every thing I wait upon his will.

Par. I shall report it so.

Hel. I pray you. Come, sirrah.

Enter Parolles.

Par. To Bertram. These things shall be done, sir.
Laf. Pray you, sir, who's his tailor?
Par. Sir!
Laf. O! I know him well. Ay, sir; he, sir, is a good workman, a very good tailor.
Ber. Aside to PAROLLES. Is she gone to the king?
Par. She is.
Ber. Will she away to-night?
Par. As you'll have her.
Ber. I have writ my letters, casked my treasure, given order for our horses; and to-night, When I should take possession of the bride, End ere I do begin.
Laf. A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner; but one that lies three thirds, and uses a known truth to pass a thousand nothings with, should be once heard and thrice beaten. God save you, captain.
Ber. Is there any unkindness between my lord and you, monsieur?
Par. I know not how I have deserved to run into my lord's displeasure.
Laf. You have made shift to run into 't, boots and spurs all, like him that leaped into the custard; and out of it you'll run again, rather than suffer question for your residence.
Ber. It may be you have mistaken him, my lord.
Laf. And shall do so ever, though I took him at his prayers. Fare you well, my lord; and believe this of me, there can be no kernel in this light nut; the soul of this man is his clothes. Trust him not in matter of heavy consequence; I have kept of them tame, and know their natures. Farewell, monsieur: I have spoken better of you than you have or will to deserve at my hand; but we must do good against evil.
Exit.
Par. An idle lord, I swear.
Ber. I think so.
Par. Why, do you not know him?
Ber. Yes, I do know him well; and common speech
Gives him a worthy pass. Here comes my clog.

Enter HELENA.

Hel. I have, sir, as I was commanded from you, Spoke with the king, and have procur'd his leave For present parting; only he desires Some private speech with you.
Ber. I shall obey his will. You must not marvel, Helen, at my course, Which holds not colour with the time, nor does The ministration and required office On my particular: prepar'd I was not For such a business; therefore am I found So much unsettled. This drives me to entreat you That presently you take your way for home; And rather muse than ask why I entreat you; For my respects are better than they seem, And my appointments have in them a need Greater than shows itself at the first view To you that know them not. This to my mother. Giving a letter.
'Twill be two days ere I shall see you, so I leave you to your wisdom.

Hel. Sir, I can nothing y
But that I am your most obedient servant.
Ber. Come, come, no more of that.
Hel. And ever shall
With true observance seek to eke out that Wherein toward me my homely stars have fared To equal my great fortune.
Ber. Let that go:
My haste is very great. Farewell: his honour
Hel. Pray sir, your pardon.
Ber. Well, what would you say?
Hel. Am not worthy of the wealth I owe Nor dare I say 'tis mine, and yet it is; But, like a timorous thief, most fain would ask What law does vouch mine own.
Ber. What would you have?
Hel. Something, and scarce so much as a thing, indeed. I would not tell you what I would, my lord:
Faith, yes;
Strangers and foes do sunder, and not kiss.
Ber. I pray you, stay not, but in haste to be
Hel. Shall not break your bidding, good lord.
Ber. Where are my other men, monsieur?
Hel. Farewell. Exit HEL. Go thou toward home; where I will never go, Whilst I can shake my sword or hear the drum Away! and for our flight.
Par. Bravely, corage.

ACT III.

Flourish. Enter DUKE, attended; two FIRST Lords, and Soldiers.

Duke. So that from point to point now you have heard The fundamental reasons of this war, Whose great decision hath much blood let for, And more thirsts after.
First Lord. Holy seems the quench Upon your grace's part; black and fearful On the opposer.

Duke. Therefore we marvel much our own France Would in so just a business shut his bosom Against our borrowing prayers.
Second Lord. The reasons of our state I cannot yield, But like a common and an outward man, That the great figure of a council frames By self-unable motion: therefore dare not Say what I think of it, since I have found Myself in my uncertain grounds to fall As often as I guess'd.

Duke. Be it his pleasure.
Second Lord. But I am sure the young Our nature, That surfeit on their ease, will day by day Come here for physic.

Duke. Welcome shall the b
And all the honours that can fly from us Shall on them settle. You know your prince well;
When better fall, for your avails they fell, To-morrow to the field. Flourish. Exit.
SCENE II.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess’s Palace.

Enter Countess and Clown.

Count. It hath happened all as I would have ad it, save that he comes not along with a very melancholy man.

Count. By what observance, I pray you?
Clo. Why, he will look upon his boot and sing; and the ruff and sing; ask questions and sing; pick his teeth and sing. I know a man that had his trick of melancholy sold a goodly manor or a song.

Count. Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come.

Clo. I have no mind to Isbel since I was at court. Our old ling and our Isbels o’ the country re nothing like your old ling and your Isbels o’ the court: the brains of my Cupid’s knocked out, and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

Count. What have we here?

Clo. E’en that you have there. Exit. 29

Count. I have sent you a daughter-in-law; she hath recovered the king, and undone me. I have wedded her, not bedded her; and sworn to make her not eternal. You shall hear I am run away: now it before the report come. If there be breadth enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My uty to you. Your unfortunate son.

BERTRAM.

his is not well: rash and unbridled boy, o fly the favours of so good a king: o pluck his indignation on thy head y the misprizing of a maid too virtuous or the contempt of empire!

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O madam! yonder is heavy news within between two soldiers and your young lady.

Count. What is the matter?

Clo. Nay, there is some comfort in the news, me comfort; your son will not be killed so soon as I thought he would.

Count. Why should he be killed?

Clo. So say I, madam, if he run away, as I fear he does: the danger is in standing to’t; that’s the loss of men, though it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more; or my part, I only hear your son was run away.

Exit.

Enter HELENA and two Gentlemen.

First Gent. Save you, good madam.

Hel. Madam, my lord is gone, for ever gone. Second Gent. Do not say so.

Count. Think upon patience. Pray you, gentlemen, have felt so many quirks of joy and grief, that the first face of neither, on the start, 50 an woman me unto’t: where is my son, I pray you?

Second Gent. Madam, he’s gone to serve the Duke of Florence: he met him thitherward; for thence we came, and after some dispatch in hand at court, either we bend again.

Hil. Look on his letter, madam: here’s my passport.

When thou canst get the ring upon my finger, which never shall come off, and show me a child begotten of thy body that I am father to, then call me husband: but in such a ‘t then I write a ‘tnever.'

This is a dreadful sentence. 51

Count. Brought you this letter, gentlemen?

First Gent. Ay, madam;

And for the contents’ sake are sorry for our pains.

Count. I prithee, lady, have a better cheer; 63

If thou engrossest all the griefs are thine, Thou rob’st me of a moiety: he was my son, But I do wash his name out of my blood, And thou art all my child. Towards Florence is he?

Second Gent. Ay, madam.

Count. And to be a soldier?

Second Gent. Such is his noble purpose; and, believe’t,

The duke will lay upon him all the honour

That good convenience claims.

Count. Return you thither?

First Gent. Ay, madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.

Hel. Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France. 72

’Tis bitter.

Count. Find you that there?

Hel. Ay, madam.

First Gent. ’Tis but the boldness of his hand, happily, which his heart was not consenting to.

Count. Nothing in France until he have no wife! There’s nothing here that is too good for him so But only she; and she deserves a lord That twenty such rude boys might tend upon, And call her hourly-mistress. Who was with him?

First Gent. A servant only, and a gentleman Which I have sometime known.

Count. Parolles, was it not?

First Gent. Ay, my good lady, he.

Count. A very tainting fellow, and full of wicked- ness.

My son corrupts a well-derived nature With his inducement.

First Gent. Indeed, good lady, The fellow has a deal of that too much, 90 Which holds him much to have.

Count. Y’ are welcome, gentlemen. I will entreat you, when you see my son, To tell him that his sword can never win The honour that he loses: more I’ll entreat you Written to bear along.

Second Gent. We serve you, madam, In that and all your worthiest affairs.

Count. Not so, but as we change our courtesies. Will you draw near?

Exeunt Countess and Gentlemen.

Hel. ’Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.

Nothing in France until he has no wife!

Thou shalt have none, Rousillon, none in France; Then hast thou all again. Poor lord! is ’t I That chase thee from thy country, and expose Those tender limbs of thine to the event Of the none-sparing war? and is it I That drive thee from the sportive court, where thou Wast shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark
Of smoky muskets? O you leaden messengers,
That ride upon the violent speed of fire,
Fly with false aim; move the still-piercing air,
That sings with piercing; do not touch my lord!
Whoever shoots at him, I set him there;
Whoever charges on his forward breast,
I am the catiff that do hold him to it;
And, though I kill him not, I am the cause
His death was so effect'd: better 'twere
I met the ravin lion when he roar'd
With sharp constraint of hunger; better 'twere
That all the miseries which nature owes
Were mine at once. No, come thou home,
Rousillon,
Whence honour but of danger wins a scar,
As oft it loses all: I will be gone;
My being here it is that holds thee hence:
Shall I stay here to do 't? no, no, although
The air of paradise did fan the house,
And angels offic'd all: I will be gone,
That pitiful rumour may report my flight,
To consolate thine ear. Come, night; end, day!
For with the dark, poor thief, I'll steal away.

Exit.

Flourish. Enter Duke, Bertram, Parolles, Soldiers, Drum and Trumpets.

Duke. The general of our horse thou art; and we,
Great in our hope, lay our best love and credence
Upon thy promising fortune.

Ber. Sir, it is
A charge too heavy for my strength, but yet
We'll strive to bear it for your worthy sake
To the extreme edge of hazard.

Duke. Then go thou forth,
And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm
As thy auspicious mistress!

Ber. This very day,
Great Mars, I put myself into thy file:
Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prove
A lover of thy drum, hater of love.

Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess and Steward.

Count. Alas! and would you take the letter of her?
Might you not know she would do as she has done,
By sending me a letter? Read it again.

Stew. I am Saint Jaques' pilgrim, thither gone:
Ambitious love hath so in me offended
That bare-foot plod I the cold ground upon
With waint vox my faults to have amended.
Write, write, that from the bloody course of war,
My dearest master, your dear son, may he:
Bless him at home in peace, whilst I from far
His name with zealous fervours sanctify:
His taken labours bid him me forgive;
I, his despicable Juno, sent him forth
From courtly friends, with camping foes to live,
Where death and danger dogs the heels of worth:
He is too good and fair for Death and me;
Whom I myself embrace, to set him free.

Count. Ah! what sharp stings are in her mildest words;

Rinaldo, you did never lack advice so much,
As letting her pass so: had I spoke with her,
I could have well diverted her intents,
Which thus she hath prevented.

Stew. Pardon me, madam,
If I had given you this at over-night
She might have been o'erta'en; and yet she writes,
Pursuit would be but vain.

Count. What angel shall Bless this unworthy husband! he cannot thrive
Unless her prayers, whom heaven delights to hear,
And loves to grant, reprieve him from the wrath
Of greatest justice. Write, write, Rinaldo,
To this unworthy husband of his wife;
Let every word weigh heavy of his worth
That he does weigh too light: my greatest grief,
Though little he do feel it, set down sharply.
Dispatch the most convenient messenger:
When haply he shall hear that she is gone,
He will return; and hope I may that she,
Hearing so much, will speed her foot again,
Led hither by pure love. Which of them both
Is dearest to me I have no skill in sense
To make distinction. Provide this messenger,
My heart is heavy and mine age is weak;
Grief would have tears, and sorrow bids a speak.

Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Without the Walls of Florence.

A tucket afur off. Enter a Widow of Florence,
DIANA, VIOLENTA, MARIANA, and other Citizens.

Wid. Nay, come; for if they do approach to city we shall lose all the sight.

Dia. They say the French count has done
The most honourable service.

Wid. It is reported that he has taken the greatest commander, and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother. We have lost of labour; they are gone a contrary way: hast you may know by their trumpets.

Mar. Come; let's return again, and suffer ourselves with the report of it. Well, Diana, take heed of this French Earl: the honour of my name is her name, and no legacy is so rich honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.

Mor. I know that knave; hang him! Parolles: a filthy officer he is; those suggestions for the young Earl. Beware of them, Diana; their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, all these engines of lust, are not the things they go under: many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wreck of maidenhead, cannot all that dissuade succession, but that they blighted with the twigs that threaten them. I hope I need not to advise you further; but hope your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known but the modesty which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not need to fear me.

Wid. I hope so. Look, here comes a pilgrim: I know she will lie at my house; thither I'll send one another. I'll question her.
Enter Helena, in the dress of a pilgrim.

Hel.  God save you, pilgrim! whither are you bound?

Wid.  To Saint Jaques le Grand.

Where do the palmer's lodge, I do beseech you?

Hel.  At the Saint Francis, here beside the port.

Wid.  Is this the way?

Hel.  Ay, marry, is 't. Hark you! A march afar off.

Wid.  They come this way. If you will tarry, holy pilgrim, but till the troops come by,

will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd:

he rather, for I think I know your hostess

as ample as myself.

Hel.  Is it yourself?

Wid.  If you shall please so, pilgrim.

Hel.  I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Wid.  You came, I think, from France?

Hel.  I did so.

Wid.  Here you shall see a countryman of yours that has done worthy service.

Hel.  His name, I pray you.

Dia.  The Count Roussillon: know you such a one?

Hel.  But by the ear, that hears most nobly of him;

is face I know not.

Dia.  Whatsoe'er he is,

's bravely taken here. He stole from France,

'tis reported, for the king had married him against his liking. Think you it is so?

Hel.  Ay, surely, mere the truth: I know his lady,

Dia.  There is a gentleman that serves the count sports but coarsely of her.

Hel.  What's his name?

Dia.  Monsieur Parolles.

Hel.  O! I believe with him, argument of praise, or to the worth

the great count himself, she is too mean have her name repeated: all her deserving a reserved honesty, and that have not heard examin'd.

Dia.  Alas! poor lady;

is a hard bondage to become the wife

a detesting lord.

Wid.  Ay, right; good creature, where soe'er she is, her heart weighs sadly. This young maid might shrewd turn if she pleas'd.

Hel.  How do you mean?

Wid.  be the amorous count solicits her the unlawful purpose.

Hel.  He does indeed;

if breaks with all that can in such a suit

rupt the tender honour of a maid:

she is arm'd for him and keeps her guard

honestest defence.

Mar.  The gods forbid else!

Ter. with drum and colours, a party of the Florentine army, Bertram and Parolles.

Wid.  So, now they come.

ant is Antonio, the duke's eldest son;

That, Escalus.

Hel.  Which is the Frenchman?

He.  That with the plume: 'tis a most gallant fellow;

I would he lov'd his wife. If he were honest

He were much goodlier; is't not a handsome gentleman?

Hel.  I like him well.

Dia.  'Tis pity he is not honest. Yond's that same knave

That leads him to these places: were I his lady

I would poison that vile rascal.

Hel.  Which is he?

Dia.  That jack-an-apes with scarfs. Why is he melancholy?

Hel.  Perchance he's hurt i' the battle.

Par.  Lose our drum! well.

Mar.  He's shrewdly vexed at something. Look,

he has spied us.

Wid.  Marry, hang you!

Mar.  And your courtesy, for a ring-carrier!

Exeunt Bertram, Parolles, Officers and Soldiers.

Wid.  The troop is past. Come, pilgrim, I will bring you

Where you shall host: of enjoin'd penitents

There's four or five, to Great Saint Jaques bound,

Already at my house.

Hel.  I humbly thank you.

Please it this matron and this gentle maid to eat with us to-night, the charge and thanking

Shall be for me; and, to requite you further,

I will bestow some precepts of this virgin

Worthy the note.

Both.  We'll take your offer kindly.

Exeunt.

Scene VI.—Camp before Florence.

Enter Bertram and the two French Lords.

First Lord. Nay, good my lord, put him to 't

let him have his way.

Second Lord. If your lordship find him not a hiding, hold me no more in your respect.

First Lord. On my life, my lord, a bubble.

Ber. Do you think I am so far deceived in him?

First Lord. Believe it, my lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speak of him as my kinsman, he's a most notable coward, an infinite and endless liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality worthy your lordship's entertainment.

Second Lord. It were fit you knew him: lest, reposing too far in his virtue, which he hath not,

he might at some great and trusty business in a man danger fail you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

Second Lord. None better than to let him fetch off his drum, which you hear him so confidently undertake to do.

First Lord. I, with a troop of Florentines, will suddenly surprise him: such I will have whom I am sure he knows not from the enemy. We will bind and hoodwink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the leaguer of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents. Be but your lordship present at his examination: if he do not, for the promise of his life and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the divine forfeit of his soul upon oath, never trust my judgment in any thing.

Second Lord. O! for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drum: he says he has a stratagem for 't. When your lordship sees the bottom of his success in 't, and to what metal this counterfeited lump of ore will be melted, if you give him not John Drum’s entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed. Here he comes.

First Lord. O! for the love of laughter, hinder not the honour of his design: let him fetch off his drum in any hand.

Enter Parolles.

Ber. How now, monsieur! this drum sticks sorely in your disposition.

Second Lord. A pox on 't! let it go: 'tis but a drum.

Par. ‘But a drum!’ Is 't 'but a drum'? A drum so lost! There was an excellent command, to charge in with our horse upon our own wings,
and to rend our own soldiers!

Second Lord. That was not to be blamed in the command of the service: it was a disaster of war that Caesar himself could not have prevented if he had been there to command.

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our success: some dishonour we had in the loss of that drum; but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might have been recovered.

Ber. It might; but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered. But that the merit of service is seldom attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drum or another, or his head.

Ber. Why, if you have a stomach, to 't, monsieur; if you think your mystery in stratagem can bring this instrument of honour again into his native quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprise and go on; I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speed well in it, the duke shall both speak of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatness, even to the utmost syllable of your worthiness.

Par. By the hand of a soldier, I will undertake it.

Ber. But you must not now slumber in it.

Par. I'll about it this evening: and I will presently pen down my dilemma, encourage myself in my certainty, put myself into my mortal preparation, and by midnight look to hear further from me.

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his grace you are gone about it?

Par. I know not what the success will be, my lord; but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know thou'rt valiant: and to the possiability of thy soldiership, will subscribe for thee.

Par. Farewell.

Par. I love not many words.

First Lord. No more than a fish loves water.
Is not this a strange fellow, my lord, that so confidently seems to undertake this business, which he knows is not to be done; damns him-selves to do, and dares better be damned than to do 't?

Second Lord. You do not know him, my lord, as we do: certain it is that he will steal himse-

which he knows is not to be done; damns him-

Second Lord. You do not know him, my lord,
n most rich choice; yet in his idle fire,
To buy his will, it would not seem too dear,
Ilow'er repented after.

Wid. Now I see
The bottom of your purpose.

Hel. You see it lawful then. It is no more
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Desires this ring, appoints him an encounter,
A fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Forself most chastely absent. After this,
To marry her, I'll add three thousand crowns
O what is past already.

Wid. I have yielded,
Unstruct my daughter how she shall persever,
But time and place with this deceit so lawful Lay prove coherent. Every night he comes
With musick of all sorts and songs compos'd
O her unworthiness; it nothing steads us
Chide him from our caves, for he persists
If his life lay on't.

Hel. Why then to-night
Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act,
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact.
Let's about it.

Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Without the Florentine Camp.

Enter First French Lord, with five or six Soldiers in ambush.

First Lord. He can come no other way but by
His hedge-corner. When you sally upon him,
Seek what terrible language you will: though
I understand it not yourselves, no matter; for
I must not seem to understand him, unless Me one among us, whom we must produce for Interpreter.

First Sold. Good captain, let me be the inpreter.

First Lord. Art not acquainted with him?
Wst he not thy voice?

First Sold. No, sir, I warrant you.

First Lord. But what linsey-woolsey hast thou Speak to us again?

First Sold. E'en such as you speak to me.

First Lord. He must think us some band of Rangers! the adversary's entertainment. Now
Hath a smack of all neighbouring languages;
Therefore we must every one be a man of his Tongue, not to know what we speak one to
Other; so we seem to know, is to know what
Our purpose: chough's language, gable,
Dough, and good enough. As for you, inter-er; you must seem very politic. But couch,
Here he comes, to beguile two hours in a Cup, and then to return and swear the lies he Goes.

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. Ten o'clock! within these three hours
Will be time enough to go home. What shall
I have done? It must be a very plausible
Ention that carries it. They begin to smoke,
And disgraces have of late knocked too often
My door. I find my tongue is too foolhardy;
My heart hath the fear of Mars before it
And of his creatures, not daring the reports of My tongue.

First Lord. This is the first truth that e'er
Thine own tongue was guilty of.

Par. What the devil should move me to Undertake the recovery of this drum, being
Not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had No such purpose! I must give myself some Hurt and say I got them in exploit. Yet slight Ones will not carry it: they will say, 'Came You off with so little? and great ones I dare not give. Wherefore, what's the instance? Tongue,
I must put you into a butter-woman's mouth,
And buy myself another of Bajazet's mule, if you
Prattle me into these perils.

First Lord. Is it possible he should know what
He is, and be that he is?

Par. If I would the cutting of my garments
Would serve the turn, or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

First Lord. We cannot afford you so.
Par. Or the baring of my beard, and to say
It was in stratagem.

First Lord. 'T would not do.
Par. Or to draw my clothes, and say I was Stripped.

First Lord. Hardly serve.
Par. Though I swore I leaped from the Window of the citadel—

First Lord. How deep?
Par. Thirty fathom.

First Lord. Three great oaths would scarce
Make that he believed.

Par. I would I had any drum of the enemy's:
I would swear I recovered it.

First Lord. You shall hear one anon.

Par. A drum now of the enemy's!

Alarum within.

First Lord. Thro' no. morousus, cargo, cargo, cargo. All. Cargo, cargo, cargo, villianda par corbo, cargo.

Par. O! ransom, ransom! Do not hide mine eyes. They seize and blindfold him.

First Sold. Boskos tromaudo boskos.

Par. I know you are the Muskos' regiment;
And I shall lose my life for want of language.
If there be here German, or Dane, low Dutch,
Italian, or French, let him speak to me:
I will discover that which shall undo

The Florentine.

First Sold. Bostos vaswado:
I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue:
Kerelybonto: Sir,
Betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen poniards
Are at thy bosom.

Par. O!

First Sold. O! pray, pray, pray.

Manka verania dulche.

First Lord. Oscoirbdulchus volivoro.

First Sold. The general is content to spare thee yet;
And, hoodwink'd as thou art, will lead thee on.
To gather from thee: haply thou may'st inform
Something to save thy life.

Par. O! let me live!
And all the secrets of our camp I'll show,
Their force, their purposes; nay, I'll speak that
Which you will wonder at.

First Sold. But wilt thou faithfully?
Par. If I do not, damn me.
First Sold. Acordo linta.

Come on; thou art granted space.
Exit, with Parolles guarded. A short alarum within.

First Lord. Go, tell the Count Ronsillon, and my brother,
We have caught the woodcock, and will keep him muffled
Till we do hear from them.
Second Sold. Captain, I will.
First Lord. 'A' will betray us all unto ourselves;
Inform on that.
Second Sold. So I will, sir.
First Lord. Till then I'll keep him dark and safely lock'd.
Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter BERTRAM and DIANA.

Ber. They told me that your name was Fontibell.
DIA. No, my good lord, Diana.
Ber. Titled goddess; And worth it, with addition! But, fair soul,
In your fine frame hath love no quality? If the quick fire of youth light not your mind,
You are no maiden, but a monument:
When you are dead you should be such a one As you are now, for you are cold and stern; And now you should be as your mother was When your sweet self was got.
DIA. She then was honest.
Ber. So should you be.
DIA. No:
My mother did but duty; such, my lord,
As you owe to your wife.
Ber. No more o' that! I prithee do not strive against my vows.
I was compell'd to her; but I love thee By love's own sweet constraint, and will for ever Do thee all rights of service.
DIA. Ay, so you serve us Till we serve you; but when you have our roses, You barely leave our thorns to prick ourselves And mock us with our bareness.
Ber. How have I sworn! 20
DIA. 'Tis not the many oaths that make the truth, But the plain single vow that is vow'd true. What is not holy, that we swear not by, But take the Highest to witness: then, pray you, tell me,
If I should swear by God's great attributes, I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oaths, When I did love you ill? This has no holding, To swear by him whom I protest to love, That I will work against him: therefore your oaths Are words and poor conditions, but unseal'd; 30 At least in my opinion.
Ber. Change it, change it. Be not so holy-cruel: love is holy;
And my integrity ne'er knew the crafts That you do charge men with. Stand no more off, But give thyself unto my sick desires,
Who then recover: say thou art mine, and ever My love as it begins shall so persever.

DIA. I see that men make ropes in such a sort That we'll forsake ourselves. Give me that ring.
Ber. I'll lend it thee, my dear; but have a power
To give it from me.
DIA. Will you not, my lord? Ber. It is an honour 'longing to our house, Bequeathed down from many ancestors, Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world In me to lose.
DIA. Mine honour's such a ring:
My chastity's the jewel of our house,
Bequeathed down from many ancestors, Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world In me to lose. Thus your own proper wisdom Brings in the champion honour on my part Against your vain assault.
Ber. Here, take my ring My house, mine honour, yea, my life, be thine And I'll be bid by thee.
DIA. When midnight comes, knock at the chamber-window:
I'll order take my mother shall not hear.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth, When you have conquer'd my yet maiden heart,
Remain there but an hour, nor speak to me. My reasons are most strong; and you shall know them. When he back again this ring shall be deliver'd:
And on your finger in the night I'll put Another ring, that what in time proceeds May token to the future our past deeds.
Adieu, till then; then, fall not. You have writ A wife of me, though there my hope be done. Ber. A heaven on earth I have won by wood thee.
DIA. For which live long to thank both heav'n and me!
You may so in the end.
My mother told me just how he would woo As if she sat in 's heart; she says all men Have the like oaths: he had sworn to marry When his wife's dead; therefore I'll lie with him When I am buried. Since Frenchmen are braid, Marry that will, I live and die a maid: Only in this disguise I think 'tis no sin To cozen him that would unjustly win.

SCENE III.—The Florentine Camp.

Enter the two French Lords, and two or three Soldiers.

First Lord. You have not given him his mother's letter?
Second Lord. I have delivered it an hour since, there is something in't that stings his nature, for on the reading it he changed almost in another man.
First Lord. He has much worthy blame let upon him for shaking off so good a wife and sweet a lady.
Second Lord. Especially he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the king, who hath even vowed his bounty to sing happiness to him. I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly within you.
First Lord. When you have spoken it, I am dead, and I am the grave of it.
Second Lord. He hath perverted a young gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown; and this night he fleshes his will in her spoile of her honour: he hath given her his monumental ring, and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.

First Lord. Now, God delay our rebellion! as we are ourselves, what things are we.

Second Lord. Merely our own traitors: and as the common course of all treasons, we see them reveal themselves, till they attain to their abhorred ends, so he that in this action entwines against his own nobility, in his proper stream o'erflows himself.

First Lord. Is it not meant damnable in us, to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? We shall not then have his company to-night?

Second Lord. Not till after midnight, for he dined to his hour.

First Lord. That approaches apace: I would have him see his company anathematized, that he might take a measure of his own judgments, wherein so curiously he had set this counterfeit.

Second Lord. We will not meddle with him till he come, for his presence must be the whip if the other.

First Lord. In the meantime what hear you of these wars?

Second Lord. I hear there is an overtaking of pace.

First Lord. Nay, I assure you, a peace concluded.

Second Lord. What will Count Rousillon then? will he travel higher, or return again into France?

First Lord. I perceive by this demand, you're not altogether of his council.

Second Lord. Let it be forbid, sir; so should be a great deal of his act.

First Lord. Sir, his wife some two months since of his house: her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Jacques le Grand; which holy undertaking with most austere sanctimony she accomplished; and, there residing, the tenderness of her nature became as a prey to her grief; in fine, she a groan of her last breath, and now she sings in heaven.

Second Lord. How is this justified?

First Lord. The stronger part of it by her own story, which makes her story true, even to the point of her death: her death itself, which could not be her office to say is come, was faithfully confirmed by the rector of the place.

Second Lord. Hath the count all this intelligence?

First Lord. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of her verity.

Second Lord. I am heartily sorry that he'll be lad of this.

First Lord. How mightily sometimes we make so comforts of our losses!

Second Lord. And how mightily some other times we drown our gain in tears! The great igniety that his valour hath here acquired for himself shall at home be encountered with a shame so ample.

First Lord. The web of our life is of a mingled arn, good and ill together: our virtues would be proud if our faults whipped them not; and our crimes would despair if they were not cherished by our virtues.

Enter a Servant.

How now! where's your master?

Serv. He met the duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave: his lordship will next morning for France. The duke hath offered him letters of commendations to the king.

Second Lord. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

First Lord. They cannot be too sweet for the king's tartsness. Here's his lordship now.

Enter BERTRAM.

How now, my lord! is 't not after midnight? I have to-night dispatched sixteen businesses, a month's length a-piece, by an abstract of success: I have conge'd with the duke, done my adieu with his nearest, buried a wife, mourned for her, writ to my lady mother I am returning, entertained my convoy; and between these main parcels of dispatch effect my nicest needs: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

Second Lord. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your lordship.

Ber. I mean, the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter. But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier? Come, bring forth this counterfeit model: has deceived me, like a double-meaning prophesier.

Exeunt Soldiers.

Has sat i' the stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he carry himself?

First Lord. I have told your lordship already, the stocks carry him. But to answer you as you would be understood; he weeps like a wench that had shed her milk: he hath confessed himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a friar, from the time of his remembrance to this very instant disaster of his setting i' the stocks; and what think you he hath confessed?

Ber. Nothing of me, has a'?

Second Lord. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face: if your lordship be in't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Re-enter Soldiers, with PAROLLES.

Ber. A plague upon him! muffed! he can say nothing of me: hush! hush!

First Lord. Hoodman comes! Porto tartarossa. First Sold. He calls for the tortures: what will you say without 'em?

Par. I will confess what I know without constraint: if ye pinch me like a pesty, I can say no more.

First Sold. You are a merciless general. Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.
Par. And truly, as I hope to live.
First Sold. First, demand of him how many horse the duke is strong. What say you to that? 120 Par. Five or six thousand; but very weak and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, as I hope to live.
First Sold. Shall I set down your answer so?
Par. Do: I’ll take the sacrament on’t, how and which way you will.
Ber. All’s one to him. What a past-saving slave is this! 121
First Lord. You are deceived, my lord: this is Monsieur Parolles, the gallant militarist,—that was his own phrase,—that had the whole theoretic of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the chape of his dagger.
Second Lord. I will never trust a man again for keeping his sword clean; nor believe he can have every thing in him by wearing his apparel neatly.
First Sold. Well, that’s set down. 170
Par. Five or six thousand horse, I said,—I will say true,—or thereabouts, set down, for I’ll speak truth.
First Lord. He’s very near the truth in this.
Ber. But I con him no thanks for’t, in the nature he delivers it.
Par. Poor rogues. I pray you, say.
First Sold. Well, that’s set down.
Par. I humbly thank you, sir. A truth’s a truth; the rogues are marvellous poor.
First Sold. Demand of him, of what strength they are a-foots. What say you to that?
Par. By my troth, sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true. Let me see:
Spurio, a hundred and fifty; Sebastian, so many;
Corambus, so many; Jaques, so many; Guilian,
Cosmo, Lodowick, and Grattii, two hundred fifty each: mine own company, Chiptober, Vaumond, Bentii, two hundred fifty each: so that the muster-file, rotten and sound, upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll; half of the which dare not shake the snow from off their cassocks, lest they shake themselves to pieces.
Ber. What shall be done to him? 128
First Lord. Nothing, but let him have thanks.
Demand of him my condition, and what credit
I have with the duke.
First Sold. Well, that’s set down. You shall demand of him, whether one Captain Dumain be i the camp, a Frenchman; what his reputation is with the duke; what his valour, honesty, and expertness in wars; or whether he thinks it were not possible, with well-weighing sums of gold, to corrupt him to a revolt. What say you to this? what do you know of it?
Par. I beseech you, let me answer to the particular of the intergatories: demand them singly.
First Sold. Do you know this Captain Dumain?
Par. I know him: a’ was a betther’s prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for geting the shrieves fool with child; a dumb innocent, that could not say him nay.
DUMAIN lifts his hand in anger.
Ber. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; though
I know his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.
First Sold. Well, is this captain in the Duke of Florence’s camp?
Par. Upon my knowledge he is, and lousy.
First Lord. Nay, look not so upon me; I shall hear of your lordship anon.
First Sold. What is his reputation with t duke?
Par. The duke knows him for no other b poor officer of mine, and writ to me this other day to turn him out o’ the band; I think I ha his letter in my pocket.
First Sold. Marry, we’ll search.
Par. In good sadness, I do not know: eith it is there, or it is upon a file with the duke other letters in my tent.
First Sold. Here ’tis: here’s a paper; sh
I read it to you?
Par. I do not know if it be it or no.
Ber. Our interpreter does it well.
First Lord. Excellently.
First Sold. Dian, the count’s a fool, and full gold—
Par. That is not the duke’s letter, sir: that an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence one Diana, to take heed of the allurement one Count Housillon, a foolish idle boy, but all that very ruttish. I pray you, sir, put it again.
First Sold. Nay, I’ll read it first, by your favo
Par. My meaning in’t, I protest, was ve honest in the behalf of the maid; for I kno the young count to be a dangerous and lasciv boy, who is a whale to virginity, and devou up all the fry it finds.
Ber. Damnable both-sides rogue!
First Sold. When he swears oaths, bid him dr gold, and take it;
After he scorches, he never pays the score:
Half vom is match well made; match, and w
make it;
He ne’er pays after-debts; take it before,
And say a soldier, Dian, told thee this;
Men are to melt with, boys are not to kiss;
For count of this, the count’s a fool, I know it;
Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.
Thine, as he vow’d to thee in thine ear.
PAROLLES.
Ber. He shall be whipped through the air with this rime in’s forehead.
Second Lord. This is your devoted friend, s
the manifold linguist and the armipotent soldi Ber. I could endure any thing before but cat, and now he’s a cat to me.
First Sold. I perceive, sir, by your gener looks, we shall be fain to hang you.
Par. My life, sir, in any case! not that I afraid to die; but that, my offences being man
I would repent out the remainder of natu
Let me live, sir, in a dungeon, I’the stocks, anywhere, so I may live.
First Sold. We’ll see what may be done,
you confess freely: therefore, once more to th Captain Dumain. You have answered to reputation with the duke and to his valor:
what is his honesty?
Par. He will steal, sir, an egg out of a cloi for rapes and ravishments he parallels Ness;
professes not keeping of oaths; in break:

and straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of honesty; he has every thing that an honest man should not have; what an honest man would have, he has nothing.

First Lord. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty. A upon him for me! he is more and more a cat.

First Lord. What say you to his expertness in ar? But, faith, sir, has led the drum before the French tragedians—to beli be him I will not.— more of his soldierish I know not; except that country he had the honour to be the

First Lord. He hath out-villained villany so that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A pox on him! he's a cat still.

First Lord. His qualities being at this poor ice, I need not to ask you if gold will corrupt in to revolt.

Par. Sir, for a quart d' eau he will sell the seep of his salvation, the inheritance of it;
d cut the entail from all remainders, and a petual succession for it perpetually.

First Sold. What's his brother, the other Cap-Dumain?

Second Lord. Why does he ask him of me?

First Sold. What's he?

Par. E'en a crow o' the same nest; not alto-ther so great as the first in goodness, but ater a great deal in evil. He excels his other for a coward, yet his brother is reputed of the best that is. In a retreat he outs take to betray the Florentine?

Par. Ay, and the captain of his horse, Count silion.

First Sold. I'll whisper with the general, and ow his pleasure.

Par. Aside. I'll no more drumming; a plague all drums! Only to seem to deserve well,
I to beguile the supposition of that lascivious

itoriously discovered the secrets of your army,
I made such pestiferous reports of men very ly held, can serve the world for no honest with his head.

death!

First Sold. That shall you, and take your look about you: know you any here?

Ber. Good morrow, noble captain.

Second Lord. God bless you, Captain Parolles.

First Lord. God save you, noble captain.

Second Lord. Captain, what greeting will you my Lord Lafen? I am for France.

First Lord. Good captain, will you give me a copy of the sonnet you writ to Diana in behalf of the Count Roussillon? an I were not a very coward I'd compel it of you; but fare you well.

Execute BERTRAM and Lords.

Par. Who cannot be crushed with a plot?

First Sold. If you could find out a country where but women were that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare ye well, sir; I am for France too:
we shall speak of you there.

Exit.

Par. Yet am I thankful: if my heart were great 'Twould burst at this. Captain I'll be no more;
But I will eat and drink, and sleep as soft
As captain shall: simply the thing I am Shall make me live. Who knows himself a braggart,

Let him fear this: for it will come to pass
That every braggart shall be found an ass.
Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and, Parolles, live
Sarcast in shame! being fool'd, by foolery thrive!
There's place and means for every man alive.
I'll after them.

Exit.

Scene IV.—Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter Helena, Widow, and DIANA.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,
One of the greatest in the Christian world
Shall be my surety; 'fore whose throne 'tis needful,
Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel.
Time was, I did him a desired office,
Dear almost as his life; which gratitude
Through flinty Tartar's bosom would peep forth,
And answer, thanks. I duly am inform'd
His grace is at Marseilles; to which place
We have convenient convoy. You must know, I am supposed dead: the army breaking,
My husband bies him home; where, heaven aiding,
And by the leave of my good lord the king,
We'll be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle madam,
You never had a servant to whose trust
Your business was more welcome.

Hel. Nor you, mistress,
Ever a friend whose thoughts more truly labour
To recompense your love. Doubt not but heaven
Hath brought me up to be your daughter's dower,
As it hath fated her to be my motive
And helper to a husband. But, O strange men!
That can such sweet use make of what they hate,
When saucy trusting of the cozen'd thoughts
Defiles the pitchy night: so lust doth play
With what it loathes for that which is away.
But more of this hereafter. You, Diana,
Under my poor instructions yet must suffer
Something in my behalf.

Dia. Let death and honesty
Go with your impossions, I am yours
Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet, I pray you:
But with the word the time will bring on summer,
When briers shall have leaves as well as thorns,
And be as sweet as sharp. We must away;
Our waggon is prepar'd, and time revives us:
All's well that ends well: still the fine's the crown:
What'er the end, the end is the renown.

Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter Countess, Lafeu, and Clown.

Laf. No, no, no; your son was misled with a snip-taffeta fellow there, whose villainous saffron would have made all the unbaked and doughy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanced by the king than by that red-tailed humble-bee I speak of.

Count. I would I had not known him; it was the death of the most virtuous gentlewoman that ever nature had praise for creating. If she had partaken of my flesh, and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

Laf. 'Twas a good lady, 'twas a good lady: we may pick a thousand salates ere we light on such another herb.

Clo. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet-marjoram of the salad, or rather the herb of grace.

Laf. They are not salad-herbs, you knave; they are nose-herbs.

Clo. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir; I have not much skill in grass.

Laf. Whether 'dost thou profess thyself, a knave or a fool?

Clo. A fool, sir, at a woman's service, and a knave at a man's.

Laf. Your distinction?

Clo. I would cozen the man of his wife, and do his service.

Laf. So you were a knave at his service, indeed.

Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble, sir, to do her service.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knave and fool.

Clo. At your service.

Laf. No, no, no.

Clo. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Who's that? a Frenchman?

Clo. Faith, sir, a has an English name; but his phisny is more hotter in France than there.

Laf. What prince is that?

Clo. The black prince, sir; alias, the prince of darkness; alias, the devil.

Laf. Hold thee, there's my purse. I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou talkest of: serve him still.

Clo. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire; and the master I speak of ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the prince of the world: let his nobility remain in's court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter: some that humble themselves may; but the many will be too chill and tender, and they'll be for the flowery way that leads to the broad gate and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy ways, I begin to be afearey of thee; and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways: let horses be well looked to, without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks upon 'em, sir, they shall be jades' tricks, which are their own right by law of nature.

E. Laf. A shrewd knave and an unhappy.

Count. So he is. My lord that's gone myself much sport out of him: by his author he remains here, which he thinks is a patent of his sauciness; and, indeed, he has no pace, runs where he will.

Laf. I like him well; 'tis not amiss. And was about to tell you, since I heard of the lady's death, and that my lord your son was up his return home, I moved the king my master to speak in the behalf of my daughter; whi in the minority of them both, his majesty, of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose his highness hath promised me to do it; and stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How do your ladyship like it?

Count. With very much content, my lord; I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His highness comes post from Marselis, as of able body as when he numbered thirty: he will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Count. It rejoices me that I hope I shall find him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be here to-night: I shall beseech your lords to remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what manner I might safely be admitted.

Count. You need but plead your honours' privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold chart, but I thank my God it holds yet.

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O madam! yonder's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on 's face: whether there be scar under it or no, the velvet knows; but 'tis a goodly patch of velvet. His left cheek is a chuff of two pile and a half, and his right cheek worn bare.

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a goodly livery of honour; so belike is that.

Clo. But it is your carbonadoed face.

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you: I'll talk with the young noble soldier.

Clo. Faith, there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats and most courteous feathers, which is the head and nod at every man.

Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Marseilles. A Street.

Enter Helena, Widow, and Diana, with their Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting, day and night,
Must wear your spirits low; we cannot help it:
But since you have made the days and nights as one,
To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs,
Be bold you do so grow in my requital
As nothing can unroot you. In happy time,
Enter a Gentleman.

his man may help me to his majesty's ear, he would spend his power. God save you, sir. Gent. And you.

Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the court of France. Gent. I have been sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume, sir, that you are not fallen from the report that goes upon your goodness; and therefore, goaded with most sharp occasions, which lay nices manners by, I put you to the use of your own virtues, for the which hall continue thankful.

Gent. What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you give this poor petition to the king, and aid me with that store of power you have come into his presence. Gent. The king's not here.

Hel. Not here, sir!

Gent. Not, indeed: hence remov'd last night, and with more haste an is his use. Wel. Lord, how we lose our pains! Hel. All's well that ends well yet, though time seem so adverse and means unfruitful. o beseech you, whither is he gone?

Gent. Marry, as I take it, to Rousillon; either I am going.

Hel. I do beseech you, sir, if you are like to see the king before me, commend the paper to his gracious hand; for I presume shall render you no blame rather make you thank your pains for it. till come after you with what good speed it means will make us means.

Gent. This I'll do for you. Hel. And you shall find yourself to be well thank'd, water falls more. We must to horse again: go, provide. Exeunt.

ENÉ II.—Rousillon. The inner Court of the Countess's Palace.

Enter Clown and PAROLLES.

ar. Good Monsieur Lavache, give my Lord this letter. I have ere now, sir, been better own to you, when I have held familiarity with other clothes; but I am now, sir, muddied in one's mood, and smell somewhat of strong displeasure.

To. Truly, fortune's displeasure is but sluttish smell so strongly as thou speakest of: I will see forth eat no fish of fortune's buttering. chee, allow the wind.

t. Nay, you need not stop your nose, sir: bake but by a metaphor.

To. Indeed, sir, if your metaphor stink, I will o my nose; or against any man's metaphor. chee, get thee further.

ar. Pray you, sir, deliver me this paper.

To. Foh! prithee, stand away: a paper from mine's close-stool to give to a nobleman! oh, here he comes himself.

Enter LAFEU.

To. is a par of fortune's, sir, or of fortune's cat, not a musk-cat, that has fallen into the dean fishpond of her displeasure, and, as he's, is muddied withal. Pray you, sir, use the carps as you may, for he looks like a poor, decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knave. I do pity his distress in my smiles of comfort, and leave him to your lordship. Exit.

Par. My lord, I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratched.

Laf. And what would you have me to do? 'Tis too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you played the knave with fortune that she should scratch you, who of herself is a good lady, and would not have knaves thrive long under her? There's a quart d'oeuf for you. Let the justices make you and fortune friends; I am for other business.

Par. I beseech your honour to hear me one single word.

Laf. You beg a single penny more: come, you shall have it; save your word.

Par. My name, my good lord, is Parolles.

Laf. You beg more than one word then. Cox my passion! give me your hand. How does your drum?

Par. O my good lord! you were the first that found me.

Laf. Was I, in sooth? and I was the first that lost thee.

Par. It lies in you, my lord, to bring me in some grace, for you did bring me out. Laf. Out upon thee, knave! dost thou put upon me at once both the office of God and the devil! One brings thee in grace and the other brings thee out. Trumpets sound. The king's coming; I know by his trumpets. Sirrah, inquire further after me; I had talk of you last night: though you are a fool and a knave, you shall eat: go to, follow.

Par. I praise God for you. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Flourish. Enter King, Countess, LAFEU, Lords, Gentlemen, Guards, etc.

King. We lost a jewel of her, and our esteem Was made much poorer by it: but your son, As mad in folly, lack'd the sense to know Her estimation home.

Count. 'Tis past, my liege; And I beseech your majesty to make it Natural rebellion, done i' the blaze of youth; When oil and fire, too strong for reason's force, O'erbeams and burns on.

King. My honour'd lady, I have forgiven and forgotten all Though my revenges were high bent upon him, And watch'd the time to shoot.

Laf. This I must say,— n But first I beg my pardon,—the young lord Did to his majesty, his mother, and his lady, Offence of mighty note, but to himself The greatest wrong of all: he lost a wife Whose beauty did astonish the survey Of richest eyes, whose words all ears took captive, Whose dear perfection hearts that scorn'd to serve Humbly call'd mistress.

King. Praising what is lost Makes the remembrance dear. Well, call him hither.

We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill All repetition. Let him not ask our pardon:
The nature of his great offence is dead,
And deeper than oblivion we do bury
The incensing relics of it: let him approach,
A stranger, no offender; and inform him
So 'tis our will he should.

Gent. I shall, my liege. Exit.

King. What says he to your daughter? have you spoke?

Laf. All that he is hath reference to your highness.

King. Then shall we have a match. I have letters sent me
That set him high in fame.

Enter Bertram.

Laf. He looks well on't.

King. I am not a day of season,
For thou may'st see a sunshine and a hail
In me at once; but to the brightest beams
Distracted clouds give way: so stand thon forth;
The time is fair again.

Ber. My high-repent'd, blame,
Dear sovereign, pardon to me.

King. All is whole;
Not one word more of the consumed time.
Let 't take the instant by the forward top;
For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees
The inaudible and noiseless foot of time
Steals ere we can effect them. You remember
The daughter of this lord?

Ber. Admiringly, my liege.
At first I stuck my choice upon her, ere my heart
Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue,
Where the impression of mine eye infixing,
Contempt his scornful perspective did lend me,
Which warp'd the line of every other favour;
Scorn'd a fair colour, or express'd it stolen;
Extended or contracted all proportions
To a most hideous object: thence it came
That she, whom all men prais'd, and whom myself,
Since I have lost, have lov'd, was in mine eye
The dust that did offend it.

King. Well excuse'd:
That thou dist love her, strikes some scores away
From the great compt. But love, that comes too late;
Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried,
To the great sender turns a sour offence,
Crying, 'That's good that's gone.' Our rash faults
Make trivial price of serious things we have,
Not knowing them until we know their grave:
Oft our displeasures, to ourselves unjust,
Destroy our friends and all to weep their dust:
Our own love wakening cries to see what's done,
While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon.
Be this sweet Helen's knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous token for fair Mandrill:
The main consents are had; and here we'll stay
To see our widower's second marriage-day.

Count. Which better than the first, O dear heaven, bless!

Or, ere they meet, in me, O nature, cesse!

Laf. Come on, my son, in whom my house's name
Must be digested, give a favour from you
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,
That she may quickly come.

Bertram gives a ring.

By my old beard,
And every hair that's on't, Helen, that's dear,
Was a sweet creature; such a ring as this,
The last that e'er I took her leave at court,
I saw upon her finger.

Ber. Hers it was not.

King. Now, pray you, let me see it; for mine
While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd to't.
This ring was mine; and, when I gave it Helen
I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood
Necessitated to help, that by this token
I would relieve her. Had you that craft
Reave her
Of what should steal her most!

Ber. My gracious sovereign,
How'er it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was never hers.

Count. Son, on my life,
I have seen her wear it; and she reckon'd it
At her life's rate.

Laf. I am sure I saw her wear it.

Ber. You are deceiv'd, my lord, she never saw
In Florence was it from a casement thrown?
Was dipp'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it. Noble she was, and thou Stood engag'd: but when I had subscrib'd To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully
I could not answer in that course of honour
As she had made the overture, she cease'd
In heavy satisfaction, and would never Receive the ring again.

King. Plutus himself,
That knows the tint and multiplying medic
Hath not in nature's mystery more science
Than I have in this ring: 'twas mine, 'tis Helen's, Whoever gave it you. Then, if you know
That you are well acquainted with yourself,
Confess 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcements
You got it from her. She call'd the saints' surety,
That she would never put it from her finger
Unless she gave it to yourself in bed
Where you have never come, or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.

Ber. She never saw it.

King. Thou speakest falsely, as I love my honour;
And mak'st conjectural fears to come into mine
Which I would fain shut out. If it should prove That thou art so inhuman, 'twill not prove so;
And yet I know not: thou didst hate her dead
And she is dead; which nothing, but to close
Her eyes myself, could win me to believe,
More than to see this ring. Take it away.

Guard seize Bertram.

My fore-passed proofs, how'er the matter fall,
Shall tax my fears of little vanity,
Having vainly fear'd too little. Away with him!
We'll sift this matter further.

Ber. If you shall prove This ring was ever hers, you shall as well Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was. Exit, guards.

King. Bertram is the property of my thoughts.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Gracious sovereign,
Whether I have been to blame or no, I know n:
there's a petition from a Florentine, ho hath for four or five removes come short to tender it herself. I undertook it, 131 quished'd thereto by the fair grace and speech the poor suppliant, who by this I know here attending: her business looks in her eth an importing visage, and she told me, a sweet verbal brief, it did concern her highness with herself.

King. Upon his many protestations to marry me en his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won. Now is the Count Rouillon a widower: his vows forsworn and, my honour's paid to him, stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow to his country for justice. Grant it me, O My! in you it best lies; otherwise a seducer flowers, and a poor maid is undone.

DIANA CAPLET.

Laf. I will buy me a son-in-law in a fair, and 1 for this: I'll none of him.

King. The heavens have thought well on thee, Lafeu, bring forth this discovery. Seek these suitors: speedily and bring again the count.

Execut Gentleman and some Attendants.

I heard the life of Helen, lady, is foully snatch'd.

Count. Now, justice on the doers!

Re-enter BERTRAM, guarded.

King. I wonder, sir, sith wives are monsters to you, dthat you fly them as you swear them lordship, it you desire to marry.

Re-enter Gentleman, with Widow and DIANA.

What woman's that?

DIA. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine, lived from the ancient Caplet: suit, as I do understand, you know, therefore know how far I may be pitied. I am her mother, sir, whose age and honour suffer under this complaint we bring, both shall cease, without your remedy.

King. Come hither, count; do you know these women?

Ber. My lord, I neither can nor will deny that I know them: do they charge me further?

DIA. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?

Ber. She's none of mine, my lord.

DIA. If you shall marry, a give away this hand, and that is mine; a give away heaven's vows, and those are mine; a give away myself, which is known mine; I by vow am so embodied yours she which marries you must marry me; her both or none.

Laf. Your reputation comes too short for my lighter: you are no husband for her.

Ber. My lord, this is a fond and desperate creature, sometime I have laugh'd with: let your highness a more noble thought upon mine honour in to think that I would sink it here.

King. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend Till your deeds gain them: fairer prove your honour Than in my thought it lies.

DIA. Good my lord, Ask him upon his oath, if he does think He had not my virginity.

King. What say'st thou to her?

Ber. She's impudent, my lord; And was a common gamester to the camp.

DIA. He does me wrong, my lord; if I were so, He might have bought me at a common price: Do not believe him. O! behold this ring, Whose high respect and rich validity Did lack a parallel; yet for all that He gave it to a commoner o' the camp, If I be one.

Count. He blushes, and 'tis it: Of six preceding ancestors, that gem Conferr'd by testament to the sequent issue, Hath it been ow'd and worn. This is his wife: That ring's a thousand proofs.

King. Methought you said You saw one here in court could witness it.

DIA. I did, my lord, but loath am to produce So bad an instrument: his name's Parolles.

Laf. I saw the man to-day, if man he be.

King. Find him, and bring him hither.

Exit an Attendant.

Ber. What of him?

He's quoted for a most perfidious slave, With all the spots o' the world tax'd and debosh'd; Whose nature sickens but to speak a truth. Am I or that or this for what he'll utter, That will speak any thing?

King. She hath that ring of yours.

Ber. I think she has: certain it is I lik'd her, And boarded her i' the wanton way of youth. She knew her distance and did angle for me, Maidling my eagerness with her restraint, As all impediments in fancy's course Are motives of more fancy; and, in fine, Her infinite cunning, with her modern grace, Subdused me to her rate: she got the ring, And I had that which any inferior might At market-price have bought.

DIA. I must be patient; You, that have turn'd off a first so noble wife, May justly diet me. I pray you yet, Since you lack virtue I will lose a husband, Send for your ring; I will return it home, And give me mine again.

Ber. I have it not.

King. What ring was yours, I pray you?

DIA. Sir, much like The same upon your finger.

King. Know you this ring? this ring was his of late.

DIA. And this was it I gave him, being a-bed.

King. The story then goes false you threw it him Out of a casement.

DIA. I have spoke the truth.

Re-enter Attendant with PAROLLES.

Ber. My lord, I do confess the ring was hers.

King. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts you.

Is this the man you speak of?
Dia. Ay, my lord.
King. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true, I charge you.

Not fearing the displeasure of your master,
Which, on your just proceeding I'll keep off,
By him and by this woman here what know you?
Par. So please your majesty, my master hath been an honourable gentleman: tricks he had had in him, which gentlemen have.

King. Come, come, to the purpose: did he love this woman?
Par. Faith, sir, he did love her; but how?
King. How, I pray you?
Par. He did love her, sir, as a gentleman loves a woman.

King. How is that?
Par. He loved her, sir, and loved her not.

King. As thou art a knife, and no knife,
What an equivocal companion is this!
Par. I am a poor man, and at your majesty's command.

Laf. He's a good drum, my lord, but a naughty orator.

Dia. Do you know he promised me marriage?
Par. Faith, I know more than I'll speak.

King. But wilt thou not speak all thou knowest?
Par. Yes, so please your majesty. I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her, for indeed he was mad for her,
and talked of Satan, and of limbo, and of Furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things that would derive me ill to speak of: therefore I will not speak what I know.

King. Thou hast spoken all already, unless thou canst say they are married: but thou art too fine in thy evidence; therefore, stand aside.
This ring, you say, was yours?

Dia. Ay, my good lord.
King. Where did you buy it? or who gave it
you?
Dia. It was not given me, nor did I not buy it.
King. Who lent it you?
Dia. It was not lent me neither.
King. Where did you find it then?
Dia. I found it not.
King. If it were yours by none of all these ways,
How could you give it him?
Dia. I never gave it him.
Laf. This woman’s an easy glove, my lord: she goes off and on at pleasure.

King. This ring was mine: I gave it his first wife.
Dia. It might be yours or hers, for aught I know.

King. Take her away: I do not like her now.
To prison with her; and away with him.
Unless thou tell'st me where thou hadst this ring
Thou diest within this hour.

Dia. I'll never tell you.
King. Take her away.
Dia. I'll put in bail, my liege.
King. I think thee new some common customer.
Dia. By Jove, if ever I knew man, 'twas you.
King. Wherefore hast thou accus’d him all this while?
Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty.
He knows I am no maid, and he'll swear to 't:

I'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not.
Great king, I am no strumpet, by my life;
I am either maid, or else this old man’s wife.

King. She does abuse our ears: to pris-son with her!
Dia. Good mother, fetch my bail.

Exit Wild. Stay, royal s.

The jeweller that owes the ring is sent for,
And he shall surety me. But for this lord,
Who hath abus’d me, as he knows himself,
Though yet he never harm’d me, here I quit him.
He knows himself my bed he hath defil’d,
And at that time he got his wife with child:
Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick.
So there’s my riddle: one that’s dead is quick:
And now behold the meaning.

Re-enter Widow, with Helena.

King. Is there no eon our Beguiles the truer office of mine eyes?
Is 't real that I see?

Hel. No, my good lord;
'Tis but the shadow of a wife you see;
The name and not the thing.

Ber. Both, both. O pardon,
Hel. O my good lord! when I was like a maid,
I found you wondrous kind. There is your ring.
And, look you, here’s your letter; this it say:

When from my finger you can get this ring,
And are by me with child, etc.

This is done:
Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

Ber. If she, my liege, can make me know clearly,

I’ll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

Hel. If it appear not plain and prove untrue
Deadly divorce step between me and you!
O! my dear mother; do I see you living?

Laf. Mine eyes smell onions; I shall weep.

To PAROLLES. Good Tom Drum, lend me handkercher; so, I thank thee. Wait on a home, I’ll make sport with thee: let ten conveniences alone, they are scurvy ones.

King. Let us from point to point this

know,
To make the even truth in pleasure flow.

To DIANA. If thou best yet a fresh uncorripted flower,
Choose thou thy husband, and I’ll pay thy dow
For I can guess that by thy honest aid
Thou keepest a wife herself, thyself a maid.
Of that and all the progress, more and less,
Resolvedly more leisure shall express:
All yest seems well; and if it end so meet,
The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.

Flourish. Exe.

EPILOGUE

SPOKEN BY THE KING.

The king’s a beggar now the play is done:
All is well ended if this suit be won
That you express content; which we will pay,
With strife to please you, day exceeding day:
Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts
Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts.
WELFTH-NIGHT; OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

RSINO, Duke of Illyria.
SEBASTIAN, Brother to Viola.
NTONIO, a Sea Captain, Friend to Sebastian.
ALENTINE, Gentlemen attending on the Duke.
CURIOS,
IR TOBY BELCH, Uncle to Olivia.
IR ANDREW AGUECHEEK.

Lords, Priests, Sailors, Officers, Musicians, and other Attendants.

SCENE.—A City in Illyria; and the Sea-coast near it.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Duke’s Palace.

Duke. O! she that hath a heart of that fine frame
To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
How will she love, when the rich golden shaft
Hath kill’d the flock of all affections else
That live in her; when liver, brain, and heart,
These sovereign thrones, are all supplied, and fill’d
Her sweet perfections with one self king.
Away before me to sweet beds of flowers;
Love-thoughts lie rich when canopied with bowers.

Enter VIOLA, Captain, and Sailors.

Vio. What country, friends, is this?
Cap. This is Illyria, lady.
Vio. And what should I do in Illyria?
My brother he is in Elysium.
Perchance he is not drown’d: what think you, sailors?
Cap. It is perchance that you yourself were save’d.
Vio. O my poor brother! and so perchance may he be.
Cap. True, madam: and, to comfort you with chance,
Assure yourself, after our ship did split,
When you and those poor number saved with you
Hung on our driving boat, I saw your brother, n
Most provident in peril, bind himself,
Courage and hope both teaching him the practice,
To a strong mast that lived upon the sea;
Where, like Arion on the dolphin’s back,
I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves
So long as I could see.
Vio. For saying so there’s gold.
Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,
Where to thy speech serves for authority,
The like of him. Know’st thou this country?

271
Cap. Ay, madam, well; for I was bred and born
Not three hours’ travel from this very place.
Vio. Who governs here?
Cap. A noble duke, in nature as in name.
Vio. What is his name?
Cap. Orsino.
Vio. Orsino! I have heard my father name him:
He was a bachelor then.
Cap. And so is now, or was so very late;
For but a month ago I went from hence,
And then ‘twas fresh in murmur, as you know
What great ones do the less will prattle of,
That he did seek the love of fair Olivia.
Vio. What’s she?
Cap. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count
That died some twelvemonth since; then leaving
In the protection of his son, her brother,
Who shortly also died; for whose dear love,
They say she hath abjur’d the company
And sight of men.
Vio. O! that I serv’d that lady, and
And might not be deliver’d to the world,
Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,
What my estate is.
Cap. That were hard to compass,
Because she will admit no kind of suit,
No, not the duke’s.
Vio. There is a fair behaviour in thee, captain;
And though that nature with a beautiful wall
Doth oft close in pollution, yet of thee
I will believe thou hast a mind that suits
With this thy fair and outward character.
I prithee, and I’ll pay thee bounteously,
Conceal me what I am, and be my aid
For such disguise as haply shall become
The form of my intent. I’ll serve this duke:
Thou shalt present me as an eunuch to him:
It may be worth thy pains; for I can sing
And speak to him in many sorts of music
That will allow me very worth his service.
What else may hap to time I will commit;
Only shape thou thy silence to my wit.
Cap. Be you his eunuch, and your mute I’ll be:
When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see.
Vio. I thank thee: lead me on. Exeunt.

Scene III.—A Room in Olivia’s House.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Maria.

Sir To. What a plague means my niece, to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care’s an enemy to life.
Mar. By my troth, Sir Toby, you must come in earlier o’ nights: your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.
Sir To. Why, let her except before excepted.
Mar. Ay, but you must confine yourself within the modest limits of order.
Sir To. Confine! I’ll confine myself no finer than I am. These clothes are good enough to drink in, and so be these boots too: an they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.
Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undo you: I heard my lady talk of it yesterday; and of a foolish knight that you brought in one night
here to be her wooer.
Sir To. Who? Sir Andrew Aguecheek?
Mar. Ay, he.
Sir To. He’s as tall a man as any’s in Illyria.

Mar. What’s that to the purpose?
Sir To. Why, he has three thousand ducats a year.
Mar. Ay, but he’ll have but a year in all the ducats: he’s a very fool and a prodigal.
Sir To. Fie, that you’ll say so! he plays the viol-de-gamboes, and speaks three or five languages word for word without book, hath all the good gifts of nature.
Mar. He hath indeed, almost natural; besides that he’s a fool, he’s a great quarreller and but that he hath the gift of a coward alay the gust he hath in quarrelling, ‘tis thou among the prudent he would quickly have gift of a grave.
Sir To. By this hand, they are scoundrels, substractors that say so of him. Who are they?
Mar. They that add, moreover, he’s dr nightly in your company.
Sir To. With drinking healths to my niece,
I’ll drink to her as long as there is a passage my throat and drink in Illyria. He’s a cow and a coystriil that will not drink to my niece till his brains turn o’ the like a parish.
What, wench! Castilian vulgar! for here com
Sir Andrew Aguecheek.

Enter Sir ANDREW AGUECHEEK.

Sir And. Sir Toby Belch! how now, Sir T
Belch!
Sir To. Sweet Sir Andrew!
Sir And. Bless you, fair shrew.
Mar. And you too, sir.
Sir To. Accost, Sir Andrew, accost.
Sir And. What’s that?
Sir To. My niece’s chambermaid.
Sir And. Good Mistress Accost, I desire be acquaintance.
Mar. My name is Mary, sir.
Sir And. Good Mistress Mary Accost,— Sir To. You mistaketh, knight: ‘accost’ is f her, board her, woo her, assassil her.
Sir To. By my troth, I would not under her in this company. Is that the meaning ‘accost’?
Mar. Fare you well, gentlemen.
Sir To. An thou let part so, Sir Andrew, we thou might’st never draw sword again!
Sir And. An you part so, mistress, I would never might draw sword again. Fair lady, you think you have fools in hand?
Mar. Sir, I have not you by the hand.
Sir And. Marry, but you shall have;
here’s my hand.
Mar. Now, sir, ‘thought is free’: I pray bring your hand to the buttery-bar and drink.
Sir And. Wherefore, sweetheart? what’s your metaphor?
Mar. It’s dry, sir.
Sir And. Why, I think so: I am not such but I can keep my hand dry. But will your jest?
Mar. A dry jest, sir.
Sir And. Are you full of them?
Mar. Ay, sir, I have them at my fingers’ e marry, now I let go your hand, I am barren.
Sir To. O knight! thou lackest a cup of car when did I see thee so put down?
Sir And. Never in your life, I think; unless you see canary put me down. Methinks some-ness I have no more wit than a Christian or an dinny man has; but I am a great eater of ef, and I believe that does harm to my wit.
Sir To. No question.
Sir And. An I thought that, I'd forswear it.
I ride home to-morrow, Sir Toby.
Sir To. Pourquoi, my dear knight?
Sir And. What is 'pourquoi'? do or not do?
would I had bestowed that time in the tongues
it I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting.
I had but followed the arts.
Sir To. Then hast thou had an excellent head
Sir And. Why, would that have mended my hair?
Sir To. Fast question; for thou seest it will curl by nature.
Sir And. But it becomes me well enough, est 'n't?
Sir To. Excellent; it hangs like flax on a distaff.
I hope to see a housewife take thee between legs, and spin it off.
Sir And. Faith, I'll home to-morrow, Sir by; your niece will not be seen; or if she it's four to one she'll none of me. The unt himself here hard by woos her.
Sir To. She'll none o' the count; she'll not tch above her degree, neither in estate, years,
'vit; I have heard her swear it. Tur, there's ain, man.
Sir And. I'll stay a month longer. I am a ow o' the strangest mind i' the world; I dent in masques and revels sometimes altogether.
Sir To. Art thou good at these kickshawses,
gh?
Sir And. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever be, under the degree of my betters: and yet ill not compare with an old man.
Sir To. What is thy excellence in a galliard,
gh?
Sir And. Faith, I can cut a caper.
Sir To. And I can cut the mutton to 't.
Sir And. And I think I have the back-trick
ly as strong as any man in Illyria.
Sir To. Wherefore are these things hid?
wherefore have these gifts a curtain before 'em?
they like to take dust, like Mistress Mall's ture? why doest thou not go to church in a lad, and come home in a coranto? My very should be a jig: I would not so much as xewater but in a sink-a-pace. What dost thou um? Is it a world to hide virtues in? I did ok, by the excellent constitution of thy leg, as formed under the star of a galliard.
Sir And. Ay, 'tis strong, and it does indifferent
I in a flame-coloured stock. Shall we set out some revels?
Sir To. What shall we do else? were we not a under Taurus?
Sir And. Taurus! that's sides and heart.
Sir To. No, sir, it's legs and thighs. Let me thee caper. Ha! higher: ha, ha! excellent!

Scene V.—A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Maria and Clown.

Mar. Nay, either tell me where thou hast been, or I will not open my lips so wide as a bristle may enter in way of thy excuse. My lady will hang thee for thy absence.
Clo. Let her hang me: he that is well hanged in this world needs to fear no colours.
Mar. Make that good.
Clo. He shall see none to fear.
Mar. A good lenent answer; I can tell thee where that saying was born, of 'I fear no colours.'
Clo. Where, good Mistress Mary?
Mar. In the wars; and that may you be bold to say in your foolery.
Clo. Well, God give them wisdom that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.
Mar. Yet you will be hanged for being so long absent; or, to be turned away, is not that so good as a hanging to you?

Cl. Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage; and for turning away, let summer bear it out.

Mar. You are resolute then?

Cl. Not so neither; but I am resolved on two points.

Mar. That if one break, the other will hold; or, if both break, your gaskins fall.

Cl. Apt, in good faith; very apt. Well, go thy way: if Sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eve’s flesh as any in Illyria.

Mar. Peace, you rogue, no more o’ that. Here comes my lady: make your excuse wisely, you were best.

Exit.

Cl. Wit, an’t be thy will, put me into good fooling! Those wits that think they have thee, do very oft prove fools; and I, that am sure I lack thee, may pass for a wise man: for what says Quinnapal’s? ’Better a witty fool than a foolish wit.’

Enter OLIVIA with MALVOLIO.

God bless thee, lady!

Oli. Take the fool away.

Cl. Do you not hear, fellows? Take away the lady.

Oli. Go to, you’re a dry fool; I’ll no more of you: besides, you grow dishonest.

Cl. Two faults, madonna, that drink and good counsel will amend: for give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry; bid the dishonest man mend himself: if he mend, he is no longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the butcher mend him. Any thing that’s mended is but patched: virtue that transgresses is but patched with sin; and sin that amends is but patched with virtue. If that this simple syllogism will serve, so; if it will not, what remedy? As there is no true cuckold but calamity, so beauty is a flower. The lady bade take away the fool; therefore, I say again, take her away.

Oli. Sir, I bade them take away you.

Cl. Misprision in the highest degree! Lady, cacaullus non facit monachum: that’s as much to say as I wear not motley in my brain. Good madonna, give me leave to prove you a fool.

Oli. Can you do it?

Cl. Dexterously, good madonna.

Oli. Make your proof.

Cl. I must catechize you for it, madonna: good my mouse of virtue, answer me.

Oli. Well, sir, for want of other idleness, I’ll bide your proof.

Cl. Good madonna, why mournest thou?

Oli. Good fool, for my brother’s death.

Cl. I think his soul is in hell, madonna.

Oli. I know his soul is in heaven, fool.

Cl. The more fool, madonna, to mourn for your brother’s soul being in heaven. Take away the fool, gentlemen.

Oli. What think you of this fool, Malvolio? doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes; and shall do till the pangs of death shake him: infirmity, that decays the wise, doth ever make the better fool.

Cl. God send you, sir, a speedy infirmity, for the better increasing your folly! Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no fox, but he will pass his word for two pence that you are fool.

Oli. How say you to that, Malvolio?

Mal. I marvel your ladyship takes delight such a barren rascal: I saw him put down to other day with an ordinary fool that has more brain than a stone. Look you now, he out of his guard already: unless you laugh a minister occasion to him, he is gagged. I protest, I take these wise men, that crow so these set kind of fools, no better than the fools of

Oli. O! you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, and taste with a distempered appetite. To generous, guiltless, and of free disposition, is take those things for bird-bolts that you do cannon-bullets. There is no slander in allowed fool, though he do nothing but roar, nor no railing in a known discreet man, thou he do nothing but reprove.

Cl. Now Mercury endue thee with leisur for thou speakest well of fools!

Re-enter MARIA.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate a young gentleman much desires to speak with you.

Oli. From the Count Orsino, is it?

Mar. I know not, madam: ‘tis a fair young man, and well attended.

Oli. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Mar. Sir Toby, madam, your kinsman.

Oli. Fetch him off, I pray you: he spe nothing but madman. Pie on him!

Exit Mar.

Go you, Malvolio: if it be a suit from the count, I am sick, or not at home; what you will dismiss it.

Exit MALVOLIO.

Now you see, sir, how your fooling grows; and people dislike it.

Cl. Thou hast spoke for us, madonna, a thy eldest son should be a fool: whose skull I cram with brains! for here he comes, one thy kin has a most weak pia mater.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCHIL.

Oli. By mine honour, half drunk. What is at the gate, cousin?

Sir To. A gentleman.

Oli. A gentleman! What gentleman?

Sir To. ’Tis a gentleman here,—a plague these pickle-herring! How now, sot!

Cl. Good Sir Toby!

Oli. Cousin, cousin, how have you come early by this lethargy?

Sir To. Lechery! I defy lechery. There’s at the gate.

Oli. Ay, marry; what is he?

Sir To. Let him be the devil, an he will, I not: give me faith, say I. Well, it’s all one.

Oli. What’s a drunken man like, fool?

Cl. Like a drowned man, a fool, and a man: one draught above heat makes him a little the second mads him, and a third drowns him.

Oli. Go thou and seek the crownor, and him sit o’ my coz; for he’s in the third de of drink, he’s drowned: go, look after him.

Cl. He is but mad yet, madonna; and a fool shall look to the madman.
Re-enter Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, youd young fellow swears he'll speak with you. I told him you were sick: he takes on him to understand so much, and crefore comes to speak with you. I told him we were asleep: he seems to have a foreknowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, lady! he's rid of against any denial.

Oli. Tell him he shall not speak with me.

Mal. Ha's been told so; and he says, he'll and at your door like a sheriff's post, and be theporter to a bench, but he'll speak with you.

Oli. What kind o' man is he?

Mal. Why, of mankind.

Of what kind of man? he'll speak with a, will you or no.

Oli. Of what personage and years is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before 'tis a pod, and a codling when 'tis almost an apple: with him in standing water, between boy and in. He is very well-favoured, and he speaks by shrewishly; one would think his mother's milk were scarce out of him.

Oli. Let him approach. Call in my gentlewoman.

Enter VIOLA and Attendants.

Vio. The honourable lady of the house, which she?

Oli. Give me my veil: come, throw it o'er my sce. We'll once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Re-enter MARIA.

Oli. Give me my veil: come, throw it o'er my sce. We'll once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Vio. The honourable lady of the house, which she?

Oli. Speak to me; I shall answer for her. will you?

Vio. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty,—I pray you, tell me if this be the lady the house, for I never saw her: I would be sh to cast away my speech; for besides that I am excellently well penned, I have taken great care to con it. Good beauties, let me sustain scorn: I am very com plite, even to the least sister usage.

Oli. Whence came you, sir?

Vio. I can say little more than I have studied, that question's out of my part. Good gentle lady, give me modest assurance if you be the lady the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Oli. Are you a comedian?

Vio. No, my profound heart; and yet, by the fangs of malice I swear I am not that, if you are the lady of the house?

Oli. If I do usurp myself, I am.

Vio. Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp my part; for what is yours to bestow is not yours to reserve. But this is from my com mission: I will on with my speech in your praise, and then show you the heart of my message.

Oli. Come to what is important in 't: I forgive the praise.

Vio. Alas! I took great pains to study it, and is poetical.

Oli. It is the more like to be feign'd: I pray you keep it in. I heard you were saucy at my tes, and allowed your approach rather to under at you than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone; if you have reason, be brief: 'tis not that time of moon with me to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

Mar. Will you hoist sail, sir? here lies your way.

Vio. No, good swabber; I am to hull here a little longer. Some mollification for your giant, sweet lady.

Oli. Tell me your mind.

Vio. I am a messenger.

Oli. Sure, you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the courtesy of it is so fearful. Speak your office.

Vio. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no overtakes of war, no taxation of homage: I hold the olive in my hand; my words are as full of peace as matter.

Oli. Yet you began rudely. What are you? what would you?

Vio. The rudeness that hath appeared in me have I learned from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maidenhead; to your ears, divinity; to any other's, profanation.

Oli. Give us the place alone: we will hear this divinity. Exeunt MARIA and Attendants.

Now, sir; what is your text?

Vio. Most sweet lady,—

Oli. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said of it. Where lies your text?

Vio. In Orsino's bosom.

Oli. In his bosom! In what chapter of his bosom?

Vio. To answer by the method, in the first of his heart.

Oli. O! I have read it: it is heresy. Have you no more to say?

Vio. Good madam, let me see your face.

Oli. Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? You are now out of your text: but we will draw the curtain and show you the picture. Look you, sir; such a one I was this present: is 't not well done?

Unveiling.

Vio. Excellently done, if God did all.

Oli. 'Tis in grain, sir; 'twill endure wind and weather.

Vio. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on: Lady, you are the cruell'st she alive,

If you will lead these graces to the grave And leave the world no copy;

Oli. O! sir, I will not be so hard-hearted; I will give out divers schedules of my beauty: it shall be inventoried, and every particle and utensil labelled to my will; as, Item, Two lips indifferent red; Item, Two grey eyes with lids to them; Item, One neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?

Vio. I see you what you are: you are too proud; But, if you were the devil, you are fair. My lord and master loves you: O! such love Could be but recomposed, though you were crown'd.

The nonpareil of beauty.

Oli. How does he love me?

Vio. With adorations, with fertile tears, With groans that thunder love, with sighs of fire.

Oli. Your lord does know my mind; I cannot love him:

Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him noble, Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth;
In voices well div'd, free, learn'd, and valiant;
And in dimension and the shape of nature
A gracious person; but yet I cannot love him:
He might have took his answer long ago.

_Vio._ If I did love you in my master's flame,
With such a suffering, such a deadly life,
In your denial I would find no sense;
I would not understand it.

_Oli._ Why, what would you?

_Vio._ Make me a willow cabin at your gate,
And call upon my soul within the house;
Write loyal cantons of contemned love,
And sing them loud even in the dead of night;
Holla your name to the reverberate hills,
And make the babbling gossip of the air
Cry out 'Olivia!'
_Oli._ You should not rest Between the elements of air and earth,
But you should pity me.

_Vio._ You might do much.
What is your parentage?

_Oli._ Get you to your lord:
I cannot love him. Let him send no more,
Unless, perchance, you come to me again,
To tell me how he takes it.
_Fare you well:
I thank you for your pains: spend this for me.

_Vio._ I am no feec'd post, lady; keep your purse:
My master, not myself, lacks recompense,
Love make his heart of flint that you shall love,
And let your favours, like my master's, be
Plac'd in contempt!

_Exeunt._

_YOU._ What is your parentage?'

_Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:
I am a gentleman._

_Oli._ I cannot love him. Let him send no more,
Unless, perchance, you come to me again,
To tell me how he takes it.
_Fare you well:
I thank you for your pains: spend this for me.

_Vio._ I am no fee'd post, lady; keep your purse:
My master, not myself, lacks recompense,
Love make his heart of flint that you shall love,
And let your favours, like my master's, be
Plac'd in contempt!

_Exeunt._

_Mal._

_Here, madam, at your service._

_Oli._ Run after that same peevish messenger,
The count's man: he left this ring behind him,
Would I or not: tell him I'll none of it.
_Desire him not to flatter with his lord,
Nor hold him up with hopes: I am not for him.
If that the youth will come this way to-morrow,
I'll give him reasons for 't.
_Hie thee, Malvolio._

_Malg._

_Oli._ I do know not what, and fear to find
Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind.

_Fate, show thy force: ourselves we do not owe;
What is decreed must be, and be this so._

_Exeunt._

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Sea-coast.

_Enter Antonio and Sebastian._

_Ant._ Will you stay no longer? nor will you not that I go with you?

_Seb._ By your patience, no.  My stars shine darkly over me; the malignity of my fate might, perhaps, distemper yours; therefore shall crave of you your leave that I may be my evils alone.  It were a bad recom pense your love to lay any of them on you.

_Ant._ Let me yet know of you whether you are bound.

_Seb._ No, sooth, sir: my determinate voyage more extravagant.  But I perceive in you excellent a touch of modesty that you will extort from me what I am willing to keep:
therefore it charges me in manners the rite to express myself.  You must know of me that Antonio, my name is Sebastian, which I call Roderigo.  My father was that Sebastian
Messaline, whom I know you have heard.
He left behind him myself and a sister, be born in an hour; if the heavens had been pleased would we had so ended!  but you, sir, altered that; for some hour before you took me from the breach of the sea was my sister drowned.

_Ant._ Alas the day!

_Seb._ A lady, sir, though it was said she my remembered me, was yet of many accounted be tiful, but, though I could not with such easi able wonder overfar believe that, yet thus:
I will boldly publish her: she bore a mind to envy could not but call fair.  She is drown already, sir, with salt water, though I seem drown her remembrance again with more.

_Ant._ Pardon me, sir, your bad entertainment.

_Seb._ O good Antonio!  I forgive me your trouble.
_Ant._ If you will not murder me for my lord,
let me be your servant.

_Seb._ If you will not undo what you have done that is, kill him whom you have recovered, des it not.  Fare ye well at once: my bosom is fi of kindness; and I am yet so near the man my mother, that upon the least occasion to mine eyes will tell tales of me.  I am bound the Count Orsino's court: farewell._

_Exeunt._

_Ant._ The gentleness of all the gods go with thee!
I have many enemies in Orsino's court,
Else would I very shortly see thee there;
But, come what may, I do adore thee so,
That danger shall seem sport, and I will go.

SCENE II.—A Street.

_Enter Viola._

_Mal._ Were not you even now with a Countess Olivia?

_Vio._ Even now, sir; on a moderate pace have since arrived but hither.

_Mal._ She returns this ring to you, sir;
I might have saved me my pains, to have taken away yourself.  She adds, moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance she will none of him.  And one thing more that you be never so hardy to come again in affairs, unless it be to report your lord's talk of this.  Receive it so.

_Vio._ She took the ring of me; I'll none of _Mal._ Come, sir, you peevishly threw it to me;

and her will is it should be so returned: it is worth stooping for, there it lies in your eye I not, be it his that finds it.

_Vio._ I left no ring with her: what means this lady?
TWELFTH-NIGHT; OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

SCENE III. — A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Aguecheek.

Sir To. Approach, Sir Andrew: not to be bed after midnight is to be up betimes; and vanda surgere, thou knowest.

Sir And. Nay, by my troth, I know not; but now, to be up late is to be up late.

Sir To. A false conclusion; I hate it as an filled can. To be up after midnight and to bed then, is early; so that to go to bed midnight is to go to bed betimes. Does our life consist of the four elements?

Sir And. Faith, so they say; but I think it Sir To. Thou'rt a scholar; let us therefore and drink. Marian, I say! a stoup of wine! their consists of eating and drinking.

Enter Clown.

Sir And. Here comes the fool, i' faith.

Clo. How now, my hearts! Did you ever the picture of 'we three'?

Sir To. Welcome, ass. Now let's have a catch.

Sir And. By my troth, the fool has an excellent cast. I had rather than forty shilling's I had a leg, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious oling last night, when thou spokest of Pigromyntus, of the Vapians passing the equinoctial Quecus; 'twas very good, i' faith. I sent thee sixpence for thy leman: hadst it?

Clo. I did impetico thy gratility, for Malvolio's nose is no whistpock: my lady has a bite hand, and the Myrnuinons are no bottle- houses.

Sir And. Excellent! Why, this is the best oling, when all is done. Now, a song.

Sir To. Come on; there is sixpence for you: t's have a song.

Sir And. There's a testril of me too: if one night give a—

Clo. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life?

Sir To. A love-song, a love-song.

Sir And. Ay, ay; I care not for good life.

Clo. O mistress mine! where are you running? O! stay and hear; your true love's a coming, That can sing both high and low.

Trip no further, pretty sweeting; Journeys end in lovers meeting, Every wise man's son doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, i' faith.

Sir To. Good, good.

Clo. What is love? 'tis not hereafter; Present mirth hath present laughter; What's to come is still unsure; In delay there lies no plenty; Then come kiss me, sweet-and-twenty, Youth's a stuff will not endure.

Sir And. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.

Sir To. A contagious breath.

Sir And. Very sweet and contagious, i' faith.

Sir To. To hear by the nose, it is dulceit in contagion. But shall we make the welkin dance indeed? shall we rouse the night-owl in a catch that will draw three souls out of one weaver? shall we do that?

Sir And. An you love me, let's do't: I am dog at a catch.

Clo. By' r lady, sir, and some dogs will catch well.

Sir And. Most certain. Let our catch be, 'Thou knave.'

Clo. 'Hold thy peace, thou knave,' knight? I shall be constrained in't to call thee knave, knight.

Sir And. 'Tis not the first time I have constrained one to call me knave. Begin, fool: it begins 'Hold thy peace.'

Clo. I shall never begin if I hold my peace.

Sir And. Good, i' faith. Come, begin.

They sing a catch.

Enter Maria.

Mar. What a caterwauling do you keep here! If my lady have not called up her steward Malvolio and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Sir To. My lady's a Catalan; we are politicians; Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsay, and 'Three merry men be we.' Am not I consanguineous am I not of her blood? Tillyvally; lady!

There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady!

Clo. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

Sir And. Ay, he does well enough if he be disposed, and so do I too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

Sir To. O! the twelfth day of December.—

Mar. For the love o' God, peace!

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. My masters, are you mad? or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to gabble like tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an alehouse of my lady's house, that ye squeak out your coziers' catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in you?

Sir To. We did keep time, sir, in our catches. Sneeck up!

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My lady bade me tell you, that, though she harbours you as her kinsman, she's nothing allied to your disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemeanours, you are welcome to the house; if not, an it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

Sir To. Farewell, dear heart, since I must needs be gone.

Mar. Nay, good Sir Toby,

Clo. His eyes do show his days are almost done.

Mal. Is't even so?

Sir To. But I will never die.

Clo. Sir Toby, there you lie.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

Sir To. Shall I bid him go?

Clo. What an if you do?

Sir To. Shall I bid him go, and spare not?

Clo. O! no, no, no, no, you dare not.

Sir To. Out o' time! Sir, ye lie. Art any more than a steward? Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?

Clo. Yes, by Saint Anne; and ginger shall be hot i' the mouth too.

Sir To. Thou 'rt i' the right. Go, sir, rub your chain with crumbs. A stoup of wine, Maria!

Mal. Mistress Mary, if you prised my lady's favour at any thing more than contempt, you would not give means for this uncivil rule: she shall know of it, by this hand.

Exit. 119

Mar. Go shake your ears.

Sir And. 'Twere as good a deed as to drink when a man's a-hungry, to challenge him to the field, and then to break promise with him and make a fool of him.

Sir To. Do't, knight: I'll write thee a challenge; or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet Sir Toby, be patient to-night: since the youth of the count's to-day with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For Monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: if I do not gull him into a swallow, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed. I know I can do it.

Sir To. Possess us, possess us: tell us something of him.

Mar. Marry, sir, sometimes he is a kind of puritan.

Sir And. O! if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog.

Sir To. What, for being a puritan? thy exquisite reason, dear knight?

Sir And. I have no exquisite reason for 't, but I have reason good enough.

Mar. The devil a puritan that he is, or any thing constantly but a time-pleaser; an affectioned ass, that cons state without book, and utters it by great swaths: the best persuaded of himself; so crammed, as he thinks, with excellencies, that it is his ground of faith that that look on him love him; and on that vice him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

Sir To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obsequious epistles of love; wherein, by the colour of hair, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the expression of his eye, forehead, a complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personified. I can write very like my lady's niece: on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands.

Sir To. Excellent! I smell a device.

Sir And. I have 't in my nose too.

Sir To. He shall think, by the letters I shall send, that they come from my niece, and that she's in love with him.

Mar. My purpose is, indeed, a horse of the noble colour.

Sir And. And your horse now would make him an ass.

Mar. Ass, I doubt not.

Sir And. O! 'twill be admirable.

Mar. Sport royal, I warrant you: I know physic will work with him. I will plant two, and let the fool make a third, whereof shall find the letter: observe his construction of it. For this night, to bed, and dream on event. Farewell.

Exit.

Sir To. Good night, Penthesilea.

Sir And. Before me, she's a good wench.

Sir To. She's a beagle, true-bred, and one that adores me: what o' that?

Sir And. I was adored once too.

Sir To. Let's to bed, knight. Thou hadst not send for more money.

Sir And. If I cannot recover your niece, I am a fool in way out.

Sir To. Send for money, knight: if thou hast her not i' the end, call me cut.

Sir And. If I do not, never trust me, or it how you will.

Sir To. Come, come: I'll go burn some sachet's too late to go to bed now. Come, knight, come, knight.

Scene IV.—A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, CURIO, and others.

Now, good Cesario, but that piece of song, That old and antique song we heard last night; Methought it did relieve my passion much, More than light airs and recomposed terms Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times: Come; but one verse.

Cur. He is not here, so please your lordship, that should sing it.

Duke. Who was it?

Cur. Feste, the jester, my lord: a fool to the Lady Olivia's father took much delight. He is about the house.

Duke. Seek him out, and play the tune while.

Exit CURIO.

Come hither, boy: if ever thou shalt love, In the sweet pangs of it remember me; For such as I am all true lovers are:
and the tailor make thy doublet of changeable tafta, for thy mind is a very opal! I would have mon of such constancy put to sea, that their business might be every thing and their intent everywhere; for that's if that always makes a good voyage of nothing. Farewell. Exit. 80

Duke. Let all the rest give place.

Exeunt Curio and Attendants.

Once more, Cesario, Get thee to yond same sovereign cruelty; Tell her, my love, more noble than the world, Prizes not quantity of dirty lands; The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her, Tell her, I hold as giddily as fortune; But 'tis that miracle and queen of gems That nature pranks her in attracts my soul. Vio. But if she cannot love you, sir? Duke. I cannot be so answer'd. Vio. Sooth, but you must. 90 Say that some lady, as perhaps there is, Hath for your love as great a pang of heart As you have for Olivia; you cannot love her; You tell her so; must she not then be answer'd? Duke. There is no woman's sides Can bide the beating of so strong a passion As love doth give my heart; no woman's heart So big, to hold so much; they lack retention. Alas! their love may be call'd appetite, No motion of the liver, but the palate, That suffer surfeit, cloyment, and revolt; But mine is all as hungry as the sea, And can digest as much. Make no compare Between that love a woman can bear me And that I owe Olivia.

Vio. Ay, but I know— Duke. What dost thou know? Vio. Too well what love women to men may owe:

In faith, they are as true of heart as we. My father had a daughter lov'd a man, As it might be, perhaps, were I a woman, I should your lordship.

Duke. And what's her history? Vio. A blank, my lord. She never told her love,

But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud, Feed on her damask cheek: she pin'd in thought, And with a green and yellow melancholy, She sat like Patience on a monument, Smiling at grief. Was not this love indeed? We men may say more, swear more; but indeed Our shows are more than will, for still we prove Much in our vows, but little in our love. 120 Duke. But didst thy sister of her love, my boy? Vio. I am all the daughters of my father's house, And all the brothers too; and yet I know not. Sir, shall I to this lady? Duke. Ay, that's the theme. To her in haste; give her this jewel; say My love can give no place, bide no denay.

Exeunt.

SCENE V.—OLIVIA'S Garden.

Enter Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Aguecheek, and Fabian.

Sir To. Come thy ways, Signior Fabian. Fub. Nay, I 'll come: if I lose a scruple of this sport, let me be boiled to death with melancholy.
Sir To. Would'st thou not be glad to have the nigardy rascally sheep-biter come by some notable shame?

Fab. I would exult, man : you know he brought me out o' favour with my lady about a bear-baiting here.

Sir To. To anger him we'll have the bear again, and we will fool him black and blue ; shall we not, Sir Andrew ?

Sir And. An we do not, it is pity of our lives.

Enter MARIA.

Sir To. Here comes the little villain. How now, my metal of India !

Mar. Get ye all three into the box-tree. Malvolio's coming down this walk: he has been yonder i' the sun, practising behaviour to his own shadow, this half hour: Observe him, for the love of mockery ; for I know this letter will make a contemplative idiot of him. Close, in the name of jesting! Lie thou there:

Throws down a letter.

for here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling.

Exit.

Enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. 'Tis but fortune; all is fortune. Maria once told me she did affect me; and I have heard herself come thus near, that, should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides, she uses me with a more exalted respect than any one else that follows her. What should I think on 't?

Sir To. Here's an overweening rogue!

Fab. O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him: how he jets under his advanced plumes.

Sir And. 'Slight, I could so beat the rogue!

Sir To. Peace! I say.

Mal. To be Count Malvolio!

Sir To. Ah, rogue!

Sir And. Pistol him, pistol him.

Sir To. Peace! peace!

Mal. There is example for 't: the lady of the Strachy married the yeoman of the wardrobe.

Sir And. Fie on him, Jezebel!

Fab. O, peace! now he's deeply in; look how imagination blows him.

Mal. Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state,—

Sir To. O! for a stone-bow, to hit him in the eye.

Mal. Calling my officers about me, in my branched velvet gown; having come from a day-bed, where I have left Olivia sleeping,—

Sir To. Fire and brimstone!

Fab. O, peace! peace!

Mal. And then to have the humour of state; and after a demure travel of regard, telling them I know my place, as I would they should do theirs, to ask for my kinsman Toby,—

Sir To. Bolts and shackles!

Fab. O, peace, peace, peace! now, now.

Mal. Seven of my people, with an obdient start, make out for him. I frown the while; and perchance wind up my watch, or play with my—some rich jewel. Toby approaches; court'sies there to me,—

Sir To. Shall this fellow live?

Fab. Though our silence be drawn from with cars, yet peace!

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus, quenching my familiar smile with an austere regal of control,—

Sir To. And does not Toby take you a bl— o' the lips then?

Mal. Saying, 'Cousin Toby, my fortune having cast me on your niece give me the prerogative of speech,—

Sir To. What, what?

Mal. 'You must amend your drunkenness.

Sir To. Out, scab!

Fab. Nay, patience, or we break the sinew of our plot.

Mal. 'Besides, you waste the treasure of ye time with a foolish knight,—

Sir And. That's me, I warrant you.

Mal. 'One Sir Andrew,'—

Sir And. I knew 'twas I; for many do me fool.

Mal. Seeing the letter. What employment ha we here?

Fab. Now is the woodcock near the gin.

Sir To. O, peace! and the spirit of humor intimate reading aloud to him!

Mal. Taking up the letter. By my life, this my lady's hand! these be her very C's, her U's and her T's; and thus makes she her great I. It is, in contempt of question, her hand.

Sir And. Her C's, her U's, and her T's: what that?

Mal. To the unknown beloved, this, and my go wishes:

Her very phrases! By your leave, wax. So! and the impressure her Lucee, with whil she uses to seal: 'tis my lady. To who should this be?

Fab. This wins him, liver and all.

Mal. 'I know I love;'

But who?

Lips, do not move:

No man must know.

'No man must know.' What follows? t numbers altered! 'No man must know.' this should be thee, Malvolio?

Sir To. Marry, hang thee, brock!

Mal. I may command where I adore;

But silence, like a Lucee knife,

With bloodless stroke my heart doth go

M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.

Fab. A fustin' riddle!

Sir To. Excellent wench, say I.

Mal. 'M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.' Not but first, let me see, let me see.

Fab. What a dish o' poison has she dressed him

Sir To. And with what wing the staniel chee at it!

Mal. 'I may command where I adore.' Wh she may command me: I serve her; she is a lady. Why, this is evident to any formal cap city; there is no obstruction in this. And I end, what should that alphabetical posit portend? If I could make that resemble some thing in me.—Softly! M, O, A, I,—

Sir To. O! ay, make up that: he is now at cold scent.
TWELFTH-NIGHT; OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

Scene I.—Olivia’s Garden.

Enter Viola, and Clown with a tabor.

Viola. Save thee, friend, and thy music. Dost thou live by thy tabor?

Clown. No, sir; I live by the church.

Viola. Art thou a churchman?

Clown. No such matter, sir; I do live by the church; for I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the church.

Viola. So thou mayest say, the king lies by a beggar, if a beggar dwell near him; or, the church stands by thy tabor, if thy tabor stand by the church.

Clown. You have said, sir. To see this age! A sentence is but a cheveril glove to a good wit: how quickly the wrong side may be turned outward!

Viola. Nay, that’s certain: they that dally nicely with words may quickly make them wanton.

Clown. I would therefore my sister had had no name, sir.

Viola. Why, man?

Clown. Why, sir, her name’s a word; and to dally with that word might make my sister wanton. But indeed words are very rascals since bonds disgraced them.

Viola. Thy reason, man?

Clown. Troth, sir, I can yield you none without words; and words are grown so false, I am loath to prove reason with them.

Viola. I warrant thou art a merry fellow, and carest for nothing.

Clown. Not so, sir, I do care for something; but in my conscience, sir, I do not care for you: if that be to care for nothing, sir, I would it would make you invisible.

Viola. Art not thou the Lady Olivia’s fool?

Clown. No, indeed, sir; the Lady Olivia has no folly: she will keep no fool, sir, till she be married; and fools are as like husbands as pilchards are to herrings, the husband’s the bigger.
I am indeed not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the Count Orsino's. Clo. Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb like the sun; it shines everywhere. I would be sorry, sir, but the fool should be as oft with your master as with my mistress. I think I saw your wisdom there.

Vio. Nay, an thou pass upon me, I'll no more with thee. Hold, there's expenses for thee.

Clo. Now Jove, in his next commodity of hair, send thee a beard!

Vio. By my troth, I'll tell thee, I am almost sick for one, though I would not have it grow on my chin. Is thy lady within? Clo. Would not a pair of these have bred, sir? Vio. Yes, being kept together and put to use.

Clo. I would play Lord Pandaros of Phrygia, sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troilus.

Vio. I understand you, sir; 'tis well begged. Clo. The matter, I hope, is not great, sir, begging but a beggar: Cressida was a beggar. My lady is within, sir, I will construe to them whence you come; who you are and what you would are out of myWelkin; I might say 'element,' but the word is overworn. Exit.

Vio. This fellow's wise enough to play the fool, and to do that well craves a kind of wit: He must observe their mood on whom he jests, the quality of persons, and the time, and, like the haggard, check at every feather that comes before his eye. This is a practice as full of labour as a wise man's art; For folly that he wisely shows is fit; But wise men, folly-fall'n, quite taint their wit.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Aguecheek.

Sir To. Save you, gentleman.

Vio. And you, sir.

Sir And. Dieux vous garde, monsieur.

Vio. Et vous aussi; votre seurviceur.

Sir And. I hope, sir, you are; and I am yours.

Sir To. Will you encounter the house? my niece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your niece, sir: I mean, she is the list of my voyage.

Sir To. Taste your legs, sir; put them to motion.

Vio. My legs do better understand me, sir, than I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legs.

Sir To. I mean, to go, sir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gait and entrance. But we are prevented.

Enter Olivia and Maria.

Most excellent accomplished lady, the heavens rain odours on you! Sir And. That youth 's a rare courtier. 'Rain odours!' well.

Vio. My matter hath no voice, lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear.

Sir And. 'Odours,' 'pregnant,' and 'vouchsafed': I'll get 'em all three all ready.

Oli. Let the garden door be shut, and leave me to my hearing.

Execute Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Maria.

Give me your hand, sir.

Vio. My duty, madam, and most hum service.

Oli. What is your name?

Vio. Cesario is your servant's name, fair princess.

Oli. My servant, sir! 'Twas never merry wo Since lowly feigning was call'd compliment. You're servant to the Count Orsino, youth.

Vio. And he is yours, and his most needs yours: Your servant's servant is your servant, madam.

Oli. For him, I think not on him: for thoughts, Would they were blanks rather than fill'd with me!

Vio. Madam, I come to what you gen thoughts

On his behalf.

Oli. O! by your leave, I pray you. I bade you never speak again of him:

But, would you undertake another suit, I had rather hear you to solicit that Than music from the spheres.

Vio. Dear lady,—

Oli. Give me leave, beseech you. I did see After the last enchantment you did here, A ring in chase of you; so did I abuse Myself, my servant, and, I fear me, you: Under your hard construction must I sit, To force that on you, in a shameful cunning, Which you knew none of yours: what might you think!

Have you not set mine honour at the stake, And baited it with all the unmuzzled though That tyrannous heart can think? To one your receiving Enough is shown; a cypress, not a bosom, Hideth my heart. So, let me hear you speak.

Vio. I pity you.

Oli. That's a degree to love.

Vio. No, not a grize; for 'tis a vulgar proof That very oft we pity enemies. Oli. Why, then, methinks 'tis time to sm again.

O world! how apt the poor are to be proud. If one should be a prey, how much the better To fall before the lion than the wolf!

Clock struck.

The clock upbraids me with the waste of time. Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you And yet, when wit and youth is come to harvest Your wife is like to reap a proper man. There lies your way, due west.

Vio. Then westward-h

Grace and good disposition attend your ladyship! You'll nothing, madam, to my lord by me?

Oli. Stay.

I prithee, tell me what thou think'st of me. Vio. That you do think you are not what ye are.

Oli. If I think so, I think the same of you. Vio. Then think you right: I am not what I am. Oli. I would you were as I would have you be. Vio. Would it be better, madam, than I am I wish it might, for now I am your fool.

Oli. O! what a deal of scorn looks beautiful In the contempt and anger of his lip. A murderous guile shows not itself more soon Than love that would seem hid; love's night soon.
TWELFTH-NIGHT; OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

SCENE I.—A Room in OLIVIA’s House.

Enter SIR TOBY BELCH, SIR ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK, and FABIAN.

SIR AND. No, faith, I’ll not stay a jot longer.
SIR TO. Thy reason, dear venom; give thy reason.

FAB. You must needs yield your reason, Sir Andrew.

SIR AND. Marry, saw you my niece do more favours to the count’s serving-man than ever he bestowed upon me; I saw’t in the orchard.
SIR AND. Did she see thee the while, old boy? I’ll tell you that.
FAB. As plain as I see you now.

FAB. This was a great argument of love in er toward you.

SIR AND. Slight! will you make an ass o’ me? I will prove it legitimate, sir, upon the oaths of judgment and reason.

SIR TO. And they have been grand-jurymen since before Noah was a sailor.

FAB. She did show favour to the youth in our sight only to exasperate you, to awake your drowsome valour, to put fire in your heart, and brimstone in your liver. You should then have accosted her, and with some excellent jests, re-new from the mint, you should have bunged her youth into dummyness. This was looked for your hand, and this was balked: the double ill of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sailed into the north of my ady’s opinion; where you will hang like an icicle on a Dutchman’s beard, unless you do redeem it by some laudable attempt, either of alour or policy.

SIR AND. An’t be any way, it must be with alour, for policy I hate: I had as lief be a brownist as a politician.

SIR TO. Why then, build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valour: challenge me the count’s oath to fight with him; hurt him in eleven places: my niece shall take note of it; and assure thyself, there is no love-broker in the world can more prevail in man’s commendation with woman than report of valour.

FAB. There is no way but this, Sir Andrew.

SIR TO. Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?

SIR AND. Where shall I find you?

SIR TO. We’ll call thee at the cubiculo: go. Exit SIR ANDREW.

FAB. This is a dear manakin to you, Sir Toby.

SIR TO. I have been dear to him, bid; some two thousand strong, or so.

FAB. We shall have a rare letter from him; but you’ll not deliver it!

SIR TO. Never trust me then; and by all means stir on the youth to an answer. I think oxen and winnropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were opened, and you find so much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a flea, I’ll eat the rest of the anatomy.

FAB. And his opposite, the youth, bears in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter MARIA.

SIR TO, Look, where the youngest wren of nine comes.

MAR. If you desire the spleen, and will laugh yourselves into stitches, follow me. Yond gall Malvolio is turned heathen, a very renegado; for there is no Christian, that means to be saved by believing rightly, can ever believe such impossible passages of grossness. He’s in yellow stockings.

SIR TO. And cross-gartered?

MAR. Most villanously; like a pedant that keeps a school i’ the church. I have dogged him like his murderer. He does obey every point of the letter that I dropped to betray him: he does smile his face into more lines than are in the new map with the augmentation of the Indies. You have not seen such a thing as ’tis; I can hardly forbear hurling things at him. I know my lady will strike him: if she do, he’ll smile and take ’t for a great favour.

SIR TO. Come, bring us, bring us where he is.

Exit.

SCENE III.—A Street.

Enter SEBASTIAN and ANTONIO.

SEB. I would not by my will have troubled you; but since you make your pleasure of your pains, I will no further chide you.

ANT. I could not stay behind you: my desire, more sharp than filed steel, did spur me forth; and not all love to see you, though so much as might have drawn one to a longer voyage, but jealousy what might befall your travel, being skilless in these parts; which to a stranger, Unguided and unfriended, often prove rough and unhospitable: my willing love, the rather by these arguments of fear, set forth in your pursuit.

SEB. My kind Antonio, I can no other answer make but thanks, and thanks, and ever thanks; and oft good turns are shuffled off with such uncurrent pay: but, were my worth, as is my conscience, firm,
You should find better dealing. What's to do?
Shall we go see the relics of this town?

Ant. To-morrow, sir: best first go see your lodging.

Seb. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night.
I pray you, let us satisfy our eyes
With the memorials and the things of fame
That do renown this city.

Ant. Would you 'd pardon me;
I do not without danger walk these streets:
Once, in a sea-fight 'gainst the count his galleys,
I did some service; of such note indeed,
That were I ta'en here it would scarce be answer'd.

Seb. Belike you slew great number of his people.

Ant. The offence is not of such a bloody nature,
Albeit the quality of the time and quarrel
Might well have given us bloody argument.
It might have since been answer'd in repaying
What we took from them; which, for traffic's sake,
Most of our city did: only myself stood out;
For which, if I be lapsed in this place,
I shall pay dear.

Seb. Do not then walk too open.

Ant. It doth not fit me. Hold, sir; here's my purse.
In the south suburbs, at the Elephant,
Is best to lodge: I will bespeak our diet,
Whilst you beguile the time and feed your knowledge
With viewing of the town: there shall you have me.

Seb. Why I your purse?
Ant. Haply your eye shall light upon some toy
You have desire to purchase; and your store,
I think, is not for idle markets, sir.

Seb. I'll be your purse-bearer and leave you for an hour.

Ant. To the Elephant.

Scene IV.—Olivia's Garden.

Enter Olivia and Maria.

Oli. I have sent after him: he says he'll come;
How shall I feast him? what bestow of him?
For youth is bought more oft than begg'd or borrow'd.
I speak too loud.
Where is Malvolio? he is sad, and civil,
And suits well for a servant with my fortunes:
Where is Malvolio?

Mar. He's coming, madam; but in very strange manner.
He is sure possessed, madam.

Oli. Why, what's the matter? does he rave?

Mar. No, madam; he does nothing but smile:
your ladyship were best to have some guard about you if he come, for sure the man is tainted in 's wits.

I am as mad as he,
If sad and merry madness equal be.

Re-enter Maria, with Malvolio.

How now, Malvolio!

Oli. Smiles thou?

I sent for thee upon a sad occasion.

Mar. Sad, lady! I could be sad: this does make some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gartering; but what of that? if it please the eye one, it is with me as the very true somnabulist 'Please one, and please all.'

Oli. Why, how dost thou, man! what is the matter with thee?

Mar. Not black in my mind, though yellow my manners. It did come to his hands, and commands shall be executed: I think we do know the sweet Roman hand.

Oli. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?

Mar. To bed! ay, sweetheart, and I'll go to thee.

Oli. God comfort thee! Why dost thou speak so and kiss thy hand so oft?

Mar. How do you, Malvolio?

Oli. At your request! Yes; nightingale answer daws.

Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady?

Mar. 'Be not afraid of greatness;' 'twas writ:

Oli. What meanest thou by that, Malvolio?

Mar. 'Some are born great,'—

Oli. Ha!

Mar. 'Some achieve greatness,'—

Oli. What sayest thou?

Mar. 'And some have greatness thrust up them.'

Oli. Heaven restore thee!

Mar. 'Remember who commended thy yellow stockings,'—

Oli. Thy yellow stockings!

Mar. 'And wished to see thee cross-gartered

Oli. Cross-gartered!

Mar. 'Go to, thou art made, if thou desire to be so;—'

Oli. Am I made?

Mar. 'If not, let me see thee a servant still.

Oli. Why, this is very middsummer madness

Enter Servant.

Serv. Madam, the young gentleman of Count Orsino's is returned. I could hard entreat him back: he attends your ladyship's pleasure.

Oli. I'll come to him. Exit Servant

Good Maria, let this fellow be looked.

Where's my cousin Toby? Let some of you people have a special care of him: I would have him miscarry for the half of my dowry.

Exit Olivia and Maria.

Mar. O, ho! do you come near me now? worse man than Sir Toby to look to! Till concurs directly with the letter: she sends him on purpose that I may appear stubborn to him for she incites me to that in the letter. 'Cathy humble slough,' says she; 'be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants; let thy tongue tang with arguments of state; put thyself in the trick of singularity;' and consequently set down the manner how; as, a sad face, a reverent carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some note, and so forth. I have limed her; but is Jove's doing, and Jove make me thankful.

And when she went away now, 'Let this fellow be looked to:' fellow! not Malvolio, nor aft my degree, but fellow. Why, every thing adheres together, that no dram of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredible or unsafe circumstance. What can be said.
something that can be can come between me and a full prospect of my hopes. Well, Jove, not is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Reenter MARIA, with Sir Toby Belch and FABIAN.

Sir To. Which way is he, in the name of neutrality? If all the devils of hell be drawn in ttle, and Legion himself possessed him, yet I'll speak to him.

Fab. Here he is, here he is. How's it with manifest, sir? how's it with you, man?

Mal. Go off; I discard you: let me enjoy my ivate; go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within me! did not I tell you? Sir Toby, my lady says you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah, ha! does she so?

Sir To. Go, go, to: peace! peace! we must al gently with him; let me alone. How do, Malvolio? how's it with you? What, man! fly the devil: consider, he's an enemy to ankird.

Mal. Do you know what you say?

Mar. Lu you! an you speak ill of the devil, ow he takes it at heart. Pray God, he be notwitched!

Fab. Carry his water to the wise-woman.

Mar. Marry, and it shall be done to morrow morning, if I live. My lady would not lose him or more than I'll say.

Mal. How now, mistress!

Mar. O Lord!

Sir To. Prithchee, hold thy peace; this is not no way: do you not see you move him? let he alone with him.

Fab. No way but gentleness; gently, gently: no fiend is rough, and will not be roughly red.

Sir To. Why, how now, my bawcock! how est thou, chuck?

Mal. Sir!

Sir To. Ay, Diddy, come with me. What, am I tis for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan: hang him, foul collier!

Mar. Get him to say his prayers, good Sir Toby, get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers, milx!

Mar. No, I warrant you, he will not hear of oldness.

Mal. Go, hang yourselves all! you are idle hollow things: I am not of your element, you shall know more hereafter.

Exit. 140

Sir To. Is't possible?

Fab. If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.

Sir To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.

Mar. Nay, pursue him now, lest the device ake air, and taint.

Fab. Why, we shall make him mad indeed.

Mar. The house will be the quieter.

Sir To. Come, we'll have him in a dark room, nd bound. My niece is already in the belief he's mad: we may carry it thus, for our pleasure and his penance, till our very pastime, fired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him; at which time we will bring the device to the bar, and crown thee for a finder of madmen. But see, but see.

Enter Sir Andrew Aguecheek.

Fab. More matter for a May morning.

Sir And. Here's the challenge; read it: I warrant there's vinegar and pepper in't.

Fab. Is't so saucy?

Sir And. Ay, is't, I warrant him: do but read.

Sir To. Give me.

Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a cerry fellow.

Fab. Good, and valiant.

Sir To. Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mind, why I do call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for't.

Fab. A good note, that keeps you from the blow of the law.

Sir To. Thou comest to the Lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly: but thou liest in thy throat; that is not the matter I challenge thee for.

Fab. Very brief, and to exceeding good sense—less.

Sir To. I will waylay thee going home; where, if it be thy chance to kill me,—

Fab. Good.

Sir To. Thou killest me like a rogue and a villain.

Fab. Still you keep o' the windy side of the law: good.

Sir To. Fare thee well; and God have mercy upon one of our souls! He may have mercy upon mine, but my hope is better; and so look to thyself. Thy friend, as thou wast him, and thy sworn enemy,

ANDREW AGUECHEEK.

If this letter move him not, his legs cannot. I'll give't him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion for't: he is now in some commerce with my lady, and will by and by depart.

Sir To. Go, Sir Andrew; scout me for him at the corner of the orchard, like a bum-baily: so soon as ever thou seest him, draw; and, as thou drawest, swear horrible; for it comes to pass oft that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent sharply twanged off, gives mankind more approbation than ever proof itself would have earned him. Away!

Sir And. Nay, let me alone for swearing. Exit.

Sir To. Now will not I deliver his letter: for the behaviour of the young gentleman gives him out to be of good capacity and breeding; his employment between his lord and my niece confirms no less: therefore this letter, being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth: he will find it comes from a cedglop. But, sir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth; set upon Aguecheek a notable report of valour; and drive the gentleman, as I know his youth will aptly receive it, into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and impetuousity. This will so fright then both that they will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices.

Fab. Here he comes with your niece: give them way till he take leave, and presently after him.

Sir To. I will meditate the while upon some horrid message for a challenge.

Exeunt Sir Toby, Fabian, and Maria.
Re-enter OLIVIA, with VIOLA.

Oli. I have said too much unto a heart of stone, And laid mine honour too unchary out: There’s something in me that reproves my fault, But such a headstrong potent fault it is That it but mocks reproof.

Vio. With the same haviour that your passion bears

Goes on my master’s grief.

Oli. Here; wear this jewel for me, ’tis my picture:

Refuse it not; it hath no tongue to vex you; And I beseech you come again to-morrow.

What shall you ask of me that I’ll deny, That honour say’d may upon asking give? Nothing but this; your true love for my master.

Oli. How with mine honour may I give him that Which I have given to you? I will acquit you.

Oli. Well, come again to-morrow: fare thee well:

A fiend like thee might bear my soul to hell.

Exit.

Re-enter SIR TOBY, BELCH, and FABIAN.

SIR TOBY. Gentleman, God save thee.

vio. And you, sir.

SIR TOBY. That defence thou hast, betake thee to’t: of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not; but thy intercepter, full of despite, bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orchard-end. Dismount thy tuck, be yare in thy preparation, for thy assailant is quick, skilful, and deadly.

Vio. You mistake, sir: I am sure no man hath any quarrel to me: my remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

SIR TOBY. You’ll find it otherwise, I assure you: therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your guard; for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath, can furnish man withal.

Vio. I pray you, sir, what is he?

SIR TOBY. He is knight, dubbed with unhatched rapier, and on carpet consideration; but he is a devil in private brawl; souls and bodies hath he divorced three, and his incensement at this moment is so implacable that satisfaction can be none but by pangs of death and sepulchre. Hob, nob, is his word: give’t or take’t.

Vio. I will return again into the house and desire some conduct of the lady; I am no fighter. I have heard of some kind of men that put quarrels purposely on others to taste their valour; belike this is a man of that quirk.

SIR TOBY. Sir, no; his indignation derives itself out of a very competent injury: therefore, get you on and give him his desire. Back you shall not to the house, unless you undertake that with me which with as much safety you might answer him: therefore, on, or strip your sword stark naked; for meddle you must, that ’s certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

Vio. This is as uncivil as strange. I beseech you, do me this courteous office, as to know of the knight what my offence to him is: it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

Enter ANTONIO.

Ant. Put up your sword. If this young gent
First Off. The man grows mad: away with him! Come, come, sir.

Ant. Lead me on.

Exeunt Officers with ANTONIO.

Vio. Methinks his words do from such passion fly,
That he believes himself; so do not I.
Prove true, imagination, O! prove true,
That I, dear brother, be now ta'en for you.
Sir To. Come hither, knight; come hither, Fabian; we'll whisper o'er a couplet or two of most sage saws.

Vio. He nam'd Sebastian: I my brother know
Yet living in my glass; even such and so
In favour was my brother; and he went
Still in this fashion, colour, ornament,
For him I imitate. O! if it prove Tempests are kind, and salt waves fresh in love.

Sir To. A very dishonest paltry boy, and more
A coward than a hare. His dishonesty appears In leaving his friend here in necessity, and denying him; and for his cowardship, ask Fabian.

Fab. A coward, a most devout coward, religious in it.

Sir And. 'Slid, I'll after him again and beat him.

Sir To. Do; cuff him soundly, but never draw thy sword.

Sir And. An I do not,—

Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Street before OLIVIA'S House.

Enter SEBASTIAN and Clown.

Clo. Will you make me believe that I am not sent for you?

Seb. Go to, go to; thou art a foolish fellow:
Let me be clear of thee.

Clo. Well held out, I' faith! No, I do not know you; nor I am not sent to you by my lady to bid you come speak with her; nor your name is not Master Cesario; nor this is not my nose neither. Nothing that is so is so.

Seb. I prithee, vent thy folly somewhere else:
Thou know'st not me.

Clo. Vent my folly! He has heard that word of some great man, and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly! I am afraid this great lubber, the world, will prove a cockney. I prithee now, ungird thy strangeness and tell me what I shall vent to my lady. Shall I vent to her that thou art coming?

Seb. I prithee, foolish Greek, depart from me:
There's money for thee: if thou tarri longer
I shall give worse payment.

Clo. By my troth, thou hast an open hand.
These wise men that give fools money get themselves a good report after fourteen years' purchase.

Enter Sir ANDREW.

Sir And. Now, sir, have I met you again?
there's for you.

Striking SEBASTIAN.

Seb. Why, there's for thee, and there, and there.

Are all the people mad? Beating Sir ANDREW.
Enter Sir Toby and Fabian.

Sir To. Hold, sir, or I'll throw your dagger o'er the house. Exeunt.

Clo. This will I tell my lady straight. I would not be in some of your coats for twopence. Exit.

Sir To. Come on, sir; hold.

Sir Aud. Nay, let him alone; I'll go another way to work with him: I'll have an action of battery against him if there be any law in Illyria. Though I struck him first, yet it's no matter for that.

Sch. Let go thy hand.

Sir To. Come, sir, I will not let you go. Come, my young soldier, put up your iron: you are well fleshed; come on.

Sch. I will be free from thee. What wouldst thou now?

If thou dar'st tempt me further, draw thy sword.

Sir To. What, what? Nay, then I must have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you.

Draws.

Enter Olivia.

Oli. Hold, Toby! on thy life I charge thee, hold!

Sir To. Madam!

Oli. Will it be ever thus? Ungracious wretch!

Fit for the mountains and the barbarous caves,

Where manners ne'er were preach'd. Out of my sight!

Be not offended, dear Cesario.

Rudesby, be gone!

Exeunt Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

I prithee, gentle friend,

Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway

In this uncivil and unjust extent

Against thy peace. Go with me to my house,

And hear thou there how many fruitless pranks

This ruffian hath botch'd up, that thou thereby

May'st smile at this. Thou shalt not choose but go:

Do not deny. Beshrew his soul for me,

He started one poor heart of mine in thee.

Sch. What relish is in this? how runs the stream?

Or I am mad, or else this is a dream.

Let fancy still my sense in Lethè steep;

If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep!

Oli. Nay; come, I prithee; would thou'rt best be rul'd by me!

Sch. Madam, I will.

Oli. O! say so, and so be. Exeunt.

Scene II.—A Room in Olivia's House.

Enter Maria and Clown.

Mar. Nay, I prithee, put on this gown and this headdress; make him believe thou art Sir Topas the curate; do it quickly; I'll call Sir Toby the whilst. Exit.

Clo. Well, I'll put it on and I will dissemble myself in't; and I would I were the first that ever dissembled in such a gown. I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor lean enough to be thought a good student; but to be said an honest man and a good housekeeper goes as fairly as to say a careful man and a great scholar. The competitors enter.
Clo. My lady is unkind, perdy.
Mal. Fool!
Clo. Alas! why so she so?
Mal. Fool, I say!
Clo. She loves another.

Who calls, ha?
Mal. Good fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well my hand, help me to a candle, and pen, ink, and paper. As I am a gentleman, I will live to be thankful to thee for't.
Clo. Master Malvolio!
Mal. Ay, good fool.
Clo. Alas, sir, how fell you besides your five its?
Mal. Fool, there was never man so notoriously used: I am as well in my wits, fool, as thou art.
Clo. But as well? then you are mad indeed, if you be no better in your wits than a fool.
Mal. They have here propounded me; keep me darkness, send ministers to me, assess! and all they can to face me out of my wits.
Clo. Advise you what you say: the minister is here. Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens store! endeavour thyself to sleep, and leave thy vain bibble babble.
Mal. Sir Topas!
Clo. Maintain no words with him, good fellow.
ho, I, sir? not I, sir. God be wi' you, good Sir Topas. Marry, amen. I will, sir, I will.
Mal. Fool, fool, fool, I say!
Clo. Alas! sir, be patient. What say you, sir?
I am shent for speaking to you.
Mal. Good fool, help me to some light and me paper: I tell thee I am as well in my wits any man in Illyria.
Clo. Well-a-day, that you were, sir!
Mal. By this hand, I am. Good fool, some light, paper, and light; and convey what I will down to my lady: it shall advantage thee more than ever the bearing of letter did.
Clo. I will help you to't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed? or do you but counterfeit?
Mal. Believe me, I am not: I tell thee true.
Clo. Nay, I'll never believe a madman till I see his brains. I will fetch you light and paper d and ink.
Mal. Fool, I'll requite it in the highest degree:
thereby, be gone.
Clo. I am gone, sir,
And anon, sir,
I'll be with you again,
In a trice,
Like to the old Vier,
Your need to sustain;
Who with dagger of lath,
In his rage and his wrath,
Cries, Ah, ha! to the devil:
Like a mad lad,
Pare thy nails, dad;
Adieu, goodman driven.

SCENE III.—OLIVIA'S GARDEN.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. This is the air; that is the glorious sun;
Is pearl she gave me, I do feel't and see't; d though 'tis wonder that enraps me thus,
'tis not madness. Where's Antonio then?

I could not find him at the Elephant;
Yet there he was, and there I found this credit,
That he did range the town to seek me out.
His counsel now might do me golden service;
For though my soul disputes well with my sense
That this may be some error, but no madness,
Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune
So far exceed all instance, all discourse,
That I am ready to distrust mine eyes, And wrangle with my reason that persuades me
To any other trust but that I am mad
Or else the lady's mad: yet, if 'twere so,
She could not sway her house, command her followers,
Take and give back affairs and their dispatch
With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing
As I perceive she does. There's something in't
That is deceivable. But here the lady comes.

Enter OLIVIA and a Priest.

Oli. Blame not this haste of mine. If you mean well,
Now go with me and with this holy man
Into the chantry by; there, before him,
And underneath that consecrated roof,
Plight me the full assurance of your faith;
That my most jealous and too doubtful soul
May live at peace. He shall conceal it
Whiles you are willing it shall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keep
According to my birth. What do you say?
Seb. I'll follow this good man, and go with
you;
And, having sworn truth, ever will be true.
Oli. Then lead the way, good father; and heavens so shine
That they may fairly note this act of mine!

Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—THE STREET BEFORE OLIVIA'S HOUSE.

Enter Cloten and FABIAN.

Fab. Now, as thou lov'st me, let me see his letter.
Clo. Good Master Fabian, grant me another request.

Fab. Any thing.
Clo. Do not desire to see this letter.
Fab. This is, to give a dog, and in recompense desire my dog again.

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, CURIO, and ATTENDANTS.

Duke. Belong you to the Lady Olivia, friends?
Cur. Ay, sir; we are some of her trappings.
Duke. I know thee well: how dost thou, my good fellow?
Clo. Truly sir, the better for my foes and the worse for my friends.

Duke. Just the contrary; the better for thy friends.

Clo. No, sir, the worse.

Duke. How can that be?

Clo. Marry, sir, they praise me and make an ass of me; now my foes tell me plainly I am an ass: so that by my foes, sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself, and by my friends I am abused: so that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why then, the worse for my friends and the better for my foes.
Duke. Why, this is excellent.
Clo. By my troth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.
Duke. Thou shalt not be the worse for me:
there's gold.
Clo. But that it would be double-dealing, sir,
I would you could make it another.
Duke. O! you give me ill counsel.
Clo. Put your grace in your pocket, sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.
Duke. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double-dealer; there's another.
Clo. Primo, secundo, terto, is a good play;
and the old saying is, the third pays for all:
the tripex, sir, is a good tripping measure; or the bells of Saint Bennet, sir, may put you in mind; one, two, three.
Duke. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.
Clo. Marry, sir, lullaby to your bounty till I come again. I go, sir; but I would not have you to think that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness; but as you say, sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. Exit. 52
Vio. Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue
me.

Enter ANTONIO and Officers.

Duke. That face of his I do remember well;
Yet when I saw it last, it was besmeared
As black as Vulcan in the smoke of war.
A bawbling vessel was he captain of,
For shallow draught and bulk unprizable;
With which such scathful grapple did he make
With the most noble bottom of our fleet,
That very envy and the tongue of loss Cried fame and honour on him. What's the matter?

First Off. Orsino, this is that Antonio
That took the Phoenix and her fraught from Candy;
And this is he that did the Tiger board,
When your young nephew Titus lost his leg.
Here in the streets, desperate of shame and state,
In private brabble did we apprehend him. 69
Vio. He did me kindness, sir, drew on my side;
But in conclusion put strange speech upon me:
I know not what 'twas but distraction.
Duke. Notable pirate! thou salt-water thief!
What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies,
Whom thou, in terms so bloody and so dear,
Hast made thine enemies?
Ant. Orsino, noble sir,
Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you give
me:
Antonio never yet was thief or pirate,
Though I confess, on base and ground enough,
Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither:
That most ungrateful boy there by your side,
From the rude sea's enrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeem; a wreck past hope he was;
His life I gave him, and did thereto add
My love, without retention or restraint,
All his in dedication; for his sake
Did I expose myself, pure for his love,
Into the danger of this adverse town;
Drew to defend him when he was beset:
Where being apprehended, his false cunning,
Not meaning to partake with me in danger,
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance
And grew a twenty years removed thing
While one would wink, denied me mine ow'n purse,
Which I had recommended to his use
Not half an hour before.
Vio. How can this be?
Duke. When came he to this town?
Ant. To-day, my lord; and for three months before,
No intermission, not a minute's vacancy.
Both day and night did we keep company.

Enter OLIVIA and Attendants.

Duke. Here comes the countess; now have walks on earth!
But for thee, follow; fellow, thy words a madness:
Three months this youth hath tended upon me
But more of that anon. Take him aside.
Oli. What would my lord, but that he may not have,
Wherein Olivia may seem serviceable?
Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.
Vio. Madam!
Duke. Gracious Olivia,— Oli. What do you say, Cesario? Good, my lord,—
Vio. My lord would speak: my duty hushes
Oli. If it be sought to the old tune, my lord
It is as fat and fulous to mine ear
As howling after music.
Duke. Still so cruel?
Oli. Still so constant, lord.
Duke. What, to perverseness! you uncivil
To whose ingrate and unsuspicious athers
My soul the faithful'st offerings hath breath
out
That e'er devotion tender'd! What shall I do Oli. Even what it please my lord, that sh'd become him.
Duke. Why should I not, had I the heart
do it,
Like to the Egyptian thief at point of death,
Kill what I love! a savage jealousy
That sometime savours nobly. But hear me th:
Since you to non-regardance cast my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument
That screams me from my true place in your fav you the marble-breasted tyrant still;
But this your minion, whom I know you love
And whom, by heaven I swear, I tender dear;
Him will I tear out of that cruel eye,
Where he sits crowned in his master's spite.
Come, boy, with me; my thoughts are ripe mischief;
I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love,
To spite a raven's heart within a dove.
Vio. And I, most jocund, apt, and willing,
To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die.
Oli. Where goes Cesario?
Vio. After him I love
More than I love these eyes, more than my lip
More, by all morses, than e'er I shall love wife
If I do feign, you witnesses above,
Punish my life for tainting of my love!
Oli. Ay me, detested! how am I beguil'd!
Vio. Who does beguil you? who does do you wrong!
Duke. Come away!
Oli. Ay, husband: can he that deny?
Duke. Her husband, sirrah!
Vio. No, my lord, not I.
Oli. Alas! it is the baseness of thy fear that makes thee strangle thy propriety. Fear not, Cesario; take thy fortunes up; that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art as great as that thou fear'st.

Enter Priest.

O welcome, father! other, I charge thee, by thy reverence, ere to unfold, though lately we intended to keep in darkness what occasion now avails before 'tis ripe, what thou dost know anewly pass'd between this youth and me.

Priest. A contract of eternal bond of love, misfirm'd by mutual joinder of your hands, tested by the holy close of lips, strengthened by interchange of your rings; ad all the ceremony of this compact all'd in my function, by my testimony: nce when, my watch hath told me, toward my grave have travelled but two hours.

Duke. O thou dissembling cub! what wilt thou be? hen time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case? will not else thy craft so quickly grow? at thine own trip shall be thine overthrow? anewell, and take her; but direct thy feet where thou and I henceforth may never meet.

Vio. My lord, I do protest.—
Oli. O! do not swear; I'd little faith, though thou hast too much fear.

Enter Sir Andrew Aguecheek.

Sir And. For the love of God, a surgeon! send immediately to Sir Toby.
Oli. What's the matter?
Sir And. He has broke my head across, and given Sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too. For a love of God, your help! I had rather sixty pound I were at home.

Oli. Who has done this, Sir Andrew?

Sir And. The count's gentleman, one Cesario; took him for a coward, but he's the very ill inordinate.

Duke. My gentleman, Cesario!

Sir And. 'O! my life! here he is. You broke my head for nothing! and that I did, I was to do it by Sir Toby. I never hurt you: I drew your sword upon me without cause; it I bespake you fair, and hurt you not.

Vio. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt you; I neither you:
Sir And. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you hurt me: I think you set nothing by a coxcomb.

Enter Sir Toby Belch and Clown.

Oli. Come, Sir Toby, let's hear thy tale, and thou shalt hear more: but if he had not been in drink he would have tickled you othergates than he did.

Duke. How now, gentleman! how is 't with you?

Sir To. That's all one; has hurt me, and there's the end on 't. Sot, didst see Dick surgeon, sot?

Clo. O! he's drunk, Sir Toby, an hour ago: his eyes were set at eight i' the morning.

Sir To. Then he's a rogue, and a passy-measures pavin. I hate a drunken rogue.

Oli. Away with him! Who hath made this havoc with them?

Sir And. I'll help you, Sir Toby, because we'll be dressed together.

Sir To. Will you help me? an ass-head, and a coxcomb, and a knave, a thin-faced knave, a gull! Oli. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd to.

Enter Clown, Fabian, Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. I am sorry, madam, I have hurt your kinsman:
But had it been the brother of my blood, I must have done no less with wit and safety. You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that I do perceive it hath offended you:
Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows We made each other but so late ago.

Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons:
A natural perspective, that is, and is not!

Seb. Antonio! O my dear Antonio! How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me Since I have lost thee!

Ant. Sebastian are you?
Seb. Fearst thou that, Antonio?
Ant. How have you made division of yourself?

An apple eft in two is not more twin

Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Oli. Most wonderful!

Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother; Nor can there be that deity in my nature, Of here and every where. I had a sister, Whom the blind waves and surges have devour'd. Of charity, what kin are you to me?

What countryman? what name? what parentage?

Vio. Of Messaline: Sebastian was my father; Such a Sebastian was my brother too,

So went he suited to his watery tomb. If spirits can assume both form and suit You come to fright us.
Seb. A spirit I am indeed;
But am in that dimension grossly clad Which from the womb I did participate. Were you a woman, as the rest goes even, I should my tears let fall upon your cheek, And say 'Thrice welcome, drowned Viola!'

Vio. My father had a mole upon his brow.

Seb. And so had mine.

Vio. And died that day when Viola from her birth
Had number'd thirteen years.

Seb. O! that record is lively in my soul. He finished indeed his mortal act That day that made my sister thirteen years.

Vio. If nothing lets to make us happy both But this my masculine usurp'd attire,
Do not embrace me till each circumstance
Of place, time, fortune, do cohere and jump 290
That I am Viola: which to confirm,
I'll bring you to a captain in this town,
Where lie my maiden weeds; by whose gentle help
I was persu'd to serve this noble count.
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath been between this lady and this lord.

Sel. To OLIVIA. So comes it, lady, you have been mistook:
But nature to her bias drew in that.
You would have been contracted to a maid;
Nor are you therein, by my life, deceiv'd. 270
You are betroth'd both to a maiden and man.

Duke. Be not amaz'd; right noble is his blood,
If this be so, as yet the glass seems true,
I shall have share in this most happy wreck.

To VIOLA. Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times
Thou never should'st love woman like to me.

Vio. And all those sayings will I over-swear,
And all those swearings keep as true in soul
As doth that orbed continent the fire
That severs day from night.

Duke. Give me thy hand; 280
And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds.

Vio. The captain that did bring me first on shore
Hath my maid's garments: he upon some action
Is now in durance at Malvolio's suit,
A gentleman, and follower of my lady's.

Oli. He shall enlarge him. Fetch Malvolio hither,
And yet, alas! now I remember me,
They say, poor gentleman, he's much distract.
A most extracting frenzy of mine own
From my remembrance clearly banish'd his. 290

Re-enter Clown, with a letter, and FABIAN.

How does he, sirrah?

Clo. Truly, madam, he holds Belzebub at the stave's end as well as a man in his case may do.
Has here writ a letter to you: I should have given 'tou to-day morning; but as a madman's epistles are no gospels, so it skills not much when they are delivered.

Oli. Open 't, and read it.

Clo. Look then to be well edified when the fool delivers the madman.

By the Lord, madam,— 300

Oli. How now! art thou mad?

Clo. No, madam, I do but read madness: an your ladyship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow voz.

Oli. Prithee, read i' thy right wits.

Clo. So I do, madonna; but to read his right wits is to read thus: therefore perch, my princess, and give ear.

Oli. To FABIAN. Read it you, sirrah.

Fab. By the Lord, madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: though you have put me into darkness, and given your drunken counsel over me, yet have I the benefit of my senses as well as your ladyship. I have your own letter that induced me to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not but to do myself much right, or you much shame. Think of me as you please. I leave my duty a little unthought of and speak out of my injury.

Oli. Did he write this?

Clo. Ay, madam.

Duke. This savours not much of distraction.

Oli. See him deliver'd, Fabian; bring him hither.

Exit FABIAN.

My lord, so please you, these things further thought on,
To think me as well a sister as a wife,
One day shall crown the alliance on 't, so plea,

Here at my house and at my proper cost.

Duke. Madam, I am most apt to embrace you offer.

To VIOLA. Your master quits you; and for your service done him,
So much against the mettle of your sex,
So far beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you call'd me master for so long,
Here is my hand: you shall from this time be
Your master's mistress.

Oli. A sister! you are shall

Re-enter FABIAN, with MALVOLIO.

Duke. Is this the madman?

Oli. Ay, my lord, this sam
How now, Malvolio!

Mel. Madam, you have done me wrong
Notorious wrong.

Mel. Lady, you have. Pray you peruse the letter.
You must not now deny it is your hand:
Write from it, if you can, in hand or phrase;
Or say 'tis not your seal nor your invention:
You can say none of this. Well, grant it then.
And tell me, in the modesty of honour,
Why you have given me such clear lights favour,
Bade me come smiling and cross-garter'd to you.
To put on yellow stockings, and to frown
Upon Sir Toby and the lighter people:
And, acting this in an obdient hope,
Why have you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,
Kept in a dark house, visited by the priest,
And made the most notorious heck and gull
That e'er invention play'd on? tell me why.

Oli. Alas! Malvolio, this is not my writing:
Though, I confess, much like the character:
But, out of question, 'tis Maria's hand:
And now, I do bethink me, it was she
First told me thou wast mad; then can't smiling,
And in such forms which here were pre-suppos
Upon thee in the letter. Prithee, be content:
This practice hath most shrewdly pass'd upon thee;
But when we know the grounds and authors of Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and the judge
Of thine own cause.

Fab. Good madam, hear me spea
And let no quarrel nor no brawl to come
Taint the condition of this present hour,
Which I have wonder'd at. In hope it shall no Most freely I confess, myself and Toby Set this device against Malvolio here,
Upon some stubborn and uncourteous parts
We had conceiv'd against him. Maria writ
The letter at Sir Toby's great importance;
In recompense whereof he hath married her.
How with a sportful malice it was follow'd,
May rather pluck on laughter than revenge
If that the injuries be justly weigh’d
That have on both sides pass’d.

Oli. Alas! poor fool, how have they baffled thee.

Clio. Why, ‘some are born great, some achieve Greatness, and some have greatness thrown upon them.’ I was one, sir, in this interlude; one Sir Topas, sir; but that’s all one. ‘By the Lord, fool, I am not mad.’ But do you remember?

Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal?
in you smile not, he’s gagg’d’; and thus the whirligig of time brings in his revenges.

Clo. I’ll be reveng’d on the whole pack of you. Exit.

Oli. He hath been most notoriously abus’d.

Duke. Pursue him, and entreat him to a peace.
He hath not told us of the captain yet:
When that is known and golden time convert,
A solemn combination shall be made
Of our dear souls. Meantime, sweet sister,
We will not part from hence. Cesario, come;
for so you shall be, while you are a man;
But when in other habits you are seen,
Orsino’s mistress, and his fancy’s queen.

Exit all, except Clown.

Clo. When that I was and a little tiny boy,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain;
A foolish thing was but a toy,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came to man’s estate,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain;
‘Gainst knaves and thieves men shut their gates,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came, alas! to wife,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain;
By swaggering could I never thrive,
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came unto my beds,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain;
With tosseth still had drunken heads,
For the rain it raineth every day.

A great while ago the world began,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain;
But that’s all one, our play is done,
And we’ll strive to please you every day.

Exit.

THE WINTER’S TALE.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

LEONTES, King of Sicilia.
MAMILLIUS, young Prince of Sicilia.
CAMILLO, ANTIGONUS,
CLEomenes,
Dion,
Polixenes, King of Bohemia.
Florizel, Prince of Bohemia.
ARCHIDAMUS, a Lord of Bohemia.
An old Shepherd, reputed Father of Perdita.
Lords, Ladies, and Gentlemen, Officers, and Servants, Shepherds and Shepherdesses, Guards, etc.

SCENE.—Sometimes in Sicilia, sometimes in Bohemia.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Sicilia. An Antechamber in Leontes’ Palace.

Enter Camillo and Archidamus.

Arch. If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my serises are now on foot, you shall see, as I have aid, great difference betwixt our Bohemia and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this coming summer, the King of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us we will be justified in our loves: for indeed,—

Cam. Research you.--

Arch. Verily, I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence—in so rare—I know not what to say. We will give you sleepy drinks, that your senses, unintelligent of our insufficiency, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear for what’s given freely.

Arch. Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot show himself over-kind to Bohemia. They were trained together in their childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature dignities and royal necessities made separation of their society, their encounters, though not personal, have been royally attorneyed with interchange of gifts, letters, loving embassies; that they have seemed to be together, though absent, shoke hands, as over a vast, and embraced, as it were, from the ends of opposed winds. The heavens continue their loves!

Arch. I think there is not in the world either malice or matter to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young Prince Mamilius; it is a gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my note.

Com. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him. It is a gallant child; one that indeed physics the subject, makes old hearts fresh; they that went on crutches ere he was born desire yet their life to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Com. Yes: if there were no other excuse why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the king had no son, they would desire to live on crutches till he had one.

Scene II. The Same. A Room in State in the Palace.

Enter LEONTES, POLIXENES, HERMIONE, MA-MILLIUS, CAMILLO, and Attendants.

Pol. Nine changes of the watery star have been
The shepherd's note since we have left our throne
Without a burden: time as long again
Would be fill'd up, my brother, with our thanks;
And yet we should for perpetuity
Go hence in debt: and therefore, like a cipher,
Yet standing in rich place, I multiply
With one 'We thank you' many thousands more
That go before it.

Leon. Stay your thanks awhile,
And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to-morrow. 10
I am question'd by my fears, of what may chance
Or breed upon our absence; that may blow
No sneaping winds at home, to make us say,
'This is put forth too truly.' Besides, I have stay'd
To tire your royalty.

Leon. We are tougher, brother,
Than you can put us to 't.

Pol. One seven-night longer.

Leon. Very sooth, to-morrow.

Pol. We'll part the time between's then;
And in that I'll no gainsaying.

Pol. Press me not, beseech you, so.
There is no tongue that moves, none, none i' the world,
So soon as yours could win me: so it should now:
Were there necessity in your request, although
'Twere needful I denied it. My affairs
Do even drag me homeward; which to hinder
Were in your love a whip to me; my stay
To you a charge and trouble: to save both,
Farewell, our brother.

Leon. Tongue-tied, our queen? speak you.

Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my peace
Until you had drawn oaths from him not to stay.
You, sir,
Charge him too coldly; tell him, you are sure 30
All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction

The by-gone day proclaim'd: say this to him,
He's best from his best ward.

Leon. Well said, Hermione

Her. To tell him longs to see his son were strong;
But let him say so then, and let him go;
But let him swear so, and he shall not stay,
We'll thwack him hence with distafts.

To POLIXENES. Yet of your royal presence I'll adventure
The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia
You take my lord, I'll give him my commission
To let him there a month behind the gest
Prefix'd for 's parting; yet, good deed, Leontes
I love thee not a far o' the clock behind
What lady she her lord. You'll stay?

Pol. No, madam.

Her. Nay, but you will?

Pol. I may not, verily

Her. Verily!

You put me off with limber vows; but I,
Though you would seek to unsphere the star
With oaths,
Should yet say, 'Sir, no going.' Verily,
You shall not go: a lady's 'verily' is
As potent as a lord's. Will you go yet?

Force me to keep you as a prisoner,
Not like a guest; so you shall pay your fees
When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?

My prisoner or my guest? by your dread 'verily'
One of them you shall be.

Pol. Your guest then, madam To be your prisoner should import offending;
Which is for me less easy to commit
Than you to punish.

Her. Not your gaoler then,
But your kind hostess. Come, I'll question you
Of my lord's tricks and yours when you were boy;
You were pretty lording then.

Pol. We were, fair queen
Two lads that thought there was no more behin
But such a day to-morrow as to-day,
And to be boy eternal.

Her. Was not my lord the verier wag o' the two?

Pol. We were as twinn'd lambs that did fris i' the sun,
And beat the one at the other: what we chang'd
Was innocence for innocence; we knew not
The doctrine of ill-doing, no, nor dream'd
That any did. Had we purs'd that life,
And our weak spirits ne'er been higher rear'd
With stronger blood, we should have answer'd heaven
Boldly 'not guilty'; the imposition clear'd
Hereditary ours.

Her. By this we gather
You have tripp'd since.

Pol. O! my most sacred lad
Temptations have since then been born to's; it
In those unfedg'd days was my wife a girl;
Your precious self had then not cross'd the eye
Of my young playfellow.

Her. Grace to boot! Of this make no conclusion, lest you say,
Your queen and I are devils; yet, go on:
The offences we have made you do we'll answer
If you first sin'd with us, and that with us
You did continue fault, and that you slipp'd n
With any but with us.
Leon. Is he won yet?
Her. He'll stay, my lord.
Leon. At my request he would not.

Her. Never?
Leon. Never, but once.
Her. What have I twice said well? when was 't before? 90
prithee tell me; cram's with praise, and make 's fat as tame things: one good deed dying tongueless aughters a thousand waiting upon that, ur praises are our wages: you may ride 's
'th one soft kiss a thousand furlongs ere
'th spur we heat an acre. But to the goal:
y last good deed was to entreat his stay:
hat was my first? it has an older sister,
I mistake you: O! would her name were Grace.
at once before I spoke to the purpose: when ay, let me have 't; I long.
Leon. Why, that was when 10 three crabbed months had sour'd themselves to
death,
o I could make thee open thy white hand clap thyself my love: then didst thou utter
I am yours for ever.'
Her. 'Tis grace indeed.
hy, lo you now, I have spoke to the purpose twice:
he one for ever ear'd a royal husband,
ehe other for some while a friend.

Giving her hand to Polixenes.
Leon. Aside. Too hot, too hot!

mingle friendship far is mingling breads, have tremor cordis on me; my heart dances; 110
it not for joy; not joy. This entertainment say a free face put on, derive a liberty by heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom,
I well become the agent: 't may, I grant;
't be paddling palms, and pinching fingers,
now they are, and making practis'd smiles,
in a looking-glass; and then to sigh, as 'twere emort 'o the 'deer! O! that is entertainment bosom likes not, nor my brows. Mamillius,
'thou my boy?
Mam. Ay, my good lord.
Leon. I fecks! hy, that's my bawcock. What! hast smutch'd thy nose? 121
ay say it's a copy out of mine. Come, captain, must be neat; not neat, but cleanly, captain;
'd yet the stair, the heifer, and the calf, call'd neat. Still virgulling pon his palm! How now, you wanton calf!
'thou my calf?
Mam. Yes, if you will, my lord.
Leon. Thou want'st a rough push and the shoots that I have,
be full like me: yet they say we are most as like as eggs; women say so, 130 hat will say any thing: but were they false o'er-dyed blacks, as wind, as waters, false dice are to be wish'd by one that fixes
'twixt his and mine, yet were it true say this boy were like me. Come, sir page, ok on me with your welkin eye: sweet villain!
'est dean'st! my collop! Can thy dam?—
may 't be?

Affection! thy intention stabs the centre:
Thou dost make possible things not so held,
Communicat' with dreams;—how can this be?

With what's unreal thou co-active art,
And fellow'st nothing: then 'tis very credent
Thou may'st co-join with something; and thou dost.
And that beyond commission, and I find it,
And that to the infection of my brains
And hardening of my brows.

Pol. What means Sicilia?
Her. He something seems unsettled.

Pol. How, my lord?

Her. What cheer? how is 't with you, best brother?

Pol. You look
As if you held a brow of much distraction :
Are you mov'd, my lord?

Leon. No, in good earnest.

How sometimes nature will betray its folly,
Its tenderness, and make itself a pastime
To harder bosoms! Looking on the lines
Of my boy's face, methoughts I did recall:
Twenty-three years, and saw myself unbreech'd,
In my green velvet coat, my dagger muzzled,
Lest it should bite its master, and so prove,
As ornaments oft do, too dangerous:
How like, methought, I then was to this kernel,
This squash, this gentleman. Mine honest friend,
Will you take eggs for money?

Mam. No, my lord, I'll fight.

Leon. You will! why, happy man be's done!
My brother,
Are you so fond of your young prince as we
Do seem to be of ours?

Pol. If at home, sir,
He's all my exercise, my mirth, my matter;
Now my sworn friend and then mine enemy;
My parasite, my soldier, statesman, all:
He makes a July's day short as December,
And with his varying childness cures in me.

Thoughts that would thicken my blood.

Leon. So stands this squire
Of's with me. We two will walk, my lord,
And leave you to your graver steps. Hermione,
How thou lovest us, show in our brother's welcome:
Let what is dear in Sicily be cheap.
Next to thyself and my young rover, he's Apparent to my heart.
Her. If you would seek us,
We are yours i' the garden: shall's attend you
there?

Leon. To your own bents dispose you: you'll be found.

Be ye beneath the sky. Aside. I am angling
now.
Though you perceive me not how I give line.
Go to, go to!
How she holds up the neb, the bill to him!
And arms her with the boldness of a wife
To her allowing husband!

Event Polixenes, Hermione, and Attendants.

Gone already!

Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a fork'd one!
Go play, boy, play; thy mother plays, and I
Play too, but so disgrac'd a part, whose issue
Will hiss me to my grave: contempt and clamour WINTER'S TALE.

Will be my knoll. Go play, boy, play. There have been, 190
Or I am much deceiv'd, cuckold ere now; And many a man there is, even at this present, Now, while I speak this, holds his wife by the arm, That little thinks she has been shuic'd in's absence, And his pond fish'd by his next neighbour, by Sir Smile, his neighbour: nay, there's comfort in't, While other men have gates, and those gates open'd, As mine, against their will. Should all despair That have revoluted wives, the tenth of mankind Would hang themselves. Physick for't there is none;

It is a bawdy planet, that will strike Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerful, think it,

From east, west, north, and south: be it concluded, No barricado for a belly: know't; It will let in and out the enemy With bag and baggage. Many a thousand on's Have the disease, and feel't not. How now, boy! Mum. I am like you, they say. Leon. Why, that's some comfort. What! Camillo there? Cam. Ay, my good lord. Leon. Go play, Mamillius; thou'rt an honest man. Exit MAMILLIUS. Camillo, this great sir will yet stay longer. Cana. You had much ado to make his anchor hold: When you cast out, it still came home. Leon. Didst note it? Cam. He would not stay at your petitions; made His business more material. Leon. Didst perceive it? Aside. They're here with me already, whispering, rounding 'Sicilia is a so-forth,' 'Tis far gone, When I shall gann it last. How came't, Camillo, That he did stay? Cam. At the good queen's entreaty. 26 Leon. At the queen's, be't: 'good' should be pertinent; But so it is, it is not. Was this taken By any understanding bate but thine? For thy conceit is soaking; will draw in More than the common blocks: not noted, is't, But of the finer natures? by some several Of head-piece extraordinary! lower messes Pérchance are to this business purblind; say. Cam. Business, my lord! I think most understand Bohemia stays here longer. Leon. Ha! Cam. Stays here longer. Leon. Ay, but why? Cam. To satisfy your highness and the entreaties Of our most gracious mistress. Leon. Satisfy! The entreaties of your mistress! satisfy! Let that suffice. I have trusted thee, Camillo, With all the nearest things to my heart, as well My chamber-councillors, wherein priest-like, thou Hast cleans'd my bosom: I from thee departed Thy penitent reform'd; but we have been Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd In that which seems so.

Cam. Be it forbid, my lord.

Leon. To hide upon't, thou art not honest; If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward, Which hoxes honesty behind, restraining From course requir'd; or else thou must I counted A servant grated in my serious trust, And therein negligent; or else a fool That seest a game play'd home, the rich stal drawn, And tak'st it all for jest.

Cam. My gracious lord, I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful; In every one of these no man is free, But that his negligence, his folly, fear, Among the infinite doings of the world, Sometime puts forth. In your affairs, my lord If ever I was wilful-negligent, It was my folly; if industriously I play'd the fool, it was my negligence, Not weighing well the end; if ever fearful To do a thing, where I the issue doubted, Whereof the execution did cry out Against the non-performance, 'twas a fear Which oft infects the wisest: these, my lord, Are such allow'd infirmities that honesty Is never free of: but, beseech your grace, Be plainer with me; let me know my trespass By its own visage; if I then deny it, 'Tis none of mine.

Leon. Ha' not you seen, Camillo, But that's past doubt; you have, or your eye-glass Is thicker than a cuckold's horn,—or heard,— For to a vision so apparent rumour Cannot be mute,—or thought,—for cogitation Resides not in that man that does not think,— My wife is slippery? If thou wilt confess, Or else be impudently negative, To have nor eyes nor ears nor thought, then s, My wife's a hobby-horse, deserves a name As rank as any flux-wench that puts to Before her troth-plight: say 't and justify 't. Cam. I would not be a stander-by, to hear My sovereign mistress clowned so, without My present vengeance taken: 'shrew my head You never spoke what did become you less Than this; which to reiterate were sin As deep as that, though true.

Leon. Is whispering nothing Is leaning cheek to cheek? is meeting noses? Kissing with inside lip? stopping the career Of laughter with a sigh? a note infallible Of breaking honesty; horsing foot on foot? Skulking in corners? wishing clocks more swift Hours, minutes? noon, midnight? and all eyes Blind with the pin and web but theirs, theirs on That would unseen be wicked? is this nothing? Why, then the world and all that is in't nothing; The covering sky is nothing; Bohemia nothing My wife is nothing; nor nothing have the nothings, If this be nothing.

Cam. Good my lord, be car'd Of this diseas'd opinion, and betimes; For 'tis most dangerous.

Leon. Say it be; 'tis true.

Cam. No, no, my lord.
It is: you lie, you lie: ay, thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee; pronounce thee a gross lout, a mindless slave, else a hovering temporizer, that with thine eyes at once see good and evil, clining to them both: were my wife's liver fected as her life, she would not live a running of one glass.

Who does infect her? Cam. Why, he that wears her like her medal, hanging out his neck, Bohemia: who, if I did servants true to me, that bare eyes see alike mine honour as their profits, eir own particular thrifts, they would do that ich should undo more doing: ay, and thou, s cup-bearer, whom I from meaner webench'd and reard to worship; whamy'st see unly as heaven sees earth, and earth sees heaven, ov I am galled, might'st besuce a cup, give mine enemy a lasting wink; nich drught to me were cordial.

I love thee, Cam. Make that thy question, and go rot! I think I am so medly, so unsettled, appoint myself in this vexation; sully purity and whiteness of my sheets, rich to preserve is sleep; which being spotted golds, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps; 's scandal to the blood o' the prince my son, so I do think is mine, and love as mine, thoust ripe moving to 't? Would I do this old man so brench?

I must believe you, sir: and will fetch off Bohemia for 't: declared that when he's remov'd, thy highness take again your queen as yours at first, for your son's sake; and thereby for sealing a injury of tongues in courts and kingdoms own and allied to yours.

Thou dost advise me en so as mine own course have set down: I give no blemish to her honour, none. Cam. My lord, then; and with a countenance as close friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia, d with your queen. I am his cup-bearer; from me he have wholesome beverage, count me not your servant.

This is all: 't, and thou hast the half one of my heart; 't not, thou splitt'st thine own. Cam. I'll do't, my lord. Leon. I will seem friendly, as thou hast ad- vis'd me. Exit.

O miserable lady! But, for me, int case stand I in? I must be the poisoner good Polixenes; and my ground to d' the obedience to a master; one so in rebellion with himself will have that are his so too. To do this deed emotion follows. If I could find example thousands that had struck anointed kings, And flourish'd after, I'd not do't; but since Nor brass nor stone nor parchment bears not one, Let villain itself forswear 't. I must Forsake the court: to do't, or no, is certain To me a break-neck. Happy star reign now! Here comes Bohemia.

Pol. This is strange: methinks My favour here begins to warp. Not speak? Good day, Camillo.

Hail, most royal sir! Cam. None rare, my lord. Pol. The king hath on him such a countenance As he had lost some province and a region Lov'd as he loves himself: even now I met him With customary compliment, when he, Wafting his eyes to the contrary, and falling A lip of much contempt, speeds from me and So leaves me to consider what is breeding That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord. Pol. How! dare not? do not! Do you know, and dare not

Be intelligent to me? 'Tis thereabouts; For, to yourself, what you do know, you must. And cannot say you dare not. Good Camillo, Your chang'd complexions are to me a mirror Which shows me mine chang'd too; for I must be A party in this alteration, finding Myself thus alter'd with 't.

There is a sickness Which puts some of us in distemper; but I cannot name the disease, and it is caught Of you that yet are well.

How caught of me? Make me not sighted like the basilisk: I have look'd on thousands, who have sped the better By my regard, but kill'd none so. Camillo, As you are certainly a gentleman, thereto Clerk-like experience'd, which no less adorns Our gentry than our parents' noble names, In whose success we are gentle. I beseech you, If you know aught which does behove my knowledge Thereof to be inform'd, imprison not In ignorant concealment.

I may not answer. Cam. A sickness caught of me, and yet I well! I must be answer'd. Dost thou hear, Camillo? I conjure thee, by all the parts of man Which honour does acknowledge, whereof the least Is not this suit of mine, that thou declare What incidency thou dost guess of harm Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near; Which way to be prevented if to be; If not, how best to bear it.

Sir, I will tell you; Since I am charg'd in honour and by him That I think honourable. Therefore mark my counsel, Which must be even as swiftly follow'd as I mean to utter it, or both yourself and me Cry 'lost,' and so good night!

On, good Camillo. Cam. I am appointed him to murder you. Pol. By whom, Camillo?
Cam. By the king.
Pol. For what?
Cam. He thinks, nay, with all confidence he swears,
As he had seen't or been an instrument
To vice you to, that you have touch'd his queen Forbiddenly.

Pol. O! then my best blood turn
To an infected jelly, and my name
Be yok'd with his that did betray the Best;
Turn then my freshest reputation to
A savour that may strike the dullest nostril
Where I arrive; and my approach be shunn'd,
Nay, hated too, worse than the great'st infection
That e'er was heard or read!

Cam. Swear his thought over
By each particular star in heaven and
By all their influences, you may as well
Forbid the sea for to obey the moon
As or by oath remove or counsel shake
The fabric of his folly, whose foundation
Is pil'd upon his faith, and will continue
The standing of his body.

Pol. How should this grow?
Cam. I know not: but I am sure 'tis safer to Avoid what's grown than question how 'tis born.
If therefore you dare trust my honesty,
That lies enclosed in this trunk, which you
Shall bear along impawn'd, away to-night!
Your followers I will whisper to the business,
And will by twos and threes at several posterns Clear them o' the city. For myself, I'll put My fortunes to your service, which are here
By this discovery lost. Be not uncertain;
For, by the honour of my parents, I
Have utter'd truth, which if you seek to prove,
I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer
Than one condemn'd by the king's own mouth, thereon
His execution sworn.

Pol. I do believe thee:
I saw his heart in's face. Give me thy hand:
Be pilot to me and thy places shall Still neighbour mine. My ships are ready and My people did expect my hence departure
Two days ago. This jealousy
Is for a precious creature: as she's rare
Must it be great, and as his person's mighty
Must it be violent, and as he does conceive
He is dishonour'd by a man which ever Profess'd to him, why, his revenges must
In that be made more bitter. Fear o'ershades me:
Good expedition be my friend, and comfort
The gracious queen, part of his theme, but nothing
Of his ill-ta'en suspicion! Come, Camillo: I
I will respect thee as a father if Thou bear'st my life off hence: let us avoid,
Cam. It is in mine authority to command
The keys of all the posterns: please your highness
To take the urgent hour. Come, sir: away!

Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Sicilia. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Hermione, Camillo, and Ladies.

Her. Take the boy to you: he so troubles me,
'Tis past enduring.

First Lady. Come, my gracious lord,
Shall I be your playfellow?

Pol. No, I'll none of ye.
First Lady. Why, my sweet lord?
Pol. You'll kiss me hard and speak to me as I were a baby still. I love you better.
Second Lady. And why so, my lord?
Pol. Not for becom
Your brows are blacker; yet black brows, th
say,
Become some women best, so that there be n
Too much hair there, but in a semicircle,
Or a half-moon made with a pen.
Second Lady. Who taught you th
Pol. I learn'd it out of women's faces. P
now,
What colour are your eyebrows?

First Lady. Blue, my lo
Pol. Nay, that's a mock: I have seen lady's nose
That has been blue, but not her eyebrows.
Second Lady. Har
Pol. The queen your mother rounds apace: we sh
Present our services to a fine new prince
One of these days; and then you'd want
with us,
If we would have you.

First Lady. She is spread of late
Into a goodly bulk: good time encounter her;
Her. What wisdom stirs amongst you! Con
sir; now
I am for you again: pray you, sit by us,
And tell's a tale.

Pol. Merry or sad shall't be?
Her. As merry as you will.
Pol. A sad tale's best for winter,
I have one of sprites and goblins.
Her. Let's have that, good
Pol. Come on, sit down: come on, and do your be To fright me with your sprites; you're power at it.
Pol. There was a man—
Her. Nay, come, sit down; then
Pol. Dwelt by a churchyard. 'I will tell softly;
Yond crickets shall not hear it.
Her. Come on them,
And give 't me in mine ear.

Enter Leontes, Antigonus, Lords, and Others.

Leon. Was he met there? his train? Camillo with him?
First Lord. Behind the tuft of pines I met them: never Saw I men scour so on their way: I eyed the Even to their ships.

Leon. How best am I
In my just censure, in my true opinion!
Alack! for lesser knowledge, how accurs'd
In being so blest! There may be in the cup
A spider steep'd, and one may drink, depart.
And yet partake no venom, for his knowledge
Is not infected; but if one present
The abhorr'd ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his side
With violent hefts. I have drunk, and seen a spider.

Camillo was his help in this, his pandar:
There is a plot against my life, my crown;
All's true that is mistrusted: that false villain
Whom I employ'd was pre-employ'd by him
He has discover'd my design, and I
With an aspect more favourable. Good my lords, I am not prone to weeping, as our sex Commonly are; the want of which vain dew Perchance shall dry your pities; but I have That honourable grief lodg'd here which burns Worse than tears drown. Beseech you all, my lords, With thoughts so qualified as your charities Shall best instruct you, measure me; and so The king's will be perform'd!

Leon. Shall I be heard?

Her. Who is't that goes with me? Beseech your highness,

My women may be with me; for you see My plight requires it. Do not weep, good fools; There is no cause: when you shall know your mistress Has deserv'd prison, then abound in tears As I come out: this action I now go on Is for my better grace. Adieu, my lord: I never wish'd to see you sorry; now I trust I shall. My women, come; you have leave.

Leon. Go, do our bidding: hence!

Exit Queen, guarded; with Ladies.

First Lord. Beseech your highness, call the queen again.

Ant. Be certain what you do, sir, lest your justice Prove violence; in which the three great ones suffer, Yourself, your queen, your son.

First Lord. For her, my lord, I dare my life lay down, and will do't, sir. Please you to accept it, that the queen is spotless I the eyes of heaven and to you: I mean, In this which you accuse her.

Ant. If it prove She's otherwise, I'll keep my stables where I lodge my wife; I'll go in couples with her; Than when I feel and see her no further trust her; For every inch of woman in the world, Ay, every dram of woman's flesh is false, If she be.

Leon. Hold your peace!

First Lord. Good my lord,—

Ant. It is for you we speak, not for ourselves. You are abus'd, and by some putter-on That will be damn'd for't; would I knew the villain I would land-damn him. Be she honour-flaw'd I have three daughters; the eldest is twelve, The second and the third, nine, and some five: If this prove true, they'll pay for't: by mine honour, I'll geld them all; fourteen they shall not see, To bring false generations: they are co-heirs; And I had rather glib myself than they Should not produce fair issue.

Leon. Cease! no more. You smell this business with a sense as cold As is a dead man's nose; but I do see't and feel't, As you feel doing thus, and see withal! The instruments that feel.

Ant. If it be so, We need no grave to bury honesty: There's not a grain of it the face to sweeten Of the whole dusty earth.

Leon. What! lack I credit?
THE WINTER'S TALE.

First Lord. I had rather you did lack than I,
your lord,
Upon this ground; and more it would content me
To have her honour true than your suspicion, 169
Be blam'd for't how you might.

Leon. Why, what need we Commune with you of this, but rather follow
Our forceful instigation? Our prerogative
Calls not your counsels, but our natural goodness
Imparts this; which if you, or stupefied
Or seeming so in skill, cannot or will not Relish a truth like us, inform yourselves,
We need no more of your advice: the matter,
The loss, the gain, the ordering on 't, is all Properly ours.

Ant. And I wish, my liege, 170
You had only in your silent judgment tried it,
Without more overture.

Leon. How could that be?
Either thou art most ignorant by age,
Or thou wert born a fool. Camillo's flight,
Added to their familiarity,
Which was as gross as ever touch'd conjecture,
That lack'd sight only, nought for approbation
But only seeing, all other circumstances
Made up to the deed, doth push on this proceeding:
Yet, for a greater confirmation,
For in an act of this importance 'twere
Most piteous to be wild, I have dispatch'd in post
To sacred Delphos, to Apollo's temple,
Cleomenes and Dion, whom you know
Of stuff'd sufficiency. Now from the oracle
They will bring all; whose spiritual counsel had,
Shall stop or spur me. Have I done well?

First Lord. Well done, my lord.

Leon. Though I am satisfied and need no more Than what I know, yet shall the oracle 193
Give rest to the minds of others, such as he Whose ignorant credulity will not Come up to the truth. So have we thought it good
From our free person she should be confin'd,
Lest that the treachery of the two fled hence
Be left her to perform. Come, follow us:
We are to speak in public; for this business
Will raise us all.

Ant. Aside. To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth were known. Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. The outer Room of a Prison.

Enter Paulina and Attendants.

Paul. The keeper of the prison, call to him:
Let him have knowledge who I am.

Exit an Attend. Good lady,

No court in Europe is too good for thee;
What dost thou then in prison?

Re-enter Attend, with the Gaoler.

You know me, do you not?

Gaoler. For a worthy lady
And one whom much I honour.

Paul. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the queen.

Gaoler. I may not, madam: to the contrary
I have express commandment.

Paul. Here's ado,

To lock up honesty and honour from
The access of gentle visitors! Is 't lawful, you,
To see her women? any of them? Emilia?

Gaoler. So please you, madam,
To put apart these your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.

Paul. I pray now, call Withdraw yourselves. Exeunt Attends.

Gaoler. And, madam,
I must be present at your conference.

Paul. Well, be 't so, prithee. Exit Ga

Here's such ado to make no stain a stain,
As passes colouring.

Re-enter Gaoler, with Emilia.

Dear gentlewoman,
How fares our gracious lady?

Emil. As well as one so great and so forlorn
May hold together. On her frights and grief
Which never tender lady hath borne greater
She is something before her time deliver'd.

Paul. A boy!

Emil. A daughter; and a goodly boy.

Paul. And lady like to live: the queen receives Much comfort in 't; says 'My poor prisoner
I am innocent as you.'

Paul. I dare be sworn:
These dangerous unsafe lunes! the king, beshrew
them!

He must be told on 't, and he shall: the offi come becomes a woman best; I'll take 't upon me
If I prove honey-mouth'd, let my tongue blis
And never to my red-look'd anger be
The trumpet any more. Pray you, Emilia,
Commend my best obedience to the queen:
If she dares trust me with her little babe,
I'll show 't the king and undertake to be
Her advocate to the loud'st. We do not know
How he may soften at the sight of the child
The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades when speaking fails.

Emil. Most worthy madam,
Your honour and your goodness is so evident
That your free undertaking cannot miss
A thriving issue: there is no lady living
So meet for this great errand. Please your high

To visit the next room, I'll presently
Acquaint the queen of your most noble offer,
Who but to-day hammer'd of this design,
But durst not tempt a minister of honour,
Lest she should be denied.

Paul. Tell her, Emilia,
I'll use that tongue I have; if wit flow from
As boldness from my bosom, let 't not be doubt
I shall do good.

Emil. Now be you blest for it!

Paul. I'll to the queen. Please you, come somethin nearer.

Gaoler. Madam, if 't please the queen to see the babe,
I know not what I shall incur to pass it,
Having no warrant.

Paul. You need not fear it, sir.

The child was prisoner to the womb, and is
By law and process of great nature thence Freed and enfranchis'd; not a party to
The anger of the king, nor guilty of,
If any be, the trespass of the queen.
Gaoler. I do believe it.
Paul. Do not you fear: upon mine honour, I will stand betwixt you and danger.

Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Leontes, Antigonus, Lords, and other Attendants.

Leont. Nor night nor day no rest: it is but weakness to bear the matter thus; mere weakness. If my cause were not in being,—part o' the cause, the adulteress,—for the harlot kept quite beyond mine arm, out of the blank d level of my brain, plot-proof; but she did, and an hook to me: say that she were gone, ven to the fire, a moiety of my rest ght come to me again. Who's there?

First Att. My lord.
Leont. How does the boy?

First Att. He took good rest to-night; so hop'd his sickness is discharg'd.

Leont. To see his nobleness! receiving the dishonour of his mother, straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply, stend' and fix'd the shame on 't in himself, rew off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep, downright languish'd. Leave me solely: go, how he fares.

Exit Attendant.

Enter Paulina, with a Child.

First Lord. You must not enter.

Paul. Nay, rather, good my lords, be second to me: see you his tyrannous passion more, alas! in the queen's life? a gracious innocent soul, e free than he is jealous.

Leont. That's enough.

Second Att. Madam, he hath not slept to-night; commanded he should come at him.

Paul. Not so hot, good sir: ome to bring him sleep. 'Tis such as you, at creep like shadows by him and do sigh each his needless heaving, such as you wish the cause of his awaking? I come with words as med'cinal as true, nest as either, to purge him of that humour it presses him from sleep.

Leont. What noise there, ho?
Paul. No noise, my lord; but needful conference out some gossips for your highness.

Leont. How!
Paul. ay with that audacious lady! Antigonus, barg'd thee that she should not come about me:

new she would.

Ant. I told her so, my lord, your displeasure's peril and on mine, should not visit you.

Leont. What! canst not rule her?
Paul. From all dishonesty he can: in this, Unless he take the course that you have done, Commit me for committing honour, trust it, He shall not rule me.

Ant. La you now! you hear; When she will take the rein I let her run; But she 'll not stumble.

Paul. Good my liege, I come; And I beseech you, hear me, who professes Myself your loyal servant, your physician, Your most obedient counsellor, yet that dares Less appear so in comforting your evils Than such as most seem yours: I say I come From your good queen.

Leont. Good queen!
Paul. Good queen, my lord, good queen! I say, good queen; And would by combat make her good, so were I A man, the worst about you, Leont. Force her hence.

Paul. Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes First hand me: on mine own accord I 'll off; But first I 'll do my errand. The good queen, For she is good, hath brought you forth a daughter:

Here 'tis; commends it to your blessing. Laying down the Child.

Leont. Out! A mankind witch! Hence with her, out o' door: A most intelligencing bawd!

Paul. Not so: I am as ignorant in that as you In so entitling me, and no less honest Than you are mad: which is enough, I 'll warrant, As this world goes, to pass for honest.

Leont. Traitors! ?

Will you not push her out? Give her the bastard. To Antigonus. Thou dotard! thou art woman-tir'd, unroosted By thy dame Partlet here. Take up the bastard; Take it up, I say; give 't to thy crane.

Paul. For ever Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou Tak'st up the princess by that forced baseness Which he has put upon 't!

Leont. He dreads his wife.

Paul. So I would you did; then 'twere past all doubt You'd call your children yours.

Leont. A nest of traitors!

Ant. I am none, by this good light.

Paul. Nor I; nor any But one that 's here, and that 's himself; for he The sacred honour of himself, his queen's, His hopeful son's, his babe's, betrays to slander, Whose sting is sharper than the sword's; and will not, For, as the case now stands, it is a curse He cannot be compell'd to, once remove The root of his opinion, which is rotten As ever oak or stone was sound.

Leont. A callat Of boundless tongue, who late liath beat her husband And now baits me! This brat is none of mine; It is the issue of Polixenes. Hence with it; and together with the dam Commit them to the fire!

Paul. It is yours;
And, might we lay the old proverb to your charge,
'So like you, 'tis the worse.' Behold, my lords, Although the print be little, the whole matter And copy of the father; eye, nose, lip. The trick of's frown, his forehead, nay, the valley, The pretty dimples of his chin and cheek, his smiles, The very mould and frame of hand, nail, finger: And thou, good goddess Nature, which hast made it So like to him that got it, if thou hast The ordering of the mind too, 'mongst all colours No yellow in 't; lest she suspect, as he does, Her children not her husband's.

Leon. A gross hag!
And, lozel, thou art worthy to be hang'd, That will not stay her tongue.

Ant. Hang all the husbands
That cannot do that feat, you'll leave yourself Hardly one subject.

Leon. Once more, take her hence.

Paul. A most unworthy and unnatural lord Can do no more.

Leon. I'll ha' thee burn'd.

Paul. I care not:
It is an heretic that makes the fire, Not she which burns in't. I'll not call you tyrant; But this most cruel usage of your queen, Not able to produce more accusation Than your own weak-h'rd fancy, something savours Of tyranny, and will ignoble make you, Yea, scandalous to the world.

Leon. On your allegiance, Out of the chamber with her! Were I a tyrant, Where were her life? she durst not call me so If she did know me one. Away with her! 122

Paul. I pray you do not push me; I'll be gone. Look to your babe, my lord; 'tis yours: Jove send her

A better guiding spirit! What needs these hands? You, that are thus so tender o'er his follies, Will never do him good, not one of you. So, so: farewell; we are gone. 123

Leon. Thou, traitor, hast set on thy wife to this. My child! away with 't! Even thou, that hast A heart so tender o'er it, take it hence And see it instantly consum'd with fire: Even thou and none but thou. Take it up straightly: Within this hour bring me word 'tis done, And by good testimony, or I'll seize thy life, With what thou else call'st thine. If thou refuse And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so; The bastard brains with these my proper hands Shall I dash out. Go, take it to the fire; For thou sett'st on thy wife.

Ant. I did not, sir: 140
These lords, my noble fellows, if they please, Can clear me in 't.

First Lord. We can, my royal liege: He is not guilty of her coming hither. Leon. You are liars all.

First Lord. Beseech your highness, give us better credit: We have always truly serv'd you, and beseech you So to esteem of us; and on our knees we beg, As recompense of our dear services Past and to come, that you do change this purpose,

Which being so horrible, so bloody, must Lead on to some foul issue. We all kneel. Leon. I am a feather for each wind that blow Shall I live on to see this bastard kneel And call me father? Better burn it now Than curse it then. But let it live: It shall not neither. You, sir, come you hither That you have been so tenderly officious With Lady Margery, your midwife there, To save this bastard's life, for 'tis a bastard. So sure as this beard's grey, what will your adventure To save this brat's life?

Ant. Any thing, my lord, That my ability may undergo, And nobleness impose: at least thus much: I'll pawn the little blood which I have left, To save the innocent: any thing possible. Leon. It shall be possible. Swear by this sw Thou wilt perform my bidding.

Ant. I will, my lord.

Leon. Mark and perform it, seest thou! the fall Of any point in 't shall not only be Death to thyself, but to thy lewd-tongued wife, Whom for this time we pardon. We enjoy thee, As thou art legeman to us, that thou carry This female bastard hence; and that thou bring To some remote and desert place quite out Of our dominions; and that thou leave Without more mercy, to its own protection And favour of the climate. As by strange fort It came to us, I do in justice charge thee, On thy soul's peril and thy body's torture, That thou commend it strangely to some place Where chance may nurse or end it. Take it.

Ant. I swear to do this, though a present de
Had been more merciful. Come on, poor bar. Some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens To be thy nurses! Wolves and bears, they, Casting their savageness aside have done Like offices of pity. Sir, be prosperous In more than this deed doth require! A blessing Against this cruelty fight on thy side, Poor thing, condemn'd to loss!

Exit with the Ch.

Leon. No; I'll not hear Another's issue.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Please your highness, post From those you sent to the oracle are come An hour since: Cleomenes and Dion, Being well arriv'd from Delphos, are both land, Hasting to the court.

First Lord. So please you, sir, their sped Hath been beyond account.

Leon. Twenty-three days They have been absent; 'tis good speed; for it The great Apollo suddenly will have The truth of this appear. Prepare you, lord Summon a session, that we may arraign Our most disloyal lady; for, as she hath Been publicly accus'd, so shall she have A just and open trial. While she lives My heart will be a burden to me. Leave me And think upon my bidding.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Sea-port in Sicilia.

Enter Cleomenes and Dion.

Cleo. The climate's delicate, the air most sweet,
That isle, the temple much surpassing
A common praise it bears.

Dion. I shall report,
Most of all, the burst
Of the ear-deafening voice of the oracle,
To Jove's thunder, so surpris'd my sense, in
At I was nothing.

Cleo. But of the burst,
That all to the best!
These proclamations,
Forming faults upon Hermione,
To this like.

Dion. The violent carriage of it
Iil clear or end the business: when the oracle,
As by Apollo's great divine seal'd up,
All the contents discover, some of rare
Then will rush to knowledge. Go: fresh horses!
Gracious be the issue! Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Sicilia. A Court of Justice.

Enter Leontes, Lords, and Officers.

Leon. This sessions, to our great grief we pronounce,
That comes to us rare, pleasant, speedy,
Time is worth the use on't.

Cleo. Great Apollo
In all to the best! These proclamations,
Forcing faults upon Hermione,
Title like.

Dion. Though 'tis a saying, sir, not due to me.
Leon. You will not own it.

Leon. More than mistress of
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must not
At all acknowledge. For Cleomenes,
Whom I am accus'd, I do confess
I lov'd him as in honour he requir'd,
With such a kind of love as might become
A lady like me; with a love even such,
So and no other, as yourself commanded:
Which not to have done I think had been in me
Both disobedience and ingratitude
To you and toward your friend, whose love had Spoke,
Since it could speak, from an infant, freely
That it was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes, though it be dish'd
For me to try how: all I know of it
Is that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your court, the gods themselves,
Wotting no more than I, are ignorant.
Leon. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have underta'en to do in 's absence.
Her. Sir,
You speak a language that I understand not:
My life stands in the level of your dreams,
Which I'll lay down.

Leon. Your actions are my dreams:
You had a bastard by Polixenes,
And I but dream'd it. As you were past all shame,
Those of your fact are so, so past all truth:
Which to deny concerns more than avails; for as
Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,
No father owning it, which is, indeed,
More criminal in thee than it, so thou
Shalt feel our justice, in whose easiest passage
Look for no less than death.

Being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it,
Be so receiv'd. But thus: if powers divine
Behold our human actions, as they do,
I doubt not then but innocence shall make False accusation blush, and tyranny
Tremble at patience. You, my lord, best know,
Who least will seem to do so, my past life
Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Than history can pattern, though devil's
And play'd to take spectators. For behold me,
A fellow of the royal bed, which owes Anxiety of the throne, a great king's daughter
The mother to a hopeful prince, the standing
To pray and talk for life and honour 'fore
Who please to come and hear. For life, I prize it
As I weigh grief, which I would spare: for honour,
'Tis a derivative from me to mine,
And only that I stand for. I appeal
To your own conscience, sir, before Polixenes
Came to your court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so; since he came,
With what encounter so uncurrent
Have strain'd to appear thus: if one jot beyond
The bound of honour, or in act or will
That way inclining, harden'd be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st kin
Cry fie upon my grave!

Leon. I ne'er heard yet
That any of these bolder vices wanted
Less impediment to gaisnay what they did
Than to perform it first.

Her. That's true enough;
Though 'tis a saying, sir, not due to me.
Leon. You will not own it.

Her. More than mistress of
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes,
With whom I am accus'd, I do confess
I lov'd him as in honour he requir'd,
With such a kind of love as might become
A lady like me; with a love even such,
So and no other, as yourself commanded:
Which not to have done I think had been in me
Both disobedience and ingratitude
To you and toward your friend, whose love had Spoke,
Since it could speak, from an infant, freely
That it was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes, though it be dish'd
For me to try how: all I know of it
Is that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your court, the gods themselves,
Wotting no more than I, are ignorant.
Leon. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have underta'en to do in 's absence.
Her. Sir,
You speak a language that I understand not:
My life stands in the level of your dreams,
Which I'll lay down.

Leon. Your actions are my dreams:
You had a bastard by Polixenes,
And I but dream'd it. As you were past all shame,
Those of your fact are so, so past all truth:
Which to deny concerns more than avails; for as
Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,
No father owning it, which is, indeed,
More criminal in thee than it, so thou
Shalt feel our justice, in whose easiest passage
Look for no less than death.
Leon. Apollo's angry; and the heavens themselves
Do strike at my injustice. Hermione.

Paul. This news is mortal to the queen: I draw down
And see what death is doing.

Leon. Take her heart.

Her heart is but o'ercharg'd; she will recover
I have too much believ'd mine own suspicion.
Beseech you, tenderly apply to her
Some remedies for life.

Exeunt Paulina and Ladies, with Hermione.

Apollo, Pardon.

My great profaneness 'gainst thine oracle! I'll reconcile me to Polixenes,
New woo my queen, recall the good Camillo
Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy
For, being transported by my jealousies
To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose Camillo for the minister to poison
My friend Polixenes: which had been done
But that the good mind of Camillo tardied
My swift command; though I with death
With reward did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it, and being done: he, most humane
And fill'd with honour, to my kingly guest
Unclas'd my practice, quit his fortunes here.
Which you knew great, and to the certain hand
Of all incertainties himself commended,
No richer than his honour: how he glisters
Thorough my lust! and how his piety
Does my deeds make the blacker!

Re-enter Paulina.

Paul.

Woe the while! O! cut my lace, lest my heart, cracking it,
Break too.

First Lord. What fit is this, good lady?

Paul. What studied torments, tyrant, for me?

In leads or oils? what old or newer torture
Must I receive, whose every word deserves
To taste of thy most worst? Thy tyranny,
Together working with thy jealousies,
Fancies too weak for boys, too green and id
For girls of nine, O! think, what they have done,
And then run mad indeed, stark mad; for a
Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices of it.
That thou betray'dst Polixenes, 'twas nothing
That did but show thee, of a fool, incestuous
And damnable ingrateful: nor was 't much Thou would'st have poison'd good Camill's
honour,
To have him kill a king; poor trespasses,
More monstrous standing by: whereof I read
The casting forth to crow thy baby daughter
To be or none or little; though a devil
Would have shed water out of fire ere done:
Nor is 't directly laid to thee, the death
Of the young prince, whose honourable thoughts
Thoughts high for one so tender, cleft the heart
That could conceive a gross and foolish sire
Blemish'd his gracious dam: this is not, no
Laid to thy answer: but the last, O lords!
When I have said, cry 'woe!' the queen, my queen,
THE WINTER'S TALE.

Eufe. The higher powers forbid! Paul. I say she's dead: I'll swear 't: if word nor oath evill not, go and see. If you can bring acture or lustre in her lip, her eye, at outwardly, or breith within, I'll serve you I would do the gods. But, O thou tyrant! not repent these things, for they are heavier an all thy woes can stir; therefore betake thee nothing but despair. A thousand knees a thousand years together, naked, fasting, 210 on a barren mountain, and still winter storm perpetual, could not move the gods look that way thou wert. Len. Go on, go on; I canst not speak too much: I have deserv'd tongues to talk their bitterest. First Lord. Say no more: we'er the business goes, you have made fault the boldness of your speech.

Paul. I am sorry for 't: faults I make, when I shall come to know them, to repent. Alas! I have shou'd too much rashness of a woman: he is touch'd 220 the noble heart. What's gone and what's past help could be past grief: do not receive affliction my petition; I beseech you rather: be me punish'd, that have minded you what you should forget. Now, good my liege, royal sir, forgive a foolish woman; I love you bored your queen,—lo, fool again!—speak of her no more, nor of your children; nor remember you of my own lord, so is lost too: take your patience to you, 230 I'll say nothing.

Thou didst speak but well, on most the truth, which I receive much better, so to be pitied of thee. Prithee, bring me the dead bodies of my queen and son: grave shall be for both: upon them shall causes of their death appear, unto shame perpetual. Once a day I'll visit a chapel where they lie, and tears shed there'll be my recreation: so long as nature bear up with this exercise so long 240 ally vow to use it. Come and lead me to these sorrows. Exeunt.

EUNE III.—Bohemia. A desert Country near the Sea. Enter ANTIGONUS, with the Child; and a Mariner. Act. Thon art perfect then, our ship hath touch'd upon deserts of Bohemia? Mar. Ay, my lord; and fear have landed in ill time: the skies look grimly I threaten present blusters. In my conscience, heavens with that we have in hand are angry, I frown upon.

Int. Their sacred wills be done! Go, get aboard; Look to thy bark: I'll not be long before I call upon thee.

Mar. Make your best haste, and go not Too far i' the land: 'tis like to be loud weather; Besides, this place is famous for the creatures Of prey that keep upon't.

Ant. Go thou away: I'll follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart To be so rid o' the business. Exit.

Ant. Come, poor babe: I have heard, but not believ'd, the spirits o' the dead May walk again: if such thing be, thy mother Appear'd to me last night, for he'er was dream So like a waking. To me comes a creature. Sometimes her head on one side, some another; I never saw a vessel of like sorrow, 21 So fill'd and so becoming: in pure white robes, Like very sanctity, she did approach My cabin where I lay; thrice bow'd before me, And gasping to begin some speech, her eyes Became two spouts: the fury spent, anon Did this break from her: 'Good Antigonus, Since fate, against thy better disposition, Hath made thy person for the thrower-out Of my poor babe, according to thine oath, Places remote enough are in Bohemia, There weep and leave it crying; and, for the babe Is count'd lost for ever, Perdita, I prithee, call 't: for this ungentle business, Put on thee by my lord, thou ne'er shalt see Thy wife Paulina more': and so, with shrieks, She melted into air. Affrighted much, I did in time collect myself, and thought This was so and no slumber. Dreams are toys; Yet for this once, yea, superstitiously, 40 I will be squar'd by this. I do believe Hermione hath suffer'd death; and that Apollo would, this being indeed the issue Of King Polixenes, it should here be laid, Either for life or death, upon the earth Of its right father. Blossom, speed thee well! Laying down the child, There lie; and there thy character; there these; Laying down a bundle, Which may, if fortune please, both breed thee, pretty, And still rest thine. The storm begins: poor wretch! That for thy mother's fault art thus expos'd 50 To loss and what may follow. WEEP I cannot, But my heart bleeds, and most accurs'd am I To be by oath enjoin'd to this. Farewell! The day frowns more and more: thou 'rt like to have A lullaby too rough. I never saw The heavens so dim by day. A savage clamour! Well may I get aboard! This is the chaise: I am gone for ever. Exit, pursued by a bear.

Enter an old Shepherd. Shep. I would there were no age between sixteen and three and twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest; for there is nothing in the between but getting wenches with child, wronging the ancienrty, stealing, fighting. Hark you now! Would any but these boiled brains of nineteen and two and twenty hunt this weather? They have scared away two of my best sheep; which I fear the wolf will sooner find than the master: if any where I have them, 'tis by the sea-side, browsing of ivy. Good luck, an't be thy will! what have we here! Mercy on 's, a barren; a very pretty barren! A boy or a child, I wonder? A pretty one; a very pretty one: sure some 'scape: though I am not bookish, yet I can read waiting-gentlewoman in the 'scape. This has been some stair-work, some trunk-work, some behind-door-work: they were warmer that got this than the poor thing is here. I'll take it up for pity; yet I'll tarry till my son come: he hollashed but even now. Why, ho, ho, ho! Clo. Without. Hillao, loa! Ship. What! art so near? If thou 'll see a thing to talk on when thou art dead and rotten, come hither.

Enter Clown.

What allest thou, man?

Clo. I have seen two such sights by sea and by land! but I am not to say it is a sea, for it is now the sky: betwixt the firmament and it you cannot thrust a bodkin's point.

Ship. Why, boy, how is it?

Clo. I would you did but see how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes up the shore! but that's not to the point. Of! the most piteous cry of the poor souls; sometimes to see 'em, and not to see 'em; now the ship boring the moon with her mainmast, and anon swallowed with yest and froth, as you'd thrust a cork into a hog's head. And then for the land-service: to see how the bear tore out his shoulder-bone; how he cried to me for help and said his name was Antigonus, a nobleman. But to make an end of the ship: to see how the sea flap-dragoned it: but, first, how the poor souls roared, and the sea mocked them; and how the poor gentleman roared, and the bear mocked him, both roaring louder than the sea or weather.

Ship. Name of mercy! when was this, boy?

Clo. Now, now; I have not winked since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half dined on the gentleman: he's at it now.

Ship. Would I had been by, to have helped the old man!

Clo. I would you had been by the ship side, to have helped her: there your charity would have lacked footing.

Ship. Heavy matters! heavy matters! but look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself: thou meetest what things dying, I with things new-born. Here's a sight for thee: look thee, a bearing-cloth for a squire's child! Look thee here: take up, take up, boy; open't. So, let's see. It was told me I should be rich by the fairies: this is some changeling. Open't: what's within, boy?

Clo. You're a made old man: if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold! all gold!

Ship. This is fairy gold, boy, and 'twill prove so: up with 't, keep it close: home, home, the next way. We are lucky, boy; and to be so still requires nothing but secrity. Let my sheep go. Come, good boy, the next way home.

Clo. Go you the next way with your findings: I'll go see if the bear be gone from the gentleman and how much he hath eaten: they never curst but when they are hungry. It's be any of him left, I'll bury it.

Ship. That's a good deed. If thou man- discern by that which is left of him what is fetch me to the sight of him.

Clo. Marry, will I; and you shall help to him 't the ground.

Ship. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and we'll do deeds on't.

ACT IV.

Enter Time, the Chorus.

I, that please some, try all, both joy and terror Of good and bad, that makes and unfolds error Now take upon me, in the name of Time, To use my wings. Impose it not a crime To me or my swift passage, that I slide O'er sixteen years, and leave the growth untried Of that wide gap; since it is in my power To o'erthrow law, and in one self-born hour To plant and o'errevel custom. Let me pass The same I am, ere ancient order is Or what is now receiv'd: I witness to The times that brought them in; so shall I Do to the freshest things now reigning, and make The glistering of this present, as my tale Now seems to it. Your patience this allowing, I turn my glass and give my scene such growth As you had slept between. Leontes leaving, The effects of his fond jealousies so grievous That he shuts up himself; imagine me, Gentle spectators, that I now may be In fair Bohemia; and remember well, I mention'd a son of the king's, which Florizel I now name to you; and with speed so pace To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace Equal with wondering: what of her ensues I list not prophesy; but let Time's news Be known when 'tis brought forth. A shep- daughter, And what to her adheres, which follows after, Is the argument of Time. Of this allow, If ever you have spent time worse ere now: If never, yet that Time himself doth say He wishes earnestly you never may.

SCENE I.—Bohemia. A Room in the Palace of POLIXENES.

Enter POLIXENES and CAMILO.

Pol. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no importunate: 'tis a sickness denying thee thing; a death to grant this.

Cam. It is fifteen years since I saw my entry: though I have for the most part been abroad, I desire to lay my bones there. Beside the penitent king, my master, hath sent forth to whose feeling sorrows I might be some use or I o'erween to think so, which is another to my departure.

Pol. As thou lovost me, Camillo, wipe not the rest of thy services by leaving me now. I need have of thee thine own goodness made: better not to have had thee than to want thee. Thou, having made me business which none without thee can sufficiently make, must either stay to execute them thyself or away with thee the very services thou hast de
Enter Clown.

Clo. Let me see: every leven wether todes; every tod yields pound and odd shilling: fifteen hundred shorn, what comes the wool to?

Aut. Aside. If the springe hold, the cock’s mine.

Clo. I cannot do’t without counters. Let me see; what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? Three pound of sugar; five pound of currants; rice, what will this sister of mine do with rice? But my father hath made her mistress of the feast, and she lays it on. She hath made me four-and-twenty nosegays for the shearers, three-man song-men all, and very good ones; but they are most of them means and bases: but one puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to hornpipes. I must have saffron to colour the warden pies; mace, dates, none; that’s out of my note: nutmegs, seven; a race or two of ginger, but that I may beg; four pound of prunes, and as many of raisins of the sun.

Aut. O! that ever I was born.

Grovelling on the ground.

Clo. I’t the name of me,—

Aut. O! help me, help me! pluck but off these rags, and then, death, death!

Clo. Aack! poor soul, thou hast need of more rags to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

Aut. O! sir, the loathsomeness of them offends me more than the stripes I have received, which are mighty ones and millions.

Clo. Alas! poor man, a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am robbed, sir, and beaten; my money and apparel ta’en from me, and these detestable things put upon me.

Clo. What! by a horseman, or a footman?

Aut. A footman, sweet sir, a footman.

Clo. Indeed, he should be a footman by the garments he hath left with thee: if this be a horseman’s cont, it hath seen very hot service. Lend me thy hand, I’ll help thee: come, lend me thy hand.

Helping him up.

Aut. O! good sir, tenderly, O!

Clo. Alas! poor soul.

Aut. O! good sir; softly, good sir! I fear, sir, my shoulder-blade is out.

Clo. How now! canst stand?

Aut. Softly, dear sir: Picks his pocket: good sir, softly. You ha’ done me a charitable office.

Clo. Dost lack any money? I have a little money for thee.

Aut. No, good sweet sir: no, I beseech you, sir. I have a kinsman not past three quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going: I shall there have money, or any thing I want: offer me no money, I pray you! that kills my heart.

Clo. What manner of fellow was he that robbed you?

Aut. A fellow, sir, that I have known to go about with troll-my-dames: I knew him once a servant of the prince. I cannot tell, good sir, for which of his virtues it was, but he was certainly whipped out of the court.

Clo. His vices, you would say: there's no virtue whipped out of the court: they cherish it to make it stay there, and yet it will no more but abide.

Aut. Vices, I would say, sir. I know this man well: he hath been since an ape-bearer; then a process-server, a bailiff; then he compassed a motion of the Prodigal Son, and married a tinker's wife within a mile where my land and living lies; and, having flown over many knavish professions, he settled only in rogue: some call him Autolycus.

Clo. Out upon him! Prig, for my life, prig: he haunts wakes, fairs, and bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true, sir; he, sir, he: that's the rogue that put me into this apparel.

Clo. Not a more cowardly rogue in all Bohemia: if you had but looked big and spit at him, he'd have run.

Aut. I must confess to you, sir, I am no fighter: I am false of that way, and that he knew, I warrant him.

Clo. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet sir, much better than I was: I can stand and walk. I will even take my leave of you, and pace softly towards my kinsman's.

Clo. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good-faced sir; no, sweet sir.

Clo. Then fare thee well: I must go buy spices for our sheep-shearing.

Aut. Prosper you, sweet sir! Exit Clown.

Your purse is not hot enough to purchase your spice. I'll be with you at your sheep-shearing too. If I make not this cheat bring out another, and the shearsers prove sheep, let me be unrolled, and my name put in the book of virtue!

Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,
And merrily he's the stile a:
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile-a. Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Lawn before a Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter FLORIZEL and PERDITA.

Flor. These your usual weeds to each part of you
Do give a life: no shepherdess, but Flora
Peering in April's front. This your sheep-shearing
Is as a meeting of the petty gods,
And you the queen on't.

Per. Sir, my gracious lord,
To chide at your extremes it not becomes me:
O! pardon, that I name them. Your high self
The graces mark o' the land, you have obscure'd
With a swain's wearing, and me, poor lowly maid, Most goddess-like prank'd up. But that our feasts
In every mess have folly, and the feeders
Digest it with a custom, I should blush
To see you so attired, sworn, I think
To show myself a glass.

Flo. I bless the time
When my good falcon made her flight across
Thy father's ground.

Per. Now Jove afford you care
To me the difference forges dread; your great
Hath not been us'd to fear. Even now I trem
To think your father, by some accident,
Should pass this way as you did. O! the Faith
How would he look, to see his work, so nob Vilely bound up? What would he say? Or let
I should I, in these my borrow'd flaunts, behold
The sternness of his presence?

Flo. Apprehend Nothing but jollity. The gods themselves, Humbling their deities to love, have taken The shapes of beasts upon them: Jupiter became a bull, and bellow'd: the green Nept
A ram, and bleated; and the fire-rob'd god,
Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain,
As I seem now. Their transformations Were never for a piece of beauty rarer,
Nor in a way so chaste, since my desires Run not before mine honour, nor my lusts Burn hotter than my faith.

Per. O! but, sir, Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis Oppos'd, as it must be, by the power of the king. One of these two must be necessities, Which then will speak, that you must change this purpose,
Or I my life.

Flo. Then dearest Perdita,
With these forc'd thoughts, I pritch, dear, am not
The mirth o' the feast: or I'll be thine, my
Or not my father's; for I cannot be Mine own, nor any thing to any, if I be not thine: to this I am most constant,
Though destiny say no. Be merry, gentle;
Strange such thoughts as these with any the
That you behold the while. Your guests coming:
Lift up your countenance, as it were the day Of celebration of that nuptial which
We two have sworn shall come.

Per. O lady Forte,
Stand you auspicious!

Flo. See, your guests approach.
Address yourself to entertain them sprightly
And let's be red with mirth.

Enter Shepherd, with POLIXENES and CAMILLUS disguised; Clown, MOPSA, DORCAS, Others.
Shep. Fie, daughter! when my old wife lies upon
This day she was both pantler, butler, cook
Both dame and servant; welcome'd all, serv'd all Would sing her song and dance her turn; we
At upper end o' the table, now i' the middle
On his shoulder, and his; her face o' fire
With labour and the thing she took to quench
She would to each one sip. You are retir'd
As if you were a feasted one and not
The hostess of the meeting: pray you, bid
For the flowers now that frighted thou let'st fall
From Dis's waggon; daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violets dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes
Or Cytherea's breath; pale primroses,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phoebus in his strength, a malady
Most incident to maids; bold oxlips and
The crown-imperial; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one. O! these I lack
To make you garlands of, and my sweet friend,
To swear him o'er and o'er.

Flo. What! like a corsé?
Per. No, like a bank for love to lie and play on,
Not like a corsé; or if, not to be buried,
But quick and in mine arms. Come, take your flowers.

Methinks I play as I have seen them do
In Whitsun pastorals: sure this robe of mine
Does change my disposition.

Flo. What you do
Still betters what is done. When you speak, sweet,
I'd have you do it ever: when you sing,
I'd have you buy and sell so: so give arms;
Pray so: and, for the ordering your affairs,
To sing them too: when you do dance, I wish you
A wave o' the sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that; move still, still so,
And own no other function: each your doing,
So singular in each particular,
Crowns what you are doing in the present deed,
That all your acts are queens.

Per. O Doricles!
Your praises are too large: but that your youth,
And the true blood which peeps fairly through it,
Do plainly give you out an unstart'd shepherd,
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You wou'd me the false way.

Flo. I think you have
As little skill to fear as I have purpose
To put you to't. But come; our dance, I pray.
Your hand, my Perdita: so turtles pair
That never mean to part.

Per. I'll swear for 'em.
Pol. This is the prettiest low-born lass that ever Ran on the green-ward: nothing she does or seems
But smacks of something greater than herself;
Too noble for this place.

Cam. He tells her something
That makes her blood look out. Good sooth, she is

The queen of curds and cream.

Clo. Come on, strike up.

Dor. Mopsa must be your mistress: marry, garlic,
To mend her kissing with!

Mop. Now, in good time!

Clo. Not a word, a word: we stand upon our manners.

Come, strike up.

_music_

Here a dance of Shepherds and Shepherdesses.

Pol. Pray, good shepherd, what fair swain is this
Which dances with your daughter?

Shep. They call him Doricles, and boasts himself
To have a worthy feeding; but I have it
Upon his own report and I believe it:

He looks like sooth. He says he loves my daughter:
I think so too; for never gaz'd the moon
Upon the water as he'll stand and read
As 'twer my daughter's eyes; and to be plain,
I think there is not half a kiss to choose
Who loves another best.

Pol. She dances fealty.

Shep. So she does any thing, though I report it
That should be silent. If young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreams of.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O master! if you did but hear the pedlar at the door, you would never dance again after a tabor and pipe; no, the bagpipe could not move you. He sings several tunes faster than you'll tell money; he utters them as he had eaten ballads and all men's ears grew to his tunes.

Clo. He could never come better: he shall come in. I love a ballad but even too well, if it be doleful matter merrily set down, or a very pleasant thing indeed and sung lamentably.

Serv. He hath songs for man or woman, of all sizes; no milliner can so fit his customers with gloves: he has the prettiest love-songs for maids;
so without bawdry, which is strange; with such delicate burthen's of dildos and fadings, 'jump her and thump her'; and where some stretch-monthed rascal would, as it were, mean mischief and break a foul gap into the matter, he makes the maid to answer, 'Whoop, do me no harm, good man;' puts him off, slights him with
'Whoop, do me no harm, good man.'

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

Clo. Believe me, thou talkest of an admirable conceited fellow. Has he any unbraided wares?

Serv. He hath ribbons of all the colours i' the rainbow; points more than all the lawyers in Bohemia can learnedly handle, though they come to him by the gross; inklces, caddisses, cambries, launs: why, he sings 'em over as they were gods or goddesses. You would think a smock were a she-angel, he so chants to the sleeve-hand and the work about the square on't.

Clo. Prithree bring him in, and let him approach singing.

Per. Forewarn him that he use no scurrilous words in 's tunes.

Exit Servant.

Clo. You have of these podlars, that have more in them than you'd think, sister.

Per. Ay, good brother, or go about to think.

Enter Autolycus, singing.

Lawn as white as driven snow;
Cyprus black as c'er was crown;
Gloves as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces and for noses;
Bangle-bracelet, neckleee-amber,
Perfume for a lady's chamber;
Golden quoifs and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel;
What maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me, come; come buy, come buy;
Buy, lads, or else yourlasses cry:
Come buy.

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou should'st take no money of me; but be enthralled as I am, it will also be the bond of certain ribands and gloves.

Mop. I was promised them against the fear but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promised you more than th;
or there be liars.

Mop. He hath paid you all he promised ye may be he has paid you more, which will sha give him again.

Clo. Is there no manners left among maid will they wear their placquets where they shol bear their faces? Is there not milking-tit when you are going to bed, or kiln-hole, towish off these secrets, but you must be little-tattled before all our guests! 'Tis well they are whisps
: claramour your tongues, and not a word more.

Mop. I have done. Come, you promised a tawdry lace and a pair of sweet gloves.

Clo. Have I not told thee how I was cozened by the way, and lost all my money?

Aut. And indeed, sir, there are cozeners abro therefore it behoves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou, man, thou shalt be nothing here.

Aut. I hope so, sir; for I have about me parcels of charge.

Clo. What hast here? ballads?

Mop. Pray now, buy some: I love a ballad print, o' life, for then we are sure they are true.

Aut. Here's one to a very doleful tune, by a usurer's wife was brought to bed of two money-bags at a burden; and how she long to eat adders' heads and tongs carbonadoed.

Mop. Is it true, think you?

Aut. Very true, and but a month old.

Dor. Bless me from marrying a usurer!

Aut. Here's the midwife's name to 't, one M-tress Taleporter, and five or six honest wives' th were present. Why should I carry lies abroad?

Mop. Pray you now, buy it.

Clo. Come on, lay it by; and let's first see me ballads; we'll buy the other things anon.

Aut. Here's another ballad of a fish that appeared upon the coast on Wednesday in fourscore of April, forty thousand fathom ab water, and sung this ballad against the he hearts of maids: it was thought she was a woman and was turned into a cold fish for she would exchange flesh with one that loved her. A ballad is very pitiful and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, think you?

Aut. Five justices' hands at it, and witness more than my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too; another.

Aut. This is a merry ballad, but a very pr
one.

Mop. Let's have some merry ones.

Aut. Why, this is a passing merry one, a goes to the tune of 'Two maids wooing a man there's scarce a maid westward but she sit
'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it: if thou'lt bear part thou shalt hear; 'tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on 't a month ago.

Aut. I can bear my part; you must know my occupation: have at it with you.
The Winter's Tale.

To load my she with knacks: I would have ransack'd
The pedlar's silken treasury and have pour'd it
To her acceptance; you have let him go
And nothing parted with him. If your last Interpretation should abuse and call this
Your lack of love or bounty, you were straited
For a reply, at least if you make a care
Of happy holding her.

Flo. Old sir, I know
She prizes not such trifles as these are.
The gifts she looks from me are pack'd and lock'd
Up in my heart, which I have given already,
But not deliver'd. O! hear me breathe my life
Before this ancient sir, who, it should seem,
Hath sometime lov'd: I take thy hand; this hand,
As soft as dove's down, and as white as it,
Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fam'd snow
That's bolder by the northern blasts twice o'er.

Pol. What follows this?
How prettily the young swain seems to wash
The hand was fair before! I have put you out:
But to your protestation: let me hear
What you profess.

Flo. Do, and be witness to 't.
Pol. And this my neighbour too?

Flo. And he, and more
Than he, and men, the earth, the heavens, and all;
That, were I crown'd the most imperial monarch,
Thereof most worthy, were I the fairest youth
That ever made eye swerve, had force and knowledge
More than was ever man's, I would not prize them
Without her love; for her employ them all; 330
Command them and condemn them to her service
Or to their own perdition.

Pol. Fairly offer'd.

Com. This shows a sound affection.

Shep. But, my daughter,
Say you the like to him?

Per. I cannot speak
So well, nothing so well; no, nor mean better:
By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out
The purity of his.

Shep. Take hands; a bargain!
And, friends unknown, you shall bear witness to 't;
I give my daughter to him, and will make
Her portion equal his.

Flo. O! that must be
I the virtue of your daughter: one being dead,
I shall have more than you can dream of yet;
Enough then for your wonder. But, come on;
Contract us 'fore these witnesses.

Shep. Come, your hand;
And, daughter, yours.

Pol. Soft, swain, awhile, beseech you,
Have you a father?

Flo. I have; but what of him?

Pol. Knows he of this?

Flo. He neither does nor shall.

Pol. Methinks a father
Is at the nuptial of his son a guest
That best becomes the table. Pray you once more,
Is not your father grown incapable
Of reasonable affairs? is he not stupid
With age and altering rheums? can he speak? hear?
Know man from man? dispute his own estate?
Lies he not bed-rid; and again does nothing
But what he did being childish?
Flo. No, good sir;
He has his health and ampler strength indeed
Than most have of his age.
Pol. By my white beard,
You offer him, if this be so, a wrong
Something unfruitful. Reason my son
Should choose himself a wife, but as good reason
The father, all whose joy is nothing else
But fair posterity, should hold some counsel
In such a business.
Flo. I yield all this;
But for some other reasons, my grave sir.
Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint
My father of this business.
Pol. Let him know 't.
Flo. He shall not.
Flo. No, he must not.
Shep. Let him, my son: he shall not need to grieve
At knowing of thy choice.
Flo. Come, come, he must not. 430
Mark our contract.
Pol. Mark your divorce, young sir,
Discovering himself.
Whom son I dare not call: thou art too base
To be acknowledg'd: thou a scep'tre's heir,
That thus affects a sheep-hook! Thou old traitor,
I am sorry that by hanging thee I can
But shorten thy life one week. And thou, fresh piece
Of excellent witchcraft, who of force must know
The royal fool thou cop'st with,— Shep. O! my heart.
Pol. I'll have thy beauty scratch'd with briers,
And made
More homely than thy state. For thee, fond boy,
If I may ever know thou dost but sigh
That no more shalt see this knack, as never
I mean thou shalt, we'll bar thee from succession;
Not hold thee of our blood, no, not our kin,
Far than Denealon off: mark thou my words:
Follow us to the court. Thou, churl, for this time,
Though full of our displeasure, yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it. And you, enchantment,— Worthy enough a herdsman; yea, him too,
That makes himself, but for our honour therein,
Unworthy thee,—if ever henceforth thou
These rural latches to his entrance open,
Or hoop his body more with thy embraces,
I will devise a death as cruel for thee
As thou art tender to 't. Exit.
Per. Even here undone!
I was not much afeard; for once or twice
I was about to speak and tell him plainly.
The self-same sun that shines upon his court
Hides not his visage from our cottage, but Looks on alike. Will 't please you, sir, be gone?
I told you what would come of this: beseech you,
Of your own state take care: this dream of mine
Being now awake, I'll queen it no inch further,
But milk my ewes and weep.
Cam. Why, how now, father?
Speak ere thou diest.
Shep. I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know. O sir!
You have undone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet, yea,
To die upon the bed my father died,
To lie close by his honest bones: but now
Some hangman must put on my shroud and Where no priest shovels in dust. O cursed wretch!
That knew'st this was the prince, and would adventure
To mingle faith with him. Undone! undone!
If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd!
To die when I desire. Ex
Pol. Why look you so upon me?
I am but sorry, not afraid; delay'd,
But nothing after'd. What I was, I am:
More straining on for plucking back, a following
My leash unwillingly.
Cam. Gracious my lord,
You know your father's temper: at this time
He will allow no speech, which I do guess
You do not purpose to him; and as hardly
Will he endure your sight as yet. I fear:
Then, till the fury of his highness settle,
Come not before him.
Flo. I not purpose it.
Cam. I think, Camillo?
Pol. Even he, my lord,
Per. How often have I told you 'twould all thus!
How often said my dignity would last
But till 'twere known!
Cam. I am; and by my fancy: if my reason
Will thereto be obedient, I have reason;
If not, my senses, better pleas'd with madness
Do bid it welcome.
Cam. Be advis'd.
Flo. I am; and by my fancy: if my reason
That makes himself, but for our honour therein,
Unworthy thee,—if ever henceforth thou
These rural latches to his entrance open,
Or hoop his body more with thy embraces,
I will devise a death as cruel for thee
As thou art tender to 't. Exit.
Pol. Why, how now, father?
Speak ere thou diest.
Shep. I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know. O sir!
You have undone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet, yea,
To die upon the bed my father died,
purchase the sight again of dear Sicilia nd that unhappy king, my master, whom so much thirst to see.

Flo. Now, good Camillo, sir, I think ou have heard of my poor services, 'tis the love hat I have borne your father?

Flo. Very nobly ave you deserved; it is my father's music
o speak your deeds, not little of his care
o have them recompens'd as thought on.

Cam. Well, my lord, you may please to think I love the king nd through him what is nearest to him, which is our gracious self, embrace but my direction:
 your more ponderous and settled project
ay suffer alteration, on mine honour 'point you where you shall have such receiving s shall become your highness; where you may joy your mistress, from whom the, I see,
'ere's no disjunction to be made, but by,
s heavens forbid! your ruin; marry her;
d, with my best endeavours in your absence,
our discontenting father strive to qualify,
nd bring him up to liking.

Flo. How, Camillo, lay this, almost a miracle, be done?
hat I may call thee something more than man,
nd after that trust to thee.

Cam. Have you thought on place whereo you'11 go?
Flo. Not any yet;
't as the unthought-on accident is guilty
o what we wildly do, so we profess erselves to be the slaves of chance and flies very wind that blows.

Cam. Then list to me:
ais follows; if you will not change your purpose
at undergo this flight, make for Sicilia, nd there present yourself and your fair princess,
so I see she must be, 'fore Leontes:
s he shall be habit as it becomes nd partner of your bed. Methinks I see entes opening his free arms and weeping
's welcomes forth; asks thee, the son, forgive-
'st were i' the father's person; kisses the hands of your fresh princess; o'er and o'er divides him ixt his unkindness and his kindness: the one chides to hell, and bids the other grow ster than thought or time.

Flo. Worthy Camillo, that colour for your visitation shall I told to go before him?

Cam. Sent by the king your father greet him and to give him comforts.
sir, he manner of your bearing towards him, with what you as from your father shall deliver, things known but wixt us three, I'll write you down:
hich shall point you forth at every sitting hat you must say; that he shall not perceive at that you have your father's bosom there nd speak his very heart.

Flo. I am bound to you,
here is some sap in this.

Cam. A course more promising han a wild dedication of yourselves

To unpath'd waters, undream'd shores, most certain.
To miseries enough: no hope to help you,
But as you shake off one to take another;
Nothing so certain as your anchors, who
Do their best office, if they can but stay you
Where you'11 be loath to be. Besides, you know
Prosperity's the very bond of love,
Whose fresh complexion and whose heart
tgether
Affliction alters.

Per. One of these is true:
I think affliction may subdue the cheek,
But not take in the mind.

Cam. Yea, say you so?
There shall not at your father's house these seven years
Be born another such.

Flo. My good Camillo,
She is as forward of her breeding as
She is i' the rear our birth.

Cam. I cannot say 'tis pity
She lacks instructions, for she seems a mistress
To most that teach.

Per. Your pardon, sir; for this
I'll blush to you thanks.

Flo. My prettiest Perdita!
But, O! the thorns we stand upon. Camillo,
Preserver of my father, now of me,
The medicine of our house, how shall we do?
We are not furnish'd like Bohemia's son,
Nor shall appear in Sicilia.

Cam. My lord,
Fear none of this: I think you know my fortunes
Do all lie there: it shall be so my care
To have you royally appointed as if
The scene you play were mine. For instance, sir,
That you may know you shall not want, one word,
They talk aside.

Re-enter Autolycus.

Aut. Ha, ha! what a fool Honesty is! and Trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman! I have sold all my trumpery: not a counterfeit stone, not a riband, glass, pomander, brooch, table-book, ballad, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tie, bracelet, horn-ring, to keep my pack from fasting: they throng who should buy first, nd as my trinkets had been hallowed and brought a benevolence to the buyer: by which means I saw whose purse was best in picture; and what I saw to my good use I remembered. My clown, who wants but something to be a reasonable man, grew so in love with the wenches' song hat he would not stir his petticoes till he had both tune and words; which so drew the rest of the herd to me that all their other senses
it in cars: you might have pinched a placket.
It was senseless; 'twas nothing to geld a coedpiece of a purse; I would have filed keys off that hung in chains: no hearing, no feeling, but my sir's song, and admiring the nothing of it; so hat in this time of lethargy I picked and cut most of their festival purses; and had not the old man come in with a whooob against his daughter and the king's son, and scared my choughs from the chaff, I had not left a purse alive in the whole army.

Camillo, Florizel, and Perdita
come forward.
THE WINTER'S TALE.

ACT I

Cam. Nay, but my letters, by this means being there
So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

Flo. And those that you'll procure from King Leontes —
Cam. Shall satisfy your father.

Per. Happy be you!

Cam. Seeing AUTOLYCUS. Who have we here?

We'll make an instrument of this: omit Nothing may give us aid.

Aut. If they have overheard me now, why, hanging.

Cam. How now, good fellow! Why shakest thou so? Fear not, man; here's no harm intended to thee.

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir.

Cam. Why, so still; here 's nobody will steal that from thee; yet for the outside of thy pocket we must make an exchange; therefore discourse thee instantly, — thou must think there's a necessity in't, — and change garments with this gentleman. Though the pennyworth on his side be the worst, yet hold thee, there's some boot.

Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir. Aside. I know ye well enough.

Cam. Nay, prithee, dispatch: the gentleman is half flayed already.

Aut. Are you in earnest, sir? Aside. I smell the trick on't.

Aut. Indeed, I have had earnest; but I cannot with conscience take it.

Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle.

FLOREZEL and AUTOLYCUS exchange garments.

Fortunate mistress,—let my prophecy Come home to ye!—you must retire yourself Into some covert: take your sweetheart's hat And pluck it o'er your brows; muffle your face; Dismantle you, and, as you can, disliklen 'Tis the truth of your own seeming; that you may, For I do fear eyes over you, to shipboard Get undeserved.

Per. I see the play so lies That I must bear a part.

Cam. No remedy.

Have you done there?

Flo. Should I now meet my father He would not call me son.

Cam. Nay, you shall have no hat.

Come, lady, come. Farewell, my friend.

Aut. Adieu, sir.

Flo. O Perdita! what have we twain forgot. Pray you, a word. They converse apart.

Cam. What I do next shall be to tell the king Of this escape, and whither they are bound; Wherein my hope is I shall so prevail To force him after: in whose company I shall review Sicilia, for whose sight I have a woman's longing.

Flo. Fortune speed us!

Thus we set on, Camillo, to the sea-side.

Cam. The swifter speed the better.

Exeunt FLOREZEL, PERDITA, and CAMILLO.

Aut. I understand the business; I hear it. To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cut-purse: a good nose is requisite also, to smell out work for the other senses. I see this is the time that the muft man doth thrive. What an exchange had there been without boot! what a boot is here with this exchange! Sure the gods do this ye connive at us, and we may do any thing exten pore. The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity; stealing away from his father with his clog at his heels. If I thought it were piece of honesty to acquaint the king withal, would not do't: I hold it the more knavery to conceal it, and therein am I constant to unprofession. Aside, aside: here is more matter for a hot brain. Every lane's end, every sho church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work.

Re-enter Clown and Shepherd.

Clo. See, see, what a man you are now! Ther is no other way but to tell the king she's changeling and none of your flesh and blood. Shep. Nay, but hear me. Clo. Nay, but hear me. Shep. Go to, then.

Clo. She being none of your flesh and blood your flesh and blood has not offended the king and so your flesh and blood is not to be punished by him. Show those things you found about her; those secret things, all but what she has with her: this being done, let the law go whistle I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the king all, every word, ye, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is a honest man, neither to his father nor to me, to go about to make me the king's brother-in-law. Clo. Indeed, brother-in-law was the further off you could have been to him, and then you blood had been the dearer by I know how much an ounce.

Aut. Aside. Very wisely, puppies! Shep. Well, let us to the king: there is the in this fardeal will make him scratch his beard.

Aut. Aside. I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my master. Clo. Pray heartily be he at place.

Aut. Aside. Though I am not naturally hones I am so sometimes by chance: let me pick up my pedlar's excrement.

Takes off his false beard
How now, rustics! whither are you bound? Shep. To the palace, as it like your worship. Aut. Your affairs there, what, with whom, the condition of that fardeal, the place of you dwelling, your names, your ages, of what having breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be known, discover.

Clo. We are but plain fellows, sir.

Aut. A lie; you are rough and hairy. Let me have no lying; it becomes none but trades men, and they often give us soldiers the lie but we pay them for it with stamped coin, no stabiling steel; therefore they do not give v the lie.

Clo. Your worship had like to have given it one, if you had not taken yourself with th' manner.

Shep. Are you a courtier, an't like you, sir? Aut. Whether it like me or no, I am a courtier. Seest thou not the air of the court in these enfoldings? hath not my gait in it the measure...
f the court? receives not thine court-odour from me? reflect I not on thy baseness court-contempt? Thinkest thou, for that I insinuate, a coarse from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier! I am courtier cap-a-pe; and one fast will either push on or pluck back thy business there: whereupon I command thee to open by affair.

Shep. My business, sir, is to the king.

Aut. What advocate hast thou to him?

Shep. I know not, an’t like you.

Clo. Advocate’s the court-word for a pheasant: say you have none.

Shep. None, sir: I have no pheasant, cock or hen.

Aut. How bless’d are we that are not simple men! ’tis nature might have made me as these are, therefore I’ll not disdain.

Clo. This cannot be but a great courtier.

Shep. His garments are rich, but he wears them not handsomely.

Clo. He seems to be the more noble in being antastical: a great man, I’ll warrant; I know the picking on ‘s teeth.

Aut. The fardele there? what’s i’ the fardele? Wherefore that box?

Shep. Sir, there lies such secrets in this fardele box which none must know but the king; and which he shall know within this hour if I say come to the speech of him.

Aut. Age, thou hast lost thy labour.

Shep. Why, sir?

Aut. The king is not at the palace; he is gone board a new ship to purge melancholy and air myself: for, if thou best capable of things serious, thou must know the king is full of grief.

Shep. So ’tis said, sir; about his son, that should have married a shepherd’s daughter.

Aut. If that shepherd be not in hand-fast, let fly: the curses he shall have, the tortures he shall feel, will break the back of man, the heart of monster.

Clo. Think you so, sir?

Aut. Not he alone shall suffer what wit can ake heavy and vengeance bitter; but those that are germane to him, though removed fifty mires, shall all come under the hangman: which hough it be great pity, yet it is necessary. An old sheep-whistling rogue, a ram-tender, to offer o have his daughter come into grace! Some ay he shall be stoned; but that death is too oft for him, say I: draw our throne into a deepcote! all deaths are too few, the sharpest of a sharp.

Clo. Has the old man c’er a son, sir, do you fear, an’t like you, sir?

Aut. He has a son, who shall be flayed alive; hen ‘nointed over with honey, set on the head of a wasp’s nest; then stand till he be three quarters and a dram dead; then recovered again with aqua-vite or some other hot infusion; then, aw as he is, and in the hottest day prognostic proclaims, he shall be set against a brickwall, the sun looking with a southward eye upon him, where he is to behold him with flies blown on death. But what talk we of these traitority ascals, whose miseries are to be smiled at, their fences being so capitu? Tell me, for you seem to be honest plain men, what you have to the king: being something gently considered, I’ll bring you where he is abroad, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfs; and if it be in man besides the king to effect your suits, here is man shall do it.

Clo. He seems to be of great authority: close with him, give him gold; and though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold. Show the inside of your purse to the outside of his hand, and no more ado. Remember, ‘stoned,’ and ‘flayed alive!’

Shep. An’t please you, sir, to undertake the business for us, here is that gold I have: I’ll make it as much more and leave this young man in pawn till I bring it you.

Aut. After I have done what I promised?

Shep. Ay, sir.

Aut. Well, give me the moiety. Are you a party in this business?

Clo. In some sort, sir: but though my case be a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be flayed out of it.

Aut. O! that’s the case of the shepherd’s son: hang him, he’ll be made an example.

Clo. Comfort, good comfort! We must to the king and show our strange sights: he must know ’tis none of your daughter nor my sister; we are gone else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man does when the business is performed; and reman, as he says, your pawn till it be brought you.

Aut. I will trust you. Walk before toward the sea-side: go on the right hand; I will but look upon the hedge and follow you.

Clo. We are blessed in this man, as I may say, even blessed.

Shep. Let’s before as he bids us. He was provided to do us good.

Exeunt Shepherd and Clown.

Aut. If I had a mind to be honest I see Fortune would not suffer me: she drops booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion, gold and a means to do the prince my master good; which who knows how that may turn back to my advancement? I will bring these two moles, these blind ones, abroad him: if he think it fit to shore them again, and that the complaint they have to the king concerns him nothing, let him call me rogue for being so far officious; for I am proof against that title and what shame else belongs to ’t. To him will I present them: there may be matter in it.

Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Sicilia. A Room in the Palace of LEONTES.

Enter LEONTES, CLEOMENES, DION, PAULINA, and Others.

Clo. Sir, you have done enough, and have performed.

A saint-like sorrow: no fault could you make Which you have not redeem’d; indeed, paid down More penitence than done trespass. At the last, Do as the heavens have done, forget your evil; With them forgive yourself.

Leon. Whilst I remember Her and her virtues, I cannot forget My blemishes in them, and so still think of
The wrong I did myself; which was so much,
That even She hath made my kingdom, and Destroy’d the sweet’st companion that e’er man
Bred his hopes out of.

Paul. True, too true, my lord:
If one by one you wedded all the world,
Or from the all that are took something good,
To make a perfect woman, she you kill’d
Would be unparallel’d.

Leon. I think so. Kill’d!
She I kill’d! I did so: but thou strik’st me
Sorely to say I did: it is as bitter
Upon thy tongue as in my thought. Now, good Say so but seldom.

Cleo. Not at all, good lady:
You might have spoken a thousand things that
Would have done the time more benefit, and grac’d
Your kindness better.

Paul. You are one of those
Would have him wed again.

Dion. If you would not so,
You pity not the state, nor the remembrance
Of his most sovereign name; consider little
What dangers, by his highness’ fall of issue,
May drop upon his kingdom and devour Uncertain lookers-on. What were more holy
Than to rejoice the former queen is well?
What holier than for royalty’s repair,
For present comfort, and for future good,
To bless the bed of majesty again
With a sweet fellow to’t?

Paul. There is none worthy,
Respecting her that’s gone. Besides, the gods
Will have fulfill’d their secret purposes;
For has not the divine Apollo said,
‘Is’t not the tenour of his oracle,
That King Leontes shall not have an heir
Till his lost child be found! which that shall,
Is all as monstrous to our human reason
As my Antigonus to break his grave
And come again to me; who, on my life,
Did perish with the infant. ’Tis your counsel
My lord should to the heavens be contrary, Oppose against their wills. To Leontes. Care not for issue;
The crown will find an heir: great Alexander
Left his to the worthiest, so his successor
Was like to be the best.

Leon. Good Paulina,
Who hast the memory of Hermione,
I know, in honour; O! that ever I
Had squar’d me to thy counsel: then, even now,
I might have look’d upon my queen’s full eyes,
Have taken treasure from her lips,—

Paul. And left them
More rich for what they yielded.

Leon. Thou speak’st truth.
No more such wives; therefore, no wife: one
worse,
And better us’d, would make her sainted spirit
Again possess her corpse, and on this stage,
Where we’re offenders now, appear soul-ves’d,
And begin, ‘Why to me?’

Paul. Had she such power, 60
She had just cause.

Leon. She had: and would incense me
To murder her I married.

Paul. I should so;

Were I the ghost that walk’d, I’d bid you ma
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in’t
You chose her; then I’d shriek, that even yo
Should sift to hear me; and the words th’
Should be, ‘Remember mine.’

Leon. Stars, stars! And all eyes else dead coals. Fear thou no will I’ll have no wife, Paulina.

Paul. Will you swear
Never to marry but by my free leave?
Leon. Never, Paulina: so be bless’d my spirit Paul. Then, good my lords, bear witness his oath.

Cleo. You tempt him overmuch.

Paul. Unless another
As like Hermione as is her picture,
Afront his eye.

Cleo. Good madam,—

Paul. I have don
Yet, if my lord will marry,—if you will, sir,
No remedy, but you will, give me the office
To choose you a queen, she shall not be Young
As was your former; but she shall be such
As, walk’d your first queen’s ghost, it shou Take joy
To see her in your arms.

Leon. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry till thou bidd’st us.

Paul. Shall be when your first queen’s again in bre;

Never till then.

Enter a Gentleman.

Gent. Onethat gives out himself Prince Floriz Son of Polixenes, with his princess, she
The fairest I have yet beheld, desires access
To your high presence.

Leon. What with him? he comes n
Like to his father’s greatness; his approach,
So out of circumstance and sudden, tells us
That he has a visitation fram’d, but forc’d
By need and accident. What train?

Gent. But fe
And those but mean.

Leon. His princess, say you, with his

Gent. Ay, the most peerless piece of earth
think,
That e’er the sun shone bright on.

Paul. O Hermione
As every present time doth boast itself
Above a better gone, so must thy grave
Give way to what’s seen now. Sir, you yours
Have said and writ so, but your writing now
Is colder than that theme, ‘She had not been,
Nor was not to be equal’d;’ thus your verse
Flow’d with her beauty once: ’tis shrewdly obt
To say you have seen a better.

Gent. Pardon, madam
The one I have almost forgot—your pardon—
The other, when she has obtain’d your eye,
Will have your tongue too. This is a creature
Would she begin a sect, might quench the ze
Of all professors else, make proscytes
Of whom she but bid follow.

Paul. How! not woman
Gent. Women will love her, that she is woman
THE WINTER'S TALE.

Lion. Go, Cleomenes; yourself, assisted with your honour'd friends, bring them to our embracement. Still 'tis strange Excert CLEOMENES, Lords, and Gentleman, thus should steal upon us.

Paul. Had our prince, swel of children, seen this hour, he had pair'd all with this lord: there was not full a month since Leon. Prithhee, no more: cease! thou know'st after to me again when talk'd of: sure, then shall I see this gentle, thy speeches 'll bring me to consider that which may furnish me of reason. They are come.

Enter CLEOMENES, with FLORIZEL, PERRITTA, and Others.

Our mother was most true to wedlock, prince; or she did print your royal father off, onceiving you. Were I but twenty-one, our father's image is so hit in you, is very air, that I should call you brother, s I did him; and speak of something wildly y us perform'd before. Most dearly welcome! ad your fair princess,—godess! O, alas! lost a couple, that 'twixt heaven and earth light thus have stood begetting wonder as on, gracious couple, do: and then I lost, min own folly, the society, mitty too, of your brave father, whom, hough bearing misery, I desire my life nce more to look on him.

Flo. By his command ave I here touch'd Sicilia; and from him live you all greetings that a king, at friend, an send his brother: and, but infirmity which waits upon worn times, hath something seiz'd is wish'd ability, he had himself the lands and waters 'twixt your throne and his basur'd to look upon you, whom he loves, bade me say so, more than all the sceptres ad those that bear them living.

Leon. O my brother! good gentleman, the wrongs I have done thee sir fresh within me, and these thy offices, o rarely kind, are as interpreters if my behind-hand slackness. Welcome hither, as is the spring to the earth. And hath he too expos'd this pangon to the fearful usage, at least ungentle, of the dreadful Neptune, to greet a man not worth her pains, much less the adventure of her person?

Flo. Good my lord, she came from Libya.

Leon. Where the war-like Smalus, that noble honour'd lord, is fear'd and lov'd? Flo. Most royal sir, from thence; from him, my dear daughter his tears he proclaim'd his, parting with her: thence, prosperous south-wind friendly, we have cross'd, to execute the charge my father gave me for visiting your highness: my best train have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd;

Who for Bohemia bend, to signify Not only my success in Libya, sir, But my arrival and my wife's in safety Here where we are.

Leon. The blessed gods Purge all infection from our air whilst you Do climate here! You have a holy father, A graceful gentleman; against whose person, So sacred as it is, I have done sin: For which the heavens, taking angry note, Have left me issueless; and your father's bless'd, As he from heaven merits it, with you Worthy his goodness. What might I have been, Might I a son and daughter now have look'd on, Such goodly things as you!

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most noble sir, That which I shall report will bear no credit, Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great sir, Bohemia greets you from himself by me; Desires you to attach his son, who, His dignity and duty both cast off, Fled from his father, from his hopes, and with A shepherd's daughter.

Lord. Here in your city; I now came from him: I speak amazedly, and it becomes My marvel and my message. To your court Whiles he was hastening, in the chase it seems Of this fair couple, meets he on the way The father of this seeming lady and Her brother, having both their country quitted With this young prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me; Whose honour and whose honesty till now Endur'd all weathers.

Lord. Lay 't so to his charge: He's with the king your father.

Leon. Who? Camillo?

Lord. Camillo, sir: I speak with him, who now Has these poor men in question. Never saw I Wretches so quake: they kneel, they kiss the earth, Forswear themselves as often as they speak: Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them With divers deaths in death.

Per. O my poor father! The heaven sets spies upon us, will not have Our contract celebrated.

Leon. You are married?

Flo. We are not, sir, nor are we like to be; The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first: The odds for high and low's alike.

Leon. Is this the daughter of a king?

Flo. She is, When once she is my wife.

Leon. That 'once,' I see by your good father's speed, Will come on very slowly. I am sorry, Most sorry, you have broken from his liking Where you were tied in duty; and as sorry Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty, That you might well enjoy her.

Flo. Dear, look up: Though Fortune, visible an enemy, Should chase us with my father, power no jot Hath she to change our loves. Beseech you, sir, Remember since you ow’d no more to time Than I do now; with thought of such affections, Step forth mine advocate; at your request My father will grant precious things as trifles.

Leon. Would he do so, I’d beg your precious mistress, Which he counts but a trifle.

Paul. Sir, my liege, Your eye hath too much youth in’t: not a month ‘Tore your queen died, she was more worth such gazes Than what you look on now.

Leon. I thought of her, Even in these looks I made. To FLORIZEL. But your petition Is yet unanswer’d. I will to your father: Your honour not o’ertaken by your desires, 220 I am friend to them and you; upon which errand I now go toward him. Therefore follow me, And mark what way I make: come, good my lord.

Execut.

Scene II.—The same. Before the Palace.

Enter Autolycus and a Gentleman.

Aut. Beseech you, sir, were you present at this relation?

Gent. I was by at the opening of the farde, heard the old shepherd deliver the manner how he found it: whereupon, after a little amazedness, we were all commanded out of the chamber; only this methought I heard the shepherd say, he found the child.

Aut. I would most gladly know the issue of it.

Gent. I make a broken delivery of the business; but the changes I perceived in the king and Camillo were very notes of admiration: they seemed almost, with staring on one another, to tear the cases of their eyes; there was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture; they looked as they had heard of a world ransomed, or one destroyed: a notable passion of wonder appeared in them; but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say if the importance were joy or sorrow; but in the extremity of the one it must needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes a gentleman that haply knows more. The news, Rogero?

Second Gent. Nothing but bonfires. The oracle is fulfilled; the king’s daughter is found: such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour that ballad-makers cannot be able to express it. Here comes the Lady Paulina’s steward: he can deliver you more.

Enter a third Gentleman.

How goes it now, sir? this news which is called true is so like an old tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspicion: has the king found his heir?

Third Gent. Most true, if ever truth were pregnant by circumstance: that which you hear you’ll swear you see, there is such unity in the proofs. The mantle of Queen Hermione, her jewel about the neck of it, the letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his character; the majesty of the creature in re- semblance of the mother, the affection of nobleness which nature shows above her brend and many other evidences proclaim her with certainty to be the king’s daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two kings?

Second Gent. No.

Third Gent. Then you have lost a sight, whi was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. The might you have beheld one joy crown another so and in such manner that it seemed sorely wept to take leave of them, for their joy wad in tears. There was casting up of eyes, hold up of hands, with countenances of such distraction that they were to be known by garment not by favour. Our king, being ready to let out of himself for joy of his found daughter, if that joy were now become a loss, cries, ‘O thy mother, thy mother:’ then asks Bohemian forgiveness; then embraces his son-in-law; th’again worries he his daughter with clipping he now he thanks the old shepherd, which stand by like a weather-bitten conduit of many kings. I never heard of such another encounter which names report to follow it and undoes description to do it.

Second Gent. What, pray you, became Antigonus that carried hence the child?

Third Gent. Like an old tale still, which w had matter to rehearse, though credit be asle and not an ear open. He was torn to pieces wi a bear: this avouches the shepherd’s son, w has not only his innocence, which seems muc to justify him, but a handkerchief and rings his that Paulina knows.

First Gent. What became of his bark and followers?

Third Gent. Wrecked the same instant of the master’s death, and in the view of the shepherd so that all the instruments which aided to expo the child were even then lost when it was found But O! the noble combat that ’twixt joy at sorrow was fought in Paulina. She had one eye declined for the loss of her husband, another elevated that the oracle was fulfilled: she lift the princess from the earth, and so locks her embracing, as if she would pin her to her hea that she might no more be in danger of losing First Gent. The dignity of this act was worn the audience of kings and princes, for by sue it acted.

Third Gent. One of the prettiest touches all, and that which angled for mine eyes, caug the water though not the fish, was when, at the relation of the queen’s death, with the manner how she came to’t bravely confessed a lamented by the king, how attentiveness wound another, till, from one sign of dolor another, she did, with an ‘alas!’ I would fa say, bleed tears, for I am sure my heart weep blood. Who was most marble there change colour; some swooned, all sorrowed: if all th world could have seen’t, the woe had be universal.

First Gent. Are they returned to the court?

Third Gent. No; the princess hearing of his mother’s statue, which is in the keeping of Paulina—a piece many years in doing, and newly performed by that rare Italian master Juliano Romano; who, had he himself eternity an could put breath into his work, would begui nature of her custom, so perfectly he is her ape; e so near to Hermione hath done Hermione that hey say one would speak to her and stand in hope of answer: thither with all greediness of affection are they gone, and there they intend to sup.

Second Gent. I thought she had some great matter there in hand, for she hath privately, wise or thrice a day, over since the death of Hermione, visited that removed house. Shall we thither and with our company piece the ajoicing?

First Gent. Who would be thence that has the eneif of access? every wink of an eye some ew grace will be born: our absence makes us unthrift to our knowledge. Let’s along.

Exeunt Gentlemen.

Aut. Now, had I not the dash of my former fe in me, would preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his son aboard the prince; told him I heard them talk of a fardel and I know not what; but he at that time, over-on of the shepherd’s daughter, so he then took er to be, who begun to be much sea-sick, and myself little better, extremity of weather conning, this mystery remained undiscovered, till tis all one to me; for had I been the under-out of this secret, it would not have ellished among my other discredits. Here come nose I have done good to against my will, and heady appearing in the blossoms of their attire.

Enter Shepherd and Clown.

Shep. Come, boy; I am past more children, but ay sons and daughters will be all gentlemen on.

Clo. You are well met, sir. You denied to ght with me this other day, because I was no gentleman born: see you these clothes? say you ye them not and think me still no gentleman on: you were best say these robes are not gentlemen born. Give me the lie, do, and try whether I am not now a gentleman born.

Aut. I know you are now, sir, a gentleman on.

Clo. Ay, and have been so any time these four ours.

Shep. And so have I, boy.

Clo. So you have: but I was a gentleman born efore my father; for the king’s son took me by the hand and called me brother; and then the wo kings called my father brother; and then he prince my brother and the princess my sister ailed my father father; and so we wept: and here was the first gentleman-like tears that ver we shed.

Shep. We may live, son, to shed many more.

Clo. Ay; or else ‘twere hard luck, being in so reposenter estate as we are.

Aut. I humbly beseech you, sir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your worship, nd to give me your good report to the prince my master.

Shep. Prithtee, son, do; for we must be gentle, ow we are gentlemen.

Clo. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. Ay, an it like your good worship.

Clo. Give me thy hand: I will swear to the prince thou art as honest a true fellow as any in Bohemia.

Shep. You may say it, but not swear it.

Clo. Not swear it now I am a gentleman? Let boors and franklins say it, I’ll swear it.

Shep. How if it be false, son?

Clo. If it be ner’ so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend: and I’ll swear to the prince thou art a tall fellow of thy hands and that thou wilt not be drunk; but I know thou art no tall fellow of thy hands and that thou wilt be drunk; but I’ll swear it, and I would thou wouldst be a tall fellow of thy hands.

Aut. I will prove so, sir, to my power.

Clo. Ay, by any means prove a tall fellow: if I do not wonder how thou darrest venture to be drunk, not being a tall fellow, trust me not. Hark! the kings and the princes, our kindred, are going to see the queen’s picture. Come, follow us: we’ll be thy good masters. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Chapel in PAULINA’S House.

Enter LEONTES, POLIXENES, FLORIZEL, PERDITA, CAMILLO, PAULINA, Lords, and Attendants.

Leon. O grave and good Paulina, the great comfort That I have had of thee!

Paul. What, sovereign sir, I did not well I meant well. All my services You have paid home; but that you have vouch-saf’d, With your crown’d brother and these your con- tracted Heirs of your kingdoms, my poor house to visit, It is a surplus of your grace, which never My life may last to answer.

Leon. O Paulina! We honour you with trouble: but we came To see the statue of our queen: your gallery to Have we pass’d through, not without much content In many singularities, but we saw not That which my daughter came to look upon, The statue of her mother.

Paul. As she liv’d peerless, So her dead likeness, I do well believe, Exceels whatever yet you look’d upon Or hand of man hath done; therefore I keep it Lonely, apart. But here it is: prepare To see the life as lively mock’d as ever Still sleep mock’d death: behold! and say ’tis well.

PAULINA draws a curtain, and discovers HERMIONE as a statue.

I like your silence: it the more shows off Your wonder; but yet speak; first you, my liege. Comes it not something near?

Leon. Her natural posture! Chide me, dear stone, that I may say indeed Thou art Hermione; or, rather, thou art she In thy not chiding, for she was as tender As infancy and grace. But yet, Paulina, Hermione was not so much wrinkled; nothing So aged as this seems.

Pol. O! not by much.

Paul. So much the more our carver’s excel- lence:
Which lets go by some sixteen years and makes her
As she liv'd now.

Leon. As now she might have done, now much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my soul. O! thus she stood, even with such life of majesty, warm life. As now it coldly stands, when first I woo'd her. I am amash'd; does not the stone rebuke me for being more stone than it? O royalty piece! There's magic in thy majesty, which has my evils conjur'd to remembrance, and from thy admiring daughter took the spirits, standing like stone with thee.

Per. And give me leave, and do not say 'tis superstition, that I kneel and then implore her blessing. Lady, dear queen, that ended when I but began, give me that hand of yours to kiss.

Paul. O! patience! The statute is but newly fix'd, the colour's not dry.

Cam. My lord, your sorrow was too sore laid on, which sixteen winters cannot blow away. So many summers dry: scarce any joy did ever so long live; no sorrow but kill'd itself much sooner.

Pol. Dear my brother, let him that was the cause of this have power to take off so much grief from you as he will piece up in himself.

Paul. Indeed, my lord, if I had thought the sight of my poor image would thus have wrought you, for the stone is mine, I'd not have show'd it.

Leon. Do not draw the curtain. Paul. No longer shall you gaze on't, lest your fancy may think anon it moves.

Leon. Let be, let be! Would I were dead, but that, methinks, already—what was he that did make it? See, my lord, would you not deem it breath'd, and that those veins did verily bear blood?

Pol. Masterly done: the very life seems warm upon her lip. Leon. The fixture of her eye has motion in't, as we are mock'd with art.

Paul. I'll draw the curtain. My lord's almost so far transported that he'll think anon it lives.

Leon. O sweet Paulina! Make me to think so twenty years together: no settled senses of the world can match the pleasure of that madness. Let's alone.

Paul. I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stir'd you: but I could afflict you further.

Leon. Do, Paulina; for this affliction has a taste as sweet as any cordial comfort. Still, methinks, there is an air comes from her: what fine chisel could ever cut breath? Let no man mock me, for I will kiss her.

Paul. Good my lord, forbear. The ruddiness upon her lip is wet: you'll mar it if you kiss it; stain your own with oily painting. Shall I draw the curtain?

Leon. No, not these twenty years.

Paul. So long could stand by a looker-on.

Cam. Either forbear, quit presently the chapel, or resolve you for more amazement. If you can behold it, I'll make the statute move indeed, descend and take you by the hand; but then you'll thin which I protest against, I am assisted by wicked powers.

Leon. What you can make her do, I content to look on: what to speak, I am content to hear; for 'tis as easy to make her speak as move.

Paul. It is requir'd you do awake your faith. Then all stand still or those that think it is unlawful business I am about, let them depart.

Leon. Proceed:

Pol. No foot shall stir.

Paul. Music, awake her; strike "Hermione comes down."

'Tis time; descend; be stone no more: approach Strike all that look upon with marvel. Come; I'll fill your grave up: stir; nay, come away, bequest to death your numbness, for from the dear life redempes you. You perceive she stirr'd. Hermione comes down. Start not; her actions shall be holy as you hear my spell is lawful: do not shun her until you see her die again, for then you kill her double. Nay, present her hand when she was young you would her; now in age is she become the suitor!

Leon. O! she's warm. If this be magic, let it be an art lawful as eating.

Pol. She embraces him.

Cam. She hangs about his neck: if she pertain to life let her speak too.

Pol. Ay; and make it manifest where she has liv'd, or how stol'n from the dead.

Paul. That she is living, were it but told you, should be hooted at like an old tale; but it appears she lives, though yet she speak not. Mark a little while please you to interpose, fair madam: kneel and pray your mother's blessing. Turn, good lady;

Our Perdita is found.

Her. You gods, look down, and from your sacred vials pour your graces upon my daughter's head! Tell me, mine own where hast thou been preserv'd? where liv'd how found thy father's court? for thou shalt hear that I know by Paulina that the oracle gave hope thou wast in being, have preserv'd myself to see the issue.

Paul. There's time enough for that lest they desire upon this press to trouble your joys with like relation. Go together, you precious winners all: your exultation partake to every one. I, an old turtle, will wing me to some wither'd bough, and then my mate, that's never to be found again, lament till I am lost.

Leon. O! peace, Paulina. Thou should'st a husband take by my consent.
THE WINTER’S TALE.

I by thine a wife: this is a match, d made between’s by vows. Thou hast found mine; how, is to be question’d; for I saw her, 129 I thought, dead, and have in vain said many prayer upon her grave. I’ll not seek far,—r him, I partly know his mind,—to find thee, honourable husband. Come, Camillo, d take her by the hand; whose worth and honesty richly noted, and here justified

By us, a pair of kings. Let’s from this place. What! Look upon my brother; both your pardons.

That c’er I put between your holy looks
My ill suspicion. This is your son-in-law, 149
And son unto the king, who, heavens directing,
Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina,
Lead us from hence, where we may leisurely
Each one demand and answer to his part Perform’d in this wide gap of time since first
We were dissever’d: hastily led away. Exeunt.

THE LIFE AND DEATH OF KING JOHN.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

KING JOHN.
PRINCE HENRY, Son to the King.
ARTHUR, Duke of Bretagne, Nephew to the King.
THE EARL OF PEMBROKE.
THE EARL OF ESSEX.
THE EARL OF SALISBURY.
THE LORD BIGOT.
HUBERT DE BURGH.
ROBERT FAULCONBRIDGE, Son to Sir Robert Faulconbridge.
PHILIP THE BASTARD, his half-brother.

Lords, Ladies, Citizens of Angiers, Sheriff, Heralds, Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

SCENE.—Sometimes in England, and sometimes in France.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Room of State in the Palace.

King John, Queen Elinor, Pembroke, Essex, Salisbury, and Others, with Chatillon.

K. John. Now, say, Chatillon, what would France with us?
Chat. Thus, after greeting, speaks the King of France, my behaviour, to the majesty,
he borrow’d majesty of England here.
El. A strange beginning; borrow’d majesty!”
K. John. Silence, good mother; hear the embassy.
Chat. Philip of France, in right and true behalf of thy deceased brother Geoffrey’s son, thrir Plantagenet, lays most lawful claim to this fair island and the territories, o Ireland, Poictiers, Anjon, Tournaine, Maine; esiring thee to lay aside the sword which sways usurpingly these several titles, and put the same into young Arthur’s hand, my nephew and right royal sovereign.
K. John. What follows if we disallow of this?
Chat. The proud control of fierce and bloody war, to enforce these rights so forcibly withheld.

K. John. Here have we war for war, and blood for blood,
Controlment for controlment: so answer France.
Chat. Then take my king’s defiance from my mouth,
The furthest limit of my embassy.
K. John. Bear mine to him, and so depart in peace:
Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France; For ere thou canst report I will be there, The thunder of my cannon shall be heard. So hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath And sullen pressage of your own decay, An honourable conduct let him have:
Pembroke, look to’t. Farewell, Chatillon. Exeunt Chatillon and Pembroke.

El. What now, my son! have I not ever said How that ambitious Constancé would not cease Till she had kindled France and all the world Upon the right and party of her son? This might have been prevented and made whole With very easy arguments of love. Which now the manage of two kingdoms must With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.
K. John. Our strong possession and our right for us.
El. Your strong possession much more than your right,
Or else it must go wrong with you and me:
So much my conscience whispers in your ear,
Which none but heaven and you and I shall hear.

Enter a Sheriff, who whispers Essex.

Essex. My liege, here is the strangest controversy.
Come from the country to be judged by you,
That ’er I heard: shall I produce the men?

Our abbey’s and our priories shall pay
This expedition’s charge.

Re-enter Sheriff, with Robert Faulconbridge, and Philip, his Bastard Brother.

What men are you?

Bast. Your faithful subject I, a gentleman
Born in Northamptonshire, and eldest son,
As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge,
A soldier, by the honour-giving hand
Of Cœur-de-Lion knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou?

Rob. The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge.

K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the heir?

You came not of one mother then, it seems.

Bast. Most certain of one mother, mighty king:
That is well known: and, as I think, one father;
But for the certain knowledge of that truth
I put you o’er to heaven and to my mother:
Of that I doubt, as all men’s children may.

Eli. Out on thee, rude man! thou dost shame your mother.

And wound her honour with this disdinemce.

Bast. I, madam! no, I have no reason for it;
That is my brother’s plea and none of mine;
The which if he can prove, ’tis pops me out
At least from fair live hundred pound a year:
Heaven guard my mother’s honours and my land!

K. John. A good blunt fellow. Why, being younger born,

Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Bast. I know not why, except to get the land.
But once he slander’d me with bastardy:
But wher’be I as true-beget’d or no,
That still I lay upon my mother’s head;
But that I am as well-beget, my liege,—
Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me!
Compare our faces and be judge yourself.
If old Sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our father, and this son like him;
O! old Sir Robert, father, on my knee
I give heaven thanks I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why, what a madcap hath heaven left us here!

Eli. He hath a trick of Cœur-de-Lion’s face:
The accent of his tongue affecteth him.
Do you not read some tokens of my son
In the large composition of this man?

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And finds them perfect Richard. Sirrah, speak:
What dost thou move you to claim thy brother’s land?

Bast. Because he hath a half-face, like my father.

With half that face would he have all my land;
A half-face’d great five hundred pound a year!

Rob. My gracious liege, when that my father liv’d,
Your brother did employ my father much,—
Bast. Well, sir; by this you cannot get my land:

Your tale must be how he employ’d my mother.

Rob. And once dispatch’d him in an embassage
To Germany, there with the emperor
To treat of high affairs touching that time.
The advantage of his absence took the king,
And in the meantime sojourn’d at my father’s:
Where he did prevail I shamed to speak,
But truth is truth: large lengths of seas a shores
Between my father and my mother lay,
As I have heard my father speak himself,
When this same lusty gentleman was got.
Upon his death-bed he will bequeath’d
His lands to me, and took it on his death
That this my mother’s son was none of his;
And if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time.
Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine.
My father’s land, as was my father’s will.

K. John. Sirrah, your brother is legitimate
Your father’s wife did after wedlock bear him.
And if she did play false, the fault was hers:
Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbandmen
That marry wives. Tell me, how if my brother
Who, as you say, took pains to get this son,
Had of your father claim’d this son for his?
In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept
This calf bred from his cow from all the world
In sooth he might: then, if he were my brother,
My brother might not claim him; nor your father,
Being none of his, refuse him: this conclude
My mother’s son did get your father’s heir;
Your father’s heir must have your father’s land.
Rob. Shall then my father’s will be of no force
To dispossess that child which is not his?

Bast. Of no more force to dispossess me, since
Than was his will to get me, as I think.
Eli. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge
And like thy brother, to enjoy thy land,
Or the reputed son of Cœur-de-Lion,
Lord of thy presence and no land beside?
Bast. Madam, an if my brother had my share
And I had his, Sir Robert his, like him;
And if my legs were two such riding-rods,
My arms such eel-skins stuff’d, my face so thin
That in mine ear I durst not stick a rose
Lest men should say ‘Look, where thine farthings goes!’

And, to his shape, were heir to all this land,
Would I might never stir from off this place.
I’d give it every foot to have this face:
I would not be Sir Nob in any case.
Eli. I like thee well: wilt thou forsake
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me?
I am a soldier and now bound to France.
Bast. Brother, take you my land, I’ll take chance.

Your face hath got five hundred pound a year
Yet sell your face for five pence and ‘tis dear.

Madam, I’ll follow you unto the death.

Eli. Nay, I would have you go before me this Bast. Our country manners give our betters
K. John. What is thy name?

Bast. Philip, my liege, so is my name begn;
Philip, good old Sir Robert’s wife’s eldest son.

K. John. From henceforth bear his name which form thou bearst:
KING JOHN.

nee thou down Philip, but arise more great; else Sir Richard, and Plantagenet.

But. Brother by the mother's side, give me your hand:
father gave me honour, yours gave land.
blessed be the hour, by night or day, then I was got, Sir Robert was away!
The very spirit of Plantagenet! ah my grandam, Richard: call me so.

But. Madam, by chance not but by truth; what though?

 heard 2.0, good Sir

K. John. Go, Faulconbridge: now hast thou thy desire;
landless knight makes thee a landed squire.
I, madam, and come, Richard: we must speed or France, for France, for it is more than need.

But. Brother, adieu: good fortune come to thee!
or thou wast got I 'twas the way of honesty,

Executive all but Bastard.

foot of honour better than I was, at many a many foot of land the worse, 'ell, now can I make any Joan a lady.

'good den, Sir Richard!' 'God-a-mercy, fellow!' and if his name be George, I'll call him Peter; or new-made honour doth forget men's names: is too respective and too sciolle or your conversion. Now your traveller, and his toothpick at my worship's mess, when my knightly stomach is suffic'd, by then I suck my teeth, and catechize y picked man of countries: 'My dear sir,' ans, leaning on mine elbow, I begin, shall beseech you—that is question now; and then comes answer like an absey-book: sir, says answer, 'at your best command; your employment; at your service, sir.' 'So, sir,' says question, 'I, sweet sir, at yours'; and so, ere answer knows what question would, ivin in dialogue of compliment, nd talking of the Alps and Apennines, he Pyrenean and the river Po, draws toward supper in conclusion so.
at this is worshipful society
fits the mounting spirit like myself; or he is but a bastard to the time, but doth not smack of observation; nd so am I, whether I smack or no; nd not alone in habit and device, exterior form, outward accoutrement, ut from the inward motion to deliver sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth: hich, though I will not practise to deceive, et, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn; or it shall strew the footsteps of my rising, ut who comes in such haste in riding-robcs?

What man-post is this? hath she no husband that will take pains to blow a horn before her?

Enter Lady Faulconbridge and James Gurney.

me! it is my mother. How now, good lady! that brings you here to court so hastily?

Lady F. Where is that slave, thy brother? where is he,
That holds in chase mine honour up and down?

But. My brother Robert, old Sir Robert's son! Colbrand the giant, that same mighty man? Is it Sir Robert's son that you seek so?

Lady F. Sir Robert's son! Ay, thou unreservant boy,
Sir Robert's son: why scorn' st thou at Sir Robert? He is Sir Robert's son, and so art thou.

But. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave awhile?

Gur. Good leave, good Philip.

But. Philip! sparrow! James, There's toys abroad: anon I'll tell thee more.

Exit Gurney.

Madam, I was not old Sir Robert's son: Sir Robert might have eat his part in me Upon Good-Friday and ne'er broke his fast. Sir Robert could do well: marry, to confess, Could he get me? Sir Robert could not do it: We know his handiwork: therefore, good mother, To whom am I beholding for these limbs? Sir Robert never holp to make this leg.

Lady F. Hast thou conspired with thy brother too,
That for thine own gain should'st defend mine honour?

What means this scorn, thou most untoward knight-

But. Knight, knight, good mother, Basilisco-like.

What! I am dabb'd; I have it on my shoulder. But, mother, I am not Sir Robert's son: I have disclaim'd Sir Robert and my land; Legitimation, name, and all is gone.

Then, good my mother, let me know my father: Some proper man, I hope; who was it, mother?

Lady F. Hast thou denied thyself a Faulconbridge?

But. As faithfully as I deny the devil.

Lady F. King Richard Coeur-de-Lion was thy father:
By long and vehement suit I was seduced To make room for him in my husband's bed. Heaven lay not my transgression to my charge! Thou art the issue of my dear offence, Which was so strongly urg'd past my defence. But. Now, by this light, were I to get again, Madam, I would not wish a better father. Some sins do bear their privilege on earth, And so doth yours; your fault was not your folly:

Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose, Subjected tribute to commanding love, Against whose fury and unmatched force The aweless lion could not wage the fight, Nor keep his princely heart from Richard's hand.

He that performeth robus lions of their hearts May easily win a woman's. Ay, my mother, With all my heart I thank thee for my father! Who lives and dares but say thou didst not well

When I was got, I'll send his soul to hell.
Come, lady, I will show thee to my kin;
And they shall say, when Richard me begot, If thou hadst said him nay, it had been sin:

Who says it was, he lies: I say 'twas not.
ACT II.

SCENE I.—France. Before the Walls of Angiers.

Enter, on one side, the Duke of Austria and Forces; on the other, King Philip of France and Forces; Lewis, Constance, Arthur, and Attendants.

Lew. Before Angiers well met, brave Austria, Arthur, that great forunner of thy blood, Richard, that robb'd the lion of his heart, And fought the holy wars in Palestine, By this brave duke came early to his grave: And, for amends to his posterity, At our importance hither is he come, To spread his colours, boy, in thy behalf, And to rebuke the usurpation Of thy unnatural uncle, English John.

Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither. Arth. God shall forgive you Cœur-de-Lion's death The rather that you give his offspring life, Shadowing their right under your wings of war. I give you welcome with a powerless hand, But with a heart full of unstained love: Welcome before the gates of Angiers, duke.

Lew. A noble boy! Who would not do thee right?

Aust. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous kiss, As seal to this indenture of my love, That to my home I will no more return Till Angiers, and the right thou hast in France, Together with that pale, that white-fac'd shore, Whose foot spurks back the ocean's roaring tides And coops from other lands her islanders, Even till that England, hedg'd in with the main, That water-walled bulwark, still secure And confident from foreign purposes, Even till that utmost corner of the west Salute thee for her king: till then, fair boy, Will I not think of home, but follow arms.

Const. O! take his mother's thanks, a widow's thanks.

Till your strong hand shall help to give him strength To make a more requital to your love. Aust. The peace of heaven is theirs that lift their swords In such a just and charitable war.

K. Phi. Well then, to work: our cannon shall be bent Against the brows of this resisting town. Call for our chiefest men of discipline, To call the plots of best advantages: We'll lay before this town our royal bones, Wade to the market-place in Frenchmen's blood, But we will make it subject to this boy.

Const. Stay for an answer to your embassy, Lest unadvis'd you stain your swords with blood. My Lord Chatillon may from England bring That right in peace which here we urge in war; And then we shall repent each drop of blood That hot rash haste so indirectly shed.

Enter Chatillon.

K. Phi. A wonder, lady! lo, upon thy wish, Our messenger, Chatillon, is arriv'd! What England says, say briefly, gentle lord; We coldly pause for thee; Chatillon, speak.

Chat. Then turn your forces from this pale siege And stir them up against a mightier task. England, impatient of your just demands, Hath put himself in arms: the adverse winds Whose leisure I have stay'd, have given him time To land his legions all as soon as I; His marches are expedient to this town, His forces strong, his soldiers confident. With him along is come the mother-queen, An Ath. stirring him to blood and strife; With her her niece, the Lady Blanch of Spain. With them a bastard of the king's deceas'd; And all the unsettled honours of the land, Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries, With ladies' faces and fierce dragons' spleens, Have sold their fortunes at their native homes. Bearing their birthrights proudly on their back To make a hazard of new fortunes here. In brief, a braver choice of dauntless spirits Than now the English bottoms have waft o'er Did never float upon the swelling tide, To do offence and scath in Christendom.

Draws sword with:

The interruption of their churlish drums Cuts off more circumstance: they are at hand To parley or to fight; therefore prepare.

K. Phi. How much unlook'd for is this expedition!

Aust. By how much unexpected, by so much We must awake endeavour for defence, For courage mounteth with occasion;

Let them be welcome then, we are prepar'd.

Enter King John, Elinor, Blanch, the Bastard, Lords, and Forces.

K. John. Peace be to France, if France in peace permit Our just and lineal entrance to our own; If not, bleed France, and peace ascend to heaven. Whiles we, God's wrathful agent, do correct Their proud contempt that beat his peace and heaven.

K. Phi. Peace be to England, if that war return From France to England, there to live in peace; England we love; and for that England's sake With burden of our armour here we sware: This toil of ours should be a work of thine; But thou from loving England art so far That thou hast under-wrought his lawful king Cut off the sequence of posterity, Out-faced infant state, and done a rape Upon the maiden virtue of the crown. Look here upon thy brother Geoffrey's face: These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his:

This little abstract doth contain that large Which died in Geoffrey, and the hand of time Shall draw this brief into so huge a volume. That Geoffrey was thy elder brother born. And this his son; England was Geoffrey's right, And this is Geoffrey's. In the name of God How comes it then that thou art call'd a king, When living blood doth in these temples beat, Which owe the crown that thou o'vermasterest K. John. From whom hast thou this great commission, France.

To draw my answer from thy articles?

K. Phi. From that supernal judge, that stir good thoughts
KING JOHN.

any breast of strong authority,
look into the blots and stains of right ;
let judge hath made me guardian to this boy :
under whose warrant I impeach thy wrong,
and by whose help I mean to chastise it.
K. Phi. Excuse; it is to beat usurping down.
ElI. Who is it thou dost call usurper, France ?
Const. Let me make answer; thy usurping son.
ElI. Out, insolent! thy bastard shall be king, and thou may'st be a queen, and check the world!
Const. My bed was ever to thy son as true thine was to thy husband, and this boy derived in feature to his father Geoffrey man thou and John in manners; being as like sain to water, or devil to his dam.
y boy a bastard! By my soul I think that father never was so true begot:
cannot be an if thou wert his mother.
ElI. There's a good mother, boy, that blots thy father.
Const. There's a good grandam, boy, that would blot thee.
Aust. Peace!
Bast. Hear the crier.
Aust. What the devil art thou?
Bast. One that will play the devil, sir, with you,
a' may catch your hide and you alone.
on are the hare of whom the proverb goes,
hose valour plucks dead lions by the beard.
I'll smoke your skin-coat, an I catch you right.
rrah, look to't; 't faith, I will, 't faith.
Blanch. O! well did he become that lion's robe,
ad did disrobe the lion of that robe.
Bast. It lies as sightly on the back of him great Alcides' shows upon an ass :
but, ass, I'll take that burden from your back,
lay on that shall make your shoulders crack.
Aust. What cracker is this same that deafs
our ears,
with this abundance of superfluous breath ?
eg.—Lewis, determine what we shall do straight.
Lee. Women and fools, break off your conference.
ng John, this is the very sum of all :
gland and Ireland, Anjou, Touraine, Maine, right of Arthur do I claim of thee.
it thou resign them and lay down thy arms?
K. John. My life as soon: I do defy thee,
France.
thur of Bretagne, yield thee to my hand ;
out of my dear love I'll give thee more an e'er the coward hand of France can win.
permit thee, boy.
ElI. Come to thy grandam, child.
Const. Do, child, go to it grandam, child;
ere it grandam, kingdom, and it grandam
it a plum, a cherry, and a fig :
here's a good grandam.
Arth. Good my mother, peace!
would that I were low laid in my grave;
un worth this coil that's made for me.
ElI. His mother shames him so, poor boy, he weepes.
Const. Now shame upon you, she'r she does or no!
His grandam's wrongs, and not his mother's
shames,
Draw those heaven-moving pearls from his poor
eyes,
Which heaven shall take in nature of a fee ;
Ayi, with these crystal beads heaven shall be brimb'd
To do him justice and revenge on you.
ElI. Thou monstrous slanderer of heaven and earth!
Const. Thou monstrous injurer of heaven and earth!
Call not me slanderer; thou and thine usurp
The dominations, royalties, and rights
Of this oppressed boy: this is thy old'st son's
son,
Infortunate in nothing but in thee:
Thy sins are visited in this poor child;
The canon of the law is laid on him,
Being but the second generation
Removed from thy sin-conceiving womb.
K. John. Bedlam, have done.
Const. I have but this to say, that he is not only plagued for her sin,
But God hath made her sin and her the plague
On this removed issue, plac'd for her,
And with her plague, her sin; his injury
Her injury, the beadle to her sin,
All punish'd in the person of this child.
And all for her. A plague upon her!
ElI. Thou unadvised scold. I can produce
A will that bars the title of thy son.
Const. Ay, who doubts that I a will! a wicked
will;
A woman's will; a canker'd grandam's will!
K. Phi. Peace, lady! pause, or be more temperate:
It ill becomes this presence to cry aim
To these ill-tuned repetitions.
Some trumpet summon hither to the walls
These men of Angiers: let us hear them speak
Whose title they admit, Arthur's or John's.
Trumpets sound. Enter Citizens upon the walls.
First Cit. Who is it that hath warn'd us to the walls?
K. Phi. 'Tis France, for England.
You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects,— K. Phi. You loving men of Angiers, Arthur's subjects,
Our trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle,—
K. John. For our advantage; therefore hear us first.
These flags of France, that are advanced here
Before the eye and prospect of your town,
Have hither march'd to your damagement:
The cannons have their bowls full of wrath,
And ready mounted are they to spit forth
Their iron indignation against your walls:
All preparation for a bloody siege
And merciless proceeding by these French
Confronts your city's eyes, your winking gates;
And but for our approach those sleeping stones,
That as a waist doth girdle you about,
By the compulsion of their ordinance
By this time from their fixed beds of lime
Had been dishabited, and wide havoc made
For bloody power to rush upon your peace.
But on the sight of us your lawful king,
KING JOHN.

Who painfully with much expedient march
Have brought a countercheck before your gates,
To save unscratch'd your city's threaten'd cheeks,
Behold, the French amaz'd vouchsafe a paré;
And now, instead of bullets wrapp'd in fire,
To make a shaking fever in your walls,
They shoot but calm words folded up in smoke,
To make a faithless error in your ears:
Which trust accordingly, kind citizens,
And let us in, your king, whose labour'd spirits,
Forewarned in this action of swift speed,
Crave harbouring within your city walls.

K. Phi. When I have said, make answer to us both.

Lo! in this right hand, whose protection
Is most divinely vow'd upon the right
Of him it holds, stands young Plantagenet,
Son to the elder brother of this man,
And king o'er him and all that he enjoys:
For this down-trodden equity, we tread
In war-like march these greens before your town,
Being no further enemy to you
Than the constraint of hospitable zeal,
In the relief of this oppressed child,
Religiously provokes. Be pleased then
To pay that duty which you truly owe
To him that owes it, namely this young prince;
And then our arms, like to a muzzled bear,
Save in aspect, have all offence seal'd up;
Our cannons' malice vainly shall be spent
Against the invulnerable clouds of heaven;
And with a blessed and un vex'd retire,
With unhack'd swords and helmets all unbruised,
We will bear home that lusty blood again
Which here we came to spout against your town,
And leave your children, wives, and you, in peace.
But if you fondly pass our proffer'd offer,
'Tis not the roundure of your old-fac'd walls
Can hide you from our messengers of war,
Though all these English and their discipline
Were harbour'd in their rude circumference.
Then tell us, shall your city call us lord,
In that behalfe which we have challeng'd it?
Or shall we give the signal to our rage
And stalk in blood to our possession?

First Cit. In brief, we are the King of England's subjects:
For him, and in his right, we hold this town.
K. John. Acknowledge then the king, and let me in.

First Cit. That can we not; but he that proves the king,
To him will we prove loyal: till that time
Have we ramm'd up our gates against the world.
K. John. Both not the crown of England prove the king?
And if not that, I bring you witnesses
Twice fifteen thousand hearts of England's breed.

Bast. Bastards, and else.

K. John. To verify our title with their lives.

K. Phi. As many and as well-born bloods as those,

Bast. Some bastards too.

K. Phi. Stand in his face to contradict his claim.

First Cit. Till you compound whose right is worthiest,
We for the worthiest hold the right from both.

K. John. Then God forgive the sin of all those souls
That to their everlasting residence,
Before the dew of evening fall, shall fleet,
In dreadful trial of our kingdom's king!

K. Phi. Amen, amen! Mount, chevaliers! arms!

Bast. Saint George, that swing'd the drago, and c'er since Sits on his horse back at mine hostess' door,
Teach us some fence! To Austria. Sirra were I at home,
At your den, sirrah, with your lioness,
I'd set an ex-head to your lion's hide,
And make a monster of you.

Aust. Peace! no more.

Bast. O! tremble, for you hear the lion roar!

K. John. Up higher to the plain; where we set forth
In best appointment all our regiments.

Bast. Speed then, to take advantage of the field.

K. Phi. It shall be so; and at the other hill
Command the rest to stand. God, and our right

Enter Alarums and excursions; then a retreat. End the Herald of France, with trumpets, to the gate.

F. Her. You men of Angiers, open wide your gates,
And let young Arthur, Duke of Bretagne, in,
Who by the hand of France this day hath ma
Much work for tears in many an English moth.
Whose sons lie scatter'd on the bleeding groin
Many a widow's husband grovelling lies,
Coldly embracing the discolloured earth;
And victory, with little loss, doth play
Upon the dancing banners of the French,
Who are at hand, triumphantly display'd,
To enter conquerors and to proclaim
Arthur of Bretagne England's king and yours.

Enter English Herald, with trumpets.

F. Her. Rejoice, you men of Angiers, ri your bells;
King John, your king and England's, do approach,
Commander of this hot malicious day.
Their armours, that march'd hence so sylvia bright,
Hither return all gilt with Frenchmen's blood.
There stuck no plume in any English crest
That is removed by a staff of France;
Our colours do return in those same hands
That did display then when we first nailed forth;
And, like a jolly troop of huntsmen, come
Our lusty English, all with purpled hands,
Dy'd in the dying slaughter of their foes.
Open your gates and give the victors way;
First Cit. Heralds, from off our towers might behold,
From first to last, the onset and retire
Of both your armies; whose equality
By our best eyes cannot be censured:
Blood hath bought blood, and blows in answer'd blows;
Strength march'd with strength, and pow confronted power;
Both are alike; and both alike we like.
must prove greatest: while they weigh so even,
hold our town for neither, yet for both.

-enter the two Kings, with their powers, severally.

K. John. France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away?
y, shall the current of our right run on?
hoj passage, vex'd with thy impediment, alnot his native channel and o'erswelt ith course disturbed even thy confining shores; less thou let his silver water keep peaceful progress to the ocean.

K. Phi. England, thou hast not sav'd one drop of blood
this hot trial: more than we of France:
ther, lost more: and by this hand I swear,
ats away the earth this climate overlooks,
lore we will lay down our just-born arms, e'll put thee down: 'gainst whom these arms
we bear,
add a royal number to the dead,
acing that scroll of tells of this war's loss ith slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

Bast. Ha, majesty! how high thy glory towers hen the rich blood of kings is set on fire!
now doth death line his dead chaps with steel;
he swords of soldiers are his teeth, his fangs;
nd now he feasts, mousling the flesh of men,
ndermin'd differences of kings.
by stand these royal fronts amazed thus?
ry, 'havoc'! kings: back to the stained field,
on equal-potens, fiery-kindled spirits!
hen let confusion of one part confirm he other's peace; till then, blows, blood, and death!

K. John. Whose party do the townsmen yet admit?
K. Phi. Speak, citizens, for England; who's thy king?

First Cit. The King of England, when we know
the king.
K. Phi. Know him in us, that here hold up his right.

K. John. In us, that are our own great deputy,
nd bear possession of our person here,
ord of our presence, Angiers, and of you.

First Cit. A greater power than we denies all this;
nd till it be undoubted, we do lock our former scruple in our strong-barr'd gates, 350
ings of ourselves; until our fears, resolv'd, be by some certain king purg'd and depos'd.

Bast. By heaven, these scroyles of Angiers flout you, kings,
nd stand securely on their battlements,
as in a theatre, whence they gape and point at your industrious scenes and acts of death.
our royal presences be rud'd by me:
like the mutines of Jerusalem, friends awhile and both conjointly bend
our sharpest deeds of malice on this town. 359 by east and west let France and England mount their battering cannon charged to the mouths, their high, soul-fearing chamouns have brawld down
the flinty ribs of this contemptuous city:
'td play incessantly upon these jades,
even till unforced desolation

Leave them as naked as the vulgar air,
That done, disperse your united strengths,
And part your mingled colours once again;
Turn face to face and bloody point to point; 350
Then, in a moment, Fortune shall call forth
Out of one side her happy minion,
To whom in favour she shall give the day,
And kiss him with a glorious victory,
How like you this wild counsel, mighty states?
Smacks it not something of the policy?
K. John. Now, by the sky that hangs above
our heads,
I like it well: France, shall we kruit our powers
And lay this Angiers even with the ground?
Then after tight who shall be king of it?

Bast. An if thou hast the mettle of a king,
Being wrong'd as we are by this peevish town,
Turn thou the mouth of thy artillery,
As we will ours, against these sancy walls;
And when that we have dash'd them to the ground,
Why then defy each other, and poll-mall
Make work upon ourselves, for heaven or hell.

K. Phi. Let it be so. Say, where will you assault?

K. John. We from the west will send destruction
Into this city's bosom.

Aust. I from the north.

K. Phi. Our thunder from the south
Shall min their drift of bullets on this town.

Bast. O prudent discipline! From north to south
Austria and France shoot in each other's mouth:
'I'll stir them to it. Come, away, away!

First Cit. Hear us, great kings: vouchsafe awhile to stay,
And I shall show you peace and fair-fac'd league;
Win you this city without stroke or wound;
Rescue those breathing lives to die in beds,
That here come sacrifices for the field.

Persever not, but hear me, mighty kings.

K. John. Speak on with favour; we are bent to hear.

First Cit. That daughter there of Spain, the Lady Blanch,
Is niece to England: look upon the years
Of Lewis the Dauphin and that lovely maid.
If lusty love should go in quest of beauty,
Where should he find it fairer than in Blanch?
If zealous love should go in search of virtue,
Where should he find it purer than in Blanch?
If love ambitious sought a match of birth,
Whose veins bound richer blood than Lady Blanch?

Such as she is, in beauty, virtue, birth,
Is the young Dauphin every way complete:
If not complete of, say he is not she;
And she again wants nothing, to name want,
If want it be not that she is not he:
He is the half part of a blessed man,
Left to be finished by such as she:
And she a fair divided excellence,
Whose fulness of perfection lies in him.

O! two such silver currents, when they join,
Do glorify the banks that bound them in;
And two such shores to two such streams made
one.
Two such controlling bounds shall you be, kings,
To these two princes, if you marry them.
This union shall do more than battery can
To our fast-closed gates; for at this match,
With swifter spleen than powder can enforce,
The mouth of passage shall we fling wide ope,
And give you entrance; but without this match,
The sea enraged is not half so deaf,
Lions more confident, mountains and rocks
More free from motion, no, not death himself
In mortal fury half so peremptory,
As we to keep this city.

Bast. Here's a stay
That shakes the rotten carcass of old death
Out of his rags! Here's a large mouth, indeed,
That spits forth death and mountains, rocks and seas,
Talks as familiarly of roaring lions
As maids of thirteen do of puppy-dogs.
What cannoner begot this lusty blood?
He speaks plain cannon fire, and smoke, and bounce;
He gives the bastardo with his tongue;
Our ears are engidell'd; not a word of his
But buffets better than a fist of France.
'Zounds! I was never so bethump'd with words
Since I first call'd my brother's father dad.
	Eli. Son, list to this conjunction, make this match;
Give with our niece a dowry large enough;
For by this knot thou shalt so surely tie
Thy now unswaid assurance to the crown,
That yon green boy shall have no sun to ripe
The bloom that promiseth a mighty fruit.
I see a yielding in the looks of France;
Mark how they whisper: urge them while their souls
Are capable of this ambition,
Lest zeal, now melted by the windy breath
Of soft petitions, pity and remorse,
Cool and conceal again to what it was.

First Cit. Why answer not the double majesties
This friendly treaty of our threaten'd town?
K. Phi. Speak England first, that hath been forward first.
To speak unto this city: what say you?
K. John. If that the Dauphin there, thy princely son,
Can in this book of beauty read, 'I love,'
Her dowry shall weigh equal with a queen:
For Anjou and fair Tournai, Maine, Poictiers,
And all that we upon this side the sea,
Except this city now by us besieged,
Find liable to our crown and dignity,
Shall gild her bridal bed and make her rich
In titles, honours, and promotions,
As she in beauty, education, blood,
Holds hand with any princess of the world.
K. Phi. What say'st thou, boy? look in the lady's face.

Low. I do, my lord; and in her eye I find
A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
The shadow of myself form'd in her eye;
Which, being but the shadow of thy son,
Becomes a sun, and makes your son a shadow:
I do protest I never lov'd myself
Till now infix'd I beheld myself,
Drawn in the flattering table of her eye.

Whispers with BLANCH.

Bast. Drawn in the flattering table of her eye
Hang'd in the frowning wrinkle of her brow.
And quarter'd in her heart! he doth espy
Himself love's traitor: this is pity now,
That, hang'd and drawn and quarter'd, the should be
In such a love so vile a lout as he.

Blanche. My uncle's will in this respect is mis
If he see aught in you that makes him like,
That any thing he sees, which moves his liki
I can with ease translate to my will; or
If you will, to speak more properly,
I will enforce it easily to my love.
Further I will not flatter you, my lord,
That all I see in you is worthy love,
Than this: that nothing do I see in you, Though churlish thoughts themselves should your judge
That I can find should merit any hate.

K. John. What say those young ones? Who speak you, my niece?

Blanche. That she is bound in honour still to
What you in wisdom still vouchsafe to say.

K. John. Speak then, Prince Dauphin: you love this lady?

Low. Nay, ask me if I can refrain from love
For I do love her most unfeignedly.

K. John. Then do I give Volquessen, Tournai,
Maine, Poictiers and Anjon, these five provinces,
With her to thee; and this addition more,
Full thirty thousand marks of English coin.
Philip of France, if thou be pleased withal,
Command thy son and daughter to join hand

K. Phi. It likes us well. Young princes, clo your hands.

Aust. And your lips too; for I am well assu
That I did so when I was first assur'd.

K. Phi. Now, citizens of Angiers, open your gate,
Let in that amity which you have made;
For at Saint Mary's chapel presently
The rites of marriage shall be solemniz'd.
Is not the Lady Constance in this troop?
I know she is not; for this match made up
Her presence would have interrupted much.
Where is she and her son? tell me, who kno

Low. She is sad and passionate at her hig ness' tent.

K. Phi. And, by my faith, this league that ha have made
Will give her sadness very little cure.
Brother of England, how may we content
This widow lady? In her right we came;
Which we, God knows, have turn'd another way.
To our own vantage.

K. John. We will heal up all;
For we'll create young Arthur Duke of Bretag
And Earl of Richmond; and this rich fair to
We make him lord of Call the Lady Constan
Some speedy messenger bid her repair
To our solemnity: I trust we shall,
If not fill up the measure of her will,
Yet in some measure satisfy her so,
That we shall stop her exclamation.
Go we, as well as haste will suffer us,
To this unlock'd for unprepared pomp.

Exeunt all but the Bastard. The Citizens reti from the wo.

Bast. Mad world! mad kings! mad competition!
Oh, to stop Arthur's title in the whole,
Tath willingly departed with a part;
And France, whose armours conscience buckled on,
Thom zeal and charity brought to the field
A God's own soldier, rounded in the ear
With that same purpose-changer, that sly devil,
That broker that still breaks the path of faith,
By daily break-vee, he that wins of all,
If kings, of beggars, old men, young men, maids,
Who having no external thing to lose
At the word 'maid,' cheats the poor maid of that;
But smooth-fac'd gentleman, tickling Commodity;
Omnimity, the bias of the world;
The world, who of itself is paeased well,
Fade to run even upon even ground,
Ill this advantage, this vile-drawing bias,
His sway of motion, this Commodity,
Takes it take head from all indifferency,
Rom all direction, purpose, course, intent:
And this same bias, this Commodity,
His bawd, this broker, this all-changing word,
Lappe'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
A hath drawn him from his own determin'd aid,
Rom a resolv'd and honourable war,
A most base and vile-concluded peace.
Why should I rail on this Commodity?
For because he hath not woe'd me yet,
That I have the power to clutch my hand
His fair angels would salute my palm;
For my hand, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor beggar, raieth on the rich.
'Ell, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail
And say there is no sin but to be rich;
And being rich, my virtue then shall be,
O say there is no vice but beggary,
Since kings break faith upon commodity,
And, be my lord, for I will worship thee!

Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—France. The French King's Tent.

FAIR CONSTANCE, ARTHUR, and SALISBURY.

Const. Gone to be married! gone to swear a peace!
Also blood to false blood join'd! gone to be friends!
Hail Lewis have Blanch, and Blanch those provinces!
Is not so; thou hast misspoke, misheard;
Well advised, tell o'er thy tale again:
Cannot be; thou dost but say 'tis so.
Trust I may not trust thee, for thy word;
But the vain breath of a common man:
Believe me, I do not believe thee, man;
Have a king's oath to the contrary.
Hon shall be punish'd for thus frightening me,
Or I am sick and capable of fears;
Press'd with wrongs, and therefore full of fears;
Widow, husbandless, subject to fears;
Woman, naturally born to fears;
Though thou now confess thou didst but jest,
With my vex'd spirits I cannot take a true,
Ut they will quake and tremble all this day.
What dost thou mean by shaking off thy head?
Thy dost thou look so sadly on my son?
What means that hand upon that breast of thine?
Why holds thine eye that lamentable rheum,
Like a proud river peering o'er his bounds?
Be these and signs confirmers of thy words?
Then speak again; not all thy former tale,
But this one world, whether thy tale be true.

Sal. As true as I believe you think them false
That give you cause to prove my saying true.
Const. O! if thou teach me to believe this sorrow,
Teach thou this sorrow how to make me die;
And let belief and life encounter so.
As doth the fury of two desperate men,
Which in the very meeting fall and die,
Lewis marry Blanch! O boy! then where art thou?
France friend with England what becomes of me?
Fellow, be gone! I cannot brook thy sight:
This news hath made thee a most ugly man.

Sal. What other harm have I, good lady, done,
But spoke the harm that is by others done?
Const. Which harm within itself so heinous is
As it makes harmful all that speak of it.

Arth. I do beseech you, madam, be content.
Const. If thou, that bidst me be content,
Wert grim,
Ugly and slanderous to thy mother's womb,
Full of unpleasing blots and sightless stains,
Lame, foolish, crooked, swart, prodigios.
Patch'd with foul moles and eye-offending marks,
I would not care, I then would be content:
For then I should not love thee, no, nor thou
Become thy great birth, nor deserve a crown.
But thou art fair; and at thy birth, dear boy,
Nature and Fortune join'd to make thee great:
Of Nature's gifts thou may'st with lilies boast,
And with the half-blown rose. But Fortune, O!
She is corrupted, chang'd, and won from thee:
She adulterates hourly with thine uncle John,
And with her golden hand hath plac'd on France
To tread down fair respect of sovereignty,
And made his majesty the bawd to theirs.
France is a bawd to Fortune and King John.
That strumpet Fortune, that usurping John!
Tell me, thou fellow, is not France forsworn!
Envenom him with words, or get thee gone
And leave those woes alone which I alone
Am bound to underbear.

Sal. Pardon me, madam,
I may not go without you to the kings.
Const. Thou may'st, thou shalt: I will not go with thee.
I will instruct my sorrow to be proud;
For grief is proud and makes his owner stoop.
To me and to the state of my great grief
Let kings assemble: for my grief's so great
That no supporter but the huge firm earth
Can hold it up: here I and sorrow sit;
Here is my throne, bid kings come bow to it.

Seats herself on the ground.

Enter King John, King Philip, Lewis, Blanch Elidor, the Bastard, Duke of Austria, and Attendants.

K. Phi. 'Tis true, fair daughter; and this blessed day
Ever in France shall be kept festival:
To solemnize this day the glorious sun
Stays in his course and plays the alchemist,
Turning with splendour of his precious eye
The meagre cloddy earth to glittering gold: 80
The yearly course that brings this day about
Shall never see it but a holiday.

Const. Rising. A wicked day, and not a holy day!
What hath this day deserv'd? What hath it done
That it in golden letters should be set
Among the high tides in the calendar?
Nay, rather turn this day out of the week,
This day of shame, oppression, perjury:
Or, if it must stand still, let wives with child
Pray that their burdens may not fall this day,
Lest that their hopes prodigiously be cross'd:
But on this day let sennen fear no wreck;
No bargains break that are not this day made:
This day all things begun come to ill end;
Yea, faith itself to hollow falsehood change!

K. Phi. By heaven, lady, you shall have no cause
To curse the fair proceedings of this day:
Have I not pawn'd to you my majesty?

Const. You have beguil'd me with a counterfeit Resembling majesty, which, being touch'd and tried,
Proves valueless: you are forsworn, forsworn;
You came in arms to spill mine enemies' blood,
But now in arms you strengthen it with yours:
The grappling vigour and rough frown of war
Is cold in amity and painted peace,
And our oppression hath made up this league.
Arm, arm, you heavens, against these perjur'd kings!

A widow cries; be husband to me, heavens!
Let not the hours of this ungodly day
Wear out the day in peace, but, ere sunset, 116
Set armed discord 'twixt these perjur'd kings!
Hear me, O! hear me.

Aust. Lady Constance, peace! peace!

Const. War! war! no peace! peace is to me a war,
O Lymoges! O Austria! thou dost shame
That bloody spoil: thou slave, thou wretch,
Thou coward!
Thou little villain, great in villany!
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!
Thou Fortune's champion, that dost never fight
But when her humorous ladyship is by
To teach thee safety! thou art perjur'd too, 120
And sooth'st up greatness. What a fool art thou,
A ramping fool, to brag and stamp and swear
Upon my party! Thou cold-blooded slave,
Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side?
Becon sworn my soldier, bidding me depend
Upon thy stars, thy fortune, and thy strength?
And dost thou now fall over to my foes?
Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it for shame,
And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. O! that a man should speak those words to me.

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. Thon dar'st not say so, villain, for thy life.

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

K. John. We like not this; thou dost forget thyself.

Enter PANDULPH.

K. Phi. Here comes the holy legate of the pope.

Pand. Hail! you anointed deputies of heaven.

To thee, King John, my holy orans is.
I, Pandulph, of fair Milan cardinal,
And from Pope Innocent the legate here,
Do in his name religiously demand
Why thou against the church, our holy mother,
So willfully dost spurn; and force perforce
Keep Stephen Langton, chosen archbishop
Of Canterbury, from that holy see!
This, in our foresaid holy father's name,
Pope Innocent, I do demand of thee.

K. John. What earthly name to interrogatorily
Can task the free breath of a sacred king?
Thou canst not, cardinal, devise a name
So slight, unworthy and ridiculous,
To charge me to an answer, as the pope.
Tell him this tale; and from the mouth of England
Add this much more: that no Italian priest
Shall tithe or toll in our dominions;
But as we under heaven are supreme head,
So under him that great supremacy,
Where we do reign, we will alone uphold,
Without the assistance of a mortal hand:
So tell the pope; all reverence set apart
To him and his usurp'd authority.

K. Phi. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this.

K. John. Though you and all the kings
Christendom
Are led so grossly by this meddling priest,
Dreading the curse that money may buy out;
And by the merit of vile gold, gross, dust,
Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,
Who in that sale sells pardon from himself;
Though you and all the rest so grossly led
This juggling witchcraft with revenue chéris;
Yet I alone, alone do me oppose
Against the pope, and count his friends my foes.

Pand. Then, by the lawful power that I have Thou shalt stand curs'd and excommunicate;
And blessed shall be he that doth revolt
From his allegiance to an heretic;
And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,
Canonized and worshipp'd as a saint,
That takes away by any secret course
Thy hateful life.

Const. O! lawful let it be
That I have room with Rome to curse awhile
Good father cardinal, cry thou amen
To my keen curses; for without my wrong
There is no tongue hath power to curse him right!

Pand. There's law and warrant, lady, for a curse.

Const. And for mine too: when law can do right,
Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong.
Law cannot give my child his kingdom here,
For he that holds his kingdom holds the law
Therefore, since law itself is perfect wrong,
How can the law forbid my tongue to curse?

Pand. Philip of France, on peril of a curse
Let go the hand of that arch-heretic,
And raise the power of France upon his head
Unless he do submit himself to Rome.

Eli. Look'st thou pale, France? do not let thy hand.

Const. Look to that, devil, lest that Frar repent,
And by disjoining hands, hell lose a soul.

Aust. King Philip, listen to the cardinal.
Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on his recumbent limbs.

Aust. Well, rufian, I must pocket up these wrongs, cause—

Bast. Your breeches best may carry them.

K. John. Philip, what say'st thou to the cardinal?

Const. What should he say, but as the cardinal?

Lev. Bethink you, father; for the difference purchase of a heavy curse from Rome, the light loss of England for a friend:

seo the easier.

Blanch. That's the curse of Rome.

Const. O Lewis, stand fast! the devil tempts thee here.

Blanch. The Lady Constance speaks not from her faith, it from her need.

Const. O! if thou grant my need, he only lives but by the death of faith, that need must needs infer this principle, at faith would live again by death of need:

then, tread down my need, and faith mounts up;

yep my need up, and faith is troden down.

K. John. The king is mov'd, and answers not to this.

Const. O! be remov'd from him, and answer well.

Aust. Do so, King Philip: hang no more in doubt.

Bast. Hang nothing but a calf's-skin, most sweet love.

K. Phi. I am perplex'd, and know not what to say.

Pand. What cast thou say but will perplex thee more, thou stand excommunicate and curs'd?

K. Phi. Good reverend father, make my person yours,

'd tell me how you would bestow yourself.

as royal hand and mine are newly knit,

'd the conjunction of our inward souls carried in league, coupled and link'd together with all religious strength of sacred vows;

he latest breath that gave the sound of words

as deep-sworn faith, peace, amity, true love,

elev'n our kingdoms and our royal selves;

and even before this truce, but new before,

so longer than we well could wash our hands

o clap this royal bargain up of peace,

feaven knows, they were besmeard'd and over-stain'd fifth slaughter's pencil, where revenge did paint

the fearful difference of incessant kings:

and shall these hands, so lately pur'd of blood,

o newly join'd in love, so strong in both.

'soke this seizure and this kind regret?

lay fast and loose with faith? so jest with heaven,

make such unconstant children of ourselves,

is now again to watch our palm from palm,

inswear faith sworn, and on the marriage-bed

sowning peace to march a bloody host,

and make a riot on the gentle brow

true sincerity? O! holy sir,

'd reverend father, let it not be so.

out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose
Blanch. Now shall I see thy love: what motive may Be stronger with thee than the name of wife?
Cost. That which upholdeth him that thee upholds,
His honour: O! thine honour, Lewis, thine
honour.
Lee. I muse thy majesty doth seem so cold,
When such profound respects do pull you on.
Pand. I will denounce a curse upon his head.
K. Phi. Thou shalt not need. England, I'll fall from thee.
Cost. O fair return of banish'd majesty!
Eli. O foul revolt of French inconstancy!
K. John. France, thou shalt rue this hour within this hour.
Bast. Old Time the clock-setter, that bald
sexton Time,
Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue.
Blanch. The sun's o'ercast with blood: fair day, adieu!
Which is the side that I must go withal?
I am with both: each army hath a hand;
And in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whirl asunder and disinumber me.
Husband, I cannot pray that thou may'st win;
Uncle, I needs must pray that thou may'st lose;
Father, I may not wish the fortune thine;
Grandam, I will not wish thy wishes thrive:
Whoever wins, on that side shall I lose;
Assured loss before the match be play'd.
Lee. Lady, with me, with me thy fortune lies.
Blanch. There where my fortune lives, there my life dies.
K. John. Cousin, go draw our puissance together.
Exit Bastard.

Scene II.—The Same. Plains near Angiers.

Alarums; excursions. Enter King John, with the Duke of Austria's head.

Bast. Now, by my life, this day grows wondrous hot;
Some airy devil hovers in the sky
And pours down mischief. Austria's head lie
there.
While Philip breathes.

Enter King John, Arthur, and Hubert.

K. John. Hubert, keep this boy. Philip,
makes up:
My mother is assailed in our tent,
And ta'en, I fear.

Bast. My lord, I rescu'd her;
Her highness is in safety, fear you not:
But, my liege; for very little pains
Will bring this labour to an happy end.

Exit.

Scene III.—The Same.

Alarums; excursions; retreat. Enter King John, Elior, Arthur, the Bastard, Hubert, and Lords.

K. John. To Elior. So shall it be; ye grace shall stay behind
So strongly guarded. To Arthur. Cousin, look not sad:
Thy grandam loves thee, and thy uncle will
As dear be to thee as thy father was.
Arth! this will make my mother die with grief.

K. John. To the Bastard. Cousin, away
England! haste before;
And, ere our coming, see thou shake the bag
Of hoarding abbots; imprisoned angels
Set thou at liberty: the fat ribs of peace
Must by the hungry now be fed upon:
Use our commission in his utmost force.

Bast. Bell, book, and candle shall not do me back
When gold and silver beckons me to come on.
I leave your highness. Grandam, I will pray
If ever I remember to be holy,
For your fair safety: so I kiss your hand.
Eli. Farewell, gentle cousin.
Eli. Come hither, little kinsman; hark, a wo
She takes Arthur and

K. John. Come hither, Hubert. O my gen
Hubert!
We owe thee much: within this wall of flesh
There is a soul counts thee her creditor,
And with advantage means to pay thy love:
And, my good friend, thy voluntary oath
Lives in this bosom, dearly cherished.
Give me thy hand, I had a thing to say,
But I will fix it with some better time.
By heaven, Hubert, I am almost ashamed to say what good respect I have of thee.
Hub. I am much bounden to thy majesty.
K. John. Good friend, thou hast no cause say so yet;
But thou shalt have; and creep time ne'er
slow,
Yet it shall come for me to do thee good.
I had a thing to say, but let it go:
The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton and too full of gawds
To give me audience: if the midnight bell
Did, with his iron tongue and brazen mouth,
Sound one into the drowsy race of night;
If this same were a churchyard where we stand,
And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs:
Or if that sultry spirit, melancholy,
Had bak'd thy blood and made it heavy-thick
Which else runs tickling up and down the vein
Making that idiot, laughter, keep men's eyes
And strain their cheeks to idle merriment,
A passion hateful to my purposes;
Or if that thou should'st see me without eyes
Hear me without thine ears, and make reply
Without a tongue, using conceit alone,
Without eyes, ears, and harmful sound of word
Then, in despite of brooded watchful day,
I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts:
But, ah! I will not: yet I love thee well;}
KING JOHN.

K. John. Do not I know thou wouldest! o! Hubert! Hubert, Hubert, throw thine eye on young boy: I’ll tell thee what, my friend, Is a very serpent in my way; d’wresoccer’er this foot of mine doth tread, lies before me: dost thou understand me? on art his keeper.

Hub. And I’ll keep him so that he shall not offend your majesty.

Hub. My lord?

K. John. He shall not live.

K. John. Enough. Could be merry now. Hubert, I love thee; all, I’ll not say what I intend for thee: member. Madam, fare you well:

Wk. My blessing go with thee!

K. John. For England, cousin: go, Hubert shall be your man, attend on you th’all true duty. On toward Calais, ho! Exeunt.

ENE IV.—The Same. The French King’s Tent.

K. Phi. So, by a roaring tempest on the flood, whose armado of connected sail scatter’d and disjoint’d from fellowship. Cour. Courage and comfort! all shall yet go well.

K. Phi. What can go well when we have run so ill! we be not beaten! Is not Angiers lost? Our taken prisoner? divers dear friends left? thy bloody England into England gone, bearing interruption, spite of France! we. What he hath won that he hath fortified; got a speed with such advice disposed, the temperate order in so fierce a cause, the want example: who hath read or heard any kindred action like to this?

K. Phi. Well could I bear that England had this praise, we could find some pattern of our shame.

Enter Constance.

Ok! who comes here? a grave unto a soul; riding the eternal spirit, against her will, the vile prison of afflicted breath. My thee, lady: go away with me.

Const. Lo! now! now see the issue of your peace.

K. Phi. Patience, good lady! comfort, gentle Constance!

Const. No, I defy all counsel, all redress, that which ends all counsel, true redress, ad, death: O amiable lovely death! on odoriferous stench! sound rottenness! as forth from the couch of lasting night, on hate and terror to prosperity, I will kiss thy detestable bones, put my eyeballs in thy vaulty brows, and ring these fingers with thy household worms, and stop this gap of breath with fulsome dust, and be a carrion monster like thyself:

Come, grin on me; and I will think thou smilest.

And buss thee as thy wife! Misery’s love, O! come to me.

K. Phi. O fair affliction, peace!

Const. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry. O! that my tongue were in the thunder’s mouth; then with a passion would I shake the world, and rouse from sleep that fell anatomy Which cannot hear a lady’s feeble voice, Which scorrs a modern invocation.

Pand. Lady, you utter madness, and not sorrow.

Const. Thou art not holy to belie me so; I am not mad: this hair I tear is mine; My name is Constance; I was Geoffrey’s wife; Young Arthur is my son, and he is lost!

K. Phi. If I could, what grief should I forget, Preach some philosophy to make me mad, And thou shalt be canoniz’d, cardinal; For being not mad but sensible of grief, My reasonable part produces reason. How I may be deliver’d of these woes, And teaches me to kill or hang myself: If I were mad, I should forget my son, Or madly think a babe of clouts were he. I am not mad: too well, too well I feel The different plague of each calamity.

K. Phi. Bind up those tresses. O! what love I note In the fair multitude of those her hairs: Where but by chance a silver drop hath fallen, Even to that drop ten thousand wiry friends Do glue themselves in sociable grief; Like true, inseparable, faithful loves, Sticking together in calamity.

Const. To England, if you will.

K. Phi. Bind up your hairs.

Const. Yes, that I will; and wherefore will I do it?

I tore them from their bonds, and cried aloud ‘O! that these hands could so redeem my son As they have given these hairs their liberty.’ But now I envy at their liberty, And will again commit them to their bonds, Because my poor child is a prisoner. And, father cardinal, I have heard you say That we shall see and know our friends in heaven. If that be true, I shall see my boy again; For since the birth of Cain, the first male child, To him that did but yesterday suspir, There was not such a gracious creature born. But now will canker-sorrow eat my bud And chase the native beauty from his cheek, And he will look as hollow as a ghost, As dim and meagre as an age’s fit, And so he’ll die; and, rising so again, When I shall meet him in the court of heaven I shall not know him: therefore never, never Must I behold my pretty Arthur more.

Pand. You hold too heinous a respect of grief.

K. Phi. He talks to me, that never bid a son. You are as fond of grief as of your child.

Const. Grief fills the room up of my absent child, Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me,
KING JOHN.

Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,
Remembering all of his gracious parts,
Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form:
Then have I reason to be fond of grief.
Fare you well: had you such a loss as I,
I could give better comfort than you do. 140
I will not keep this form upon my head.
When there is such disorder in my wit.
O Lord! my boy, my Arthur, my fair son!
My life, my joy, my food, my all the world!
My widow-comfort, and my sorrow's cure! Exit.
K. Phl. I fear some outrage, and I'll follow her.
Exit.
Lew. There's nothing in this world can make me joy.
Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man;
And bitter shame hath spoil'd the sweet world's taste.
That it yields nought but shame and bitterness.
Pand. Before the curing of a strong disease,
Even in the instant of repair and health,
The fit is strongest: evils that take leave,
On their departure most of all show evil.
What have you lost by losing of this day?
Lew. All days of glory, joy, and happiness.
Pand. If you had won it, certainly you had.
No, no; when Fortune means to men most good,
She looks upon them with a threatening eye.
'Tis strange to think how much King John hath lost
In this which he accounts so clearly won.
Are not you grieved that Arthur is his prisoner?
Lew. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Pand. Your mind is all as youthful as your blood.
Now hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
For even the breath of what I mean to speak
Shall blow each dust, each straw, each little rub,
Out of the path which shall directly lead
Thy foot to England's throne; and therefore mark.
John hath seiz'd Arthur; and it cannot be,
That whilsts warm life plays in that infant's veins,
The mispiec'd John should entertain an hour,
One minute, nay, one quiet breath of rest.
A sceptre snatch'd with an unequal hand
Must be as boisterously maintain'd as gain'd;
And he that stands upon a slippery place
Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up:
That John may stand, then Arthur needs must fall;
So be it, for it cannot be but so.
Lew. But what shall I gain by young Arthur's fall?
Pand. You, in the right of Lady Blanch your wife,
May then make all the claim that Arthur did.
Lew. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.
Pand. How green you are and fresh in this old world!
John lays you plots; the times conspire with you;
For he that steeps his safety in true blood
Shall find but bloody safety and unhurt.
This act so evilly borne shall cool the hearts
Of all his people and freeze up their zeal,
That none so small advantage shall step forth
To check his reign, but they will cherish it;
No natural exhalation in the sky,
No scope of nature, no distemper'd day,
No common wind, no customed event,
But they will pluck away his natural cause,
And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs,
Abortives, pressages, and tongues of heaven,
Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.
Lew. May be he will not touch young Arthur's life,
But hold himself safe in his prison.
Pand. O! sir, when he shall hear of your preach,
If that young Arthur be not gone already,
Even at that news he dies; and then the her.
Of all his people shall revolt from him
And kiss the lips of unchanging love,
And pick strong matter of revolt and wrath.
Out of the bloody fingers' ends of John.
Methinks I see this bury all on foot:
And, O! what better matter breeds for you
Than I have nam'd. The bastard Faulconbridge
Is now in England ransacking the church,
Offending charity: if but a dozen French
Were there in arms, they would be as a call
To train ten thousand English to their side;
Or as a little snow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a mountain. O noble Dauphin!
Go with me to the king. 'Tis wonderful
What may be wrought out of their discontent,
Now that their souls are topp'd of offence.
For England, go; I will whet on the king.
Lew. Strong reasons make strong action.
Let us go:
If you say ny, the king will not say no. Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Northampton. A Room in the Castle.

Enter HUBERT and two Attendants.

Hub. Heat me these irons hot; and look to stand
Within the arras; when I strike my foot
Upon the bosom of the ground, rush forth,
And bind the boy which you shall find with Fast to the chair: be heedful. Hence, a watch.
First Att'nt. I hope your warrant will bear the deed.

Hub. Un cleanly scruples! fear not you: lead to't.

Enter Attendants.

Young lad, come forth; I have to say with you.

Enter ARTHUR.

Arth. Good morrow, Hubert.

Hub. Good morrow, little prince.

Arth. As little prince, having so great a title
To be more prince, as may be. You are sad.

Hub. Indeed, I have been merrier.

Arth. Mercy on me!

Methinks nobody should be sad but I:
Yet, I remember, when I was in France,
Young gentlemen would be as sad as night,
Only for wantonness. By my christendom,
So I were out of prison and kept sheep,
I should be as merry as the day is long;
And so I would be here, but that I doubt
My uncle practises more harm to me:
He is afraid of me, and I of him.

Is it my fault that I was Geoffrey's son?
No, indeed, is't not; and I would to heaven
KING JOHN.

ENIT I.

were your son, so you would love me, Hubert.
Hub. Aside. If I talk to him, with his innocent prate
I will make my mercy which lies dead:
therefore I will be sudden and dispatch.
Arth. Are you sick, Hubert? You look pale
to-day:
sooth, I would you were a little sick,
at I might sit all night and watch with you:
I warrant you love you more than you do me. 31 Hub.Aside. His words do take possession of my bosom.
and here, young Arthur. Showing a paper.
Aside. How now, foolish rheum?
uring dispitiee torture out of door!
must be brief, lest resolution drop at mine eyes in tender womanish tears.
you not read it? is it not fair writ?
Arth. Too fairly, Hubert, for so foul effect.
set you with hot irons burn out both mine eyes?
Hub. Young boy, I must.
Arth. And will you?
Hub.
Arth. Have you the heart? When your head did but ache
smite my handkercher about your brows,
as best I had, a princess wrought it me,
did I never ask you it again;
d ad with my hand at midnight held your head,
d id like the watchful minutes to the hour,
il and anon cheer'd up the heavy time, saying, 'What lack you?' and 'Where lies your grief?'
'What good love may I perform for you?'
y any poor man's son would have lain still,
 ad ne'er have spoke a loving word to you;
y at your sick-service had a prince.
y, you may think my love was crafty love,
' d call it cunning: do, an if you will.
thaven be pleas'd that you must use me ill,
y by then you must. Will you put out mine eyes?
'ose eyes that never did nor never shall much as frown on you?'
Hub. I have sworn to do it;
' d with hot irons must I burn them out.
Arth. Ah! none but in this iron age would do it.
ne iron of itself, though heat red-hot, sproaching near these eyes, would drink my tears quench this fiery indignation in the matter of mine innocence;
ay, after that, consume away in rust,
at for containing fire to harm mine eye.
ro you more stubborn-hard than hammer'd iron?
if an angel should have come to me
nd told me Hubert should put out mine eyes, would not have believ'd him; no tongue but Hubert's.
Hub. Come forth. 70

Re-enter Attendants, with cords, irons, etc.

Do as I bid you do.
Arth. O! save me, Hubert, save me! my eyes are out
ven with the fierce looks of these bloody men.
Hub. Give me the iron, I say, and bind him
here.
Arth. Alas! what need you be so boisterous-rough?

I will not struggle; I will stand stone-still.
For heaven sake, Hubert, let me not be bound!
Nay, hear me, Hubert: drive these men away,
And I will sit as quiet as a lamb;
I will not stir, nor wince, nor speak a word,
or look upon the iron angrily.
Thrust but these men away, and I'll forgive you,
Whatever torment you do put me to.
Hub. Go, stand within; let me alone with him.
First Att. I am best pleas'd to be from such a deed.
Exec. Attendants.
Arth. Alas! I then have child away my friend:
He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart.
Let him come back, that his compassion may Give life to yours.
Hub. Come, boy, prepare yourself.
Arth. Is there no remedy?
Hub. None, but to lose your eyes. 50
Arth. O heaven! that there were but a mote in yours,
A grain, a dust, a gnat, a wandering hair,
Any annoyance in that precious sense;
Then feeling what small things are boisterous
there.
Your vile intent must needs seem horrible.
Hub. Is this your promise? go to, hold your tongue.
Arth. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of tongues
Must needs want pleading for a pair of eyes:
Let me not hold my tongue; let me not, Hubert: Or, Hubert, if you will, cut out my tongue,
So I may keep mine eyes: O! spare mine eyes,
Though to no use but still to look on you.
Lo! by my troth, the instrument is cold
And would not harm me.
Hub.
Arth. No, in good sooth; the fire is dead with
grief,
Being create for comfort, to be us'd
In undeserv'd extremes; see else yourself;
There is no malice in this burning coal;
The breath of heaven hath blown his spirit out
And strew'd repentant ashes on his head.
Hub. But with my breath I can revive it, boy.
Arth. An if you do you will but make it blush
And glow with shame of your proceedings,
Hubert:
Nay, it perchance will sparkle in your eyes;
And like a dog that is compell'd to fight,
Snatch at his master that doth tarre him on.
All things that you should use to do me wrong
Deny their office: only you do lack
That mercy which fierce fire and iron extends,
Creatures of note for mercy-lacking uses.
Hub. Well, see to live; I will not touch thine
eyes
For all the treasure that thine uncle owes:
Yet am I sworn and I did purpose, boy,
With this same very iron to burn them out.
Arth. O! now you look like Hubert: all this while
You were disguised.
Hub.
Arth. Peace! no more. Alas! Your uncle must not know but you are dead;
I'll fill these dogged spies with false reports:
And, pretty child, sleep doubtless and secure,
That Hubert, for the wealth of all the world, will not offend thee.
Arth. O heaven! I thank you, Hubert.

335
SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter King John, crowned; Pembroke, Salisbury, and other Lords. The King takes his state.

K. John. Here once again we sit, once again crown'd,
And look'd upon, I hope, with cheerful eyes.
Pemb. This 'once again,' but that your highness pleas'd,
Was once superfluous: you were crown'd before,
And that high royalty was ne'er pluck'd off,
The faiths of men ne'er stained with revolt;
Fresh expectation troubled not the land
With any long'd-for change or better state.
Sal. Therefore, to be possess'd with double pomp,
To guard a title that was rich before,
To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful and ridiculous excess.
Pemb. But that your royal pleasure must be done,
This act is as an ancient tale new told,
And in the last repeating troublesome,
Being urg'd at a time unseasonable.
Sal. In this the antique and well-noted face
Of plain old form is much disfigur'd;
And, like a shifted wind unto a sail,
It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about,
Startles and frights consideration,
Makes sound opinion sick and truth suspected,
For putting on so new a fashion'd robe.
Pemb. When workmen strive to do better than well
They do confound their skill in covetousness;
And oftentimes excusing of a fault
Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse:
As patches set upon a little breach
Discredit more in hiding of the fault
Than did the fault before it was so patch'd.
Sal. To this effect, before you were new-crown'd,
We breath'd our counsel: but it pleas'd your highness
To overbear, and we are all well pleas'd;
Since all and every part of what we would Doth make a stand at what your highness will.
K. John. Some reasons of this double coronation
I have possess'd you with and think them strong;
And more, more strong, then lesser is my fear,
I shall induc'd you with: meantime but ask
What you would have reform'd that is not well;
And well shall you perceive how willingly
I will both hear and grant you your requests.
Pemb. Then I, as one that am the tongue of these
To sound the purposes of all their hearts,
Both for myself and them, but, chief of all,
Your safety, for the which myself and them
Bend their best studies, heartily request
The enfranchisement of Arthur; whose restraint
Doth move the murmuring lips of discontent.
To break into this dangerous argument:
If what in rest you have in right you hold,
Why then your fears, which, as they say, atter
The steps of wrong, should move you to new
Your tender kinsman, and to chuse his days
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his yout
The rich advantage of good exercise?
That the time's enemies may not have this
To grace occasions, let it be our snit
That you have bid us ask his liberty;
Which for our goods we do no further ask
Than whereupon our weal, on you depending,
Counts it your weal he have his liberty.

Enter Hubert.

K. John. Let it be so: I do commit his you
To your direction. Hubert, what news with you?
Pemb. This is the man should do the blood
Deed;
He show'd his warrant to a friend of mine:
The name of a wicked heinous fault
Lives in his eye; that close aspect of his
Does show the mood of a much troubled brain.
And I do fearefully believe 'tis done,
What we so feare'd he had a charge to do.
Sal. The colour of the king doth come and Between his purpose and his conscience,
Like heralds twixt two dreadful battles set:
His passion is so ripe it needs must break.
Pemb. And when it breaks, I fear will issue
The foul corruption of a sweet child's death.
K. John. We cannot hold mortality's strong hand:
Good lords, although my will to give is living
The suit which you demand is gone and dead.
He tells us Arthur is deceas'd to-night.
Sal. Indeed we feare'd his sickness was pother.
Pemb. Indeed we heard how near his death was Before the child himself felt he was sick:
This must be answer'd either here or hence.
K. John. Why do you bend such solemn brooche on me?
Think you I bear the shears of destiny?
Have I commandment on the pulse of life?
Sal. It is apparent foul play; and 'tis shew
That greatness should so grossly offer it:
So thrive it in your game! and so farewell.
Pemb. Stay yet, Lord Salisbury; I'll go with thee,
And find the inheritance of this poor child,
His little kingdom of a forced grave.
That blood which ow'd the breadth of all the isle,
Three foot of it doth hold: bad world the while!
This must not be thus borne; this will break
To all our sorrows, and ere long I doubt.

Exeunt Loy.

K. John. They burn in indignation. I repeat,
There is no sure foundation set on blood,
No certain life achiev'd by other's death.

Enter a Messenger.

A fearful eye then haste: where is that blood
That I have seen inhabit in those cheeks?
foul a sky clears not without a storm:
a down thy weather: how goes all in France?

fess. From France to England. Never such a power any foreign preparation

leaved in the body of a land.

copy of your speed is learn'd by them;
when you should be told they do prepare,
tidings comes that they are all arriv'd.

c. John. O! where hath our intelligence been drunk?
ere hath it slept? Where is my mother's care at such an army could be drawn in France,
I she not hear of it?

fess. My liege, her ear

stopp'd with dust: the first of April died

ir noble mother; and, as I hear, my lord,

Lady Constance in a frenzy died

tee days before: but this from rumour's tongue

ly heard; if true or false I know not.

c. John. Withhold thy speed, dreadful occasion!
make a league with mee, till I have pleas'd discontented peers. What! mother dead!
w wildly then walks my estate in France!
der whose conduct came those powers of France

at thou for truth giv'st out are landed here?
fess. Under the Dauphin.
c. John. Thou hast made me giddy
th these ill tidings.

Enter the Bastard and Peter of Pomfret.

Now, what says the world your proceedings? do not seek to stuff head with more ill news, for it is full.

bast. But if you be afraid to hear the worst, let the worst unheard fall on your head.
c. John. Bear with me, cousin, for I was under the tide; but now I breathe again at the flood, and can give audience any tongue, speak it of what it will.

out. How I have sped among the clergymen sums I have collected shall express,
as I travel'd bither through the land,
nd the people strangely fantasied,
sess'd with rumours, full of idle dreams.
knowing what they fear, but full of fear.
d here's a prophet that I brought with me on forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found
th many hundreds treading on his heels;
whom he sung, in rude harsh-sounding rimes,
at, ere the next Ascension-day at noon,

ur highness should deliver up your crown.
c. John. Thou idle dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?

Peter. Foreknowing that the truth will fall out so.
c. John. Hubert, away with him: imprison him;
d on that day at noon, wherein he says shall yield up my crown, let him be hang'd, iver him to safety, and return,

I must use thee. Exit HUBERT, with PETER.
o my gentle cousin,
arst thou the news abroad, who are arriv'd?

bast. The French, my lord; men's mouths are

[t full of it:

Besides, I met Lord Bigot and Lord Salisbury,

With eyes as red as new-unkindled fire,
And others more, going to seek the grave
Of Arthur, whom they say is kill'd to-night
On your suggestion.
c. John. Gentle kinsman, go,
And thrust thyself into their companies.
I have a way to win their loves again;
Bring them before me.

bast. I will seek them out.
c. John. Nay, but make haste; the better foot before.

O! let me have no subject enemies
When adverse foreigners affright my towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion.

Be Mercury, set feathers to thy heels,
And fly like thought from them to me again.

bast. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed.

Exit.

Go after him; for he perhaps shall need
Some messenger betwixt me and the peers;
And be thou he.

mess. With all my heart, my liege.

k. john. My mother dead!

Re-enter HUBERT.

Hub. My lord, they say five moons were seen to-night;

Four fixed, and the fifth did whirl about

The other four in wondrous motion.
c. John. Five moons!

Hub. Old men and beldams in the streets

Do prophesy upon it dangerously:
Young Arthur's death is common in their mouths;

And when they talk of him, they shake their heads
And whisper one another in the ear;
And he that speaks doth grippe the hearer's wrist,
Whilst he that hears makes fearful action,

With wrinkled brows, with nod's, with rolling eyes.

I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool.

With open mouth swelling a tailor's news;
Who, with his shears and measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, which his nimble haste
Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet,

Told of a many thousand war-like French,

That were embattled and rank'd in Kent.

Another lean unwash'd artificer

Cuts off his tale and talks of Arthur's death.
c. John. Why seek'st thou to possess me with these fears?

Why urg'st thou so oft young Arthur's death?

Thy hand hath murder'd him: I had a mighty cause

To wish him dead, but thou hadst none to kill him.

Hub. No had, my lord! why, did you not provoke me?
c. John. It is the curse of kings to be attended
By slaves that take their humours for a warrant
To break within the bloody house of life,

And on the winking of authority
To understand a law, to know the meaning
Of dangerous majesty, when perchance it frowns

More upon humour than advis'd respect.
This ship-boy's semblance hath disguised a quite
I am afraid; and yet I'll venture it.
If I get down, and do not break my limbs,
I'll find a thousand shifts to get away:
As good to die and go, as die and stay.

Enter Pembroke, Salisbury, and Bigot.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at Saint Edmunds
bury.

It is our safety, and we must embrace
This gentle offer of the perilous time.

Pen. Who brought that letter from the cardinal?

Sal. The Count Melun, a noble lord of France
Whose private with me of the Dauphin's love
Is much more general than these lines import.
Big. To-morrow morning let us meet him then.

Sal. Or rather then set forward; for 'twill
Two long days' journey, lords, or e'er we meet.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. Once more to-day well met, distempe
lords!

The king by me requests your presence strait.

Sal. The king hath dispossessed himself of
We will not line his thin bestained cloak
With our pure honours, nor attend the foot
That leaves the print of blood where'er it walks.

Return and tell him so: we know the worst.

Bast. Whate'er you think, good words, think, were best.

Sal. Our griefs, and not our manners, reason now.

Bast. But there is little reason in your grie
Therefore 'twere reason you had manners now.

Pen. Sir, sir, impatience hath his privilege Bast. 'Tis true; to hurt his master, no m else.

Sal. This is the prison. Seeing Arthur
What is he lies here?

Pen. O death! made proud with pure a princely beauty,
The earth had not a hole to hide this deed.
Sal. Murder, as hating what himself ha
done,

Doth lay it open to urge on revenge.

Big. Or when he doom'd this beauty to grave,

Found it too precious-princely for a grave.

Sal. Sir Richard, what think you? Have ye beheld,

Or have you read, or heard? or could you thin

Or do you almost think, although you see,

That you do see? could thought, without the object,

Form such another? This is the very top,
The height, the crest, or crest unto the crest.
Of murder's arms: this is the bloodiest sh

The wildest savagery, the vilest stroke,

That ever wall-eyed wrath or staring rage

Presented to the tears of soft remorse.

Pen. All murders past do stand excus'd this:

---

KING JOHN.

Hub. Here is your hand and seal for what I did.

K. John. O! when the last account 'twixt heaven and earth
Is to be made, then shall this hand and seal
Witness against us to damnation.

How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds
Makes deeds ill done! Hadst thou not been by,
A fellow by the hand of nature mark'd,
Quoted and sign'd to do a deed of shame,
This murder had not come into my mind;
But taking note of thy abhor'd aspect,
Finding thee fit for bloody villany,
Apt, liable to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death;
And thou, to be endeared to a king,
Made it no conscience to destroy a prince.

Hub. My lord,—

K. John. Hadst thou but shook thy head or made a pause
When I spake darkly what I purposed,
Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face,
As bid me tell my tale in express words,
Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me break off,
And those thy fears might have wrought fears in me:
But thou didst understand me by my signs
And didst in signs again parley with sin;
Yea, without stop, didst let thy heart consent,
And consequently thy rude hand to act
The deed which both our tongues held vile to name.

Out of my sight, and never see me more!
My nobles leave me; and my state is bravo'd,
Even at my gates, with ranks of foreign powers:
Nay, in the body of this fleshly land,
This kingdom, this confine of blood and breath,
Hostility and civil tumult reigns
Between my conscience and my cousin's death.

Hub. Arm you against your other enemies,
I'll make a peace between your soul and you.
Young Arthur is alive: this hand of mine
Is yet a maiden and an innocent hand,
Not painted with the crimson spots of blood.
Within this bosom never enter'd yet
The dreadful motion of a murderous thought;
And you have slander'd nature in my form,
Which, howsoever rude exteriorly,
Is yet the cover of a fairer mind
Than to be butcher of an innocent child.

K. John. Doth Arthur live? O! haste thee to the peers,
Throw this report on their incensed rage,
And make them tame to their obedience.

Forgive the comment that my passion made
Upon thy feature; for my rage was blind,
And fain imaginary eyes of blood
Presented thee more hideous than thou art.
O! answer not; but to my closet bring
The angry lords with all expedient haste.
I conjure thee but slowly; run more fast.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before the Castle.

Enter Arthur, on the walls.

Artb. The wall is high; and yet will I leap down.

Good ground, be pitiful and hurt me not!
There's few or none do know me; if they did,
ad this, so sole and so unmatchable,
all give a holiness, a purity,
the yet unbegotten sin of times;
and prove a deadly bloodshed but a jest,
exemplified by this heinous spectacle.

Bast. It is a damned and a bloody work;
he graceless action of a heavy hand,
that it be the work of any hand.

Sal. If that it be the work of any hand!
’t had a kind of light what would ensue:
is the shameful work of Hubert’s hand;
he practice and the purpose of the king:
rom whose obedience I forbid my soul,
needing before this ruin of sweet life.
ad breathing to his graceless excellence
he incense of a vow, a holy vow, ever to taste the pleasures of the world,
ever to be infected with delight,
or conversant with ease and idleness,
il I have set a glory to this hand, y giving it the worship of revenge.

Pem., Big. Our souls religiously confirm thy words.

Enter HUBERIT.

Hub. Lords, I am hot with haste in seeking you:
rather doth live: the king hath sent for you.
Sal. O! he is bold and blushes not at death.
vain, thou hateful villain! get thee gone.
Hub. I am no villain.

Sal. Must I rob the law?
Drawing his sword.

Bast. Your sword is bright, sir; put it up again.
Sal. Not till I sheathe it in a murderer’s skin.
Hub. Stand back, Lord Salisbury, stand back, I say:
y heaven, I think my sword’s as sharp as yours.
would not have you, lord, forget yourself,
for tempt the danger of my true defence;
est I, by marking of your rage, forget our worth, your greatness, and nobility.

Big. Out, dunghill! dar’st thou brave a nobleman?

Hub. Not for my life; but yet I dare defend y innocent life against an emperor.

Sal. Thou art a murderer.

Hub. Do not prove me so;
I am none. Whose tongue sweer speaks false, not truly speaks, who speaks not truly, lies.
Pem. Cut him to pieces.

Bast. Keep the peace, I say.
Sal. Stand by, or I shall gull you, Faulconbridge.

Bast. Thou wert better gall the devil, Salisbury:
if thou but frown on me, or stir thy foot,
or teach thy hasty spleen to do me shame, ‘ll strike thee dead. P’t up thy sword betime, or I’ll so maul you and thy toasting-iron,
that you shall think the devil is come from hell.

Big. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge?

Sal. Tell me.

Pem. Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes,
For villany is not without such rheum;
And he, long traded in it, makes it seem
Like rivers of remorse and innocence.

Away with me, all you whose souls abhor
The uncleanly savours of a slaughter-house;
For I am stifled with this smell of sin.

Bast. Away, toward Bury; to the Dauphin there!
Pem. There tell the king he may inquire us out.

Exeunt Lords.

Bast. Here’s a good world! Knew you of this fair work?

Beyond the infinite and boundless reach
Of mercy, if thou didst this deed of death,
Art thou damn’d, Hubert.

Hub. Do but hear me, sir.

Bast. Ha! I’ll tell thee what;

Thou’rt damn’d as black; nay, nothing is so black;
Thou art more deep damn’d than Prince Lucifer:
There is not yet so ugly a fiend of hell
As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this child.

Hub. Upon my soul—

Bast. If thou didst but consent
To this most cruel act, do but despair;
And if thou want’st a cord, the smallest thread
That ever spider twisted from her womb
Will serve to strangle thee; a rush will be a beam
To hang thee on; or wouldst thou drown thyself,
Put but a little water in a spoon,
And it shall be as all the ocean,
Enough to stifle such a villain up.

I do suspect thee very grievously.

Hub. If I in act, consent, or sin of thought,
Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath
Which was embounded in this beauitose clay,
Let hell want pains enough to torture me.
I left him well.

Bast. Go, bear him in thine arms.
I am amaz’d, methinks, and lose my way
Among the thorns and dangers of this world.
How easy dost thou take all England up!
From forth this morsel of dead royalty,
The life, the right and truth of all this realm
Is fled to heaven; and England now is left
To tug and scramble and to part by the teeth
The unwed interest of proud-swelling state.
Now for the bare-pick’d bone of majesty
Doth dogged war bristle his angry crest,
And snarlth in the gentle eyes of peace:
Now powers from home and discontents at home
Meet in one line; and vast confusion waits,
As doth a raven on a sick-faller beast,
The imminent decay of wrested pomp.
Now happy he whose cloak and cloakure can Hold out this tempest. Bear away that child
And follow me with speed: I’ll to the king:
A thousand businesses are brief in hand,
And heaven itself doth frown upon the land.

Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King John, Pandulph with the crown, and Attendants.

K. John. Thus have I yielded up into your hand
The circle of my glory.

Pand. Giving JOHN the crown. Take again
From this my hand, as holding of the pope,
Your sovereign greatness and authority.

And from his holiness use all your power.
To stop their marches 'fore we are inflam'd.
Our discontented counties do revolt,
To that strange blood, to foreign royalty.
Swearing allegiance and the love of soul
To this inundation of mistemper'd humour.
Rests by you only to be qualified:
Then pause not; for the present time's so sick,
That present medicine must be minister'd,
Or overthow incurable ensues.

Pand. It was my breath that blew this tempest up
Upon your stubborn usage of the pope;
But since you are a gentle convertite,
My tongue shall hush again this storm of war
And make fair weather in your blustering land.
On this Ascension-day, remember well,
Upon your oath of service to the pope,
Go I to make the French lay down their arms.

K. John. Is this Ascension-day? Did not the prophet
Say that before Ascension-day at noon
My crown I should give off? Even so I have:
I did suppose it should be on constraint;
But, heaven be thank'd, it is but voluntary.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. All Kent hath yielded; nothing there holds out
But Dover castle: London hath receiv'd,
Like a kind host, the Dauphin and his powers:
Your nobles will not hear you, but are gone
To offer service to your enemy;
And wild amazement hurries up and down
The little number of your doubtful friends.

K. John. Would not my lords return to me again
After they heard young Arthur was alive?

Bast. They found him dead and cast into the streets,
An empty casket, where the jewel of life
By some damn'd hand was robb'd and ta'en away.

K. John. That villain Hubert told me he did live.

Bast. So, on my soul, he did, for aught he knew.
But wherefore do you droop? why look you sad?
Be great in act, as you have been in thought;
Let not the world see fear and sad distrust
Govern the motion of a kingly eye:
Be stirring as the time; be fire with fire;
Threaten the threateners, and outface the bower
Of bragging horror; so shall inferior eyes,
That borrow their behaviours from the great,
Grow great by your example and put on
The dauntless spirit of resolution.
Away! and glister like the god of war
When he intendeneth to become the field:
Show boldness and aspiring confidence.
What! shall they seek the lion in his den
And fright him there! and make him tremble there!
O! let it not be said. Forage, and run
To meet displeasure further from the doors,
And grapple with him ere he come so nigh.

K. John. The legate of the pope hath been
With me,
And I have made a happy peace with him;
And he hath promis'd to dismiss the powers
Led by the Dauphin.

Bast. O inglorious league!
Shall we, upon the footing of our land,
Send fair-play orders and make compromise,
Insinuation, parley and base truce
To arms invasive? shall a beardless boy,
A cocker'd silken wanton, brave our fields,
And flesh his spirit in a war-like soil,
Mocking the air with colours idly spread,
And find no check? Let us, my liege, to arm
Perchance the cardinal cannot make your peace
Or if he do, let it at least be said
They saw we had a purpose of defense.

K. John. Have thou the ordering of thy present time.

Bast. Away then, with good courage! yet know,
Our party may well meet a prouder foe.

Scene II.—A Plain near Saint Edmundsbury

Enter in arms, Lewis, Salisbury, Melun,
Pembroke, Bigot, and Soldiers.

Lew. My Lord Melun, let this be copied out
And keep it safe for our remembrance.
Return the precedent to these lords again;
That, having our fair order written down,
Both they and we, perusing o'er these notes,
May know wherefore we took the sacrament,
And keep our faiths firm and inviolable.

Sal. Upon our sides it never shall be broken
And, noble Dauphin, albeit we swear
A voluntary zeal and unur'd faith
To your proceedings; yet, believe me, prince,
I am not glad that such a sore of time
Should seek a plaster by contem'n'd revolt,
And heal the inveterate canker of one wound
By making many. O! it grieves my soul
That I must draw this metal from my side
To be a widow-maker: O! and there
Where honourable rescue and defence
Cries out upon the name of Salisbury.
But such is the infection of the time,
That, for the health and physic of our right,
We cannot deal but with the very hand
Of stern injustice and confused wrong.
And'st not pity, O my grieved friends!
That we, the sons and children of this isle,
Were born to see so sad an hour as this;
Wherein we step after a stranger march
Upon her gentle bosom, and fill up
Her enemies' ranks.—I must withdraw and we,
Upon the spot of this enforced cause,—
To grace the gentry of a land remote,
And follow unacquainted colours here?
What, here? O nation! that thou could'st r move;
That Neptune's arms, who clippeth thee about
Would bear thee from the knowledge of thyself
And grapple thee unto a pagan shore;
Where these two Christian armies might combin
The blood of malice in a vein of league,
And not to spend it so unneighbourly!

Lew. A noble temper dost thou show in this
And great affections wrestling in thy bosom
Do make an earthquake of nobility.
O! what a noble combat hast thou fought
Between compulsion and a brave respect.
Now, King of Milan, from the king

I come, to learn how you have dealt for him;
And, as you answer, I do know the scope
And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Pand. The Dauphin is too wilful-opposite,
And will not temporize with my entreaties:
He flatly says he'll not lay down his arms.

Bast. By all the blood that ever fury breathed,
The youth says well. Now hear our English king;
For thus his royalty doth speak in me.
He is prepareth; and reason too he should:
This apish and unmannish approach,
This harness'd masque and unadvised revel,
This unhair'd sauciness and boyish troops,
The king doth smile at; and is well preparèd
To whip this dwarfish war, these pigmy arms,
From out the circle of his territories.
That hand which had the strength, even at your door,
To cudgel you and make you take the hatch;
To dive like buckets in concealed wells;
To crouch in litter of your stable planks;
To lie like pawns lock'd up in chests and trunks;
To hug with swine; to seek sweet safety out
In vaults and prisons; and to thrill and shake
Even at the crying of your nation's crow,
Thinking this voice an armed Englishman:
Shall that victorious hand be feeblèd here
That in your chambers gave you chastisement?
No! Know, the gallant monarch is in arms,
And like an eagle o'er his aery towers,
To soose annoyance that comes near his nest.
And you degenerate, you ingrate revolts,
You bloody Neroes, ripping up the womb
Of your dear mother England, blush for shame:
For your own ladies and pale-visag'd maids
Like Amazons come tripping after drums,
Their thimbles into armed gauntlets change,
Their nedles to lances, and their gentle hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.

Lew. Here endeth thy brave, and turn thy face in peace;
We grant thee canst outscold us: fare thee well;
We hold our time too precious to be spent
With such a brabbler.

Pand. Give me leave to speak.

Bast. No, I will speak.

Lew. We will attend to neither.
Strike up the drums; and let the tongue of war
Plead for our interest and our being here.
Bast. Indeed, your drums, being beaten, will cry out;
And so shall you, being beaten. Do but start

And shall I now give o'er the yielded set?
No, no, on my soul, it never shall be said.

Pand. You look but on the outside of this work.

Lew. Outside or inside, I will not return
Till my attempt so much be glorified
As to my ample hope was promised
Before I drew this gallant head of war,
And cullèd these fiery spirits from the world,
To outlook conquest and to win renown
Even in the jaws of danger and of death.

Trumpet sounds.
What lusty trumpet thus doth summon us?

Enter the Bastard, attended.
An echo with the clamour of thy drum,
And even at hand a drum is ready brac’d
That shall reverberate all as loud as thine;
Sound but another, and another shall
As loud as thine rattle the welkin’s ear
And mock the deep-mouth’d thunder: for at hand,
Not trusting to this halting legate here,
Whom he hath us’d rather for sport than need,
Is war-like John; and in his forehead sits
A bare-ribb’d death, whose office is this day
To feast upon whole thousands of the French.
Lew. Strike up our drums, to find this danger out.
But. And thou shalt find it, Dauphin, do not doubt.

Exeunt. 193

Scene III.—The Same. A Field of Battle.

Alarums. Enter King John and Hubert.

K. John. How goes the day with us? O! tell me, Hubert.

Hub. Badly, I fear. How fares your majesty?
K. John. This fever, that hath troubled me so long,
Lies heavy on me: O! my heart is sick.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, your valiant kinsman, Faulconbridge,
Desires your majesty to leave the field,
And send him word by me which way you go.
K. John. Tell him, toward Swinstead, to the abbey there.

Mess. Be of good comfort; for the great supply
That was expected by the Dauphin here,
Are wreck’d three nights ago on Goodwin sands.
This news was brought to Richard but even now.
The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.
K. John. Ay me! this tyrant fever burns me up,
And will not let me welcome this good news.
Set on toward Swinstead: to my litter straight;
Weakness possesseth me, and I am faint.

Exeunt.

Scene IV.—The Same. Another Part of the Same.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, Bigot, and Others.

Sal. I did not think the king so stor’d with friends.
Pem. Up once again; put spirit in the French:
If they miscarry we miscarry too.

Sal. That misbegotten devil, Faulconbridge,
In spite of spite, alone upholds the day.

Pem. They say King John, sore sick, hath left the field.

Enter Melun wounded, and led by Soldiers.

Mel. Lead me to the revolts of England here.

Sal. When we were happy we had other names.

Pem. It is the Count Melun.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly, noble English; you are bought and sold;
Unthread the rude eye of rebellion,
And welcome home again discarded faith.
Seek out King John and fall before his feet;
For if the French be lords of this loud day,
He means to recompense the pains you take
By cutting off your heads. Thus hath he sworn
And I with him, and many more with me,
Upon the altar at Saint Edmundsbury;
Even on that altar where we swore to you
Dear amity and everlasting love.

Sal. May this be possible? may this be true?

Mel. Have I not hideous death within my vie Retaining but a quantity of life,
Which bleeds away, even as a form of wax
Resolveth from his figure against the fire?
What in the world should make me now deceit
Since I must lose the use of all deceit?
Why should I then be false, since it is true
That I must die here and live hence by truth
I say again, if Lewis do win the day,
He is forsworn, if e’er those eyes of yours
Behold another day break in the east:
But even this night, whose black contagion breath
Already smokes about the burning crest
Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied sun,
Even this ill night, your breathing shall expir
Paying the fine of rated treachery
Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives,
If Lewis by your assistance win the day.
Commend me to one Hubert with your king;
The love of him, and this respect besides,
For that my grandsire was an Englishman,
Awakes my conscience to confess all this.
In lieu whereof, I pray you, bear me hence
From forth the noise and rumour of the field,
Where I may think the remnant of my thought
In peace, and part this body and my soul
With contemplation and devout desires.

Sal. We do believe thee: and beshrew my so
But I do love the favour and the form
Of this most fair occasion, by the which
We will untread the steps of damned flight,
And like a bated and retired flood,
Leaving our rankness and irregular course,
Stoop low within those bounds we have o’erlook
And calmly run on in obedience,
Even to our ocean, to our great King John.
My arm shall give thee help to bear thee hence
For I do see the cruel pangs of death
Right in thine eye. Away, my friends! Ne flight;
And happy newness, that intends old right.

Exeunt, leading off Melun.

Scene V.—The Same. The French Camp.

Enter Lewis and his Train.

Lew. The sun of heaven methought was lost to set,
But stay’d and made the western welkin blush
When the English measur’d backward the own ground
In faint retire. O! bravely came we off.
When with a volley of our needless shot,
After such bloody toil, we bid good night.
And wound our tatter’d colours clearly up,
Last in the field, and almost lords of it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Where is my prince, the Dauphin?

Lew. Here: What news

Mess. The Count Melun is slain; the English lords,

By his persuasion, are again fall’n off;
KING JOHN.

Scene VII.—The Orchard of Swinestead Abbey.

Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury, and Bigot.

P. Hen. It is too late: the life of all his blood Is touch’d corruptibly; and his pure brain, Which some suppose the soul’s frail dwelling-house, Doth, by the idle comments that it makes, Foretell the ending of mortality.

Enter Pembroke.

Pem. His highness yet doth speak; and holds belief That, being brought into the open air, It would allay the burning quality Of that fell poison which assaileth him.

P. Hen. Let him be brought into the orchard here.

Doth he still rage?

Exit Bigot.

Pem. He is more patient Than when you left him: even now he sung.

P. Hen. O vanity of sickness! fierce extremes In their continuance will not feel themselves. Death, having prey’d upon the outward parts, Leaves them, invisible: and his siege is now Against the mind, the which he pricks and wounds With many legions of strange fantasies, Which, in their throng and press to that last hold, Confound themselves. ’Tis strange that death should sing.

I am the eye-gnet to this pale faint swan, Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death, And from the organ-pipe of frailty sings His soul and body to their lasting rest.

Sal. Be of good comfort, prince; for you are born To set a form upon that indigest Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.

Re-enter Bigot and Attendants, carrying King John in a chair.

K. John. Ay, marry, now my soul hath elbow-room; It would not out at windows, nor at doors. There is so hot a summer in my bosom That all my bowels crumble up to dust: I am a scribbled form, drawn with a pen Upon a parchment, and against this fire Do I shrink up.

P. Hen. How fares your majesty?

K. John. Poison’d, ill fare; dead, forsook, cast off: And none of you will bid the winter come To thrust his icy fingers in my maw; Nor let my kingdom’s rivers take their course Through my burn’d bosom: nor entail the north To make his bleak winds kiss my parched lips, And comfort me with cold. I do not ask you much: I beg cold comfort; and you are so strait And so ingrateful you deny me that.
P. Hen. O! that there were some virtue in my tears, That might relieve you.
K. John. The salt in them is hot. Within me is a hell; and there the poison Is as a fiend confin’d to tyrannize On unreprievable condemned blood.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. O! I am scalded with my violent motion And spleen of speed to see your majesty. 50
K. John. O cousin! thou art come to set mine eye:
The tackle of my heart is crack’d and burn’d, And all the shrouds wherewith my life should sail Are turned to one thread, one little hair: My heart hath one poor string to stay it by, Which holds but till thy news be uttered; And then all this thou seest is but a clod And module of confounded royalty.
Bast. The Dauphin is preparing hitherward, Where heaven he knows how we shall answer him:

For in a night the best part of my power, As I upon advantage did remove, Were in the Washes all unwarily Devoured by the unexpected flood.

The King dies.

Sol. You breathe these dead news in as dead an ear.
My liege! my lord! but now a king, now thus. 60
P. Hen. Even so must I run on, and even so stop.
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay, When this was now a king, and now is clay!
Bast. Art thou gone so! I do but stay behind To do the office for thee of revenge, And then my soul shall wait on thee to heaven, As it on earth hath been thy servant still. Now, now, you stars, that move in your right spheres, Where be your powers? Show now your mended faiths, And instantly return with me again, To push destruction and perpetual shame Out of the weak door of our fainting land.

Straight let us seek, or straight we shall sought:
The Dauphin rages at our very heels.
Sol. It seems you know not then so much as we.
The Cardinal Pandulph is within at rest, Who half an hour since came from the Dauphin And brings from him such offers of our peace As we with honour and respect may take, With purpose presently to leave this war.
Bast. He will the rather do it when he sees Ourselves well sinewed to our defence.
Sol. Nay, it is in a manner done already; For many carriages he hath dispatch’d To the sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel To the disposing of the cardinal: With whom yourself, myself, and other lords, If you think meet, this afternoon will post To consummate this business happily.
Bast. Let it be so. And you, my noble prince With other princes that may best be spar’d, Shall wait upon your father’s funeral.
P. Hen. At Worcester must his body inter’d;
For so he will’d it.
Bast. Thither shall it then.
And happily may your sweet self put on The lineal state and glory of the land! To whom, with all submission, on my knee, I do bequeath my faithful services And true subjection everlastingly.
Sol. And the like tender of our love we make To rest without a spot for evermore.
P. Hen. I have a kind soul that would give you thanks, And knows not how to do it but with tears.
Bast. O! let us pay the time but needful we Since it hath been beforehand with our griefs. This England never did, nor never shall, Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror, But when it first did help to wound itself. Now these her princes are come home again, Come the three corners of the world in arms, And we shall shock them. Nought shall mak us rue.
If England to itself do rest but true. 71

OTHER ATTENDANTS.

ACT I.

Enter King Richard, attended; John of Gaunt, and other Nobles, with him.

K. Rich. Old John of Gaunt, time-honour'd Lancaster,

I was then, according to thy oath and band,

That other Henry Hereford thy bold son,

Now to make good the bolstorous late appeal,

Then our leisure would not let us hear

Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Gaunt. I have, my liege.

K. Rich. Tell me, moreover, hast thou sounded

Him; he appeals the Duke on ancient malice,

Worthy, as a good subject should, some known ground of treachery in him?

Gaunt. As near as I could sift him on that argument,

Some apparent danger seen in him and thy highness, no inveterate malice.

K. Rich. Then call them to our presence; face to face,

Drowning brow to brow, ourselves will hear the accuser and the accused freely speak:

Exeunt some ATTENDANTS.

gh-stomach'd are they both, and full of ire, rage deaf as the sea, hasty as fire.

Re-enter ATTENDANTS, with BOLINGBROKE and MOWBRAY.

Boling. Many years of happy days befall My gracious sovereign, my most loving liege! Mow. Each day still better other's happiness; Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap, Add an immortal title to your crown! K. Rich. We thank you both; yet one but flatters us, As well appeareth by the cause you come; Namely, to appeal each other of high treason. Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object Against the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray? Boling. First, heaven be the record to my speech! In the devotion of a subject's love, Tendering the precious safety of my prince, And free from other misbegotten hate, Come I appellant to this princely presence. Now, Thomas Mowbray, do I turn to thee, And mark my greeting well; for what I speak My body shall make good upon this earth, Or my divine soul answer it in heaven. Thou art a traitor and a miscreant; Too good to be so and too bad to live, Since the more fair and crystal is the sky, The uglier seem the clouds that in it fly. Once more, the more to aggravate the note, With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat;
And wish, so please my sovereign, ere I move,
What my tongue speaks, my right drawn sword may prove.

_Mow._ Let not my cold words here accuse my self:
'Tis not the trial of a woman's war,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain;
The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this:
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast
As to be hush'd and nought at all to say.
First, the fair reverence of your highness curbs me
From giving reins and spurs to my free speech;
Which else would post until it had return'd
These terms of treason double'd down his throat.
Setting aside his high blood's royalty,
And let him be no kinsman to my liege,
I do defy him, and I spit at him;
Call him a slanderous coward and a villain:
Which to maintain I would allow him odds,
And meet him, were I tied to run afoot
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Where ever Englishman durst set his foot.
Meantime let this defend my loyalty:
By all my hopes, most falsely doth he lie.

_Boling._ Pale trembling coward, there I throw my gage,
Disclaiming here the kindred of the king,
And lay aside my high blood's royalty,
Which fear, not reverence, makes thee to except:
If guilty dread have left thee so much strength
As to take up mine honour's pawn, then stoop:
By that, and all the rites of knighthood else,
Will I make good against thee, arm to arm,
What if I have spoke, or thou canst worse devise.
_Mow._ I take it up; and by that sword I swear,
Which gently laid my knighthood on my shoulder,
I'll answer thee in any fair degree,
Or chivalrous design of knightly trial:
And when I mount, alive may I not light,
If I be traitor or unjustly fight!

_K. Rich._ What doth our cousin lay to Mow-bray's charge?
It must be great that can inherit us
So much as of a thought of ill in him.

_Boling._ Look, what I speak, my life shall prove it true:
That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand nobles
In name of lendings for your highness' soldiers,
The which he hath detain'd for levied employments,
Like a false traitor and injurious villain.
Besides I say and will in battle prove,
Or here or elsewhere to the furthest verge
That ever was survey'd by English eye,
That all the treasons for these eighteen years
Complotted and contriv'd in this land, Fetch from false Mowbray their first head and
spring.
Further I say and further will maintain
Upon his bad life to make all this good,
That he did plot the Duke of Gloucester's death,
Suggest his soon-believing adversaries,
And consequently, like a traitor coward,
Shall 'd out his innocent soul through streams of blood:
Which blood, like sacrificing Abel's, cries,
Even from the tongueless caverns of the earth
To me for justice and rough chastisement;
And, by the glorious worth of my descent,
This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.

_Mow._ O! let my sovereign turn away his face
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his blood,
How God and good men hate so foul a liar.

_K. Rich._ Mowbray, impartial are our eyes and ears:
Were he my brother, nay, my kingdom's heir
As he is but my father's brother's son,
Now by my sceptre's awe I make a vow,
Such neighbour nearness to our sacred blood
Should nothing privilege him, nor partialize
The unstooping firmness of my upright soul.
He is our subject, Mowbray; so art thou:
Free speech and fearless I to thee allow.

_Mow._ Then, Bolingbroke, as low as to thy head,
Through the false passage of thy throat, th' liest.
Three parts of that receipt I had for Calais
Disburs'd I duly to his highness' soldiers;
The other part reserv'd I by consent,
For that my sovereign liege was in my debt.
Upon remainder of a dear account,
Since last I went to France to fetch his queen,
Now swallow down that lie. For Gloucester's
death,
I slew him not; but to mine own disgrace
Neglected my sworn duty in that case.
For you, my noble Lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my foe,
Once did I lay an ambush for your life,
A trespass that doth vex my grievous soul;
But I last receiv'd the sacrament
I did confess it, and exactly begg'd
Your grace's pardon, and I hope I had it.
This is my fault: as for the rest appeal'd,
It issues from the rancour of a villain,
A recreant and most degenerate traitor;
Which in myself I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurl down my gage
Upon this overweening traitor's foot,
To prove myself a loyal gentleman
Even in the best blood chamber'd in his host.
In haste whereof, most heartily I pray
Your highness to assign our trial day.

_K. Rich._ Wrath-kindled gentlemen, be ru-me by me;
Let's purge this choler without letting blood
This we prescribe, though no physician;
Deep malice makes too deep incision:
Forget, forgive; conclude and be agreed.
Our doctors say this is no month to bleed.
Good uncle, let this end where it begun;
We'll call the Duke of Norfolk, you your so-

_Gaunt._ To be a make-peace shall become
age:
Throw down, my son, the Duke of Norfolk's ga-

_K. Rich._ And, Norfolk, throw down his.

_Gaunt._ When, Harry, why?
Obedience bids I should not bid again.

_K. Rich._ Norfolk, throw down, we bid thee;
there is no boot.

_Mow._ Myself I throw, dread sovereign, at t'foot.
My life thou shalt command, but not my sham
The one my duty owes; but my fair name,
of death that lives upon my grave,
A disgrace'd, impeach'd, and baffled here, 170
To the soul with slander's venom'd spear,
Which no balm can cure but his heart-blood
Which breath'd this poison.
Rich. Rage must be withstood:
To me his gage: lions make leopards tame.
Yea, Yea, but not change his spots: take but my shame,
I resign my gage. My dear lord,
Purse treasure mortal times afford
To sell my life to both grow in one;
Honour from me, and my life is done:
Dear liege, mine honour let me try:
That I live and for that will I die.
Rich. Cousin, throw up your gage; do you begin.
Duch. Where then, alas! may I complain myself?
Gaunt. To God, the widow's champion and defence.
Duch. Why then, I will. Farewell, old Gaunt.
Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold
Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray fight:
O! sit my husband's wrongs on Hereford's spear,
That it may enter butcher Mowbray's breast.
Or, if misfortune miss the first career,
Be Mowbray's sins so heavy in his bosom
That they may break his foaming courser's back,
And throw the rider headlong in the lists,
A cut off regrant to my cousin Hereford!
Farewell, old Gaunt; thy sometimes brother's wife.
With her companion grief must end her life.
Gaunt. Sister, farewell; I must to Coventry.
As much good stay with thee as go with me!
Duch. Yet one word more. Grief boundeth where it falls,
Not with the empty hollowness, but weight:
I take my leave before I have begun, 60
For sorrow ends not when it seemeth done.
Command me to thy brother, Edmund York.
Lo! this is all: nay, yet depart not so;
Though this be all, do not so quickly go:
I shall remember more. Bid him—ah! what?—
With all good speed at Flashy visit me.
Alack! and what shall good old York there see
But empty lodgings and unfurnished walls,
Unpeopled offices, untrodden stones? 69
And what hear there for welcome but my groans?
Therefore commend me; let him not come there,
To seek out sorrow that dwells every where.
Desolate, desolate will I hence, and die:
The last leaf of thee takes my weeping eye.
Exeunt.
SCENE III.—Open Space near Coventry.
Lists set out, and a throne. Heralds etc attending.
Enter the Lord Marshal and Aumerle.
Mar. My Lord Aumerle, is Harry Hereford arm'd?
Aum. Yea, at all points, and longs to enter in.
Mar. The Duke of Norfolk, sprightfully and bold,
Stays but the summons of the appellant's trumpet.
Aum. Why then, the champions are prepar'd, and stay
For nothing but his majesty's approach.

Flourish. Enter King Richard, who takes his seat on his throne; Gaunt, Bushy, Bagot, Green, and Others, who take their places. A trumpet is sounded, and answered by another trumpet within. Then enter Mowbray in arms, defendant, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder champion
The cause of his arrival here in arms:
Ask him his name, and orderly proceed
To swear him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. In God's name, and the king's, say who thou art,
And why thou com'st thus knightly clad in arms,
Against what man thou com'st, and what thy quarrel.
Speak truly, on thy knighthood and thine oath;
As so defend thee heaven and thy valor!

Mow. My name is Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk:
Who hither come engaged by my oath,
Which God defend a knight should violate!
Both to defend my loyalty and truth
To God, my king, and my succeeding issue,
Against the Duke of Hereford that appeals me;
And, by the grace of God and this mine arm,
To prove him, in defending of myself,
A traitor to my God, my king, and me;
And as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Trumpet sounds. Enter Bolingbroke, appellant, in armour, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, ask yonder knight in arms,
Both who he is and why he cometh hither
Thus placed in habiliments of war;
And formally, according to our law,
Depose him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. What is thy name? and wherefore com'st thou
hither,
Before King Richard in his royal lists?
Against whom comest thou? and what's thy quarrel?
Speak like a true knight, so defend thee heaven!

Boling. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Am I; who ready here do stand in arms,
To prove by God's grace and my body's valour,
In lists, on Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk,
That he's a traitor foul and dangerous,
To God of heaven, King Richard, and to me:
And as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Mar. On pain of death, no person be so bold
Or daring-hardy as to touch the lists,
Except the marshal and such officers
Appointed to direct these fair designs.

Boling. Lord marshal, let me kiss my sovereign's
hand,
And bow my knee before his majesty:
For Mowbray and myself are like two men
That vow a long and weary pilgrimage;
Then let us take a ceremonious leave
And loving farewell of our several friends.

Mar. The appellant in all duty greets ye
highness,
And craves to kiss your hand and take his leave.

K. Rich. We will descend and fold him in arms!

Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is right,
So be thy fortune in this royal fight!
 Farewell, my blood; which if to-day thou
Lament we may, but not revenge thee dead.

Boling. O! let no noble eye profane a tear
For me, if I be gor'd with Mowbray's spear.
As confident as is the falcon's flight
Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight.
My loving lord, I take my leave of you;
Of you, my noble cousin, Lord Amurerle;
Not sick, although I have to do with death,
But lusty, young, and cheerily drawing breath;
Lo! as at English feasts, so I regret
The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet
O thou, the earthly author of my blood,
Whose youthful spirit, in me regenerate,
Doth with a two-fold vigour lift me up
To reach at victory above my head
Add proof unto mine armour with thy prayer
And with thy blessings steel my lance's point
That it may enter Mowbray's waxen coat,
And refurbish new the name of John a Gaunt,
Even in the lusty haviour of his son.

Gaunt. God in thy good cause make thee prosperous!
Be swift like lightning in the execution;
And let thy blows, doubly redoubled,
Fall like amazing thunder on the casque
Of thy adverse pernicious enemy:
Rouse up thy youthful blood, be valiant,
And live.

Boling. Mine innocency and Saint George thrive!

Mow. However God or fortune cast my lot
There lives or dies, true to King Richard's throne,
A loyal, just, and upright gentleman.
Never did captive with a freer heart
Cast off his chains of bondage and embrace
His golden uncontroll'd enfranchisement,
More than my dancing soul doth celebrate
This feast of battle with mine adversary.
Most mighty liege, and my companion peers,
Take from my mouth the wish of happy year
As gentle and as solemn as to jest,
Go I to fight: truth hath a quiet breast.

K. Rich. Farewell, my lord; securely I espouse
Virtue with valour couched in thine eye.
Order the trial, marshal, and begin.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Receive thy lance; and God defend the right.

Boling. Strong as a tower in hope, I cry 'tis

Mar. Go bear this lance to Thomas, Duke of Norfolk.

First Her. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Stands here for God, his sovereign, and himself
On pain to be found false and recreant.
To prove the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray
A traitor to his God, his king, and him;
And dares him to set forward to the fight.

Second Her. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray,
Duke of Norfolk,
On pain to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himself and to approve
KING RICHARD II.

K. Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate:
After our sentence plaining comes too late.

Mow. Then thus I turn me from my country's light,
To dwell in solemn shades of endless night.

K. Rich. Return again, and take an oath with thee.

Lay on our royal sword your banish'd hands;
Swear by the duty that you owe to God,
Our part therein we banish with yourselves,
To keep the oath that we administer:
You never shall, so help you truth and God!
Embrace each other's love in banishment;
Nor never look upon each other's face;
Nor never write, regret, nor reconcile
This lowering tempest of your home-bred hate;
Nor never by advised purpose meet
To plot, contrive, or complot any ill
'Gainst us, our state, our subjects, or our land.

Boling. I swear.

Mow. And I, to keep all this.

Boling. Norfolk, so far as to mine enemy:—

By this time, had the king permitted us,
One of our souls had wander'd in the air,
Banish'd this frail sepulchre of our flesh,
As now our flesh is banish'd from this land:
Confess thy treasons ere thou fly the realm;
Since thou hast far to go, bear not along
The clogging burden of a guilty soul.

Mow. No, Bolingbroke: if ever I were traitor,
My name be blotted from the book of life,
And I from heaven banish'd as from hence!
But what thou art, God, thou, and I do know:
And all too soon, I fear, the king shall rise.
Farewell, my liege. Now no way can I stray;
Save back to England, all the world's my way.

Ext.

K. Rich. Uncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy grieved heart: thy sad aspect
Hath from the number of his banish'd years
Pluck'd four away. To BOLINGBROKE. Six frozen winters spent,
Return with welcome home from banishment.
Boling. How long a time lives in one little word!
Four legging winters and four wanton springs
End in a word: such is the breath of kings.
Gaunt. I thank my liege, that in regard of me
He shortens four years of my son's exile;
But little vantage shall I reap thereby:
For, ere the six years that he hath to spend
Can change their moons and bring their times about,
My oil-dried lamp and time-bewasted light
Shall be extinct with age and endless night;
My inch of taper will be burnt and done,
And blindfold death not let me see my son.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, thou hast many years to live.

Gaunt. But not a minute, king, that thou canst give:
Shorten my days thou canst with sullen sorrow,
And pluck nights from me, but not lead a morrow;
Thou canst help time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimages;
Thy word is current with him for my death.
But dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.

K. Rich. Thy son is banish'd upon good advice,
Whereeto thy tongue a party-verdict gave:
Why at our justice seem'st thou then to lower?
Gaunt. Things sweet to taste prove in digestion sour.
You urg'd me as a judge; but I had rather
You would have bid me argue like a father.
O! had it been a stranger, not my child,
To smooth his fault I should have been more mild.
A partial slander sought I to avoid,
And in the sentence my own life destroy'd.
Alas! I look'd when some of you should say,
I was too strict to make mine own away;
But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue
Against my will to do myself this wrong.
K. Rich. Cousin, farewell; and, uncle, bid him so:
Six years we banish him, and he shall go.
Flourish. Exit King Richard and Train.

Aum. Cousin, farewell: what presence must not know,
From where you do remain let paper show.
Mar. My lord, no leave take I; for I will ride,
As far as land will let me, by your side.
Gaunt. O! to what purpose dost thou hear thy words,
That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends?
Boling. I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongue's office should be prodigal
To breathe the abundant dolour of the heart.
Gaunt. Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.
Boling. Joy absent, grief is present for that time.
Gaunt. What is six winters? they are quickly gone.
Boling. To men in joy; but grief makes one hour ten.
Gaunt. Call it a travel that thou tak'st for pleasure.
Boling. My heart will sigh when I miscall it so,
Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage.
Gaunt. The sullen passage of thy weary steps
Esteem as foil wherein thou art to set
The precious jewel of thy home return.
Boling. Nay, rather, every tedious stride I make
Will but remember me what a deal of world
I wander from the jewels that I love.
Must I not serve a long apprenticeship
To foreign passages, and in the end,
Having my freedom, boast of nothing else
But that I was a journeyman to grief?
Gaunt. All places that the eye of heaven visits
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens.
Teach thy necessity to reason thus;
There is no virtue like necessity.
Think not the king did banish thee,
But thou the king. Woe doth the heavier sit,
Where it perceives it is but faintly borne.
Go, say I sent thee forth to purchase honour,
And not the king exil'd thee; or suppose
Devouring pestilence hangs in our air,
And thou art flying to a fresher clime.
Look! what thy soul holds dear, imagine it
To lie that way thou go'st, not whence thou com'st.
Suppose the singing birds musicians,
The grass whereon thou tread'st the presence strew'd,
The flowers fair ladies, and thy steps no more
Than a delightful measure or a dance;

For gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite
The man that mocks at it and sets it light.
Boling. O! who can hold a fire in his hand
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?
Or clow the hungry edge of appetite
By bare imagination of a feast?
Or wallow naked in December snow
By thinking on fantastic summer's heat?
O! no, the apprehension of the good
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse;
Fell sorrow's tooth doth never rankle more
Than when it bites, but lanceth not the sore.
Gaunt. Come, come, my son, I'll bring it on thy way.
Had I thy youth and cause, I would not stay.
Boling. Then, England's ground, farew well
Sweet soil, adieu:
My mother, and my nurse, that bears me yet
Where'er I wander, boast of this I can,
Though banish'd, yet a true-born Englishman.

Scene IV.—London. A Room in the King's Castle.

Enter King Richard, Bagot, and Green, one door; Aumerle at another.

K. Rich. We did observe, Cousin Aumerle,
How far brought you high Hereford on his way?
Aum. I brought high Hereford, if you please,
But to the next highway, and there I left him.
K. Rich. And say, what store of partings were shed?
Aum. Faith, none for me; except the not east wind,
Which then blew bitterly against our faces,
Awak'd the sleeping rheum, and so by chance,
Did grace our hollow parting with a tear.
K. Rich. What said our cousin when parted with him?
Aum. 'Farewell:'
And, for my heart disclaimed that my tongue
Should so profane the word, that taught me on
To counterfeit oppression of such grief,
That words seem'd buried in my sorrow's gripe;
Marry, would the word 'farewell' have length'd
And added years to his short banishment,
He should have had a volume of farewells;
But since it would not, he had none of me.
K. Rich. He is our cousin, cousin; but but,
When time shall call him home from banishment,
Whether our kinsman come to see his friend
Ourself and Bushy, Bagot here and Green
Observe'd his courtship to the common people,
How he did seem to dive into their hearts
With humble and familiar courtesy,
What reverence he did throw away on slaves;
Wooing poor craftsmen with the craft of smail
And patient underbearing of his fortune,
As 'twere to banish their affects with him.
Off goes his bonnet to an oyster-wench;
A brace of draymen bid God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supper knee.
With 'Thanks, my countrymen, my low friends;'
As were our England in reversion his,
And he our subjects' next degree in hope.
Enter Bushy.

Shy, what news?

Bushy. Old John of Gaunt is grievous sick, my lord, shyly taken, and hath sent post-haste entreat your majesty to visit him.

Rich. Where lies he?

Bushy. At Ely House.

Rich. Now put it, God, in the physician's mind, help him to his grave immediately!

lining of his coffers may make coats deck our soldiers for these Irish wars.

we, gentlemen, let's all go visit him:

God we may make haste, and come too late!

Id. Amen.

Enter Bushy.

ACT II.

Gaunt on a couch; the Duke of York and Others standing by him.

Gaunt. Will the king come, that I may breathe my last wholesome counsel to his unstaid youth?
York. Vex not yourself, nor strive not with your breath;
all in vain comes counsel to his car.
Gaunt. O! but they say the tongues of dying men force attention like deep harmony:
here words are scarce, they are seldom spent in vain,
they breathe truth that breathe their words in pain.
that no more must say is listen'd more;
Then they whom youth and ease have taught to gloze;
are men's ends mark'd than their lives before:
The setting sun, and music at the close,
the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last,
rit in remembrance more than things long past:
ough Richard my life's counsel would not hear,
death's sad tale may yet undeaf his ear.
York. No; it is stopp'd with other flattering sounds;
praises of his state: then there are fond

Lascivious metres, to whose venom sound
The open ear of youth doth always listen:
Report of fashions in proud Italy,
Whose manners still our tardy apish nation
Limps after in base imitation.
Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,
So it be new there's no respect how vile,
That is not quickly buzz'd into his ears?
Then all too late comes counsel to be heard,
Where will doth mutiny with wit's regard.
Direct not him whose way himself will choose:
'Tis breath thou lack'st, and that breath wilt thou lose.

Gaunt. Methinks I am a prophet new inspir'd,
And thus expiring do foretell of him:
His rash fierce blaze of riot cannot last,
For violent fires soon burn out themselves;
Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short;
He tires betimes that spurs too fast betimes;
With eager feeding food doth choke the feeder:
Light vanity, insatiable cormorant,
Consuming means, soon prey's upon itself.
This royal throne of kings, this sceptred isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-paradise,
This fortress built by Nature for herself
Against infection and the hand of war;
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which savis it in the office of a wall,
Or as a most defensive to a house,
Against the envy of less happier lands,
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England,

This nurse, this teeming womb of royal kings,
Fear'd by their breed and famous by their birth,
Renowned for their deeds as far from home,
For Christian service and true chivalry,
As is the sepulchre in stubborn Jewry
Of the world's rausom, blessed Mary's son;
This land of such dear souls, this dear, dear land,
Dear for her reputation through the world,
Is now leas'd out, I die pronouncing it,
Like to a tenement, or peiting farm:
England, bound in with the triumphant sea,
Whose rocky shore beats back the envious siege
Of watery Neptune, is now bound in with shame.
With inky blots, and rotten parchment bonds:
That England, that was wont to conquer others,
Hath made a shameful conquest of itself.
Ah! would the scandal vanish with my life,
How happy then were my ensuing death.

Enter King Richard and Queen; Aumerle, Bushy, Green, Bagot, Ross, and Wilmoughby.

York. The king is come: deal mildly with his youth;
For young hot colts, being rage'd, do rage the more.
Queen. How fares our noble uncle, Lancaster?
K. Rich. What comfort, man? how is't with aged Gaunt?
Gaunt. O! how that name befits my composition;
Old Gaunt indeed, and Gaunt in being old:
Within me grief hath kept a tedious fast;
And who abstains from meat that is not Gaunt?
For sleeping England long time have I watch'd;
Watching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt.
The pleasure that some fathers feed upon
Is my strict fast, I mean my children's looks;  so
And therein fasting hast thou made me gaunt.
Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
Whose hollow womb inherits nought but bones.
K. Rich. Can sick men play so nicely with their names?
Gaunt. No; misery makes sport to mock itself:
Since thou dost seek to kill my name in me,
I mock my name, great king, to flatter thee.
K. Rich. Should dying men flatter with those that live?
Gaunt. No, no; men living flatter those that die.
K. Rich. Thou, now a-dying, say'st thou flatter'st me.
Gaunt. O! no, thou diest, though I the sicker be.
K. Rich. I am in health, I breathe, and see thee ill.
Gaunt. Now he that made me know I see
thee ill;
Ill in myself to see, and in thee seeing ill.
Thy death-bed is no lesser than thy land
Wherein thouliest in reputation sick;
And thou, too careless patient as thou art,
Committ'st thy anointed body to the curer
Of those physicians that first wounded thee:
A thousand flatterers sit within thy crown,
Whose compass is no bigger than thy head;
And yet, incaged in so small a verge,
The waste is no whit lesser than thy land.
O! had thy grandsire, with a prophet's eye,
Seen how his son's son should destroy his sons,
From forth thy reach be would have laid thy
shame,
Deposing thee before thou wert possess'd,
Which art possess'd now to depose thyself.
Why, cousin, wert thou regent of the world,
It were a shame to let this land by lease;
But for thy world enjoying but this land,
Is it not more than shame to shame it so?
Landlord of England art thou now, not king:
Thy state of law is bond-slave to the law,
And thou——
K. Rich. A lunatic lean-witted fool,
Presuming on an auge's privilege,
Dar'st with thy frozen admonition
Make pale our cheek, chasing the royal blood
With fury from his native residence.
Now, by my seat's right royal majesty,
Wert thou not brother to great Edward's son,
This tongue that runs so roundly in thy head
Should run thy head from thy unresented shoulders.
Gaunt. O! spare me not, my brother Edward's
son,
For that I was his father Edward's son.
That blood already, like the pelican,
Hast thou ta'd out and drunkenly carons'd; My brother Gloucester, plain well-meaning soul,
Whom far befall in heaven 'mongst happy souls!
May be a precedent and witness good
That thou respect'st not spilling Edward's
blood:
Join with the present sickness that I have;
And thy unkindness be like crooked age,
To crop at once a too-long withered flower.
Live in thy shame, but die not shame with thee!
These words hereafter thy tormenters be!

Convey me to my bed, then to my grave:
Love they to live that love and honour have
Exit, borne out by his Attendants.
K. Rich. And let them die that age and shall have;
For both hast thou, and both become the grief
York. I do beseech your majesty, impute words
To wayward sickness and age in him:
He loves you, on my life, and holds you dear.
As Harry Duke of Hereford, were he here.
K. Rich. Right, you say true: as Hereford love, so his;
As theirs, so mine; and all be as it is.

Enter Northumberland.

North. My liege, old Gaunt commends him to your majesty.
K. Rich. What says he?
North. Nay, nothing; all is said.
His tongue is now a stringless instrument;
Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent York. Be York the next that must bankrupt so!
Though death be poor, it ends a mortal woe.
K. Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and doth he:
His time is spent: our pilgrimage must be.
So much for that. Now for our Irish wars.
We must supplant those rough rug-headed kern
Which live like venom where no venom else
But only they hath privilege to live.
And for these great affairs do ask some char
Towards our assistance we do seize to us
The plate, coin, revenues, and moveables,
Whereof our uncle Gaunt did stand possess'd.
York. How long shall I be patient? A how long
Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong?
Not Gloucester's death, nor Hereford's bani
ment,
Not Gaunt's rebukes, nor England's privi
wongs,
Nor the prevention of poor Bolingbroke.
About his marriage, nor my own disgrace.
Have ever made me sour my patient cheek,
Or bend one wrinkle on my sovereign's face.
I am the last of noble Edward's sons,
Of whom thy father, Prince of Wales, was first.
In war was never lion rug'd more fierce,
In peace was never gentle lamb more mild.
Than was that young and princely gentleman
His face thou hast, for even so look'd he,
Accomplish'd with the number of thy hours:
But when he frown'd, it was against the French
And not against his friends; his noble hand
Did win what he did spend, and spent not the
Which his triumphant father's hand had won:
His hands were guilty of no kindred blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kin.
O Richard! York is too far gone with grief,
Or else he never would compare between.
K. Rich. Why, uncle, what's the matter?
York. O my liege, Pardon me, if you please; if not, I pleas'd
Not to be pardon'd, am content withal.
Seek you to seize and gripe into your hands
The royalties and rights of banish'd Hereford
Is not Gaunt dead, and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just, and is not Harry true?
I not the one deserve to have an heir?
not his heir a well-deserving son?
ke Hereford's rights away, and take from Time
charter's and his customary rights;
not to-morrow then ensue to-day;
not thyself; for how art thou a king
by fair sequence and succession?
we, afore God.—God forbid I say true!—
you do wrongfully seize Hereford's rights, in the letters-patent that he hath his attorneys-general to sue s livery, and deny his offer'd homage, pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
lose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
d prick my tender patience to those thoughts sight honour and allegiance cannot think.
K. Rich. Think what you will: we seize into our hands
plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.
York. I'll not be by the while: my liege,
farewell:
that will ensue hereof, there's none can tell;
by bad courses may be understood
at their events can never fall out good. Exeunt K. Rich. Go, Bushy, to the Earl of Wiltshire
straight:
him repair to us to Ely House see this business. To-morrow next will for Ireland; and 'tis time, I trow:
we create, in absence of ourself,
uncle York lord governor of England;
he is just, and always lov'd us well.
me on, our queen: to-morrow must we part;
more, for our time of stay is short.
Flourish. Exeunt KING, QUEEN, BUSHY,
AUMERLE, GREEN, and BAGOT.
North. Well, lords, the Duke of Lancaster is dead.
Ross. And living too; for now his son is duke.
Ross. Barely in title, not in revenue.
North. Richly in both, if justice had her right.
Ross. My heart is great; but it must break with silence
't be disburden'd with a liberal tongue. 220
North. Nay, speak thy mind; and let him
't speak more
at speaks thy words again to do thee harm!
Willo. Tends that thou'st speak to the Duke of Hereford?
it be so, out with it boldly, man;
sick is mine ear to hear of good towards him.
Ross. No good at all that I can do for him, less you call it good to pity him,
creft and gelded of his patrimony.
North. Now, afore God, 'tis shame such wrongs are borne him, a royal prince, and many more noble blood in this declining land.
ke king is not himself, but basely led flatterers; and what they will inform, erely in hate, 'gainst any of us all,
at will the king severely prosecute against us, our lives, our children, and our heirs.
Ross. The commons hath he pill'd with grievous taxes,
lost their hearts: the nobles hath he find'd
in ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.
Willo. And daily new exactions are devis'd;
blanks, benevolences, and I wot not what:
at what, o' God's name, doth become of this?

North. Wars have not wasted it, for war'd he hath not,
But basely yielded upon compromise
That which his ancestors achiev'd with blows.
More hath he spent in peace than they in wars.
Ross. The Earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in farm.
Willo. The king's grown bankrupt, like a broken man.
North. Reproach and dissolution hangeth over him.
Ross. He not money for these Irish wars,
His burdensome taxes notwithstanding.
But by the robbing of the banish'd duke.
North. His noble kinsman: most degenerate
king!
But, lords, we hear this fearful tempest sing,
Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm;
We see the wind sit sore upon our sails,
And yet we strike not, but securely perish.
Ross. We see the very wreck that we must suffer;
And unavowed is the danger now,
For suffering so the causes of our wreck. 270 North. Not so: even through the hollow eyes of height
I spy life peering; but I dare not say near the tidings of our comfort is.
Willo. Nay, let us share thy thoughts, as thou dost ours.
Ross. Be confident to speak, Northumberland:
We three are but thyself; and, speaking so,
Thy words are but as thoughts: therefore be bold.
North. Then thus: I have from Fort le Blanc,
that
In Brittany, receiv'd intelligence
That Harry Duke of Hereford, Rainold Lord
Cobham,
That late broke from the Duke of Exeter,
His brother, Archbishop late of Canterbury,
Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Ramston,
Sir John Norbery, Sir Robert Waterton, and
Francis Quoint,
All these well furnish'd by the Duke of Bretagne,
With eight tall ships, three thousand men of war,
Are making hither with all due expedience,
And shortly mean to touch our northern shore.
Perhaps they had ere this, but that they stay
The first departing of the king for Ireland. 290
If then we shall shake off our slavish yoke,
Imp out our drooping country's broken wing,
Redeem from breaking pawn the blenish'd crown,
Wipe off the dust that hides our sceptre's gilt,
And make high majesty look like itself,
Away with me in post to Ravenspurgh;
But if you faint, as fearing to do so,
Stay and be secret, and myself will go.
Ross. To horse, to horse! urge doubts to them that fear.
Willo. Hold out my horse, and I will first be
there. 300

Scene II.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter the QUEEN, BUSHY, and BAGOT.

Busky. Madam, your majesty is too much sad:
You promis'd, when you parted with the king,
To lay aside life-harming heaviness,
And entertain a cheerful disposition.
Queen. To please the king I did; to please myself
I cannot do it; yet I know no cause
Why I should welcome such a guest as grief,
Save bidding farewell to so sweet a guest.
As my sweet Richard: yet again, methinks,
Some unborn sorrow, ripe in fortune's womb,
Is coming towards me, and my inward soul
With nothing trembles; at some thing it grieves
More than with parting from my lord the king.

Bushy. Each substance of a grief hath twenty shadows,
Which show like grief itself, but are not so.
For sorrow's eye, glazed with blinding tears,
Divides one thing entire to many objects;
Like perspectives, which rightly gaz'd upon
Show nothing but confusion, eyed awry
Distinguish form: so your sweet majesty,
Looking awry upon your lord's departure,
Finds shapes of grief more than himself to wall;
Which, look'd on as it is, is nought but shadows
Of what it is not. Then, thrice-gracious queen,
More than your lord's departure weep not:
more's not seen;
Or if it be, 'tis with false sorrow's eye,
Which for things true weeps things imaginary.

Queen. It may be so; but yet my inward soul
Persuades me it is otherwise: how'er it be,
I cannot but be sad, so heavy sad
As, though in thinking on no thought I think,
Makes me with heavy nothing faint and shrink.

Bushy. 'Tis nothing but conceit, my gracious lady.

Queen. 'Tis nothing less: conceal is still deriv'd
From some forerather grief; mine is not so,
For nothing hath begot my something grief;
Or something hath the nothing that I grieve:
'Tis in reversion that I do possess;
But what it is, is that not yet known; what
I cannot name; 'tis nameless woe, I wot.

Enter Green.

Green. God save your majesty! and well met,
gentlemen:
I hope the king is not yet shipp'd for Ireland.

Queen. Why hop'st thou so? 'tis better hope he is,
For his designs crave haste, his haste good hope:
Then wherefore dost thou hope he is not shipp'd?

Green. That he, our hope, might have retir'd his power,
And driven into despair an enemy's hope,
Who strongly hath set footing in this land:
The banish'd Bolingbroke repeals himself,
And with uplifted arms is safe arriv'd
At Ravenspurgh.

Queen. Now God in heaven forbid!
Green. Ah! madam, 'tis too true: and that is worse,
The Lord Northumberland, his son young Henry Percy,
The Lords of Ross, Beaumond, and Willoughby,
With all their powerful friends, are fled to him.

Bushy. Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland
And all the rest revolted faction traitors?

Green. We have: whereupon the Earl of Worcester
Hath broke his staff, resign'd his stewardship,
And all the household servants fled with him
To Bolingbroke.

Queen. So, Green, thou art the midwife to my woe,
And Bolingbroke my sorrow's dismal heir;
Now hath my soul brought forth her prodigy,
And I, a gasping new-deliver'd mother,
Have woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow join'd.

Bushy. Despair not, madam.

Queen. Who shall hinder me
I will despair, and be at enmity
With cozening hope: he is a flatterer,
A parasite, a keeper back of death,
Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,
Which false hope lingers in extremity.

Enter York.

Green. Here comes the Duke of York.

Queen. With signs of war about his aged neck
O! full of careful business are his looks.

Uncle, for God's sake, speak comfortable words.
York. Should I do so, I should belie my thoughts:
Comfort's in heaven; and we are on the earth
Where nothing lives but crosses, cares, and grie
Your husband, he is gone to save far off,
Whilst others come to make him lose at home.
Here am I left to underprop his land,
Who, weak with age, cannot support myself.
Now comes the sick hour that his surfeit made
Now shall he try his friends that flatter'd him

Enter a servant.

Serv. My lord, your son was gone before I came.
York. He was? Why, so! Go all which we will!
The nobles they are fled, the commons they are cold,
And will, I fear, revolt on Hereford's side.
Sirrah, get thee to Plasysh, to my sister Glocestcr;
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound.
Hold, take my ring.

Serv. My lord, I had forgot to tell your lorship:
To-day, as I came by, I called there;
But I shall grieve you to report the rest.

York. What is 't, knave?

Serv. An hour before I came the duchess die:
York. God for his mercy! what a tide of woes
Comes rushing on this weeful land at once!
I know not what to do: I would to God,
So my untruth had not provok'd him to it,
The king had cut off my head with my brother'
What! are there no posts dispatch'd for Ireland
How shall we do for money for these wars?
Come, sister; cousin, I would say: pray, pard
me,
Go, fellow, get thee home: provide some cart
And bring away the armour that is there.

Exit Servant.

Gentlemen, will you go muster men? If I know
How or which way to order these affairs
Thus thrust disorderly into my hands,
Never believe me. Both are my kinsmen:
The one is my sovereign, whom both my oath
And duty bids defend; the other again
Is my kinsman, whom the king hath wrong'd,
Whom conscience and my kindred bids to rig
Well, somewhat we must do. Come, cousin,
I'll dispose of you. Gentlemen, go muster your men,
KING RICHARD II.

Exeunt YORK and QUEEN.

Bushy. The wind sits fair for news to go to Ireland, but none returns. For us to levy power proportionable to the enemy is all impossible.

Green. Besides, our nearness to the king in love near the hate of those love not the king.

Bagot. And that's the wavering commons; for their love lies in their purses, and whose empties them by so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

Bushy. Wherein the king stands generally condemn'd.

Bagot. If judgment lie in them, then do so we, because we ever have been near the king.

Green. Well, I'll for refuge straight to Bristol castle; the Earl of Wiltshire is already there.

Bushy. Thither will I with you; for little office the hateful commons will perform for us, except like curs to tear us all to pieces. Will you go along with us?

Bagot. No: I will to Ireland to his majesty. farewell: if heart's presages be not vain, We three here part that never shall meet again.

Bushy. That's as York strives to beat back Bolingbroke.

Green. Alas! poor duke, the task he undertakes of numbering sands and drinking oceans dry: Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly. farewell at once; for once, for all, and ever.

Bushy. Well, we may meet again.

Bagot. I fear me, never. Exeunt.

Scene III.—The Wolds in Gloucestershire.

Enter BOLINGBROKE and NORTHUMBERLAND, with Forces.

Boling. How far is it, my lord, to Berkeley now?

North. Believe me, noble lord, I am a stranger here in Gloucestershire: These high wild hills and rough uneven ways Draw out our miles and make them wearisome; And yet your fair discourse hath been as sugar, Making the hard way sweet and delectable. But I bethink me what a weary way From Ravenspurgh to Cotswold will be found In Ross and Willoughby, wanting your company, Which, I protest, hath very much beguil'd the tediousness and process of my travel: But theirs is sweeten'd with the hope to have The present benefit which I possess; And hope to joy is little less in joy Than hope enjoy'd: by this the weary lords Shall make their way seem short, as mine hath done By sight of what I have, your noble company.

Boling. Of much less value is my company Than your good words. But who comes here?

Enter HENRY PERCY.

North. It is my son, young Harry Percy, Sent from my brother Worcester, whencesoever. Harry, how fares your uncle?

Percy. I had thought, my lord, to have learnt his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the queen?

Percy. No, my good lord; he hath forsook the court,

Broken his staff of office, and dispers'd The household of the king.

North. What was his reason?

He was not so resolv'd when last we spake together.

Percy. Because your lordship was proclaimed traitor.

But he, my lord, is gone to Ravenspurgh, To offer service to the Duke of Hereford, And sent me over by Berkeley, to discover What power the Duke of York had levied there; Then with direction to repair to Ravenspurgh.

North. Have you forgot the Duke of Hereford, boy?

Percy. No, my good lord; for that is not forgot Which ne'er I did remember: to my knowledge I never in my life did look on him.

North. Then learn to know him now; this is the duke.

Percy. My gracious lord, I tender you my service, Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young, Which elder days shall ripen and confirm To more approved service and desert.

Boling. I thank thee, gentle Percy; and be sure I count myself in nothing else so happy As in a soul remembering my good friends; And as my fortune ripens with thy love, It shall be still thy true love's recompense: My heart this covenant makes, my hand thus seals it.

North. How far is it to Berkeley? and what stir Keeps good old York there with his men of war?

Percy. There stands the castle, by yon tuft of trees.

Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard; And in it are the Lords of York, Berkeley, and Seymour; None else of name and noble estimate.

Enter ROSS and WILLOUGHBY.

North. Here come the Lords of Ross and Willoughby, Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste.

Boling. Welcome, my lords. I wot your love pursues A banish'd traitor; all my treasury Is yet but unfelt thanks, which, more enrich'd, Shall be your love and labour's recompense.

Ross. Your presence makes us rich, most noble lord.

Will. And far surmounts our labour to attain it.

Boling. Evermore thanks, the exchequer of the poor; Which, till my infant fortune comes to years, Stands for my bounty. But who comes here?

Enter BERKELEY.

North. It is my Lord of Berkeley, as I guess, Berk. My Lord of Hereford, my message is to you.

Boling. My lord, my answer is—to Lancaster: And I am come to seek that name in England; And I must find that title in your tongue.
Before I make reply to aught you say.

Berk. Mistake me not, my lord: 'tis not my meaning
To raze one title of your honour out:
To you, my lord, I come, what lord you will,
From the most gracious regent of this land,
The Duke of York, to know what pricks you on
To take advantage of the absent time
And rouse our native peace with self-born arms.

Enter York, attended.

Boling. I shall not need transport my words by you:
Here comes his grace in person. My noble uncle!

York. Show me thy humble heart, and not thy knee,
Whose duty is deceivable and false.

Boling. My gracious uncle—

York. Tut, tut!
Grace me no grace, nor uncle me no uncle:
I am no traitor's uncle; and that word 'grace'
In an ungracious mouth is but profane.
Why have those banish'd and forbidden legs so
Dar'd once to touch a dust of England's ground?
But then more 'why'? why have they dar'd to march
So many miles upon her peaceful bosom,
Frighting her pale-fac'd villages with war
And ostentation of despised arms?
Com'st thou because the anointed king is hence?
Why, foolish boy, the king is left behind,
And in my loyal bosom lies his power.
Were I but now the lord of such hot youth
As when brave Gaunt thy father, and myself
Rescued the Black Prince, that young Mars of men,
From forth the ranks of many thousand French,
O! then how quickly should this arm of mine,
Now prisoner to the palsy, chastise thee
And minister correction to thy fault.

Boling. My gracious uncle, let me know my fault:
On what condition stands it and wherein?

York. Even in condition of the worst degree;
In gross rebellion and detested treason:
Thou art a banish'd man, and here art come
Before the expiration of thy time,
In braving arms against thy sovereign.

Boling. As I was banish'd, I was banish'd Hereford;
But as I come, I come for Lancaster.
And, noble uncle, I beseech your grace
Look on my wrongs with an indifferent eye:
You are my father, for methinks in you
I see old Gaunt alive: O! then, my father,
Will you permit that I shall stand condem'd
A wandering vagabond; my rights and royalties
Pluck'd from my arms perforce and given away
To upstart unlifth'rs? Wherefore was I born?
If that my cousin king be King of England,
It must be granted I am Duke of Lancaster.
You have a son, Aumerle, my noble kinsman:
Had you first died, and he been thus trod down,
He should have found his uncle Gaunt a father,
To rouse his wrongs and chase them to the bay.
I am denied to sue my livery here,
And yet my letters-patent give me leave:
My father's goods are all distrain'd and sold,
And these and all are all amiss employ'd.

What would you have me do? I am a subject,
And challenge law: attorneys are denied me,
And therefore personally I lay my claim
To my inheritance of free descent.

North. The noble duke hath been too much abused.

Ross. It stands your grace upon to do him right.

Willo. Base men by his endowments are made great.

York. My lords of England, let me tell you this
I have had feeling of my cousin's wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to do him right;
But in this kind to come, in braving arms,
Be his own carver and cut out his way,
To find out right with wrong, it may not be;
And you that do abet him in this kind
Cherish rebellion and are rebels all.

North. The noble duke hath sworn his coming
But for his own; and for the right of that
We all have strongly sworn to give him aid;
And let him ne'er see joy that breaks that oath.

York. Well, well, I see the issue of these arms
I cannot mend it, I must needs confess,
Because my power is weak and all ill left;
But if I could, by him that gave me life,
I would attach you all and make you stoop
Unto the sovereign mercy of the king;
But since I cannot, be it known to you
I do remain as neuter. So, fare you well;
Unless you please to enter in the castle
And there repose you for this night.

Boling. An offer, uncle, that will we accept:
But we must win your grace to go with us
To Bristol castle, which they say is held
By Bushy, Bagot, and their complices,
The caterpillars of the commonwealth.
Which I have sworn to weed and pluck away.

York. It may be I will go with you; but yet
I'll pause,
For I am loath to break our country's laws.
Nor friends nor foes, to me welcome you are:
Things past redress are now with me past care.

Exeunt

Scene IV.—A Camp in Wales.

Enter Salisbury and a Captain.

Cap. My Lord of Salisbury, we have stay'd ten days,
And hardly kept our countrymen together,
And yet we hear no tidings from the king;
Therefore we will disperse ourselves: farewell.

Sol. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welsh man:

The king reposeth all his confidence in thee.

Cap. 'Tis thought the king is dead: we will not stay.

The bay-trees in our country are all wither'd
And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven,
The pale-fac'd moon looks bloody on the earth
And lean-look'd prophets whisper fearful change
Rich men look sad and ruffians dance and leap.
The one in fear to lose what they enjoy,
The other to enjoy by rage and war:
These signs forerun the death or fall of kings.

Farewell: our countrymen are gone and fled.
As well assur'd Richard their king is dead. Exit

Sol. Ah! Richard, with the eyes of heavy mind
I see thy glory like a shooting star.
Scene IV.

KING RICHARD II.

all to the base earth from the firmament.
by sun sets weeping in the lowly west,
visiting storms to come, owe, and unrest,
your friends are fled to wait upon thy foes,
and crostly to thy good all fortune goes.  Exit.

ACT III.

Scene I.—Bristol. Bolingbroke's Camp.

Inter Bolingbroke, York, Northumberland, Percy, Willoughby, Ross; Bushy and Green, prisoners.

Boling. Bring forth these men.

Bushy and Green, I will not vex your souls,
ince presently your souls must part your bodies,
With too much urging your penuicous lives,
'twere no charity; yet to wash your blood from off my hands, here in the view of men will unfold some causes of your deaths.
You have misplaced a prince, a royal king,
A happy gentleman in blood and lineaments,
by you unhappily and disfigur'd clean:
You have in manner with your sinful hours
Faded a divorce betwixt his king and him,
Broke the possession of a royal bed,
And stain'd the beauty of a fair queen's cheeks
With tears drawn from her eyes by your foul wrongs.

Myself, a prince by fortune of my birth,
Near to the king in blood, and near in love
All you did make him misinterpret me,
Have stoo'd my neck under your injuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in foreign clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment;
While you have fed upon my sighs,
Dispar'd my parks, and fell'd my forest woods,
From mine own windows torn my household coat,
A'd out my impress, leaving me no sign,
Save men's opinions and my living blood,
To show the world I am a gentleman.
His and much more, much more than twice all this,
Condemns you to the death. See them deliver'd over
To execution and the hand of death.
Bushy. More welcome is the stroke of death to me
Than Bolingbroke to England. Lords, farewell.
Green. My comfort is that heaven will take our souls
And plague injustice with the pains of hell.
Boling. My Lord Northumberland, see them dispatch'd.

Exeunt Northumberland and Others, with Bushy and Green.

Uncle, you say the queen is at your house;
For God's sake, fairly let her be entreated:
Tell her I send to her my kind commands;
Take special care my greetings be deliver'd.
York. A gentleman of mine I have dispatch'd
With letters of your love to her at large.
Boling. Thanks, gentle uncle. Come, lords, away,
To fight with Glendower and his complices:
Awhile to work, and after holiday.
Exeunt.

Scene II.—The Coast of Wales. A Castle in view.

Flourish: drums and trumpets. Enter King Richard, Bishop of Carlisle, Aumerle and Soldiers.

K. Rich. Barkloughly castle call they this at hand?
Aum. Yea, my lord. How brooks your grace the air
After your late tossing on the breaking seas?
K. Rich. Needs must I like it well: I weep for joy
To stand upon my kingdom once again.
Dear earth, I do salute thee with my hand,
Though rebels wound thee with their horses hoofs:

As a long-parted mother with her child
Plays fondly with her tears and smiles in meeting,
So, weeping, smiling, greet I thee, my earth,
And do thee favour with my royal hands.
Feed not thy sovereign's foe, my gentle earth,
Nor with thy sweets comfort his ravenous sense;
But let thy spiders, that suck up thy venom,
And heavy-gaited toads lie in their way,
Doing annoyance to the treacherous feet
Which with usurping steps do trample thee.
Yield stinging nettles to mine enemies;
And when they from thy bosom pluck a flower,
Guard it, I pray thee, with a lurking adder
Whose double tongue may with a mortal touch
Throw death upon thy sovereign's enemies.
Mock not my senseless conjuration, lords:
This earth shall have a feeling and these stones
Prove armed soldiers, ere her native king
Shall faller under foul rebellion's arms.
Car. Fear not, my lord: that power that made you king
Hath power to keep you king in spite of all.
The means that heaven yields must be embrac'd,
And not neglected; else, if heaven would,
And we will not, heaven's offer we refuse,
The proffer'd means of succour and redress.
Aum. He means, my lord, that we are too remiss;
Whilst Bolingbroke, through our security,
Grows strong and great in substance and in friends.
K. Rich. Discomfortable cousin! know'st thou not
That when the searching eye of heaven is hid
Behind the globe, and lights the lower world,
Then thieves and robbers range abroad unseen,
In murders and in outrage bloody here;
But when from under this terrestrial ball
He fires the proud tops of the eastern pines
And darts his light through every guilty hole,
Then murders, treasons, and detested sins,
The cloak of night being pluck'd from off their backs,
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves?
So when this thief, this traitor, Bolingbroke,
Who all this while hath revell'd in the night
Whilst we were wandering with the antipodes,
Shall see us rising in our throne, the east.
His treasons will sit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of day,
But self-affrighted tremble at his sin.
Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm from an anointed king;
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The deputy elected by the Lord.
For every man that Bolingbroke hath press'd
To lift shrewd steel against our golden crown,
God for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
A glorious angel: then, if angels fight,
Weak men must fall, for heaven still guards the right.

Enter Salisbury.
Welcome, my lord: how far off lies your power?
Sal. Nor near nor further off, my gracious lord,
Than this weak arm: discomfort guides my tongue
And bids me speak of nothing but despair.
One day too late, I fear me, noble lord,
Hath clouded all thy happy days on earth.
O! call back yesterday, bid time return,
And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting men:

To-day, to-day, unhappy day, too late,
O'erthrows thy joys, friends, fortune, and thy state;
For all the Welshmen, hearing thou wert dead,
Are gone to Bolingbroke, dispers'd, and fled.

Aum. Comfort, my liege! why looks your grace so pale?

K. Rich. But now the blood of twenty thousand men
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled;
And till so much blood thither come again,
Have I not reason to look pale and dead?
All souls that will be safe fly from my side;
For time hath set a blot upon my pride.

Aum. Comfort, my liege! remember who you are.

K. Rich. I had forgot myself. Am I not king?
Awake, thou sluggard majesty! thou sleepest.
Is not the king's name twenty thousand names?
Arm, arm, my name! a puny subject strikes
At thy great glory. Look not to the ground,
Ye favourites of a king: are we not high?
High be our thoughts: I know my uncle York Hath power enough to serve our turn. But who comes here?

Enter Scroop.

Scroop. More health and happiness betide my liege
Than can my care-tun'd tongue deliver him!

K. Rich. Mine ear is open and my heart prepared:
The worst is worldly loss thou canst unfold.
Say, is my kingdom lost? why, 'twas my care;
And what loss is it to be rid of care?
Strives Bolingbroke to be as great as we?
Greater he shall not be: if he serve God
We'll serve him too, and be his fellow so:
Revol't our subjects? that we cannot mend?
They break their faith to God as well as us:
Cry woe, destruction, ruin, loss, decay;
The worst is death, and death will have his day.
Scroop. Glad am I that your highness is so arm'd
To bear the tides of calamity.
Like an unseasonable stormy day,
Which makes the silver rivers drown their shores,
As if the world were all dissolv'd to tears,
So high above his limits swells the rage
Of Bolingbroke, covering your fearful land

With hard bright steel and hearts harder than steel.
White-beards have arm'd their thin and hairies scalps
Against thy majesty; and boys, with women voices,
Strive to speak big, and clap their female joint
In stiff unwieldy arms against thy crown;
Thy very beardsmen learn to bend their bows
Of double-fatal yew against thy state;
Yea, distaff-women manage rusty bills
Against thy seat: both young and old rebel,
And all goes worse than I have power to tell.

K. Rich. Too well, too well thou tell'st a tale so ill.
Where is the Earl of Wiltshire? where is Bagot
What is become of Bushy? where is Green?
That they have let the dangerous enemy
Measure our confines with such peaceful steps
If we prevail, their heads shall pay for it.
I warrant they have made peace with Bolingbroke.

Scroop. Peace have they made with him indeed
my lord.
K. Rich. O villains, vipers, damn'd without redemption!
Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man!
Snakes, in my heart-blood warn'd, that sting my heart!
Three Judasses, each one thrice worse than Judas.
Would they make peace? terrible hell make war
Upon their spotted souls for this offence!
Scroop. Sweet love, I see, changing his property Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate.
Again uncurse their souls; their peace is made
With heads and not with hands: those whor you curse
Have felt the worst of death's destroying wound
And lie full low, grad'v in the hollow ground.
Aum. Is Bushy, Green, and the Earl of Wiltshire dead?
Scroop. Ay, all of them at Bristol lost their heads.
Aum. Where is the duke my father with his power?
K. Rich. No matter where. Of comfort a man speak:

Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs;
Make dust our paper, and with rainy eyes
Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth;
Let's choose executors and talk of wills;
And yet not so, for what can we bequeath
Save our deposed bodies to the ground?
Our lands, our lives, and all are Bolingbroke's;
And nothing can we call our own but death,
And that small model of the barren earth
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.
For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground
And tell sad stories of the death of kings:
How some have been depos'd, some slain in war
Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd
Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping kill'd?
All in one word: for within the hollow crown
That rounds the mortal temples of a king
Keeps Death his court, and there the antic site
Scrooping his state and grinning at his pomp;
Allowing him a breath, a little scene,
To monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looks,
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,
s if this flesh which walls about our life fere brass impregnable; and humour'd thus times at the last, and with a little pin ores through his castle wall, and farewell king!
over your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
ith solemn reverence: throw away respect, radition, form, and ceremonious duty,
or you have but mistook me all this while:
live with bread like you, feel want,
aste grief, need friends: subjected thus,
tow can you say to me I am a king?
Caw. My lord, wise men ne'er sit and wail their woes,
ut presently the ways to wait. 119
to fear the foe, since fear oppresseth strength, gives in your weakness strength unto your foe,
nd so your follies fight against yourself.
nd be slain; no worse can come to fight:
nd fight and die is death destroying death;
Where fearing dying pays death servile breath.
Am. My father hath a power; inquire of him nd learn to make a body of a limb.
K. Rich. Thou child'st me well. Proud Boling-broke, I come
o change blows with thee for our day of doom.
his aega-fit of fear is over-blown;
E easy task it is to win our own.
s, Scroop, where lies our uncle with his power?
peak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.
Scroop. Men judge by the complexion of the sky
The state and inclination of the day;
so may you by my dull and heavy eye,
My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say.
play the tormentor, by small and small,
nd lengthen out the worst that must be spoken.
our uncle York is join'd with Bolingbroke, nd all your northern castles yielded up, nd all your southern gentlemen in arms upon his party.
K. Rich. Thou hast said enough.
dshew thee, cousin, which didst lead me forth that sweet way I was in to despair!
that say you now? what comfort have we now?
vy heaven, I'll hate him everlastingly hat bids me be of comfort any more.
30 to Flint castle: there I'll pine away;
A king, woe's slave, shall kingly woe obey.
210 that power I have, discharge; and let them go to ear the land that hath some hope to grow,
For I have none: let no man speak again
To alter this, for counsel is but vain.
Am. My liege, one word.
K. Rich. He does me double wrong
That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue.
Discharge my followers: let them hence away,
From Richard's night to Bolingbroke's fair day.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Wales. Before Flint Castle.
Enter, with drum and colours, BOLINGBROKE and Forces; YORK, NORTHERM, and Boling. So that by this intelligence we learn

The Welshmen are dispers'd, and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the king, who lately landed
With some few private friends upon this coast.
North. The news is very fair and good, my lord:
Richard not far from hence hath hid his head.
York. It would becom the Lord Northumberland
To say 'King Richard': alack! the heavy day
When such a sacred king should hide his head.
North. Your grace mistakes; only to be brief
Left I his title out.
York. The time hath been 11
Would you have been so brief with him, he would
Have been so brief with you, to shorten you,
For taking so the head, your whole head's length.
Boling. Mistake not, uncle, further than you should.
York. Take not, good cousin, further than you should,
Lest you mistake the heavens are o'er our heads.
Boling. I know it, uncle; and oppose not myself Against their will. But who comes here?

Enter PERCY.

Welcome, Harry; what! will not this castle yield? 20

Percy. The castle royally is mann'd, my lord,
Against thy entrance.

Boling. Royally!

Why, it contains no king? 31

Percy. Yes, my good lord,
It doth contain a king: King Richard lies
Within the limits of yon lime and stone;
And with him are the Lord Aumerle, Lord
Salisbury,
Sir Stephen Scroop; besides a clergyman
Of holy reverence; who, I cannot learn.
North. O! belike it is the Bishop of Carlisle.

Boling. Noble lords.

Go to the rude ribs of that ancient castle,
Through brazen trumpet send the breath of parley
Into his ruin'd ears, and thus deliver:

Henry Bolingbroke
On both his knees doth kiss King Richard's
hand,
And sends allegiance and true faith of heart
To his most royal person; hither come
Even at his feet to lay my arms and power,
Provided that my banishment repeal'd,
And lands restor'd again be freely granted.
If not, I'll use the advantage of my power,
And lay the summer's dust with showers of blood
Rain'd from the wounds of slaughter'd Englishmen:
The which, how far off from the mind of Bolingbroke
It is, such crimson tempest should bedrench
The fresh green lap of fair King Richard's land,
My stooping duty tenderly shall show.
Go, signify as much, while here we march
Upon the grassy carpet of this plain.
Let's march without the noise of threat'n ing
drum,
That from this castle's tatter'd battlements
Our fair appointments may be well perus'd.

Methinks King Richard and myself should meet
With no less terror than the elements
Of fire and water, when their thundering shock
At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven.
Be he the fire, I'll be the yielding water:
The rage be his, while on the earth I rain
King Richard doth himself appear,
As doth the blushing discontented sun
From out the fiery portal of the east,
When he perceives the envious clouds are bent
To dim his glory and to stain the track
Of his bright passage to the occident.
York. Yet looks he like a king: behold, his eye,
As bright as is the eagle’s, lightens forth
Controlling majesty: alack, alack, for woe,
That any harm should stain so fair a show!
K. Rich. To Northumberland. We are amaz’d;
And thus long have we stood
To watch the fearful bending of thy knee,
Because we thought ourself thy lawful king:
And if we be, how dare thy joints forget
To pay their awful duty to our presence?
If we be not, show us the hand of God
That hath dismiss’d us from our stewardship;
For well we know, no hand of blood and bone
Can grip the sacred handle of our sceptre,
Unless he do profane, steal, or usurp,
And though you think that all, as you have done,
Have torn their souls by turning them from us,
And we are barren and bereft of friends;
Yet know, my master, God omnipotent,
Is mastering in his clouds on our behalf
Armies of pestilence: and they shall strike
Your children yet unborn and unbegot,
That lift your vassal hands against my head
And threat the glory of my precious crown.
Tell Bolingbroke, for you methinks he stands,
That every stride he makes upon my land
Is dangerous treason: he is come to open
The purple testament of bleeding war;
But ere the crown he looks for live in peace,
Ten thousand bloody crowns of mothers’ sons
Shall ill become the flower of England’s face,
Change the complexion of her maid-pale peace
To scarlet indignation, and bedew
Her pastures’ grass with faithful English blood.
North. The king of heaven forbid our lord the king
Should so with civil and uncivil arms
Be rash’d upon! Thy thrice-noble cousin,
Harry Bolingbroke, doth humbly kiss thy hand;
And by the honourable tomb he sweares,
That stands upon your royal grand sire’s bones,
And by the royalties of both your bloods,
Currents that spring from one most gracious head,
And by the buried hand of war-like Gaunt,
And by the worth and honour of himself,
Comprising all that may be sworn or said,
His coming hither hath no further scope
Than for his lineal royalties and to beg
Enfranchisement immediate on his knees:
Which on thy royal party granted once,
His glittering arms he will command to rust,
His barbed steeds to stables, and his heart
To faithful service of your majesty.
This swears he, as he is a prince, is just;
And, as I am a gentleman, I credit him.

K. Rich. Northumberland, say thus the kin returns:
His noble cousin is right welcome hither;
And all the number of his fair demands
Shall be accomplish’d without contradiction:
With all the gracious utterance thou hast
Speak to his gentle hearing kind commends.

Northumberland retires.

To Aumerle. We do debate ourselves, cousin: do we not,
To look so poorly and to speak so fair?
Shall we call back Northumberland and send Defiance to the traitor, and so die?
Aum. No, good my lord; let’s fight wit gentle words
Till time lend friends and friends their help’d swords.

K. Rich. O God! O God! that e’er this tongue
Of mine,
That laid the sentence of dread banishment
On you proud man, should take it off again
With words of sooth. O! that I were as gross
As is my grief, or lesser than my name,
Or that I could forget what I have been,
Or not remember what I must be now.
Swell’d thou, proud heart! I will give thee scope to beat,
Since foes have scope to beat both thee and me.
Aum. Northumberland comes back from Bolingbroke.

K. Rich. What must the king do now? Must he submit?
The king shall do it: must he be depos’d?
The king shall be contented: must he lose
The name of king? o’ God’s name, let it go:
I’ll give my jewels for a set of beads,
My gorgeous palace for a hermitage,
My gay apparel for an almsman’s gown,
My larder’s goblets for a dish of wood,
My sceptre for a palmer’s walking-staff,
My subjects for a pair of carved saints,
And my large kingdom for a little grave,
A little little grave, an obscure grave;
Or I’ll be buried in the king’s highway,
Some way of common trade, where subjects’ fee
May hourly trample on their sovereign’s head;
For on my heart they tread now whilst I live;
And buried once, why not upon my head?
Aumerle, thou weep’st, my tender-hearted cousin!
We’ll make foul weather with despised tears;
Our sighs and they shall lodge the summer corn
And make a dearth in this revolting land.
Or shall we play the wantons with our woes,
And make some pretty match with shedding tears?
As thus; to drop them still upon one place,
Till they have fretted us a pair of graves
Within the earth; and, therein laid: ‘There lie
Two kinsmen digg’d their graves with weeping eyes.’
Would not this ill do well? Well, well, I see
I talk but idly and you laugh at me.
Most mighty prince, my Lord Northumberland
What says King Bolingbroke? will his majesty
Give Richard leave to live till Richard die?
You make a leg, and Bolingbroke says ay.
North. My lord, in the base court he doth attend
KING RICHARD II.

Enter King Richard and his Attendants.

Boling. Stand all apart, d show fair duty to his majesty.

K. Rich. Your own is yours, and I am yours, and all.

Boling. So far be mine, my most redoubted lord,

K. Rich. Well you deserve: they well deserve to have at know the strong'st and surest way to get:

cle, give me your hand: nay, dry your eyes:
as show their love, but want their remedies.

Kneeling. V. Rich. Fair cousin, you debase your princely knee make the base earth proud with kissing it:

rather had my heart my feel your love

an my unpleas'd eye see your courtesy.

Cousin, up; your heart is up, I know,
as high at least, although your knee be low.

Boling. My gracious lord, I come but for mine own.

K. Rich. Your own is yours, and I am yours, and all.

Boling. So far be mine, my most redoubted lord,

my true service shall deserve your love.

K. Rich. Well you deserve: they well deserve to have

at know the strong'st and surest way to get:

cle, give me your hand: nay, dry your eyes:
as show their love, but want their remedies.

in, I am too young to be your father,

ough you are old enough to be my heir.

at you will have I'll give, and willing too;

do what must force will have us do.

Then I must not say no.

Flourish. Exeunt.

Queen. O! I am press'd to death through want of speaking.

Coming forward.

Thou, old Adam's likeness, set to dress this garden,

How dares thy harsh rude tongue sound this unpleasing news?

What Eve, what serpent, hath suggested thee

To make a second fall of cursed man?

Why dost thou say King Richard is depos'd?

Dar'st thou, thou little better thing than earth,

Divine his downfall? Say where, when, and how

Cam'st thou by this ill tidings? speak, thou wretch.

Gard. Pardon me, madam: little joy have I

To breathe this news, yet what I say is true.

King Richard, he is in the mighty hold

Of Bolingbroke; their fortunes both are weigh'd:

In your lord's scale is nothing but himself,

And some few vanities that make him light;

But in the balance of great Bolingbroke,

Besides himself, are all the English peers.

And with that odds he weighs King Richard down.

Post you to London and you'll find it so;

I speak no more than every one doth know.

Queen. Nimble mischeance, that art so light of foot,

Doth not thy embassage belong to me,

And am I last that knows it? O! thou think'st

To serve me last, that I may longest keep

Thy sorrow in my breast. Come, ladies, go,

To meet at London London's king in woe.

What! was I born to this, that my sad look

Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke?

Gardener, for telling me these news of woe,

Pray God the plants thou graff'st may never grow.

Exeunt Queen and Ladies.

Gard. Poor queen! so that thy state might be no worse,

I would my skill were subject to thy curse.

Here did she fall a tear; here in this place

I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace;

Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen,

In the remembrance of a weeping queen.

Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—London. Westminster Hall.

The Lords spiritual on the right side of the throne;

the Lords temporal on the left; the Commons below.

Enter Bolingbroke, Aumerle, Surrey, Northumberland, Percy, Fitzwater, another Lord, the Bishop of Carlisle, the Abbot of Westminster, and Attendants. Officers behind, with Bagot.

Boling. Call forth Bagot.

Now, Bagot, freely speak thy mind;

What thou dost know of noble Gloucester's death,

Who wrought it with the king, and who perform'd

The bloody office of his timeless end.

Bagot. Then set before my face the Lord Aumerle.

Boling. Cousin, stand forth, and look upon that man.

Bagot. My Lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue

Scorns to unsay what once it hath deliver'd.

In that dead time when Gloucester's death was plotted,

I heard you say, 'Is not my arm of length,

That reacheth from the restful English coast

As far as Calais, to mine uncle's head?'

Amongst much other talk, that very time,

I heard you say that you had rather refuse

The offer of an hundred thousand crowns

Than Bolingbroke's return to England;

Adding withal, how best this land would be

In this your cousin's death.

Aum.

Princes and noble lords!

What answer shall I make to this base man?

Shall I so much dishonour my fair stars,

On equal terms to give him chastisement?

Either I must, or have mine honour soil'd

With the attainer of his slanderous lips.

There is my gage, the manual seal of death,

That marks thee out for hell: I say thou liest.

And will maintain what thou hast said is false.

In thy heart-blood, though being all too base

To stain the temper of my knightly sword.

Boling. Bagot, forbear; thou shalt not try it up.

Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the

In all this presence that hath mov'd me so.

Fitz. If that thy valour stand on sympathy

There is my gage, Aumerle, in gage to thine.

By that fair sun which shows me where the stand'st,

I heard thee say, and vanuntingly thou spak'st;

That thou wert cause of noble Gloucester's death.

If thou deny'st it twenty times, thou liest;

And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart,

Where it was forged, with my rapier's point.

Aum. Thou dar'st not, coward, live to that day.

Fitz. Now, by my soul, I would it were this

Aum. Fitzwater, thou art damn'd to hell this.

Percy. Aumerle, thou liest; his honour is true

In this appeal as thou art all unjust;

And that thou art so, there I throw my gage.

To prove it on thee to the extremest point

Of mortal breathing: seize it if thou dar'st.

Aum. An if I do not may my hands rot of

And never brandish more revengeful steel

Over the glittering helmet of my foe!

Another Lord. I task the earth to the forsworn Aumerle;

And spur thee on with full as many lies

As may be holli'd in thy treacherous ear.

From sun to sun: there is my honour's paw

Engage it to the trial if thou dar'st.

Aum. Who sets me else? by heaven, thou hast

at all,

I have a thousand spirits in one breast,

To answer twenty thousand such as you.

Surrey. My Lord Fitzwater, I do remember

The very time Aumerle and you did talk.

Fitz. 'Tis very true: you were in presence

And you can witness with me this is true.

Surrey. As false, by heaven, as heaven itself is true.

Fitz. Surrey, thou liest.

Surrey.

Dishonourable be

That lie shall lie so heavy on my sword

That it shall render vengeance and revenge,

Till thou the lie-giver and that lie do lie.
KING RICHARD II.

180

and, then Ameo best so held differences!...".

And if you crown him, let me prophesy,
The blood of English shall manure the ground
And future ages groan for this foul act:
Peace shall go sleep with Turks and infidels,
And in this seat of peace tumultuous wars
Shall join with kin and kind with kind confound;
Disorder, horror, fear, and mutiny
Shall here inhabit, and this land be call'd
The field of Golgotha and dead men's skulls.
O! If you raise this house against this house,
It will the woefullest division prove
That ever fell upon this cursed earth.
Prevent it, resist it, let it not be so,
Lest child, child's children, cry against you
'woe!'

North. Well have you argu'd, sir; and, for your pains,
Of capital treason we arrest you here.
My lord of Westminster, be it your charge
To keep him safely till his day of trial.
May it please you, lords, to grant the commons' suit.

Boling. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may surrender; so we shall proceed
Without suspicion.

York. I will be his conduct. Exit.
Boling. Lords, you that here are under our arrest,
Procure your sureties for your days of answer.
Little are we beholding to your love,
And little look'd for at your helping hands.

Re-enter York, with King Richard, and Officers bearing the crown, etc.

K. Rich. Alack! why am I sent for to a king
Before I have shook off the regal thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet have learn'd
To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my limbs:
Give sorrow leave awhile to tutor me
To this submission. Yet I well remember
The favours of these men: were they not mine?
Did they not sometime cry 'All hail!'; to me?
So Judas did to Christ: but he, in twelve,
Found truth in all but one; I, in twelve thousand, none.

God save the king! Will no man say amen?
Am I both priest and clerk! well then, amen.
God save the king! though I be not he;
And yet, amen, if heaven do think him me.
To do what service am I sent for hither?
York. To do that office of thine own good will
Which tired majesty did make thee offer,
The resignation of thy state and crown
To Henry Bolingbroke.

K. Rich. Give me the crown. Here, cousin, seize the crown;
Here, cousin,
On this side my hand and on that side thine.
Now is this golden crown like a deep well
That owes two buckets filling one another;
The emptier ever dancing in the air,
The other down, unseen and full of water:
That bucket down and full of tears am I.

Drinking my griefs, whilst you mount up on high.
Boling. I thought you had been willing to resign.

K. Rich. My crown I am; but still my griefs are mine.

You may my glories and my state depose,
But not my griefs; still am I king of those.

Boling. Part of your cares you give me with your crown.

My care is loss of care, by old care done;
Your care is gain of care, by new care won:
The cares I give I have, though given away;
They tear me down, yet still with me they stay.

Boling. Are you contented to resign the crown?

K. Rich. Ay, no; no, ay; for I must nothing be;
Therefore no no, for I resign to thee.

Now mark me how I will undo myself:
I give this heavy weight from off my head,
And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand,
The pride of kingly sway from out my heart;
With mine own tears I wash away my balm,
With mine own hands I give away my crown,
With mine own tongue deny my sacred state,
With mine own breath release all duty's rites:
All pomp and majesty I do forswear;
My manors, rents, revenues I forgo;
My acts, decrees, and statutes I deny:
God pardon all oaths that are broke to me!
God keep all vows unbrokè that swear to thee!
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing griev'd,
And thou with all pleas'd, that hast all achiev'd!
Long may'st thou live in Richard's seat to sit,
And soon lie Richard in an earthy pit!

God save King Henry, unkind'd Richard says,
And send him many years of sunshine days!

What more remains?

North. Offering a paper. No more but that you read

These accusations and these grievous crimes
Committed by your person and your followers
Against the state and profit of this land;
That, by confessing them, the souls of men
May deem that you are worthy depos'd.

K. Rich. Must I do so? and must I ravel out
My weak'd-up follies? Gentle Northumberland,
If thy offenses were upon record,
Would it not shame thee in so fair a troop
To read a lecture of them? If thou would'st,
There should'st thou find one heinous article,
Containing the deposing of a king,
And cracking the strong warrant of an oath,
Mark'd with a blot, damn'd in the book of heaven.
Nay, all of you that stand and look upon me,
Whilst that my wretchedness doth balm myself,
Though some of you with Pilate wash your hands,
Showing an outward pity; yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my sour cross,
And water cannot wash away your sin.

North. My lord, dispatch; read o'er these articles.

K. Rich. Mine eyes are full of tears, I cannot see;
And yet salt water blinds them not so much
But they can see a sort of traitors here.
Nay, if I turn mine eyes upon myself,
I find myself a traitor with the rest;
For I have given here my soul's consent
To undek the pompous body of a king;
Made glory base and sovereignty a slave,
Proud majesty a subject, state a peasant.

North. My lord,—

K. Rich. No lord of thine, thou haught insiring man,
Nor no man's lord; I have no name, no title
No, not that name was given me at the font;
But 'tis usurp'd: alack! the heavy day,
That I have worn so many winters out,
And know not now what name to call myself
O! that I were a mockery king of snow,
Standing before the sun of Bolingbroke,
To melt myself away in water-drops.

Good king, great king, and yet not greatly go,
If my command be sterling yet in England.
Let it command a mirror hither straight,
That it may show me what a face I have,
Since it is bankrupt of his majesty.

Boling. Go some of you and fetch a look glass.

North. Exit o'er this paper while the god doth come.

K. Rich. Fiend! thou torment'st me er come to hell.

Boling. Urge it no more, my Lord Northumberland.

North. The commons will not then be satisfy'd

K. Rich. They shall be satisfy'd: I'll run enough

When I do see the very book indeed
Where all my sins are writ, and that's my self.

Re-enter Attendant, with a glass.

Give me the glass, and therein will I read
No deeper wrinkles yet? hath sorrow struck
So many blows upon this face of mine
And made no deeper wounds? O flattering glass,
Like to my followers in prosperity,
Thou dost beguile me. Was this the face the first
That every day under his household roof
Did keep ten thousand men? was this the face
That like the sun did make beholders wink
Was this the face that fac'd so many follies
And was at last out-fac'd by Bolingbroke?
A brittle glory shineth in this face:
As brittle as the glory is the face;

Dashes the glass against the ground
For there it is, crack'd in a hundred shivers
Mark, silent king! the moral of this sport,
How soon my sorrow hath destroy'd my face.

Boling. The shadow of your sorrow hath Stroy'd

The shadow of your face.

K. Rich. Say that again.
The shadow of my sorrow! Ha! let's see
'Tis very true, my grief lies all within;
And these external manners of lament
Are merely shadows to the unseen grief
That swells with silence in the tortured soul.
There lies the substance; and I thank thee, God
For thy great bounty, that not only giv'st me
Cause to wall, but tenchest me the way
How to lament the cause. I'll beg one boon
And then be gone and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtain it?

Boling. Name it, fair cousin.

K. Rich. 'Fair cousin!' I am greater than
king;
For when I was a king, my flatterers
Were then but subjects; being now a subject,
I have a king here to my flatterer.
Being so great, I have no need to beg.
KING RICHARD II. 365

KING. Yet ask.

Rich. And shall I have?

KING. You shall.

Rich. Then give me leave to go.

KING. Whither?

Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your sights.

KING. Go, some of you convey him to the Tower.

Rich. O, good! convey? conveyers are you all, it rise thus nimbly by a true king's fall.

Exeunt King Richard and Guard.

Enter King Richard and Guard.

Rich. On Wednesday next we solemnly set down coronation: lords, prepare yourselves. [Exeunt all but the Bishop of Carlisle, the Abbot of Westminster, and Aumerle.]

bbot. A woeful pageant have we here beheld.

ar. The wee's to come; the children yet unborn
Il feel this day as sharp to them as thorn.

wm. You holy clergymen, is there no plot
Id the realm of this pernicious blot?

bbot. My lord,
re I freely speak my mind herein, shall not only take the sacrament bure my intents, but also to effect ve never shall happen to devise.

e your brows are full of discontent,
r hearts of sorrow, and your eyes of tears:
me home with me to supper; I will lay lot shall show us all a merry day.

Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—London. A Street leading to the Tower.

Enter the QUEEN and Ladies.

Queen. This way the king will come; this is the way
Caius Caesar's ill-erected tower, whose flint bosom my condemned lord
n'd a prisoner by proud Bolingbroke:
et us rest, if this rebellious earth
,e any resting for her true king's queen.

Enter King Richard and Guard.

Rich. soft, but see, or rather do not see,
fair rose wither: yet look up, behold,
at you in pity may dissolve to dwell,
wash him fresh again with true-love tears.
thon, the model where old Troy did stand,
um an honour, thou King Richard's tomb,
not King Richard; thou most beauteous imm,
y shoul hard-favour'd grief be lodg'd in thee,
, en triumph is become an alehouse guest?

Rich. Join not with grief, fair woman, do not so,
make my end too sudden: learn, good soul,
think our former state a happy dream;
which awk'd, the truth of what we are us but this. I am sworn brother, sweet, grim Necessity; and he and I ke a league till death. His thee to France, d cloister thee in some religious house:

e holy lives must win a new world's crown,
ich our profane hours here have stricken down.

Queen. What? is my Richard both in shape and mind

Transform'd and weaken'd? hath Bolingbroke depos'd
Thine intellect? hath he been in thy heart?
The lion dying thrusteth forth his paw
And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o'errepower'd; and wilt thou, pupil-like, at Take thy correction mildly, kiss the rod,
And fawn on rage with base humility,
Which art a lion and a king of beasts?

Rich. A king of beasts indeed; if aught
but beasts,
I had been still a happy king of men.

Good sometime queen, prepare thee hence for France;

Think I am dead, and that even here thou tak'st,
As from my death-bed, thy last living leave.

In winter's tedious nights sit by the fire
With good old folks, and let them tell thee tales
Of woeful ages, long ago betid;
And ere thou bid good night, to quit their grief,
Tell thou the lamentable tale of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their beds:
For why, the senseless brands will sympathize
The heavy accent of thy moving tongue,
And in compassion weep the fire out;
And some will mourn in ashes, some coal-black,
For the deposing of a rightful king.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, attended.

North. My lord, the mind of Bolingbroke is chang'd;

You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.

And, madam, there is order ta'en for you;

With all swift speed you must away to France.

Rich. Northumberland, thou ladder whereewith

The mounting Bolingbroke ascends my throne,
The time shall not be many hours of age
More than it is ere foul sin gathering head
Shall break into corruption. Thou shalt think,
Though he divide the realm and give thee half,
It is too little, helping him to all
And he shall think that thou which know'st the way
To plant unrightful kings, wilt know again,

Being ne'er so little urge'd, another way
To pluck him headlong from the usurp'd throne.
The love of wicked friends converts to fear;
That fear to hate; and hate turns one or both
To worthy danger and deserved death.

North. My guilt be on my head, and thereon end.

Take leave and part; for you must part forthwith.

Rich. Doubly divorc'd! Bad men, you violate

A two-fold marriage; 'twixt my crown and me,
And then betwixt me and my married wife.
Let me unkiss the oath 'twixt thee and me:
And yet not so, for with a kiss 'twas made.

Part us, Northumberland: I towards the north,
Where shivering cold and sickness pines the clime;

My wife to France: from whence, set forth in pomp.

She came adorned hither like sweet May,
Sent back like Hallowmas or short'st of day.

Queen. And must we be divided? must we part!

Rich. Ay, hand from hand, my love, and heart from heart.

Queen. Banish us both and send the king with me.
North. That were some love but little policy.
Queen. Then whither he goes, this I let me go.
K. Rich. So two, together weeping, make one wo.
Weep thou for me in France, I for thee here;
Better far off than near, be it the near.
Go, count thy way with sighs, I mine with groans.
Queen. So longest way shall have the longest moans.

K. Rich. Twice for one step I'll groan, the way being short,
And piece the way out with a heavy heart.
Come, come, in woeing sorrow let's be brief,
Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief.
One kiss shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part:
Thus give me mine, and thus take I thy heart.
Queen. Give me mine own again; 'twere no good part
To take on me to keep and kill thy heart.
So, now I have mine own again, be gone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan.

K. Rich. We make woe wanton with this fond delay:
Once more, adieu; the rest let sorrow say.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Duke of York's Palace.

Enter YORK and the DUCHESS.

Duch. My lord, you told me you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you break the story off,
Of our two cousins coming into London.
York. Where did I leave?

Duch. At that sad stop, my lord,
Where rude misgovern'd hands, from windows' tops,
Throw dust and rubbish on King Richard's head.
York. Then, as I said, the duke, great Boling-broke,
Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed,
Which his aspiring rider seem'd to know,
With slow but stately pace kept on his course,
While all tongues cried 'God save thee, Boling-broke!'
You would have thought the very window-speak,
So many greedy looks of young and old
Through casements darted their desiring eyes
Upon his visage, and that all the walls
With painted imagery had said at once
'Jesu preserve thee! welcome, Bolingbroke!'
Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower than his proud steed's neck,
Bespeak them thus: 'I thank you, countrymen':
And thus still doing, thus he pass'd along.

Duch. Alack! poor Richard; where rode he the whilst?
York. As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-grac'd actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious;
Even so, or with much more contempt, men's eyes
Did scowl on Richard: no man cried 'God save him!'
No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home;
But dust was thrown upon his sacred head,
With which such gentle sorrow he shook off,
His face still combating with tears and smiles,
The badges of his grief and patience,
That had not God, for some strong purport steel'd
The hearts of men, they must perforce be melted,
And barbarism itself have pitted him.
But heaven hath a hand in these events,
To whose high will we bound our calm content.
To Bolingbroke are we sworn subjects now,
Whose state and honour I for eye allow.

Duch. Here comes my son Aumerle.
York. Aumerle that
But that is lost for being Richard's friend,
And, madam, you must call him Rutland now.
I am in parliament pledge for his truth
And lasting fealty to the new made king.

Enter AUMERLE.

Duch. Welcome, my son: who are the victors
now
That strew the green lap of the new come spring?
Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly
not:
God knows I had as lief be none as one.
York. Well, bear you well in this new spring of time,
Lest you be cropp'd before you come to pride.
What news from Oxford? hold those justs triumphs?
Aum. For aught I know, my lord, they do
York. You will be there, I know.
Aum. If God prevent not, I purpose so.
York. What seal is that that hangs with thy bosom?
Yea, look'st thou pale? let me see the writing.
Aum. My lord, 'tis nothing.
York. No matter then who sees
I will be satisfied; let me see the writing.
Aum. I do beseech your grace to pardon me,
It is a matter of small consequence,
Which for some reasons I would not have all York. Which for some reasons, sir, I must see.
I fear, I fear,—
Duch. What should you fear?
'Tis nothing but some bond that he is enter'd
For gay apparel 'gainst the triumph day.
York. Bound to himself? what doth he a bond
That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a fool.
Boy, let me see the writing.
Aum. I do beseech you, pardon me; I may show it.
York. I will be satisfied; let me see it.
Snatches it, and reads:
Treason! foul treason! Villain! traitor! so
Duch. What is the matter, my lord?
York. Ho! who is within there?

Enter a Servant.

Saddle my horse.
God for his mercy! what treachery is here?
Duch. Why, what is it, my lord?
York. Give me my boots, I say; saddle horse.
Exit Sen-
Now, by mine honour, by my life, my troth
I will appeach the villain.

Duch. What's the matter?
York. Peace, foolish woman.
Duch. I will not peace. What is the matter?
KING RICHARD II.

uen. Good mother, be content; it is no more in my poor life must answer.

uch. Thy life answer! York. Bring me my boots: I will unto the king.

Re-enter Servant, with boots.

uch. Strike him, Aumerle. Poor boy, thou art amaz’d.

oe, villain! never more come in my sight.

York. Give me my boots, I say.

uch. Why, York, what wilt thou do?

it thou not hide the trespass of thine own? we more sons, or are we like to have? got my teeming date drunk up with time? wilt thou pluck my fair son from mine age, rob me of a happy mother’s name? not like thee? is he not thine own?

York. Thou fond, mad woman, thou conceal this dark conspiracy? dozen of them here have ta’en the sacrament, interchangeably set down their hands, kill the king at Oxford.

uch. He shall be none; I’ll keep him here; then what is that to him?

York. Away, fond woman! were he twenty times son, I would approach him.

uch. Hadst thou groan’d for him I have done thou would’st be more pitiful, now I know thy mind; thou dost suspect at I have been disloyal to thy bed, he is a bastard, not thy son: York, sweet husband, be not of that mind: as like thee as a man may be, like to me, nor any of my kin, yet I love him.

York. Make way, unruly woman! Exit. Douch. After, Aumerle! Mount thee upon his horse;

post, and get before him to the king, beg thy pardon ere he do accuse thee, not be long behind; though I be old, not but to ride as fast as York: never will I rise up from the ground. Bolingbroke have pardon’d thee. Away! be gone. Exeunt.

CENE III.—Windsor. A Room in the Castle.

ter BOLINGBROKE as king; PERCY, and other Lords.

Boling. Can no man tell me of my untruthful son? full three months since I did see him last, any plague hang over us, ’tis he. would to God, my lords, he might be found: quire at London, ’mongst the taverns there, there, they say, he daily doth frequent, unrestrained loose companions, such, they say, as stand in narrow lanes beat our watch and rob our passengers; hie he, young wanton and effeminate boy, on the point of honour to support dissolve a crew.

Perey. My lord, some two days since I saw the prince, told him of those triumphs held at Oxford. Boling. And what said the gallant?

Boling. As dissolve as desperate: yet through both I see some sparks of better hope, which elder days may happily bring forth. But who comes here?

Enter AUMERLE.

uen. Where is the king?

Boling. What means our cousin, that he stares and looks

So wildly?

uen. God save your grace! I do beseech your majesty to have some conference with your grace alone.

Boling. Withdraw yourselves, and leave us here alone. Exeunt PERCY and Lords.

What is the matter with our cousin now?

uen. For ever may my knees grow to the earth,

My tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth, Unless a pardon ere I rise or speak.

Boling. Intended or committed was this fault? If on the first, how heinous e’er it be, To win thy after-love I pardon thee.

uen. Then give me leave that I may turn the key,

That no man enter till my tale be done.

Boling. Have thy desire.

York. Within. My liege, beware! look to thyself;

Thou hast a traitor in thy presence there.

Boling. Villain, I’ll make thee safe. Drawing.

uen. Stay thy revengeful hand; thou hast no cause to fear.

York. Within. Open the door, secure, fool-hardy king:

Shall I for love speak treason to thy face?

Open the door, or I will break it open.

Enter YORK.

Boling. What is the matter, uncle? speak; Recover breath; tell us how near is danger,

That we may arm us to encounter it.

York. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know

The treason that my haste forbids me show. Remem. Remember, as thou read’st, thy promise pass’d:

I do repent me; read not my name there; My heart is not confederate with my hand.

York. ’Twas, villain, ere thy hand did set it down.

I tore it from the traitor’s bosom, king; Fear, and not love, begets his penitence. Forget to pity him, lest thy pity prove A serpent that will sting thee to the heart.

Boling. O heinous, strong, and bold conspiracy! O loyal father of a treacherous son!

Thou sheer, immaculate, and silver fountain, From whence this stream through muddy passages Hath held his current and desill’d himself! Thy overflow of good converts to bad, And thy abundant goodness shall excuse This deadly blot in thy digressing son.

York. So shall my virtue be his vice’s bawd,
And he shall spend mine honour with his shame,
As thriftless sons their scraping fathers' gold.
Mine honour lives when his dishonour dies, 70
Or my sham'd life in his dishonour lies:
Thou kille'st me in life; giving him breath,
The traitor lives, the true man's put to death.

Duch. Within. What ho, my liege! for God's sake, let me in.

Boling. What shrill-voic'd suppliant makes this eager cry?

Duch. A woman, and thine aunt, great king; 'tis I.

Speak with me, pity me, open the door:
A beggar begs that never begg'd before.

Boling. Our scene is alter'd from a serious thing.

And now chang'd to 'The Beggar and the King.'

My dangerous cousin, let your mother in: 81
I know she's come to pray for your foul sin.

York. If thou do pardon, whosoever pray,
More sins for this forgiveness prosper may.
This fester'd joint cut off, the rest rest sound;
This let alone will all the rest confound.

Enter Duchess.

Duch. O king! believe not this heart-hardened man:
Love living not itself none other can.
York. Thou frantic woman, what dost thou make here?
Shall thy old dag's once more a traitor rest? 90

Duch. Sweet York, be patient. Hear me, gentle liege.

Boling. Rise up, good aunt.

Duch. Not yet, I thee beseech:
For ever will I walk upon my knees,
And never see day that the happy sees,
Till thou give joy; until thou bid me joy,
By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing boy.

Aum. Unto my mother's prayers I bend my knee.

Duch. Against them both my true joints bended be.

Ill may'st thou thrive if thou grant any grace!

Duch. Plead's he in earnest? look upon his face;
His eyes do drop no tears, his prayers are in jest;
His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast:
202
He prays but faintly and would be denied;
We pray with heart and soul and all beside;
His weary joints would gladly rise, I know;
Our knees shall kneel till to the ground they grow:
His prayers are full of false hypocrisy;
Ours of true zeal and deep integrity.
Our prayers do out-pray his; then let them have
That mercy which true prayer ought to have.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. Nay, do not say 'stand up';
But 'pardon' first, and afterwards 'stand up.'
An if I were thy nurse, thy tongue to teach,
'Pardon' should be the first word of thy speech.
I never long'd to hear a word till now;
Say 'pardon,' king; let pity teach thee how:
The word is short, but not so short as sweet;
No word like 'pardon' for kings' mouths so meet.

York. Speak it in French, king; say, 'par-donnez-moi.'

Duch. Dost thou teach pardon pardon to destroy?

Ah! my sour husband, my hard-hearted lord
That sett'st the word itself against the word.
Speak 'pardon,' as 'tis current in our land;
The chopping French we do not understand.
Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue the
Or in thy piteous heart plant thou thine ear,
That hearing how our plaints and prayers pierce,
Pity may move thee pardon to rehearse.

Boling. With all my heart I pardon him.

Duch. A god on earth thou art.

Boling. But for our trusty brother-in-law the abbot,
With all the rest of that consorted crew,
Destruction straight shall dog them at the heel.
Good uncle, help to order several powers
To Oxford, or where'er these traitors are:
They shall not live within this world, I swear.
But I will have them, if I once know where.
Uncle, farewell; and cousin too, adieu:
Your mother well hath prayer'd, and proved true.

Duch. Come, my old son: I pray God make thee now.

Enter Exton and Servant.

Exton. Didst thou not mark the king, which words he spake,
Have I no friend will rid me of this living foe;
Was it not so?

Serv. Those were his very words.

Exton. 'Have I no friend?' quoth he; he spake it twice,
And urg'd it twice together, did he not?

Serv. He did.

Exton. And speaking it, he wistly look'd on me:
As who should say, 'I would thou wert the man
That would divorce this terror from my heart,
Meaning the king at Pomfret. Come, let's go;
I am the king's friend, and will rid his foe.

Enter Scene IV—Pomfret. The Dungeon of the Castle.

Enter King Richard.

K. Rich. I have been studying how I may compare
This prison where I live unto the world:
And for because the world is populous,
And here is not a creature but myself,
I cannot do it; yet I'll hammer it out.
My brain I'll prove the female to my soul;
My soul the father: and these two begot
A generation of still-breeding thoughts.
And these same thoughts people this little world
In humour like the people of this world,
For no thought is contented. The better so;
As thoughts of things divine, are intermix'd
With scruples, and do set the word itself
Against the word:
As thus, 'Come, little ones'; and then again
Enter Keeper, with a dish.

K. Rich. Keep, fellow, give place; here is no longer stay.

Groom. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say.

K. Rich. My lord, will 'tis please you to fall to?

K. Rich. Taste of it first, as thou art wont to do.

K. Rich. My lord, I dare not; Sir Pierce of Exton, who lately came from the king, commands the contrary.

K. Rich. The devil take Henry of Lancaster and thee!

Patience is stale, and I am weary of it.

Knave. Help, help, help!

Enter Exton and Servants, armed.

K. Rich. How now! what means death in this rude assault?

Villain, thine own hand yields thy death's instrument.

Snatching a weapon, and killing one.

Go thou and fill another room in hell.

He kills another: Exton strikes him down.

That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire
That staggers thus my person. Exton, thy fierce hand.

Hath with the king's blood stain'd the king's own land.

Mount, mount, my soul! thy seat is up on high.

Whilst my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die.

Dies. Exton. As full of valor as of royal blood:

Both have I spilt; O! would the deed were good;
For now the devil, that told me I did well,

Says that this deed is chronicled in hell.

This dead king to the living king I'll bear.

Take hence the rest and give them burial here.

Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Windsor. An Apartment in the Castle.

Flourish. Enter Bolingbroke and York, with Lords and Attendants.

Boling. Kind uncle York, the latest news we hear

Is that the rebels have consum'd with fire
Our town of Cicester in Gloucestershire;
But whether they be ta'en or slain we hear not.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

Welcome, my lord. What is the news?
North. First, to thy sacred state wish I all happiness.
The next news is, I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent.
The manner of their taking may appear
At large discoursed in this paper here.

Boling. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains,
And to thy worth will add right worthy gains.

Enter FITZWATER.

Fitz. My lord, I have from Oxford sent to London
The heads of Brocas and Sir Bennet Seely,
Two of the dangerous consorted traitors
That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.

Boling. Thy pains, Fitzwater, shall not be forgot;
Right noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter PERCY, with the Bishop of CARLISLE.

Percy. The grand conspirator, Abbot of Westminster,
With clog of conscience and sour melancholy,
Hath yielded up his body to the grave;
But here is Carlisle living, to abide
Thy kingly doom and sentence of his pride.

Boling. Carlisle, this is your doom:
Choose out some secret place, some reverend room,
More than thou hast, and with it joy thy life
So, as thou liv'st in peace, die free from strife.
For though mine enemy thou hast ever been,
High sparks of honour in thee have I seen.

Enter EXTON, with Attendants bearing a coffin.

Exton. Great king, within this coffin I present
Thy buried fear: herein all breathless lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies,
Richard of Bordeaux, by me hither brought.

Boling. Exton, I thank thee not; for thy hate wrought
A deed of slander with thy fatal hand
Upon my head and all this famous land.

Exton. From your own mouth, my lord, did this deed.

Boling. They love not poison that do pois need,
Nor do I thee: though I did wish him dead,
I hate the murderer, love him murdered.
The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labors,
But neither my good word nor princely favor
With Cain go wander through the shades of night,
And never show thy head by day nor light.
Lords, I protest, my soul is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkle me to make me groan
Come, mourn with me for that I do lament,
And put on sullen black incontinence.
I'll make a voyage to the Holy Land,
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand.
March sadly after; grace my mournings here
In weeping after this untimely bier.

Exeunt.

SCENE.—England.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—London. The Palace.
Enter King Henry, Westmoreland, and Others.

K. Hen. So shaken as we are, so wan with care,We have a time for frightened peace to pant,To breathe short-winded accents of new broilsBemused in words of war, and to be commendedIn dangers everlastingly remote,More than the thirty entrance of this soilIs daub'd her lips with her own children's blood;More than the trenches war channel her fields,Or bruise her flowerets with the armed hoovesOf hostile paces: those opposed eyes,Whick like the meteors of a troubled heaven,Of one nature, of one substance bred,Id lately meet in the intestine shockAnd furious close of civil butchery,Now, in mutual well-beseeming ranks,Arch all one way, and be no more oppos'dAgainst acquaintance, kindred, and allies:He edge of war, like an ill-sheathed knife,More shall cut his master. Therefore, friends,As far as to the sepulchre of Christ,Those soldier now, under whose blessed crossWe are impress'd and engag'd to fight,Or with a power of English shall we levy,Whose arms were moulded in their mothers' womb,Chase these pagans in those holy fields,Whose acres walk'd those blessed feetWhich fourteen hundred years ago were nail'dFor our advantage on the bitter cross.

But this our purpose is a twelvemonth old,And bootless 'tis to tell you we will go:Therefore we meet not now. Then let me hearOf you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland,What yesternight our council did decreeIn forwarding this dear expedience.

West. My liege, this haste was hot in question,And many limits of the charge set downBut yesternight: when all athwart there cameA post from Wales laden with heavy news;Whose worst was, that the noble Mortimer,Leading the men of Herefordshire to fightAgainst the irregular and wild Glendower,Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken,A thousand of his people butchered:Upon whose dead corpse there was such misuse,Such beastly shameless transformationBy those Welshwomen done, as may not beWithout much shame re-told or spoken of.

K. Hen. It seems then that the tidings of this broilBrake off our business for the Holy Land.

West. This match'd with other like, my gracious lord;For more uneven and unwelcome news Came from the north, and thus it did import:On Holy-rood day, the gallant Hotspur there,Young Harry Percy and brave Archibald,That ever-valiant and approved Scot,At Holmedon met,Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour;As by discharge of their artillery,And shape of likelihood, the news was told;For he that brought them, in the very heatAnd pride of their contention did take horse, Uncertain of the issue any way.

K. Hen. Here is a dear and true industrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse, Stain'd with the variation of each soil Betwixt that Holmedon and this seat of ours; And he hath brought us smooth and welcome news.
The Earl of Douglas is discomfited;
Ten thousand bold Scots, two-and-twenty knights, Balk'd in their own blood, did Sir Walter see On Holmedon's plains: of prisoners Hotspur took Mordake the Earl of Fife, and eldest son To beat Douglas, and the Earl of Athol, Of Murray, Angus, and Menteith.

And is not this an honourable spoil? A gallant prize? ha, cousin, is it not?

West. In faith, It is a conquest for a prince to boast of.

K. Hen. Yea, thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin In envy that my Lord Northumberland Should be the father to so blest a son;

A son who is the theme of honour's tongue;
Amongst a grove the very straightest plant; Who is sweet Fortune's minion and her pride: Whilst I, by looking on the praise of him, See riot and dishonour stain the brow Of my young Harry. O! that it could be prov'd That some night-tripping fairy had exchang'd In cradle-clothes our children where they lay, And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet.

Then would I have his Harry, and he mine. But let him from my thoughts. What think you, coz, Of this young Percy's pride? the prisoners, Which he in this adventure hath surpris'd, To his own use he keeps, and sends me word, I shall have none but Mordake Earl of Fife.

West. This is his uncle's teaching, this is Worcester, Malevolent to you in all aspects; Which makes him prone himself, and bristle up The crest of youth against your dignity.

K. Hen. But I have sent for him to answer this;
And for this cause awhile we must neglect Our holy purpose to Jerusalem. Cousin, on Wednesday next our council we Will hold at Windsor; so inform the lords; But come yourself with speed to us again; For more is to be said and to be done Than out of anger can be uttered.

West. I will, my liege.

EXECUT.

SCENE II.—The Same. An Apartment of the Prince's.

Enter the Prince and Falstaff.

Fal. Now, Hal, what time of day is it, lad? Prince. Thou art so fat-witted, with drinking of old sack, and unbuttoning thee after supper, and sleeving upon benches after noon, that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly which thou would'st truly know. What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? Unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, and clock the tongues of bawds, and dials the signs of leaping-houses, and the blessed self-same himself a fair hot wench in flame-colours taffeta, I see no reason why thou should'st so superfluous to demand the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed, you come near me now Hal, for we that take purses go by the moon at the seven stars, and not by Phoebus, he, the wandering knight so fair. And, I prithee, swe-wag, when thou art king, as, God save thy Grace majesty, I should say, for grace thou wilt have none,—

Prince. What! none?

Fal. No, by my troth; not so much as win serve to be prologue to an egg and butter.

Prince. Well, how then? come roundly.

Fal. Marry, then, sweet wag, when thou art king, let not us that are squires of the night body be called thieves of the day's beauty: Let us be Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shad minions of the moon; and let men say we be men of good government, being governed as thy sea is, by our noble and chaste mistress the moon, under whose countenance we steal.

Prince. Thou sayest well, and it holds we too; for the fortune of us that are the moon men doth ebb and flow like the sea, being governed as the sea is, by the moon. As for proof now: a purse of gold most resolutely snatched on Monday night and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday morning; got with swearing 'Lay by,' and spent with crying 'Bring in now in as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder and by and by as high a flow as the ridge of the gallows.

Fal. By the Lord, thou sayest true, lad. An is not my hostess of the tavern a most sweet wag? Prince. As the honey of Hybla, my old lad, the castle. And is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance?

Fal. How now, how now, mad wag! what in thy quips and thy quiddities? what a plag批次 have I to do with a buff jerkin?

Prince. Why, what a pox have I to do with my hostess of the tavern?

Fal. Well, thou hast called her to a reckoning many a time and oft.

Prince. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy par?

Fal. No; I'll give thee thy due, thou hast paid all there.

Prince. Yea, and elsewhere, so far as my coat would stretch; and where it would not, I have used my credit.

Fal. Yea, and so used it that, were it not he apparent that thou art heir apparent,—But, prithee, sweet wag, shall there be gallows standing in England when thou art king, and resolution thus foibed as it is with the rusty curb and old father antick the law? Do not thou, when thou art king, hang a thief.

Prince. No; thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I? O rare! By the Lord, I'll be brave judge.

Prince. Thou judgest false already; I mean thou shalt have the hanging of the thieves as so become a rare hangman.

Fal. Well, Hal, well; and in some sort jumps with my humour as well as waiting in th' court, I can tell you.
Prince. For obtaining of suits!

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of suits, whereof the ugman hath no lean wardrobe. 'Sblood, I as melancholy as a gib cat, or a lugged

.ar.

Prince. Or an old lion, or a lover's late.

Fal. Yea, or the drone of a Lincolnshire bag-

96. Prince. What sayest thou to a hare, or the slanchoy of Moor-ditch?

Fal. Thou hast the most unsavoury simile art indeed the most comparative, rascalliest, ett young prince. But, Hal, I prithee, trouble no more with vanity. I would to God thon

d I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought. An old lord of the council ned the other day in the street about you, but I marked him not; and yet he talked ry wisely, but I regarded him not; and yet talked wisely, and in the street too.

Prince. Thou didst well; for wisdom cries out the streets, and no man regards it.

Fal. O! thou hast damned iteration, and art deed able to corrupt a saint. Thou hast done ich harm upon me, Hal; God forgive thee for

.Before I knew thee, Hal, I knew nothing;
d now am I, if a man should speak truly, little ter than one of the wicked. I must give over life, and I will give it over; by the Lord, an do not, I am a villain: I shall be damned for ver a king's son in Christendom.

Prince. Where shall we take a purse to-morrow, ck?

Fal. 'Zounds! where thou wilt, lad, I'll make
; an I do not, call me villain and baffle me.

Prince. I see a good amendment of life in see; from praying to purse-taking.

Enter POINS, at a distance.

Fal. Why, Hal, 'tis my vocation, Hal; 'tis no for a man to labour in his vocation. Poins! we shall know if Gadshill have set a match.
if men were to be saved by merit, what hole hell were hot enough for him? This is the ost omnipotent villan that ever cried 'Stand!' a true man.

Prince. Good morrow, Ned.

Poins. Good morrow, sweet Hal. What says onsieur Remorse? What says Sir John Sack-d-Sugar! Jack! how agrees the devil and e about thy soul, that thou soldest him on -Friday last for a cup of Madeira and a lad capon's leg!

Prince. Sir John stands to his word, the devil all have his bargain; for he was never yet a reaker of proverbs: he will give the devil his de.

Poins. Then art thou damned for keeping thy ord with the devil.

Prin. Else he had been damned for cozening

a devil.

Poins. But, my lords, my lords, to-morrow morng, by four o'clock, early at Gadshill! There are gims going to Canterbury with rich offerings, d traders riding to London with fat purses: I we vizards for you all; you have horses for urselves. Gadshill lies to-night in Rochester; have bespoke supper to-morrow night in East-
: we may do it as secure as sleep. If you ill go I will stuff your purses full of crowns;
you will not, tarry at home and be hanged.
Who doth permit the base contagious clouds
To smother up his beauty from the world,
That when he please again to be himself,

Being wanted, he may be more wonder'd at,

By breaking through the soul and ugly mists
Of vapours that did seem to strangle him.
If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work;
But when they seldom come, they wish'd for come,
And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents.
So, when this loose behaviour I throw off,
And pay the debt I never promised,
By how much better than my word I am.
By so much shall I falsify men's hopes;
And like bright metal on a sullen ground,
My reformation, glittering o'er my fault,
Shall show more goodly and attract more eyes
Than that which hath no foil to set it off.
I'll so offend to make offence a skill,
Redeeming time when men think least I will.

Exit.

SCENE III.—The Same. The Palace.

Enter King Henry, Northumberland, Worcester, Hotspur, Sir Walter Blunt, and Others.

K. Hen. My blood hath been too cold and temperate,
Unapt to stir at these indignities,
And you have found me; for accordingly
You tread upon my patience: but be sure
I will from henceforth rather be myself,
Mighty, and to be fear'd, than my condition,
Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as young down,
And therefore lost that title of respect
Which the proud soul ne'er pays but to the proud.

Wor. Our house, my sovereign liege, little deserves
The scourg of greatness to be used on it;
And that same greatness too which our own hands
Have holp to make so portly.

North. My lord,—

K. Hen. Worcester, get thee gone; for I do see Danger and disobedience in thine eye.
O! sir, your presence is too bold and peremptory,
And majesty might never yet endure
The moody frontier of a servant brow.
You have good leave to leave us; when we need
Your use and counsel we shall send for you.

Exit Worcester.

To Northumberland. You were about to speak.

North. Yea, my good lord.

Those prisoners in your highness' name demanded,
Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took,
Were, as he says, not with such strength denied
As was deliver'd to your majesty:
Either envy, therefore, or misprision
Is guilty of this fault and not my son.

Hot. My liege, I did deny no prisoners:
But I remember, when the fight was done,
When I was dry with rage and extreme toil,
Breathless and faint, leaning upon my sword,
Came there a certain lord, neat, trimly dress'd,
Fresh as a bridegroom; and his chin, new reap'd,
Show'd like a stubble-land at harvest-home:
He was perfumed like a milliner,
And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held
A pounce-box, which ever and anon
He gave his nose and took 't away again;
Who therewith angry, when it next came the
Took it in smuff: and still he smil'd and talk'd
And as the soldiers bore dead bodies by,
He call'd them untaught knaves, unmannishly
To bring a slovenly unhandsome corpse
Betwixt the wind and his nobility.

With many holiday and lady terms
He question'd me; among the rest, demanded
My prisoners in your majesty's behalf.
I then, all smarting with my wounds being coo,
To be soothe'd with a popinjay,
Out of my grief and my impatience
Answer'd negligently, I know not what,
He should, or he should not; for he made a mad
To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet
And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman
Of guns, and drums, and wounds, God save the mark!
And telling me the sovereign'st thing on earth
Was parmafet for an inward bruise;
And that it was great pity, so it was,
That villainous salt-petre should be digg'd
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly; and for these vile guns
He would himself have been a soldier.
This baid unjointed chat of his, my lord,
I answer'd indirectly, as I said;
And I beseech you, let not his report
Come current for an accusation
Betwixt my love and your high majesty.

Blunt. The circumstance consider'd, good lord,
Whatever Harry Percy then had said
To such a person, and in such a place,
At such a time, with all the rest re-told,
May reasonably die and never rise
To do him wrong, or any way impeach
What then he said, so he unsay it now.

K. Hen. Why, yet he doth deny his prison's
But with proviso and exception,
That we at our own charge shall ransom strait
His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer;
Who, on my soul, hath wilfully betray'd
The lives of those that he did lead to fight Against the great magician, damn'd Glendow;
Whose daughter, as we hear, the Earl of Maidon
Hath lately married. Shall our coffers then
Be emptied to redeem a traitor home?
Shall we buy treason, and indent with fears,
When they have lost and forfeited themselves
No, on the barren mountains let him starve;
For I shall never hold that man my friend
Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost
To ransom home revolted Mortimer.

Hot. Revolted Mortimer!
He never did fall off, my sovereign liege,
But by the chance of war: to prove that true
Needs no more but one tongue for all the wounds,
Those mouthed wounds, which valiantly he too,
When on the gentle Severn's sedgy bank,
In single opposition, hand to hand,
He did confound the best part of an hour
In changing hardiment with great Glendow;

Re-enter Worcester.

Hot. Speak of Mortimer! 139 ound! I will speak of him; and let my soul ant mercy if I do not join with him: his behalf I ’ll empty all these veins, sd shed my dear blood drop by drop i’ the dust, n I will lift the down-trod Mortimer hig’ i’ the air as this unthankful king, his ingrate and canker’d Bolingbroke. nth. Brother, the king hath made your nephew mad.

Wor. Who struck this heat up after I was gone?

Hot. He will, forsooth, have all my prisoners; nd when I arg’d the ransom once again 141 f my wife’s brother, then his cheek look’d pale, nd on my face he turn’d an eye of death, rembling even at the name of Mortimer.

Wor. I cannot blame him: was he not pro claim’d y Richard that dead is the next blood? nth. He was; I heard the proclamation: nd then it was, when the unhappy king, those wrongs in us God pardon! did set forth pon his Irish expedition;

rom whence he, intercepted, did return o be depos’d, and shortly murdered.

Wor. And for whose death we in the world’s wide mouth ive scandaliz’d and foully spoken of.

Hot. But, soft! I pray you, did King Richard then reclaim my brother Edmund Mortimer lir to the crown?

North. He did; myself did hear it. Hot. Nay, then I cannot blame his cousin king, That wish’d him on the barren mountains starve. But shall it be that you, that set the crown 160 Upon the head of this forgetful man. And for his sake wear the detested blot Of murd’rous subornation, shall it be, That you a world of curses undergo, Being the agents, or base second means, The cords, the ladder, or the hangerman rather? O! pardon me that I descend so low, To show the line and the predicament Wherein you range under this subtle king. Shall it for shame be spoken in these days, 170 Or fill up chronicles in time to come, That men of your nobility and power Did gage them both in an unjust behalf. As both of you, God pardon it! have done, To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose, And plant this thorn, this canker, Bolingbroke! And shall it in more shame be further spoken, That you are fool’d, discarded, and shook off By him for whom these shames ye underwent? No; yet time serves wherein you may redeem 180 Your banish’d honours, and restore yourselves Into the good thoughts of the world again; Revenge the jeering and disdain’d contempt Of this proud king, who studies day and night To answer all the debt he owes to you Even with the bloody payment of your deaths. Therefore, I say,—

Wor. Peace, cousin! say no more. And now I will unclasp a secret book, And to your quick-conceiving discontents I’ll read you matter deep and dangerous, 190 As full of peril and adventurous spirit As to o’er-walk a current, roaring loud, On the unsteadfast footing of a spear.

Hot. If he fall in, good night! or sink or swim:

Send danger from the east unto the west, So honour cross it from the north to south, And let them grapple: O! the blood more stirs To rouse a lion than to start a hare.

North. Imagination of some great exploit Drives him beyond the bounds of patience. 200 Hot. By heaven methinks it were an easy leap To pluck bright honour from the pale-fac’d moon, Or dive into the bottom of the deep, Where fathom-line could never touch the ground, And pluck up drowned honour by the locks; So he that doth redeem her thence might wear Without corvial all her dignities: But out upon this half-fac’d fellowship!

Wor. He apprehends a world of figures here, But not the form of what he should attend. 210 Good cousin, give me audience for a while, And list to me.

Hot. I cry you mercy.

Wor. Those same noble Scots That are your prisoners,—

Hot. I ’ll keep them all;

By God, he shall not have a Scot of them: No, if a Scot would save his soul, he shall not: I ’ll keep them, by this hand.

Wor. You start away, And lend no ear unto my purposes. Those prisoners you shall keep.

Hot. Nay, I will; that’s flat. He said he would not ransom Mortimer; 220 Forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer; But I will find him when he lies asleep,
And in his ear 'I'll holla 'Mortimer'!
Nay, I'll have a starling shall be taught to speak
Nothing but 'Mortimer,' and give it him,
To keep his anger still in motion.

Wor. Hear you, cousin; a word.

Hot. All studies here I solemnly defy,
Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke; and
And that same sword-and-buckler Prince of Wales,
But that I think his father loves him not,
And would be glad he met with some mischance,
I would have him poison'd with a pot of ale.

Wor. Farewell, kinsman: I will talk to you
When you are better temper'd to attend.

North. Why, what a wasp-stung and impatient fool
Art thou, to break into this woman's mood,
Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own!

Hot. Why, look you, I am whipp'd and scourg'd with rods,
Nettled and stung with pismires, when I hear
Of this vile politician, Bolingbroke.
In Richard's time,—what do you call the place?—
A plague upon 't—it is in Gloucestershire;—
'Twas where the madcap duke his uncle kept,
His uncle York; where I first bow'd my knee
Unto this king of smiles, this Bolingbroke;
'Sblood!
When you and he came back from Ravenspurg.

North. At Berkeley castle.

Hot. You say true.

Why, what a candy deal of courtesy
This fawning greyhound then did proffer me!
Look, 'when his infant fortune came to age,'
And 'gentle Harry Percy,' and 'kind cousin';
O! the devil take such cozeners. God forgive me!

Good uncle, tell your tale, for I have done.

Wor. Nay, if you have not, 'tis again;
We'll stay your leisure.

Hot. I have done, 'tis faith.

Wor. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners,
Deliver them up without their ransom straight,
And make the Douglas' son your only mean
For powers in Scotland; which, for divers reasons
Which I shall send you written, be assur'd,
Will easily be granted.

To NORTHUMBERLAND. You, my lord,
Your son in Scotland being thus employ'd,
Shall secretly into the bosom creep
Of that same noble prelate well belov'd,
The archbishop.

Hot. Of York, is it not?

Wor. True; who bears hard
His brother's death at Bristol, the lord Scroop.
I speak not this in estimation,
As what I think might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted, and set down;
And only stays but to behold the face
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.

Hot. I smell it:
Upon my life it will do wondrous well.

North. Before the game's afoot thou still let'st slip?

Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble plot;
And then the power of Scotland and of York
To join with Mortimer, ha!

Wor. And so they shall.

Hot. In faith, it is exceedingly well aim'd.

Wor. And 'tis no little reason bids us speed
To save our heads by raising of a head;
For, bear ourselves as even as we can,
The king will always think him in our debt,
And think we think ourselves unsatisfied,
Till he hath found a time to pay us home.
And see already how he doth begin
To make us strangers to his looks of love.

Hot. He does, he does: we'll be reveng'd—

Wor. Cousin, farewell: no further go in th'—
Than I by letters shall direct your course.
When time is ripe, which will be suddenly,
I'll steal to Glendower and Lord Mortimer;
Where you and Douglas and our powers at one
As I will fashion it, shall happily meet,
To bear our fortunes in our own strong arms,
Which now we hold at much uncertainty.

North. Farewell, good brother: we shall trust
I trust.

Hot. Uncle, adieu: O! let the hours be she Till fields and blows and groans applaud our spo.

Enter CARRIERS.

ACT II.

Enter a Carrier, with a lantern in his hand.

First Car. Heigh-ho! An't be not four
The day I'll be hanged! Charles' Wain is o'—
The new chimney, and yet our horse not packed,
What, ostler?—

Ostler. Within. Anon, anon.

First Car. I pritches, Tom, beat Cut's saddl—
Put a few flecks in the point; the poor jade
Wrung in the withers out of all coss.

Enter another Carrier.

Second Car. Peas and beans are as dank he
As a dog, and that is the next way to give po—
Jades the bots: this house is turned upside dow
Since Robin Ostler died.

First Car. Poor fellow! never joyed since the—
Price of oats rose: it was the death of him.

Second Car. I think this be the most villano—
House in all London road for fleas: I am sure
Like a tent.

First Car. Like a tent! by the mass, the—
Is ne'er a king in Christendom could be bett—
Bit than I have been since the first cock.

Second Car. Why, they will allow us ne'er—
Jordan, and then we leak in your chimney; at—
Your chamberlie breeds fleas like a loach.

First Car. What, ostler! come away and—
Hanged, come away.

Second Car. I have a gammon of bacon at—
Two races of ginger, to be delivered as far—Charing-cross.

First Car. God's body! the turkeys in a—
Pannier are quite starved; What, ostler—
Plague on thee! hast thou never an eye in th'—
Head? canst not hear? An 'twere not as god—
A deed as drink to break the pate on thee, I a—
A very villain. Come, and be hanged! hast faith in thee?

Enter GADSHILL.

Gads. Good morrow, carriers. What's o'clock?
FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV.

Act I. Scene I.

First Car. I think it be two o'clock.

Jad. I prithee, lend me thine lantern, to see

First Car. Nay, by God, soft : I know a trick

rth two of that, I faith.

Jad. I prithee, lend me thine.

Second Car. Ay, when? canst tell? 'Lend me thou lantern,' quoth a'? marry, I'll see thee aged first.

Jad. Sirrah carrier, what time do you mean come to London?

Second Car. Time enough to go to bed with a idle, I warrant thee. Come, neighbour Mugs,

'll call up the gentlemen: they will along

th company, for they have great charge. 31

Exeunt Carriers.

Gads. What, ho! chamberlain!

Cham. Within. 'At hand,' quoth pick-purse.

Gads. That's even as fair as 'at hand,' quoth a chamberlain; for thou variest no more from king of purses than giving direction doth an labouring; thou layest the plot bow.

Enter Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, Master Gadhill. It

dids current that I told you yesternight: there's ranklin in the wild of Kent hath brought three undied marks with him in gold : I heard him lit to one of his company last night at supper;

kind of auditor; one that hath abundance charge too, God knows what. They are up ready and call for eggs and butter: they will

ay presently. 66

Gads. Sirrah, if they meet not with Saint cholers' clerks, I'll give thee this neck.

Cham. No, I'll none of it: I prithee, keep that the hangman; for I know thou worshippest

int Nicholas as truly as a man of falsehood may.

Gads. What talkest thou to me of the hang-

? if I hang I'll make a fat pair of gallows;

if I hang old Sir John hangs with me, and on knowest he's no starving. Tut there other Troyans that thou dreamest not of, the ich for sport sake are content to do the prono-

sion some grace; that would, if matters

ould be looked into, for their own credit sake

ake all whole. I am joined with no foot landers, no long-staff sixty spies, none of ese mad mustachio purple-hued maultorms;

it with nobility and tranquillity, burgomasters great oneyers; such as can hold in, such as ill strike sooner than speak, and speak sooner an drink, and drink sooner than pray: and

I lie; for they pray continually to their

int, the commonwealth; or rather, not pray her, but prey on her, for they ride up and own on her and make her their boots. 90

Cham. What! the commonwealth their boots?

ill she hold out water in foul way?

Gads. She will, she will; justice hath liquored er. We steal as I in a castle, cock-sure; we ve in receipt of fern-seed, we walk invisible.

Cham. Nay, by my faith, I think you are more horing to the night than to fern-seed for our walking invisible.

Gads. Give me thy hand: thou shalt have a care in our purchase, as I am a true man. 100

Cham. Nay, rather let me have it, as you are false thief.

Gads. Go to; homo is a common name to all men. Bid the ostler bring my gelding out of the SCENE II.—The Road by Gadshill.

Enter the Prince and Poins.

Poins. Come, shelter, shelter: I have removed

Falstaff's horse, and he frets like a gunned velvet.

Prince. Stand close.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Poins! Poins, and be hanged! Poins!

Prince. Peace, ye fat-kidneyed rascal! What a brawling dost thou keep!

Fal. Where's Poins, Hal?

Prince. He is walked up to the top of the hill:

I'll go seek him. 10

Fal. I am accused to rob in that thief's company; the rascal hath removed my horse and tied him I know not where. If I travel four foot by the square further afoot I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I 'scape hanging for killing that rogue. I have forsworn his company hourly any time this two-and-twenty years, and yet I am bewitched with the rogue's company. If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me

love him, I'll be hanged; it could not be else:

I have drunk medicines. Poins! Hal! a plague upon you both! Bardolph! Peto! I'll starve ere

I'll rob a foot further. An 'wre were not as good a deal as drink to turn true man and to leave these rogues, I am the veriest varlet that ever chewed with a tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground is threescore and ten miles afoot with me, and the stony-hearted villains know it well enough. A plague upon 't when thieves cannot be true to one another!

They whistle. 81

Whew! I a plague upon you all! Give me my horse, you rogues; give me my horse and be hanged.

Prince. Peace, ye fat-guts! lie down; lay thine ear close to the ground and list if thou canst hear the tread of travellers.

Fal. Have you any levers to lift me up again, being down? 'Sblood! I'll not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again for all the coin in thy father's exchequer. What a plague mean ye to colt me thus?

Prince. Thou liest thou art not colted thou art uncolted.

Fal. I prithee, good Prince Hal, help me to my horse, good king's son.

Prince. Out, you rogue! shall I be your ostler?

Fal. Go, hang thyself in thine own heir apparent garden! If I be ta'en I'll peacethis.

An I have not ballads made on you all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a cup of sack be my poison:

when a jest is so forward, and afoot too! I hate it.

Enter Gadshill.

Gads. Stand.

Fal. So do, against my will.

Poins. O! 'tis our setter: I know his voice.

Enter Bardolph and Peto.

Bard. What news?

Gads. Case ye, case ye: on with your vizards:

there's money of the king's coming down the hill; 'tis going to the king's exchequer.

Fal. You lie, ye rogue; 'tis going to the king's tavern.

Gads. There's enough to make us all.

Fal. To be hanged.

Prince. Sirs, you four shall front them in the narrow lane; Ned Poins and I will walk lower: if they 'scape from your encounter then they light on us.

Peto. How many be there of them?

Gads. Some eight or ten.

Fal. 'Zounds! will they not rob us?

Prince. What! a coward, Sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed, I am not John of Gaunt, your grandfather; but yet no coward, Hal.

Prince. Well, we leave that to the proof.

Poins. Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge: when thou neest him there thou shalt find him. Farewell, and stand fast.

Fal. Now cannot I strike him if I should be hanged.

Poins. Here, hard by; stand close.

Exeunt PRINCE and POINS.

Fal. Now, my masters, happy man be his dole, say I: every man to his business.

Enter Travellers.

First Trav. Come, neighbour; the boy shall lead our horses down the hill; we'll walk afoot awhile, and ease our legs.

Thieves. Stand!

Travellers. Jesu bless us!

Fal. Strike; down with them; cut the villains' throats: ah! whoreson caterpillars! bacon-fed knaves! they hate us Youth: down with them; fleece them.

Travellers. O! we are undone, both we and ours for ever.

Fal. Hang ye, gorbellied knaves, are ye undone? No, ye fat chuffs! I would your store were here! On, bacons, on! What! ye knaves, young men must live. You are grand-jurors, are ye? we'll jure ye, i' faith. Here they rob them and bind them. Exeunt.

Re-enter the PRINCE and POINS.

Prince. The thieves have bound the true men. Now could thou and I rob the thieves and go merrily to London, it would be argument for a week, laughter for a month, and a good jest for ever.

Poins. Stand close; I hear them coming.

Re-enter Thieves.

Fal. Come, my masters; let us share, and then to horse before day. An the Prince and Poins be not two arrant cowards, there's no equity stirring: there's no more value in that Poins than in a wild duck.

Prince. Your money!

Poins. Villains!

As they are sharing, the Prince and Poins set upon them. They all run away, and Falstaff, after a blow or two, runs away too, leaving the booty behind them.

Prince. Got with much ease. Now merrily to horse.

The thieves are scatter'd and possess'd with fear. So strongly that they dare not meet each other; Each takes his fellow for an officer.

Away, good Ned. Falstaff sweats to death And lards the lean earth as he walks along: Were 't not for laughing I should pity him.

Poins. How the rogue roard! Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Warkworth. A Room in the Castle.

Enter HOTSPUR, reading a letter.

But, for mine own part, my lord, I could be a contented to be there, in respect of the love I have your house.

He could be contented; why is he not the In respect of the love he bears our house: shows in this he loves his own barn better than he loves our house. Let me see some more.

The purpose you undertake is dangerous:— why, that's certain: 'tis dangerous to take a co to sleep, to drink; but I tell you, my lord for out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flow safety.

The purpose you undertake is dangerous; friends you have named uncertain; the time is unsorted; and your whole plot too light for counterpoise of so great an opposition.

Say you so, say you so? I say unto you again you are a shallow cowardly hound, and you What a lack-brain is this! By the Lord, a plot is as good a plot as ever was laid; our friends true and constant: a good plot, good friend, and full of expectation; an excellent plot, we good friends. What a frosty-spirited rogue this! Why, my Lord of York commends to plot and the general course of the action: 'Zounds! an I were now by this rascal, I could brain him with his lady's fan. Is there not my father, my uncle, and myself? Lord Edmund Mortimer, my Lord of York, and Owen Glower? Is there not besides the Douglas? Had I not all their letters to meet me in arms by the ninth of the next month, and are they not some of them set forward already? What a page rascal is this! an this infidel! Ha! you shall now in very sincerity of fear and cold heart, we to the king and lay open all our proceedings! O! I could divide myself and go to buffets, and moving such a dish of skimmed milk with honourable an action. Hang him! let him to the king; we are prepared. I will set forwa to-night.

Enter Lady Percy.

How now, Kate! I must leave you within the two hours.

Lady P. O! my good lord, why are you th alone?

For what offence have I this fortnight been A banish'd woman from my Harry's bed? Tell me, sweet lord, what is't that takes from thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep Why dost thou bend thine eyes upon the ear And start so often when thou sitt'st alone? Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy chee And given my treasures and my rights of the To thick-eyed musing and curs'd melancholy In thy faint slumber I by thee have watch'd And heard thee murmur tales of iron wars, Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed Cry 'Courage! to the field!' And thou hast tall Of sallies and retirets, of trenches, tents, Lady P. How! so far?

Hot. Not an inch further. But hark you, Kate; Whither I go, thither shall you go too; To-day will I set forth, to-morrow you. Will this content you, Kate?

Lady P. It must of force. Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Eastcheap. A Room in the Bow's Head Tavern.

Enter the Prince and Poins.

Prince. Ned, prithee, come out of that fat room and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poins. Where hast been, Hal?

Prince. With three or four loggerheads amongst three or four score hogheads. I have sounded the very base string of humility. Sirrah, I am sworn brother to a leash of drawers, and can call them all by their christen names, as Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their salvation, that though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the king of courtesy; and tell me firstly I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff, but a Cornthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy, by the Lord, so they call me, and when I am king of England, I shall command all the good lads in Eastcheap. They call drinking deep, dyeing scarlet; and when you breathe in your watering, they cry 'hem!' and bid you play it off. To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any tinker in his own language during my life. I tell thee, Ned, thou hast lost much honour that thou wert not with me in this action. But, sweet Ned,—to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this pennyworth of sugar, clapped even now into my hand by an under-skinner, one that never spake other English in his life than 'Eight shillings and sixpence,' and 'You are welcome'; with this shrill addition, 'Anon, anon, sir! Score a pint of bastard in the Half-moon,' or so. But, Ned, to drive away the time till Falstaff come, I prithee do thou stand in some by-room, while I question my puny drawer to what end he gave me the sugar; and do thou never leave calling 'Francis!' that his tale to me may be nothing but 'Anon.' Step aside, and I'll show thee a precedent.

Poins. Francis!

Prince. Thou art perfect.

Poins. Francis! Exit.

Enter Francis.

Franc. Anon, anon, sir! Look down into the Pomegranet, Ralph.

Prince. Come hither, Francis.

Franc. My lord?

Prince. How long hast thou to serve, Francis?

Franc. Forsooth, five years, and as much as to—

Poins. Within. Francis!

Franc. Anon, anon, sir.

Prince. Five years! by' r lady, a long lease for the clinking of pewter. But, Francis, darest thou be so valiant as to play the coward with thy indenture and show it a fair pair of heels and run from it?

Franc. O Lord, sir! I'll be sworn upon all the books in England, I could find in my heart—

Poins. Within. Francis!

Franc. Anon, sir.
Prince. How old art thou, Francis?

Franc. Let me see—about Michaelmas next I shall be—

Poins. Within, Francis!

Franc. Anon, sir. Pray you, stay a little, my lord.

Prince. Nay, but hark you, Francis. For the sugar thou gavest me, ’twas a pennyworth, was’t not?

Franc. O Lord, sir! I would it had been two.

Prince. I will give thee for it a thousand pounds: ask me when thou wilt and thou shalt have it.

Poins. Within, Francis!

Franc. Anon, anon.

Prince. Anon, Francis! No, Francis; but tomorrow, Francis; or, Francis, o’ Thursday; or, indeed Francis, when thou wilt. But, Francis! Franc.

Prince. Wilt thou rob this leathern-jeerin, crystal-button, knot-pated, agate-ring, puke-stocking, cadena garter, smooth-tongue, Spanish-pouch,—

Franc. O Lord, sir, who do you mean?

Prince. Why then, your brown bastard is your only drink; for look you, Francis, your white canvas doublet will suil. In Barbary, sir, it cannot come to so much.

Franc. What, sir?

Poins. Within, Francis!

Prince. Away, you rogue! Dost thou not hear them call?

Here they both call him; the Drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.

Enter Vintner.

Vint. What! standest thou still, and hearest such a calling? Look to the guests within.

Exit Francis.

My lord, old Sir John, with half-a-dozen more, are at the door: shall I let them in?

Prince. Let them alone awhile, and then open the door.

Exit Vintner.

Poins!

Re-enter POINS.

Poins. Anon, anon, sir.

Prince. Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the thieves are at the door: shall we be merry?

Poins. As merry as crickets, my lad. But hark ye; what cunning match have you made with this jest of the drawer? come, what’s the issue?

Prince. I am now of all humours that have showed themselves humours since the old days of goodman Adam to the pupil age of this present twelve o’clock at midnight.

Re-enter FRANCIS.

What’s o’clock, Francis?

Franc. Anon, anon, sir.

Prince. That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman! His industry is up-stairs and down-stairs; his eloquence the parcel of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percy’s mind, the Hotspur of the North; he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife ‘Fie upon this quiet life! I want work.’ ‘O my sweet Harry,’ says she, ‘how many hast thou killed to-day!’ ‘Give my roan horse a drench,’ says he, and answers ‘Some fourteen,’ an hour after; ‘a trifle, a trifle!’ I pritchee, o’ in Falstaff: I’ll play Percy, and that daunt brawn shall play Dame Mortimer his wife. Riv says the drunkard. Call in ribs, call in tallow.

Enter FALSTAFF, GADSHILL, BARDOLPH, PETO, and FRANCIS.

Poins. Welcome, Jack. Where hast thou been?

Fal. A plague of all cowards, I say, and vengeance too! marry, and amen! Give me a cup of sack, boy. Ere I lead this life long, I sew neither-stocks and mend them and foot the too. A plague of all cowards! Give me a cup of sack, rogue. Is there no virtue extant?

He drinks.

Prince. Didst thou never see Titan kiss a duck of butter, pitiful-hearted Titan, that melted the sweet tale of the sun? if thou dost thibed to behold that compound.

Fal. You rogue, here’s lime in this sack to there is nothing but roguery to be found in a man: yet a coward is worse than a dog of sack with lime in it. A villainous coward! Go thy ways, old Jack; die when thou wilt. Manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring. There live not three good men unhanged in England, and one of them is fat and grows old. God help the while! a bad world, I say. I heard I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or a thing. A plague of all cowards, I say still.

Prince. Why now, wool-sack! what manner ye are.

Fal. A king’s son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath, and draw all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of geese, I’ll never wear hair on my face more. Ye, Prince of Wales!

Prince. Why, thou whoreson round man, what manner ye are!

Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to this and Poins there?

Fal. I call thee coward! I’ll see thee damn ere I call thee coward; but I would give thousand pound I could run as fast as thee canst. You are strong enough in the shoulder you care not who sees your back: call you thin backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me. Give me a cup of sack: I am a rogue if I drud to-day.

Prince. O villain! thy lips are scarce with since thou drunkest last.

Fal. All’s one for that.

He drinks.

A plague of all cowards, still say I.

Prince. What’s the matter?

Fal. What’s the matter! there be four of here that have ta’en a thousand pound this morning.

Prince. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Fal. Where is it! taken from us it is: hundred upon poor four of us.

Prince. What! a hundred, man?

Fal. I am a rogue, if I were not at half-swo with a dozen of them two hours together, he have escaped by miracle. I am eight tim thrust through the doublet, four through the hose; my buckler cut through and through, my sword hacked like a hand-saw: ecce signum.
ver dealt better since I was a man: all did not do. A plague of all cowards! Let a speak: if they speak more or less than they are villains and the sons of darkness.

Prince. Speak, sirs; how was it ?

d. We four set upon some dozen,— 190
d. Sixteen, at least, my lord.
d. And bound them.
do. No, no, they were not bound.
d. You rogue, they were bound, every man then; or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.
d. As we were sharing, some six or seven men set upon us,—
d. And unbound the rest, and then come in other.

Prince. What! fought you with them all? 200
d. All! I know not what you call all; but fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunc:
dish: if there were not two or three and upon poor old Jack, then am I no twed creature.

Prince. Pray God you have not murdered some hem.
d. Nay, that's past praying for: I have pered two of them: two I am sure I have, two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee,
Hal, if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face,
me horse. Thou knowest my old ward;
I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four nies in buckram let drive at me,—

Prince. What! four? thou said'st but two now.
d. Four, Hal; I told thee four.
ons. Ay, ay, he said four.
d. These four came all a-front, and mainly ist at me. I made me no more ado but took their seven points in my target, thus. 211

Prince. Seven! why, there were but four even
.
d. In buckram!
ons. Ay, four, in buckram suits.
d. Seven, by these hills, or I am a villain

Prince. Prithée, let him alone; we shall have anon.
d. Dost thou hear me, Hal? 220

Prince. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.
d. Do so, for it is worth the listening to.
in buckram that I told thee of,— Prince. So, two more already.
d. Their points being broken,—
ons. Down fell their hose.
d. Began to give me ground; but I followed close, came in foot and hand, and with a night seven of the eleven I paid.

Prince. O monstrous! eleven buckram men wn out of two.
d. But, as the devil would have it, three begotten knaves in Kendal-green came at my k and let drive at me: it was so dark, that thou couldst not see thy hand.

Prince. These lies are like their father ets them; gross as a mountain, open, palpable,
y, thou clay-brained guts, thou knotty-pated,
thou whoreson, obscene, greasy tallow-

Fal. What! art thou mad? art thou mad? is the truth the truth?

Prince. Why, how couldst thou know these in Kendal-green, when it was so dark thou could'st not see thy hand? come, tell us thy reason: what sayest thou to this?

Pois. Come, your reason, Jack, your reason.

Fal. What! upon compulsion? 'Zounds! an
I were at the strappado, or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! if reasons were as plenty as blackberries I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I. 253

Prince. I'll be no longer guilty of this sin:
this sanguine coward, this bed-presser, this horseback-breaker, this huge hulk of flesh;—

Fal. 'Sblood, you starveling, you elf-skin, you dried neat's-tongue, you bull's-pizzle, you stock-fish! O! for breath to utter what is like thee;
you tailor's-yard, you sheath, you bow-case, you vile standing tuck;—

Prince. Well, breathe awhile, and then to it again; and when thou hast tired thyself in base comparisons, hear me speak but this.

Pois. Mark, Jack.

Prince. We two saw you four set on four and bound them, and were masters of their wealth.
Mark now, how a plain tale shall put you down.
Then did we two set on you four, and, with a word, out-faced you from your prize, and have it;
yea, and can show it you here in the house.
And, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and still ran and roared, as ever I heard bull-calf. What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say it was in fight! What trick, what device, what starting-hole canst thou now find out to hide thee from this open and apparent shame?

Pois. Come, let's hear, Jack; what trick hast thou now?

Fal. By the Lord, I knew ye as well as he that made ye. Why, hear ye, my masters: was it for me to kill the heir apparent? should I turn upon the true prince? why, thou knowest I am as valiant as Hercules; but beware instinct: the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter, I was a coward on instinct. I shall think the better of myself and thee during my life; I for a valiant lion, and thou for a true prince. But, by the Lord, ladies, I am glad you have the money. Hostess, clap to the doors;
watch to-night, pray to-morrow. Gallants, ladies, boys, hearts of gold, all the titles of good fellowship come to you! What shall we be merry?
shall we have a play extemore?

Prince. Content; and the argument shall be thy running away.

Fal. Ah! no more of that, Hal, an thou lovest me.

Enter Mistress QUICKLY.

Quick. O Jesu! My lord the prince! 310

Prince. How now, my lady the hostess! what sayest thou to me?

Quick. Marry, my lord, there is a nobleman of the court at door would speak with you: he says he comes from your father.

Prince. Give him as much as will make him a royal man, and send him back again to my mother.

Fal. What manner of man is he?

Quick. An old man.

Fal. What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight? Shall I give him his answer?
Prince. Prithée, do, Jack.

Fal. Faith, and I'll send him packing. Exit.

Prince. Now, sirs: by 'r lady, you fought fair; so did you, Peto; so did you, Bardolph: you are lions too, you ran away upon instinct, you will not touch the true prince, no; fie!

Bard. Faith, I ran when I saw others run.

Prince. Faith, tell me now in earnest, how came Falstaff's sword so hacked?

Peto. Why, he hacked it with his dagger, and said he would swear truth out of England but he would make you believe it was done in fight, and persuaded us to do the like.

Bard. Yea, and to tickle our noses with spear-grass to make them bleed, and then to beslubber our garments with it and swear it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this seven years before; I blushed to hear his monstrous devices.

Prince. O villain! thou stolest a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the manner, and ever since thou hast blushed extempore. Thou hast fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou rattest away. What instinct hadst thou for it?

Bard. My lord, do you see these meteors? do you behold these exhalations?

Prince. I do.

Bard. What think you they portend?

Prince. No, if rightly taken, halter.

Re-enter Falstaff.

Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone. How now, my sweet creature of bombast! How long is 't ago, Jack, since thou sawest thine own knee?

Fal. My own knee! when I was about thy years, Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the waist; I could have crept into any alderman's thumb-ring. A plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder. There's villainous news abroad: here was Sir John Bray from your father: you must to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the north, Percy, and he of Wales, that gave Amaimon the bastinado and made Lucifer cuckold, and swore the devil his true liegeman upon the cross of a Welsh hook—what a plague call you him?

Poin. O! Glendower.

Fal. Owen, Owen; the same; and his son-in-law Mortimer, and old Northumberland; and that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs o' horseback up a hill perpendicular.

Prince. He that rides at high speed and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying.

Fal. You have hit it.

Prince. So did he never the sparrow.

Fal. Well, that rascal hath good mettle in him; he will not run.

Prince. Why, what a rascal art thou then, to praise him so for running?

Fal. O' horseback, ye cuckoo! but afoot he will not budge a foot.

Prince. Yes, Jack, upon instinct.

Fal. I grant ye, upon instinct. Well, he is there too, and one Mortlake, and a thousand blue-caps more. Worcester is stolen away tonight; thy father's beard is turned white with the news: you may buy land now as cheap as stinking mackerel.

Prince. Why then, it is like, if there come hot June and this civil buffeting hold, we shall buy maidensheads as they buy hob-nails, by hundreds.

Fal. By the mass, lad, thou sayest true; I like we shall have good trading that way, tell me, Hal, art thou not horribly afeard? art being heir apparent, could the world pick out three such enemies again as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glower? Art thou not horribly afraid? doth thy blood thrill at it?

Prince. Not a whit, i' faith; I lack some thy instinct.

Fal. Well, thou wilt be horribly chid to-morrow when thou comest to thy father: if thou list me, practise an answer.

Prince. Do thou stand for my father, examine me upon the particulars of my life.

Fal. Shall I? content: this chair shall be state, this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown.

Prince. Thy state is taken for a joint-stock thy golden sceptre for a leaden dagger, and a precious rich crown for a pitiful bald crown.

Fal. Well, an the fire of grace be not quenched out of thee, now shalt thou be moved. Give me a cup of sack to make mine eyes look red, that may be thought I have wept; for I must speak passion, and I will do it in King Cambyses' style.

Prince. Well, here is my leg.

Fal. And here is my speech. Stand as a nobleman.

Quick. O Jesu! this is excellent sport, I' faith.

Fal. Weep not, sweet queen, for trickling to are vain.

Quick. O, the father! how he holds his con tenance.

Fal. For God's sake, lords, convey my trist queen, For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes.

Quick. O Jesu! he doth it as like one of the harlotry players as ever I see.

Fal. Peace, good pint-pot! peace, good tickle brain! Harry, I do not only marvel where thy spendest thy time, but also how thou art acco cpanied: for though the camomile, the more it trodden on the faster it grows, yet youth, more it is wasted the sooner it wears. That art my son, I have partly thy mother's way, partly my own opinion; but chiefly a villan-trick of thine eye and a foolish hanging of nether lip, that doth warrant me. If then be son to me, here lies the point; why, be son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall a blessed sun of heaven prove a michel and blackberries? a question not to be asked. Sir, son of England prove a thief and purses? a question to be asked. There is a thing. Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and I know to many in our land by the name of pit this pitch, as ancient writers do report, do defile; so doth the company thou keepest; I, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink and tears, not in pleasure but in passion, not words only, but in woes also. And yet there a virtuous man whom I have often noted in the company, but I know not his name.
Prince. What manner of man, an it like your esty?

A. A goodly portly man, i' faith, and a corant; of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and lost noble carriage; and, as I think, his age so fifty, or, by 'r lady, inclining to three-score; and now I remember me, his name is staff: if that man should be lewdly given, deceiveth me; for, Harry, I see virtue in his ks. If then the tree may be known by the at, as the fruit by the tree, then, peremptorily speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff: him with, the rest banish. And tell me now, a naughty varlet, tell me, how hast thou n this month?

Prince. Dost thou speak like a king? Do ub stand for me, and I'll play my father.

A. Depose me! if thou dost it half so gravely, majestically, both in word and matter, hang up by the heels for a rabbit-sucker or a ulter's hare.

Prince. Well, here I am set.

A. And here I stand. Judge, my masters.

Prince. Now, Harry! whence come you?

A. My noble lord, from Eastcheap.

Prince. The complaints I hear of thee are avous.

A. 'Sblood, my lord, they are false: nay, I tickle ye for a young prince, i' faith.

Prince. Swarest thou, ungracious boy! hence-neth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently rid away from grace: there is a devil haunts e in the likeness of an old fat man; a tun of i's thy companion. Why dost thou converse h that trunk of humors, that bolting-hutch beastliness, that swoln barrel of dropseys, that ye' bombard of sack, that stuffed cloak-bag guts, that roasted Mamingtree ox with the iding in his belly, that reverend vice, that y infamy, that father ruffian, that vanity in s. Wherein is he good but to taste sack? drink it! wherein neat and cleanly but to ve a capon and eat it? wherein cunning but craft? wherein crafty but in villany? wherein amous but in all things? wherein worthy but nothing?

A. I would your grace would take me u: whom means your grace?

Prince. That villainous abominable misleader youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded tan.

A. My lord, the man I know.

Prince. I know thou dost.

A. But to say I know more harm in him an in myself were to say more than I know. Fat he is old, the more the pitty, his white is do witness it: but that he is, saving your verence, a whoremaster, that I utterly deny. sack and sugar be a fault, God help the cocked! If to be old and merry be a sin, then my an old host that I know is damned: if to fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh'slean kine be to be loved. No, my good lord; banish Peto, nish Bardolph, banish Poins; but for sweet sh Falstaff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack ustaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and therefore revaliant, being, as he is, old Jack Falstaff, unh not him thy Harry's company, banish im thy Harry's company: banish plump ack, and banish all the world.

Prince. I do, I will. A knocking heard.

Exeunt Mistress Quickly, Francis, and Bardolph.

Re-enter Bardolph, running.

Bard. O! my lord, my lord, the sheriff with a most monstrous watch is at the door.

A. Out, ye rogue! Play out the play: I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff.

Re-enter Mistress Quickly.

Quick. O Jesu! my lord, my lord!

Prince. Heigh, heigh! the devil rides upon a fiddle-stick: what's the matter?

Quick. The sheriff and all the watch are at the door: they are come to search the house. Shall I let them in?

A. Dost thou hear, Hal! never call a true piece of gold a counterfeit: thou art essentially mad without seeming so.

Prince. And thou a natural coward without instinct.

A. I deny thy major. If you will deny the sheriff, so; if not, let him enter: if I become not a cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up! I hope I shall as soon be strangled with a halter as another.

Prince. Go, hide thee behind the arras: the rest walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true face and good conscience.

A. Both which I have had; but their date is out, and therefore I'll hide me.

Prince. Call in the sheriff.

Exeunt all but the Prince and Peto.

Enter Sheriff and Carrier.

Now, Master sheriff, what's your will with me?

Sher. First, pardon me, my lord. A hue and cry

Hath follow'd certain men unto this house.

Prince. What men?

Sher. One of them is well known, my gracious lord;

A gross fat man.

Car. As fat as butter.

Prince. The man, I do assure you, is not here, For I myself at this time have employ'd him. And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee, That I will, by to-morrow dinner-time, Send him to answer thee, or any man, For any thing he shall be charg'd withal: And so let me entreat you leave the house.

Sher. I will, my lord. There are two gentlemen Have in this robbery lost three hundred marks.

Prince. It may be so: if he have robb'd these men, He shall be answerable; and so farewell.

Sher. Good night, my noble lord.

Prince. I think it is good morrow, is it not?

Sher. Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock.

Exeunt Sheriff and Carrier.

Prince. This oily rascal is known as well as Paul's. Go, call him forth.

Peto. Falstaff! Fast asleep behind the arras, and snorting like a horse.

Prince. Hark, how hard he fetches breath. Search his pockets.

He searcheth his pockets, and findeth certain papers.

What hast thou found?
To tell you once again that at my birth

The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,

The goats ran from the mountains, and the herds

Were strangely clamorous to the frightened field.

These signs have mark'd me extraordinary;

And all the courses of my life do show

I am not in the roll of common men.

Where is he living, clipp'd in with the sea

That chides the banks of England, Scotland, Wales,

Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me?

And bring him out that is but woman's son

Can trace me in the tedious ways of art

And hold mepace in deep experiments.

Hot. I think there's no man speaks better

Welsh.

I'll to dinner.

Mort. Peace, cousin Percy! you will make it mad.

Glend. I can call spirits from the vasty dee

Hot. Why, so can I, or so can any man;

But will they come when you do call for them?

Glend. Why, I can teach you, cousin, command

The devil.

Hot. And I can teach thee, cox, to shame the devil

By telling truth: tell truth and shame the devil

If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither.

And I'll be sworn I have power to shame him

hence.

O! while you live, tell truth and shame the devil

Mort. Come, come;

No more of this unpardonable chat.

Glend. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke

made head

Against my power; thrice from the banks of W

And sandy-bottom'd Severn have I sent him

Bootsless home and weather-beaten back.

Hot. Home without boots, and in foul weather too.

How 'scapes he agues, in the devil's name?

Glend. Come, here's the map: shall we divi-

our right

According to our threelfold order ta'en?

Mort. The archacon hath divided it

Into three limits very equally.

England, from Trent and Severn hitherto,

By south and east, is to my part assign'd:

All westward, Wales beyond the Severn shore

And all the fertile land within that bound,

To Owen Glendower: and, deare cox, to you

The remnant northward, lying off from Trent.

And our indentures tripartite are drawn,

Which being sealed interchangeably,

A business that this night may execute,

To-morrow, cousin Percy, you and I

And my good Lord of Worcester will set fort

To meet your father and the Scottish power,

As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury.

My father Glendower is not ready yet,

Nor shall we need his help these fourteen day

Within that space you may have drawn togeth

Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gent

men.

Glend. A shorter time shall send me to ye
lords;

And in my conduct shall your ladies come,

From whom you now must steal and take a leave;

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Bangor. A Room in the Archdeacon's House.

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, Mortimer, and Glendower.

Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure,

And our induction full of prosperous hope.

Hot. Lord Mortimer, and cousin Glendower,

Will you sit down?

And uncle Worcester: a plague upon it!

I have forgot the map.

Glend. No, here it is.

Sit, cousin Percy; sit, good cousin Hotspur;

For by that name as oft as Lancaster

Doth speak of you, his cheek looks pale and with

A rising sigh he wisheth you in heaven.

Hot. And you in hell, as oft as he hears Owen

Glendower spoke of.

Glend. I cannot blame him: at my nativity

The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,

Of burning cressets; and at my birth

The frame and huge foundation of the earth

Shak'd like a coward.

Hot. Why, so it would have done at the same season, if your mother's cat had but kitten'd, though yourself had never been born.

Glend. I say the earth did shake when I was born.

Hot. And I say the earth was not of my mind,

If you suppose as fearing you it shook.

Glend. The heavens were all on fire, the earth did tremble.

Hot. O! then the earth shook to see the heavens on fire,

And not in fear of your nativity.

Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth

In strange eruptions; oft the teeming earth

Is with a kind of colic pinch'd and vex'd

By the imprisoning of unruly wind

Within her womb; which, for enlargement

striving,

Shakes the old beldam earth, and topples down

Steeple and moss-grown towers. At your birth

Our grandam earth, having this distemperate,

In passion shook.

Glend. Cousin, of many men

I do not bear these crossings. Give me leave r there will be a world of water shed on the parting of your wives and you.

Now. Methinks my moiety, north from Burton here.

quantity equals not one of yours:

how this river comes mankin' in,
d cuts me from the best of all my land.

I have the current in this place damm'd up,
d here the smug and silver Trent shall run a new channel, fair and even:
shall not wind with such a deep indent,
rob me of so rich a bottom here.

Not! wind! it shall, it must; you see it doth.

Yea, but

rk how he bears his course, and runs me up
th like advantage on the other side; 110
Iding the opposed continent as much on the other side it takes from you.

Yea, but a little charge will trench him here,
d on this north side win this cape of land;
d then he runs straight and even.

I'll have it so; a little charge will do it.

I will not have it alter'd.

Will not you?

Why, that will I.

Let me not understand you then:

I can speak English, lord, as well as you,
I was train'd up in the English court;
here, being but young, I framed to the harp
an English ditty lovely well, gave the tongue a helpful ornament;
that was never seen in you.

Marry, and I'm glad of it with all my heart.

rather be a kitten, and cry mew
in one of these same metre ballad-mongers;
rather hear a brazen canstic turn'd, 120
a dry wheel grate on the axle-tree;
that would set my teeth nothing on edge,
thing so much as mincing poetry:
like the lord'd gait of a sheiling nag.

Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.

I do not care: I'll give thirce so much land any well-deserving friend;
t in the way of bargain, mark ye me,
cavil on the ninth part of a hair.
et the indentures drawn? shall we be gone?
Glad. The moon shines fair, you may away
by night:
I haste the writer and withal
oak with your wives of your departure hence:
afraid my daughter will run mad,
much she doteth on her Mortimer.

Enter Mort. Fir, cousin Percy! how you cross my father!

I cannot choose: sometime he angers me ith telling me of the moldwarp and the ant,
the dreamer Merlin and his prophecies,
of a dragon, and a finless fish,
clip-wing'd griffin, and a monilen raven, couching lion, and a ramping cat,
such a deal of skimble-skamble stuff

As puts me from my faith. I tell you what;
He led me last night at least nine hours
In reckoning up the several devils' names:
That were his lackeys: I cried 'hum,' and 'well,'
go to,
But mark'd him not a word. O! he's as tedious
As a tired horse, a railing wife;
Worse than a smoky house. I had rather live
With cheese and garlic in a windmill, far,
Than feed on cates and have him talk to me.

In any summer-house in Christendom.

Mort. In faith, he is a worthy gentleman,
Exceedingly well read, and profited
In strange concealments, valiant as a lion
And wondrous affable, and as bountiful
As mines of India. Shall I tell you, cousin?
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbs himself even of his natural scope
When you do cross his humour; faith, he does.
I warrant you, that man is not alive
Might so have tempted him as you have done,
Without the taste of danger and reproof:
But do not use it oft, let me entertain you.

In faith, my lord, you are too wilful-blame;
And since your coming hither have done enough
To put him quite beside his patience.
You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault:
Though sometimes it show greatness, courage,
And that's the dearest grace it renders you,
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage,
Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain:
The least of which haunting a nobleman
Loses men's hearts and leaves behind a stain
Upon the beauty of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of commendation.

Well, I am school'd; good manners be your speed!

Here come our wives, and let us take our leave.

Re-enter GLENDOWER with the Ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly spite that angers me;
My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My daughter weeps; she will not part
with you:
She'll be a soldier too: she'll to the wars.

Mort. Good father, tell her that she and my aunt Percy
Shall follow in your conduct speedily.

GLENDOWER speaks to her in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.

Glend. She is desperate here; a peevish self-willed harlotry, one that no persuasion can do good upon. She speaks to Mortimer in Welsh.

Mort. I understand thy looks: that pretty
Welsh

Which thou dost pour from these swelling heavens
I am too perfect in; and, but for shame,
In such a parley should I answer thee.

She speaks again.

I understand thy kisses and thou wine,
And that's a feeling disputation:
But I will never be a truant, love,
Till I have learn'd thy language; for thy tongue
Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly penn'd,
Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bower,
With ravishing division, to her lute

2 B
Glend. Nay, if you melt, then will she run mad.
She speaks again.

Mort. O! I am ignorance itself in this.

Glend. She bids you on the wanton rushes lay you down
And rest your gentle head upon her lap,
And she will sing the song that pleaseth you,
And on your eyelids crown the god of sleep,
Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness,
Making such difference ‘twixt wake and sleep
As is the difference betwixt day and night.
The hour before the heavenly-harness’d team
Begins his golden progress in the east.

Mort. With all my heart I’ll sit and hear her sing:
By that time will our book, I think, be drawn.

Glend. Do so;
And those musicians that shall play to you
Hang in the air a thousand leagues from hence,
And a straight they shall be here: sit, and attend.

Hot. Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down;
Come, quick, quick, that I may lay my head in thy lap.

Lady P. Go, ye giddy goose. The music plays.

Hot. Now I perceive the devil understands Welsh;
And ‘tis no marvel he is so humorous.
By ‘r lady, he’s a good musician.

Lady P. Then should you be nothing but musical,
For you are altogether governed by honours.
Lie still, ye thief, and hear the lady sing in Welsh.

Hot. I had rather hear Lady, my brach, howl in Irish.

Lady P. Wouldst have thy head broken?

Hot. No.

Lady P. Then be still.

Hot. Neither; ‘tis a woman’s fault.

Lady P. Now God help thee!

Hot. To the Welsh lady’s bed.

Lady P. What’s that?

Hot. Peace! she sings.

A Welsh song sung by Lady Mortimer.

Hot. Come, Kate, I’ll have your song too.

Lady P. Not mine, in good sooth.

Hot. Not yours, ‘in good sooth!’ Heart! you swear like a comfit maker’s wife.
Not you, ‘in good sooth’; and ‘as true as I live’; and ‘as God shall mend me’; and ‘as sure as day’:
And giv’st such sarcastic surety for thy oaths,
As if thou never walk’dst further than Finsbury.
Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art,
A good mouth-filling oath; and leave ‘in sooth,’
And such protest of pepper-gingerbread,
To velvet-guards and Sunday-citizens.
Come, sing.

Lady P. I will not sing.

Hot. ‘Tis the next way to turn tailor or be red-brea-t teacher. An the indentures be drawn,
I’ll away within these two hours; and so come in when ye will.

Glend. Come, come, Lord Mortimer; you are as slow
As hot Lord Percy is on fire to go.

By this our book is drawn; we will but seal,
And then to horse immediately.

Mort. With all my heart.

SCENE II.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, the Prince, and Lords.

K. Hen. Lords, give us leave; the Prince Wales and I Must have some private conference: but near at hand,
For we shall pre-ently have need of you.

Exeunt

I know not whether God will have it so,
For some displeasing service I have done,
That, in his secret doom, out of my blood
He’ll breed revengement and a scourge for mee:
But thou dost in thy passages of life
Make me believe that thou art only mark’d
For the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven
To punish my mistreadings. Tell me else,
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such me,
Attempts,
Such harrow pleasures, rude society,
As thou art match’d withal and grant’d to,
Accompany the greatness of thy blood
And hold their level with thy princely heart.

Prince. So please your majesty, I would I could Quit all offences with as clear excuse
As well as I am doubtful I can purge
Myself of many I am charg’d withal:
Yet such extenuation let me beg,
As, in reproval of many tales devis’d,
Which oft the ear of greatness needest must be,
By smiling pick-thanks and base newsmonger
I may, for some things true, wherein my Hath faulty wander’d and irregular,
Find pardon on my true submission.

K. Hen. God pardon thee! yet let me won’t Harry,
At thy affections, which do hold a wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost,
Which by thy younger brother is supplied
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the court and princes of my blood.
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin’d, and the soul of every man
Prophetically does forethink thy fall.

Had I so lavish of my presence been,
So common-hackney’d in the eyes of men,
So stale and cheap to vulgar company,
Opinion, that did help me to the crown,
Had still kept loyal to possession
And left me in reputeless banishment,
A fellow of no mark nor likelihood.
By being seldom seen, I could not stir
But like a comet I was wonder’d at;
That men would tell their children ‘This is hy
Others would say ‘Where! which is Bolingbroke
And then I stole all courtesy from heaven,
And dress’d myself in such humility
That I did pluck allegiance from men’s heart
Loud shouts and salutations from their mouth.
Even in the presence of the crowned king.
Thus did I keep my person fresh and new;
My presence, like a robe pontifical,
Ner seen but wonder’d at; and so my state
Seldom but symptomatic, showed like a feast,
And won by rareness such solemnity.
The skipping king, he ambled up and down
With shallow jesters and rash bavin wits, on kindled and soon burnt; carded his state,
ingled his royalty with copering fools,
and his great name profaned with their scorls,
and gave his countenance, against his name, laugh at giboys and stand the push every beardless vain comparative;
rew a companion to the common streets,
seoff'd himself to popularity;
at, being daily swallowed by men's eyes, hey surfeited with honey and began loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little ore than a little is by much too much.
when he had occasion to be seen,
e was but as the euckoo in is June,
ard, not regarded; seen, but with such eyes
s, sick and blunted with community, foid no extraordinary gaze,
ch as is bent on sunlike majesty hen it shines seldom in admiring eyes;
rather drows'd and hung their eyelids down, pt in his face, and render'd such aspect cloudy men use to their adversaries, sing with his presence gluttoned, gorg'd, and full,
ad in that very line, Harry, stand'st thou;
or thou hast lost thy princely privilege thile participation: not an eye is awary of thy common sight,
we mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more;
hich now doth that I would not have it do,
ake blind itself with foolish tenderness.
Prince. I shall hereafter, my thirce gracious lord, e more myself.
K. Hen. For all the world then art to this hour was Richard then hen I from France set foot at Ravenspurg nd as I was then is Percy now.
oy, by my sceptre and my soul to boot,
hath more worthy interest to the state an thou the shadow of succession;
of no right, nor colour like to right,
doth fill fields with harness in the realm,
uns head against the lion's armed jaws,
ld, being no more in debt to years than thou, ads ancient lords and reverend bishops on bley battles and to bruising arms.
that never-dying honour hath he got against renowned Douglas! whose high deeds, those hot incursions and great name in arms olds from all soldiers chief majority, nd military title capital,
through all the kingdoms that acknowledge Christ.
brace hath this Hotspur, Mars in swathing clothes,
his infant warrior, in his enterprises
comitied great Douglas; ta'en him once, laraged him and made a friend of him,
fille the mouth of deep defiance up nd shake the peace and safety of our throne.
nd what say you to this! Percy, Northumberland,
he Archbishop's grace of York, Douglas,
Mortimer,
apitulate against us and are up.
at wherefore do I tell these news to thee?
hy, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes,
ich art my near'st and dearest enemy?
hou that art like enough, through vassal fear,
se inclination, and the start of spleen,

To fight against me under Percy's pay
To dog his heels, and court'sy at his frowns,
To show how much thou art degenerate.
Prince. Do not think so; you shall not find it so:
And God forgive them that so much have sway'd
Your majesty's good thoughts away from me!
I will redeem all this on Percy's head,
And in the closing of some glorious day
Be bold to tell you that I am your son;
When I will wear a garment all of blood
And stain my favours in a bloody mask,
Which, wash'd away, shall scour my shame
with it:
And that shall be the day, when'eer it lights,
That this same child of honour and renown,
This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight,
And your unthought-of Harry chance to meet.
For every honour sitting on his helm,
Would they were multitudes, and on my head
My shames redoubled! for the time will come
That I shall make this northern youth exchange
His glorious deeds for my indignities.
Percy is but my factor, good my lord,
To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf;
And I will call him to so strict account
That he shall render every glory up,
Yea, even the slightest worship of his time,
Or I will tear the reckoning from his heart.
This, in the name of God, I promise here:
The which if he be pleas'd I shall perform,
I do beseech your majesty may salve
The long-grown wounds of my intemperance:
If not, the end of life cancels all bands,
And I will die a hundred thousand deaths
Ere break the smallest parcel of this vow.
K. Hen. A hundred thousand rebels die in this:
Thou shalt have charge and sovereign trust herein.

Enter Blunt.
How now, good Blunt! thy looks are full of speed.
Blunt. So hath the business that I come to speak of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word
That Douglas and the English rebels met
The eleventh of this month at Shrewsbury.
A mighty and a fearful head they are;
If promises be kept on every hand,
As ever offer'd foul play in a state.
K. Hen. The Earl of Westmoreland set forth
to-day,
With him my son, Lord John of Lancaster;
For this advertisement is five days old.
On Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set forward;
On Thursday we ourselves will march: our meeting
Is Bridgenorth; and, Harry, you shall march
Through Gloucestershire; by which account,
Our business valued, some twelve days hence
Our general forces at Bridgenorth shall meet.
Our hands are full of business: let's away;
Advantage feeds him fat while men delay.

Scene III.—Lauceop. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern.

Enter Falstaff and Bardolph.
Fal. Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since this last action? do I not bate? do I not
FIRST PART OF KING HENRY IV.

Bard. Sir John, you are so frettful, you cannot live long.

Fal. Why, there is it: come, sing me a bawdy song; make me merry. I was as virtuously given as a gentleman need to be; virtuous enough: swore little; died not above seven times a week; went to a bawdy-house not above once in a quarter—of an hour; paid money that I borrowed three or four times; lived well and in good compass; and now I live out of all order, out of all compass.

Bard. Why, you are so fat, Sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass, out of all reasonable compass, Sir John.

Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my life: thou art our admiral, thou bearest the lantern in the poor, but 'tis in the nose of thee; thou art the Knight of the Burning Lamp.

Bard. Why, Sir John, my face does no harm.

Fal. No, I'll be sworn; I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a Death's-head or a Memento Mori. I never see thy face but I think upon hell-fire and Dives that lived in purple; for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face; my oath should be, 'By this fire, that's God's angel.' But thou art altogether given over, and wert indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou rannest up Gadshill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus or a bull of wildfire, there's no purchase in money. O! thou art a perpetual triumph, an everlasting bonfire-light. Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern: but the sack that thou hast drank me would have bought me lights as good cheap at the dearest Chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time these two-and-thirty years; God reward me for it.

Bard. 'Sblood! I would my face were in your belly.

Fal. God-a-mercy! so should I be sure to be heart-burned.

Enter Mistress Quickly.

How now, Dame Partlet the hen! have you inquired yet who picked my pocket?

Quick. Who, I? No; I defy thee: God's light! I was never called so in mine own house before.

Fal. Go to, I know you well enough.

Quick. No, Sir John; you do not know me.

Sir John: I know you, Sir John: you owe a money, Sir John, and now you pick a quarrel beguile me of it: I bought you a dozen of shillings to your back.

Fal. Dowlaw, filthy dowlaw: I have given the away to bakers' wives, and they have mohlers of them.

Quick. Now, as I am a true woman, holier of eight shillings an ell. You owe money besides, Sir John, for your diet and by-drinking and money lent you, four-and-twenty pound.

Fal. He had his part of it; let him pay.

Quick. He! alas! he is poor; he hath nothing.

Fal. How! poor! look upon his face; wh call you rich? let them coin his nose, let the coin his cheeks, I'll not pay a denier. What will you make a younger of me? shall I not take mine ease in mine inn but I shall have my poek picked? I have lost a seal-ring of my granfather's worth forty mark.

Quick. O Jesus! I have heard the prince to him, I know not how oft, that that ring worth copper.

Fal. How! the prince is a Jack, a sneak-cu 'blood! an he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog, if he would say so.

Enter the Prince and Poins, marching. Fa Staff meets them, playing on his truncheon to a fifi.

How now, lad! is the wind in that door, I' faith must we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate fashion.

Quick. My lord, I pray you, hear me.

Quick. Good my lord, hear me.

Fal. Prithie, let her alone, and list to me.

Prince. What sayest thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep here behin the arras and had my pocket picked: this hou is turned bawdy-house; they pick pockets.

Prince. What didst thou lose, Jack?

Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? three of fo bonds of forty pound apiece, and a seal-ring my grandfather's.

Prince. A trifile; some eight-penny matter.

Quick. So I told him, my lord; and I said heard your grace say so: and, my lord, he spake most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man he is, and said he would cudgel you.

Prince. What! he did not?

Quick. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in stewed pruse; nor no more truth in thee than in a drawn fox; and for womanhood, Ms Marian may be the deputy's wife of the way to thee. Go, you thing, go.

Quick. Say, what thing? what thing?

Fal. What thing? why, a thing to thank God on. I am no thing to thank God on, I went thou shouldst know it; I am an honest man's wife; and, setting thy knighthood aside, th erst a knife to call me so.
ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, and DOUGLAS.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot: if speaking truth
In this fine age were not thought flattery,
Such attribution should the Douglas have,
As not a soldier of this season's stamp.
Should go so general current through the world.
By God, I cannot flatter: do defy
The tongues of soothers; but a braver place
In my heart's love hath no man than yourself.
Nay, task me to my word; approve me, lord.
Doug. Thou art the king of honour:
No man so potent breathes upon the ground
But I will bear him.

Hot. Do so, and 'tis well.

Enter a Messenger, with letters.

What letters hast thou there? I can but thank you.

Mess. These letters come from your father.

Hot. Letters from him! why come he not himself?

Mess. He cannot come, my lord: he's grievous sick.

Hot. 'Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick
In such a justling time? Who leads his power?
Under whose government come they along? 19

Mess. His letters bear his mind, not I, my lord.
Wor. I prithee, tell me, doth he keep his bed?

Mess. He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth;
And at the time of my departure thence
He was much fear'd by his physicians.
Wor. I would the state of time had first been whole
Ere he by sickness had been visited;
His health was never better worth than now.

Prince. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot.

Fal. I would it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O! for a fine thief, of the age of two and-twenty or thereabouts; I am hencely unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these rebels; they offend none but the virtuous: I laud them, I praise them.

Prince. Bardolph!

Bard. My lord?

Prince. Go bear this letter to Lord John of Lancaster,
To my brother John; this to my Lord of Westmoreland.
Go, Poins, to horse, to horse! for thou and I
Have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner-time.
Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple-hall.

At two o'clock in the afternoon:
There shalt thou know thy charge, and there receive
Money and order for their furniture.
The land is burning; Percy stands on high;
And either we or they must lower lie.

Exeunt the Prince, Poins, and Bardolph.

Fal. Rare words! brave world! Hostess, my breakfast; come!

O! I could wish this tavern were my drum.

Exit.
Hot. Sick now! droop now! this sickness doth infect
The very life-blood of our enterprise;
'Tis catching hither, even to our camp.
He writes me here, that inward sickness—
And that his friends by deputation could not
So soon by drawn; nor did he think it meet
To lay so dangerous and dear a trust
On any soul remov'd—but on his own.
Yet doth he give us bold advertisement,
That with our small conjunction we should on,
To see how fortune is dispos'd to us;
For, as he writes, there is no quailing now,
Because the king is certainly possess'd
Of all our purposes. What say you to it?
Wor. Your father's sickness is a main to us.
Hot. A perilous gash, a very limb lopp'd off:
And yet, in faith, 'tis not; his present want
Seems more than we shall find it. Were it good
To set the exact wealth of all our states
All at one cast? to set so rich a main
On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour?
It were not good; for therein should we read
The very bottom and the soul of hope,
The very list, the very utmost bound
Of all our fortunes.

Doug. Faith, and so we should;
Where now remains a sweet reversion:
We may boldly spend upon the hope of what
Is to come in:
A comfort of retirement lives in this.
Hot. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto,
If that the devil and mischance look big
Upon the maidenhead of our affairs.
Wor. But yet, I would your father had been here.

The quality and hair of our attempt
Brooks no division. It will be thought
By some that know not why he is away,
That wisdom, loyalty and mere dislike
Of our proceedings, kept the earl from hence.
And think how such an apprehension
May turn the tide of fearful faction
And breed a kind of question in our cause;
For well you know we of the offering side
Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement,
And stop all sight-holes, every loop from whence
The eye of reason may pry in upon us:
This absence of your father's draws a curtain,
That shows the ignorant a kind of fear
Before not dreamt of.

Hot. You strain too far.
I rather of his absence make this use:
It lends a lustre and more great opinion,
A larger dare to our great enterprise,
Than if the earl were here; for men must think,
If we without his help can make a head
To push against a kingdom, with his help
We shall o'erturn it topsy-turvy down.
Yet all goes well, yet all our joints are whole.
Doug. As heart can think: there is not such a word
Spoke of in Scotland as this term of fear.

Enter Sir Richard Vernon.

Hot. My cousin Vernon! welcome, by my soul.
Ver. Pray God my news be worth a welcome, lord.
Th. Earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong,
Scene III.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, DOUGLAS, and VERNON.

Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.
Wor. It may not be.
Dou. You give him then advantage.
Ver. Not a whit.
Hot. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?
Ver. So do we.
Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful.
Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd: stir not to-night.
Ver. Do not, my lord.
Dou. You do not counsel well:
You speak it out of fear and cold heart.
Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life,
And I dare well maintain it with my life,
If well-respected honour bid me on,
I hold as little counsel with weak fear
As you, my lord, or any Scot that this day lives:
Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle
Which of us fears.

Dou. Yea, or to-night.
Ver. Content.
Hot. To-night, say I.
Ver. Come, come, it may not be. I wonder much,
Being men of such great leading as you are,
That you foresee not what impediments
Drag back our expedition: certain horse
Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up:
Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day;
And now their pride and mettle is asleap,
Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,
That not a horse is half the half of himself.
Hot. So are the horses of the enemy
In general, journey-bated and brought low:
The better part of ours are full of rest.
Wor. The number of the king exceedeth ours:
For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in.

The trumpet sounds a part y.

Enter Sir WALTER BLUNT.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the king,
If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect.
Hot. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt; and would to God
You were of our determination!
Some of us love you well; and even those some Envy your great deservings and good name,
Because you are not of our quality.
But stand against us like an enemy.
Blunt. And God defend but still I should stand so,
So long as out of limit and true rule
You stand against anointed majesty.
But to my charge. The king hath sent to know
The nature of your griefs, and whereupon
You conjure from the breast of civil peace
Such bold hostility, teaching his duteous hand
Audacious cruelty. If that the king
Have any way your good deserts forgot,
Which he confessedeth to be manifold,
He bids you name your griefs; and with all speed
You shall have your desires with interest,
And pardon absolute for yourself and these
Herein misled by your suggestion.

Hot. The king is kind; and well we know
the king
Knows at what time to promise, when to pay.
My father and my uncle and myself
Did give him that same royalty he wears;
And when he was not six-and-twenty strong,
Sick in the world’s regard, wretched and low,
A poor unmindful outlaw sneaking home,
My father gave him welcome to the shore;
And when he heard him swear and vow to God
He came but to be Duke of Lancaster,
To sue his livery and beg his peace,
With tears of innocence and terms of zeal,
My father, in kind heart and pity mov’d,
Swore him assistance and perform’d it too.
Now when the lords and barons of the realm
Perceiv’d Northumberland did lean to him,
The more and less came in with cap and knee;
Met him in boroughs, cities, villages,
Attended him on bridges, stood in lanes,
Laid gifts before him, proffer’d him their oaths,
Gave him their heirs as pages, follow’d him
Even at the heels in golden multitudes.
He presently, as greatness knows itself,
Steps me a little higher than his vow
Made to my father, while his blood was poor,
Upon the naked shore at Ravenspurg;
And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform
Some certain edicts and some strait decrees
That lie too heavy on the commonwealth,
Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep
Over his country’s wrongs; and by this face,
This seeming brow of justice, did he win
The hearts of all that he did angle for;
Proceeded further; cut me off the heads
Of all the favourites that the absent king
In deputation left behind him here,
When he was personal in the Irish war.

Blunt. Tut, I came not to hear this.

Hot. Then to the point.
In short time after, he depos’d the king;
Soon after that, depri’d him of his life;
And in the neck of that, task’d the whole state;
To make that worse, suffer’d his kinsman March—
Who is, if every owner were well plac’d,
Indeed his king—to be engag’d in Wales,
There without ransom to lie forfeited;
Disgrac’d me in my happy victories;
Sought to entrap me by intelligence;
Rated mine uncle from the council-board;
In rage dismiss’d my father from the court;
Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong;
And in conclusion drove us to seek out
This head of safety; and withal to pray
Into his title, the which we find
Too indirect for long continuance.

Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the king?

Hot. Not so, Sir Walter: we’ll withdraw awhile.
Go to the king; and let there be impaw’d
Some surety for a safe return again,
And in the morning early shall my uncle

Bring him our purposes; and so farewell.

Blunt. I would you would accept of gra and love.

Hot. And may be so we shall.

Blunt. Pray God, you d

EXEC.

SCENE IV.—York. A Room in the Archbishop’s Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of York and Sir Michael.

Arch. He, good Sir Michael; bear this seal brief
With winged haste to the lord marshall;
This to my cousin Scroop, and all the rest
To whom they are directed. If you knew How much they do import, you would make has Sir M. My good lord, I guess their tenour.

Arch. Like enough you do.
To-morrow, good Sir Michael, is a day
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Must bend the touch; for, sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly given to understand,
The king with mighty and quick-rais’d pow-
Meets with Lord Harry; and I fear, Sir Micha
What with the sickness of Northumberland,
Whose power was in the first proportion,
And what with Owen Glendower’s absence then
Who with them was a rated snow too,
And comes not in, o’er-rul’d by prophecies
I fear the power of Percy is too weak
To wage an instant trial with the king.

Sir M. Why, my good lord, you need not fear
There is Douglas and Lord Mortimer.

Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.

Sir M. But there is Mordake, Vernon, Lo
Harry Percy,
And there’s my Lord of Worcester, and a host
Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.

Arch. And so there is; but yet the king ha drawn
The special head of all the land together:
The Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster
The noble Westmoreland, and war-like Blunt,
And many more corrivals and dear men
Of estimation and command in arms.

Sir M. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be w oppos’d.

Arch. I hope no less, yet needful ‘tis to fear
And, to prevent the worst, Sir Michael, speed
For if Lord Percy thrive not, ere the king
Dismiss his power, he means to visit us,
For he hath heard of our confederacy,
And ‘tis but wisdom to make strong against him
Therefore make haste. I must go write again
To other friends: and so farewell, Sir Michael.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The King’s Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter King Henry, the Prince, John of Lac caster, Sir Walter Blunt, and Sir Jo Falstaff.

K. Hen. How bloodily the sun begins to pe
Above you busky hill! the day looks pale
At his distemperature.

Prince.

The southern wind
Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.

w now, my Lord of Worcester! 'tis not well at you and I should meet upon such terms to now we meet. You have deceiv'd our trust, and made us off our easy robes of peace, crush our old limbs in ungentle steel: is not well, my lord; this is not well. hat say you to it? will you again unknit is churlish knot of all-abhorred war, move in that obedient orb again here you did give a fair and natural light, be no more an exhal'd meteor, prodigy of fear and a portent broached mischief to the unborn times? Wor. Hear me, my liege. mine own part, I could be well content entertain the lag-end of my life quiet hours; for I do protest, not saw the day of this dislike. K. Hen. You have not sought it! how comes it then? Pld. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it. Prince. Peace, cheat, peace! Wor. It pleas'd your majesty to turn your looks favour from myself and all our house; yet must I remember you, my lord, were the first and dearest of your friends. you my staff of office did I break Richard's time; and posted day and night meet you on the way, and kiss your hand, yet you were in place and in account thing so strong and fortunate as I was myself, my brother, and his son, brought you home and boldly did out-dare 2 dangers of the time. You swore to me, did you swear that oath at Doncaster, did you nothing purpose 'gainst the state, claim no further than your new-fall'n right, seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster. this we swore our aid: but in short space mind'd down fortune showering on your head, such a flood of greatness fell on you, but with our help, what with the absent king, that with the injuries of a wanton time, seeming sufferances that you had borne, the contrarious winds that held the king long in his unlucky Irish wars, at all in England did repulse him dead: doth this swarm of fair advantages took occasion to be quickly woo'd glide the general sway into your hand; your oath to us at Doncaster; being fed by as you used us so that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird, set the sparrow: did oppress our nest, new by our feeding to so great a bulk even our love durst not come near your sight or fear of swallowing; but with nimble wing were enforc'd, for safety sake, to fly of your sight and raise this present head; hereby we stand opposed by such means you yourself have forg'd against yourself unkind usage, dangerous countenance, And violation of all faith and troth
Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.

K. Hen. These things indeed you have articulately, proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches, To face the garment of rebellion With some fine colour that may please the eye Of fickle changelings and poor discontent, Which gape and rub the elbow at the news Of hurlyburly innovation:
And never yet did insurrection want Such water-colours to impaint his cause; Nor moody beggars, starving for a time Of pell-mell havoc and confusion.

Prince. In both our armies there is many a soul Shall pay full dearly for this encounter, If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew, The Prince of Wales doth join with all the world In praise of Henry Percy: by my hopes, This present enterprise set off his head, I do not think a braver gentleman, More active-valiant or more valorant-young, More daring or more bold, is now alive To grace this latter age with noble deeds. For my part, I may speak it to my shame, I have a true ant been to chivalry; And so I hear he doth account me too; Yet this before my father's majesty— I am content that he shall take the odds Of his great name and estimation, And will, to save the blood on either side, Try fortune with him in a single fight.

K. Hen. And, Prince of Wales, so care we venture thee, Albeit considerations infinite Do make against it. No, good Worcester, no, We love our people well; even those we love That are misled upon your cousin's part; And, will they take the offer of our grace, Both he and they and you, yea, every man Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his. So tell your cousin, and bring me word What he will do; but if he will not yield, Rebuke and dreadful correction wait on us, And they shall do their office. So, be gone: We will not now be troubled with reply; We offer fair, take it advisedly.

Exeunt WORCESTER and VERNON.

Prince. It will not be accepted, on my life. The Douglas and the Hotspur both together Are confident against the world in arms. K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge;
For, on their answer, will we set on them; And God befriend us, as our cause is just!

Exeunt King HENRY, BLUNT, and JOHN OF LANCaster.

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and bestride me, so; 'tis a point of friendship. Prince. Nothing, but a colossus can do thee that friendship. Say thy prayers, and farewell. Fal. I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all well. Prince. Why, thou owest God a death. Exit.

Fal. 'Tis not due yet: I would be loath to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me? Well, 'tis no matter; honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour pricks me off when I come on? how then? Can honour set to a leg? No. Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound? No. Honour hath no skill in surgery then? No. What is honour? A word. What is that word honour? Air. A trim reckoning! Who hath it? He that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No. Is it sensible then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it. Therefore I'll none of it. Honour is a mere scutcheon; and so ends my catechism. Exit.

SCENE II.—The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter Worcester and Vernon.

Wor. O! no, my nephew must not know, Sir Richard,
The liberal kind offer of the king.

Ver. 'Twere best he did.

Wor. Then are we all undone.

It is not possible, it cannot be,
The king should keep his word in loving us;
He will suspect us still, and find a time
To punish this offence in other faults:
Suspicion all our lives shall be stuck full of eyes;
For treason is but trusted like the fox,
Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up,
Will have a wild trick of his ancestors.

Look how we can, or sad or merrily,
Interpretation will misconjurate our looks,
And we shall feed like oxen at a stall,
The better cherish'd, still the nearer death.
My nephew's trespass may be well forgot,
It hath the excuse of youth and heat of blood;
And an adopted name of privilege,
A hare-brain'd Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen.
All his offences live upon my head
And on his father's: we did train him on;
And, his corruption being taken from us,
We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all.
Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know
In any case the offer of the king.

Ver. Deliver what you will, I'll say 'tis so.
Here comes your cousin.

Enter Hotspur and Douglas; Officers and Soldiers behind.

Hot. My uncle is return'd: deliver up
My Lord of Westmoreland. Uncle, what news?

Wor. The king will bid you battle presently.

Doug. Defy him by the Lord of Westmoreland.

Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him so.

Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly.

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the king.

Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid!

Wor. I told him gently of our grievances,
Of his oath-breaking: which he mended thus,
By now forswareing that he is for-worn:
He calls us rebels, traitors; and will scourge
With haughty arms this hateful name in us.

Re-enter Douglas.

Doug. Arm, gentlemen! to arms! for I have thrown
A brave defiance in King Henry's teeth,
And Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did bear it;
Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.

Wor. The Prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the king,
And nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hot. O! would the quarrel lay upon our heads,

An I that no man might draw short breath to-d.

But I and Harry Mounmouth. Tell me, tell me
How show'd his tasking? thou didst it in contempt?

Ver. No, by my soul; I never in my life
Did hear a challenge urg'd more mode-ly,
Unless a brother should a brother dare
To gentle exercise and proof of arms.
He gave you all the duties of a man,
Trimm'd up your praises with a princely tongue
Spoke your deservings like a chronicle,
Making you ever better than his praise
By still dispraising praise valu'd with you;
And, which became him like a prince indeed,
He made a blushing cital of himself,
And chid his truant youth with such a grace
As if he master'd there a double spirit
Of teaching and of learning instantly,

There did he panse. But I'll tell the wor.
If he outlive the envy of this day,
England did never owe so sweet a hope,
So much misconjur'd in his wantonness.

Hot. Cousin, I think thou art enamour'd
Upon his follies: never did I hear
Of any prince so wild a libertine.
But be he as he will, yet once ere night
I will embrace him with a soldier's arm,
That he shall shrink under my courtesy.
Arm, arm with speed! and, fellows, soldier friends,
Better consider what you have to do,
Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue,
Can lift your blood up with persuasion.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, here are letters for you.

Hot. I cannot read them now.

O gentlemen! the time of life is short;
To spend that shortness basely were too long:
If life did ride upon a dial's point,
Still ending at the arrival of an hour.

An if we live, we live to tread on kings;
If die, brave death, when princes die with us.
Now, for our consciences, the arms are fair,
When the intent of bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My lord, prepare; the king comes apace.

Hot. I thank him that he cuts me from my ta
For I profess not talking. Only this,—
Let each man do his best: and here draw I
A sword, whose temper I intend to stain
With the best blood that I can meet withal.
In the adventure of this pleasant day.

Now, Esperance! Percy! and set on,
Sound all the lofty instruments of war,
And by that music let us all embrace;
For, heaven to earth, some of us never shall
A second time do such a courtesy.

The trumpets sound. They embrace, and exit.

SCENE III.—Between the Camps.

Excursions, and Parties fighting. Alarum to

The battle. Then enter DOUGLAS and Sir WALT BLUNT, meeting.

Blunt. What is thy name, that in the battle thus Thou crossest me? what honour dost thou se
Upon my head?
Prince. What! 'tis a time to jest and daily now! Throws it at him, and exit.
Fal. Well, if Percy be alive, I'll pierce him. If he do come in my way, so: if he do not, if I come in his willingly, let him make a carbondole of me. I like not such grinning honour as Sir Walter hath: give me life; which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlooked for, and there's an end. Exit. 64

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter King Henry, the Prince, John of Lancaster, and Westmoreland.

K. Hen. I prithee, Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleed'st too much.

Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him. Lane. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.

Prince. I beseech your majesty, make up, lest your retirement do amaze your friends. K. Hen. I will do so.

My Lord of Westmoreland, lead him to his tent. West. Come, my lord, I'll lead you to your tent.

Prince. Lead me, my lord! I do not need your help:

And God forbid a shallow scratch should drive
The Prince of Wales from such a field as this,
Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on,
And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!

Lane. We breathe too long: come, cousin Westmoreland,
Our duty this way lies: for God's sake, come.

Exeunt John of Lancaster and Westmoreland.

Prince. By God, thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster;
I did not think thee lord of such a spirit:
Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John;
But now, I do respect thee as my soul. 20
K. Hen. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point
With lustier maintenance than I did look for
Of such an ungrown warrior.

Prince. O! this boy
Lends mettle to us all.

Alarums. Enter Douglas.

Dougl. Another king! they grow like Hydra's heads:
I am the Douglas, fatal to all those
That wear those colours on them: what art thou,
That counterfeit'st the person of a king?

K. Hen. The king himself; who, Douglas, grieves at heart
So many of his shadows thou hast met
And not the very king. I have two boys
Seek Percy and thyself about the field;
But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
I will assay thee; so defend thyself.

Dougl. I fear thou art another counterfeit;
And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like a king:
But mine I am sure thou art, who'er thou be;
And thus I win thee.

They fight. King Henry being in danger,
Re-enter the Prince.

Prince. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like

Never to hold it up again! the spirits
Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt, are in my arms:
It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee, Who never promiseth but he means to pay. They fight: Douglas flies.

Cheerly, my lord: how fares your grace!
Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent, And so hath Clifton: I'll to Clifton straight.

K. Hen. Stay, and breathe awhile. Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion, And shoul'dst mak'st, some tender of my life. In this I fear rescue thou hast brought to me. 99

Prince. O God! they did me: too much injury That ever said I hearken'd for your death. If it were so, I might have let alone The insulting hand of Douglas over you; Which would have been as speedy in your end As all the poisonous potions in the world, And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son. K. Hen. Make up to Clifton: I'll to Sir Nicholas Gawsey. Exit.

Enter Hotspur.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth. Prince. Thou speakest as if I would deny my name. 60

Hot. My name is Harry Percy. Prince. Why, then I see A very valiant rebel of that name. I am the Prince of Wales; and think not, Percy, To share with me in glory any more: Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere; Nor can one England brook a double reign, Of Harry Percy and the Prince of Wales. Hot. Nor shall it, Harry; for the hour is come To end the one of us; and would to God Thy name in arms was now as great as mine! 70

Prince. I'll make it greater ere I part from thee; And all the budding honours on thy crest I'll crop, to make a garland for my head. Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities. They fight.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Well said, Hal! to it, Hal! Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you.

Re-enter Douglas; he fights with Falstaff, who falls down as if he were dead, and exit Douglas. Hotspur is wounded, and falls.

Hot. O Harry! thou hast robb'd me of my youth. I better brook the loss of brittle life Than those proud titles thou hast won of me; They wound my thoughts worse than thy sword my flesh: 89 But thought's the slave of life, and life time's fool; And time, that takes survey of all the world, Must have a stop. O! I could prophesy, But that the earthy and cold hand of death Lies on my tongue. No, Percy, thou art dust, And food for— Dies.

Prince. For worms, brave Percy. Fare thee well, great heart! Ill-weav'd ambition, how much art thou shrunk! When that this body did contain a spirit, A kingdom for it was too small a bound; 99 But now two paces of the vilest earth Is room enough: this earth, that bears thee dead, Bears not alive so stout a gentleman. If thou wert sensible of courtesy, I should not make so dear a show of zeal: But let my favours hide thy mangled face, And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself For doing these fair rites of tenderness. Adieu! and take thy praise with thee to heaven Thy ignomy sleep with thee in the grave, But not remember'd in thy epitaph! He spies Falstaff on the ground. What! old acquaintance! could not all this Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell! I could have better spar'd a better man. O! I should have a heavy mis-s of thee If I were much in love with vanity. Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day, Though many dearer, in this bloody fray. Embowell'd wilt I see thee by and by: Till then in blood by noble Percy lie. 110

Fal. Rising. Embowelled! if thou enbo to-day, I'll give you leave to powder me: eat me too to-morrow. 'Blood!' twas time counterfeit, or that hot termagant Scot I paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit! I lie am no counterfeit: to die is to be a counterfeit, for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who is not the life of a man; but to counterfeit dy'd when a man thereby liveth, is to be no count feit, but the true and perfect image of life inde The better part of valour is discretion; in which better part I have saved my life. 'Zounds, I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy though be dead. How if he should counterfeit too rise? By my faith I am afraid he would proc the better counterfeit. Therefore I'll make it sure; yea, and I'll swear I killed him. W may not he rise as well as I? Nothing confi me but eyes, and nobody sees me:—thereof sirrah, Stabbing him with a new wound in thy thigh come you aile with me. He takes Hotspur on his back.

Re-enter the Prince and John of Lancaster

Prince. Come, brother John; full bravely hast thou flesh'd.

Thy maiden sword.

Lanc. But, soft! whom have we he Did you not tell me this fat man was dead? Prince. I did; I saw him dead, Breathless and bleeding on the ground. Art thou alive? or is it fantasy That plays upon our eyesight? I prithee, spee We will not trust our eyes without our ears: Thou art not what thou seem'st.

Fal. No, that's certain; I am not a dun man: but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am Jack. There is Percy: Throwing down the blade If your father will do me any honour, so; if I let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to either earl or duke, I can assure you. Prince. Why, Percy I killed myself, and so thee dead.

Fal. Didst thou? Lord, Lord! how this world is given to lying. I grant you I was down a bit out of breath, and so was he; but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock. If I may be believed, so; if not, let them that should reward valour bear the upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my word I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the w
If I did, bring your luggage nobly on your back: my part, if a lie may do thee grace, did it with the happiest terms I have.

_A retreat is sounded._

Trumpet sounds retreat; the day is ours. Let us to the highest of the field, what friends are living, who are dead.

_Exit the Prince and John of Lancaster._

I'll follow, as they say, for reward. He rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow, I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do.

过滤०

_SENE IV._—Another Part of the Field._

_trumpets sound._ Enter King HENRY, the Prince, JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND, and Others, with WORCESTER and VERNON, prisoners.

_Hen._ Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke. Sirred Worcester! did we not send grace, and terms of love to all of you? would'st thou turn our offers contrary? use the tenor of thy kinsman's trust? e knights upon our party slain to-day, the earl and many a creature else been alive this hour, a Christian thou hast truly borne victour armies true intelligence.

or. What I have done my safety urg'd me to; I embrace this fortune patiently, not to be avoided it falls on me.

_Exit._

_K. Hen._ Bear Worcester to the death and Vernon too: Other offenders we will pause upon.

_Exeunt Worcester and Vernon, guarded._

How goes the field?

_Prince._ The noble Scot, Lord Douglas, when he saw The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him, The noble Percy slain, and all his men Upon the foot of fear, fled with the rest: And falling from a hill he was so bruised That the pursuers took him. At my tent The Douglas is, and I beseech your grace I may dispose of him.

_K. Hen._ With all my heart.

_Prince._ Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you This honourable bounty shall belong, Go to the Douglas, and deliver him Up to his pleasure, ransomless, and free: His valour shown upon our crests to-day Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds, Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

_Ianc._ I thank your grace for this high courtesy, Which I shall give away immediately.

_K. Hen._ Then this remains, that we divide our power. You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland Towards York shall bend you, with your dearest speed, To meet Northumberland and the prelate Scroop, Who, as we hear, are busily in arms: Myself and you, son Harry, will towards Wales, To fight with Glendower and the Earl of March. Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway, Meeting the check of such another day: And since this business so fair is done, Let us not leave till all our own be won.

_Exeunt._
THE SECOND PART OF KING HENRY THE FOURTH.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

RUMOUR, the Presenter.
KING HENRY the Fourth.
HENRY, Prince of Wales, afterwards
King Henry the Fifth, his Son.
THOMAS, Duke of Clarence, John of Lancaster,
Humphrey of Gloucester, Earl of Warwick,
Earl of Westmoreland, Earl of Surrey,
Gower, Harcourt, Blunt,
Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench,
A Servant of the Chief Justice.
EARL OF NORTHUMBERLAND,
SCROOP, Archbishop of York, of the King's party.
LORD MOYRBAY, Lords and Attendants; Officers, Soldiers, Messenger, Porter, Drawers, Beadles, Grooms, etc,
A Dancer Speaker of the Epilogue.

INDUCTION.

Warkworth. Before Northumberland's Castle.

Enter Rumour, painted full of tongues.

Open your ears; for which of you will stop
The vent of hearing when loud Rumour speaks?
I, from the orient to the drooping west,
Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold
The acts commencèd on this ball of earth:
Upon my tongues continual slanders ride,
The which in every language I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of men with false reports.
I speak of peace, while covert enmity
Under the smile of safety wounds the world:
And who but Rumour, who but only I,
Make fearful musters and preparèd defence,
Whiles the big year, swollen with some other grief,
Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war,
And no such matter? Rumour is a pipe
Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures,
And of so easy and so plain a stop
That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,
The still-discordant wavering multitude,
Can play upon it. But what need I thus
My well-known body to anatomize
Among my household? Why is Rumour here?
I run before King Harry's victory;
Who in a bloody field by Shrewsbury

Hath beaten down young Hotspur and his troop
Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I
To speak so true at first? my office is
To noise abroad that Harry Monmouth fell
Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword,
And that the king before the Douglas' rage
Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death.
This have I rumour'd through the pleasant towns,
Between that royal field of Shrewsbury
And this worm-eaten hold of ragged stone,
Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland, Lies crafty-sick. The posts come tiresly on,
And not a man of them brings other news
Than they have learn'd of me: from Rumour's tongue
They bring smooth comforts false, worse than y erowns.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Warkworth. Before Northumberland's Castle.

Enter Lord Bardolph.

L. Bard. Who keeps the gate here? ho!
The Porter opens the gate.

Where is the ear Port. What shall I say you are?
L. Bard. Tell thou the e That the Lord Bardolph doth attend him he Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

A. Bard. Here comes the earl. Exit Porter.

North. What news, Lord Bardolph? every minute now is like to be the father of some stratagem. A. Bard. Noble earl, ring you certain news from Shrewsbury.

North. Good, an God will! A. Bard. As good as heart can wish. The king is almost wounded to the death; I, in the fortune of my lord your son, and the Blunts, I'd by the hand of Douglas; young Prince John Westmoreland and Stafford fled the field: Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk Sir John, prisoner to your son: O! such a day, fought, so follow'd, and so fairly won, nee not till now to dignify the times, cease Caesar's fortunes.

North. How is this deriv'd? A. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence; gentlemans we'll bred and of good name, it freely render'd me these news for true, of Caesar's fortunes.

North. Here comes my servant Travers, whom I sent Tuesday last to listen after news.

A. Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way; he is furnish'd with no certainties from him; he has no hurry that may retail from me.

Enter TRAVERS.

North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you?

Trav. My lord, Sir John Umfrivile turn'd me back with joyful tidings; and, being better hors'd, rode me. After him came spurring hard another gentleman, almost forspent with speed, it stopp'd by me to breathe his bloody horse. After the way to Chester; and of him I demand what news from Shrewsbury. I told me that rebellion had ill luck, that young Harry Percy's spur was cold, that he gave his able horse the head, and bending forward struck his armed heels against the panting sides of his poor jade to the rowel-head, and starting so, seem'd in running to devour the way, going no longer question.

North. Ha! Again: did young Harry Percy's spur was cold? Hotspur, Coldspur? that rebellion met ill luck?

A. Bard. My lord, I'll tell you what: my young lord your son has not the day, on mine honour, for a silken point; give my barony: never talk of it.

North. Why should that gentleman that rode by Travers give then such instances of loss?

L. Bard. Who, he? He was some hilding fellow that had spelt the horse he rode on, and, upon my life, spoke at a venture. Look! here comes more news.

Enter MORTON.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title: he Foretells the nature of a tragic volume: So looks the strand whereon the imperious flood Hath left a witness'd usurpation.

Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury, my noble lord, Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask To fright our party.

North. How doth my son and brother? Thou tremblest, and the whiteness in thy cheek is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand. Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless, So dull, so dead in look, so wo-begone, Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night, And would have told him half his Troy was burn'd; But Priam found the fire ere he his tongue, And I my Percy's death ere thou report'st it. This thou would'st say, 'Your son did thus and thus; Your brother thus; so fought the noble Douglas'; Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds; But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed, Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise, Ending with 'Brother, son, and all are dead.' Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet; But for my lord your son—

North. Why, he is dead. See what a ready tongue suspicion hath! He that but fears the thing he would not know Hath by instinct knowledge from others' eyes. That which he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak, Morton:

Tell thou thy earl his divination lies, And I will take it as a sweet disgrace. And make thee rich for doing me such wrong. Mor. You are too great to be by me gainsaid; Your spirit is too true, your fears too certain. North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's dead. I see a strange confession in thine eye: Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it fear or sin To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so; The tongue offends not that reports his death: And he doth sin that doth believe the dead, Not he which says the dead is not alive, Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news Hath but a losing office, and his tongue Sounds ever after as a sullen bell, Remember'd knolling a departing friend.

L. Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe That which I would to heaven I had not seen; But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state, Rendering faint quittance, weariest and outbreath'd, To Harry Monmouth; whose swift wrath beat down The never-daunted Percy to the earth,
From whence with life he never more sprung up,
In few, his death, whose spirit lent a fire
Even to the dullest pean in his camp,
Being bruised once, took fire and heat away
From the best-temper'd courage in his troops;
For from his metal was his party steel'd;
Which once in him abated, all the rest
Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead: And as the thing that 's heavy in itself,
Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed,
So did our men, heavy in Hotspur's loss,
Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear,
That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim
Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety,
Fly from the field. Then was that noble Worcester
Too soon ta'en prisoner; and that furious Scut,
The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword
Had three times slain the appearance of the king,
'Gain vail his stomach, and did grace the shame
Of those that turn'd their backs; and in his flight, Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all is
That the king hath won, and hath sent out
A speedy power to encounter you, my lord,
Under the conduct of young Lancaster
And Westmorland. This is the news at full.

North. For this I shall have time enough to mourn.

In poison there is physic; and these news,
Having been well, that would have made me sick,
Being sick, have in some measure made me well:
And as the wretch, whose fever-weak'ned joints,
Like strengthless hinges, buckle under life,
In impatient of his fit, breaks like a fire
Out of his keeper's arms, even so my limbs,
Weaken'd with grief, being now engag'd with grief,
Are thrice themselves. Hence, therefore, thou nice shrift!
A scaly gauntlet now with joints of steel
Must glove this hand: and hence, thou sickly quaff!

Thou art a guard too wanton for the head
Which princes, flesh'd with conquest, aim to hit.
Now bind my brows with iron; and approach the
The ragged'st hour that time and spite dare bring
To crown upon the engag'd Northumberland!
Let heaven kiss earth! now let not Nature's hand
Keep the wild flood confined! let order die!
And let this world no longer be a stage
To feed contention in a lingering act;
But let one spirit of the first-born Cain
Reign in all bosoms; that, each heart being set
On bloody courses, the rude scene may end,
And darkness be the burier of the dead!

This strained passion doth you wrong, my lord.

L. Bard. Sweet earl, divorce not wisdom from your honour.

Mor. The lives of all your loving complices
Lean on your health; the which if you give o'er
To stormy passion must perforce decay,
You cast the event of war, my noble lord,
And sum'md the account of chance, before you said
' Let us make head.' It was your presurmise
That in the dole of blows your son might drop:
You knew he walk'd o'er perils, on an edge;
More likely to fall in than to get o'er;
You were advis'd his flesh was capable
Of wounds and scars, and that his forward spirit
Would lift him where most trade of dang'rd:
Yet did you say 'Go forth'; and none of this;
Though strongly apprehended, could restrain
The stiff-borne action: what hath then befall'n
Or what hath this bold enterprise brought for More than that being which was like to be!

L. Bard. We all that are engaged to this
Knew that we ventured on such dangerous sea;
That if we wrought our life 'twas ten to one;
And yet we ventured, for the gain propos'd
Chok'd the respect of likely peril fear'd;
And since we are o'er, venture again.
Come, we will all put forth, body and goods.
Mor. 'Tis more than time: and, my noble lord,
I hear for certain, and do speak the truth,
The gentle Archbishop of York is up
With well-appointed powers: he is a man
Who with a double surety binds his follower
My lord your son had only but the corpse,
But shadows and the shows of men, to fight.
For that same word, rebellion, did divide
The action of their bodies from their souls;
And they did fight with quickness, constrain;
As men drink potions, that their weapons on Seem'd on our side: but, for their spirits a souls,
This word, rebellion, it had froze them up,
As fish are in a pond. But now the bishop
TURNS insurrection to religion:
Suppos'd sincere and holy in his thoughts,
He's follow'd both with body and with mind.
And doth enlarge his rising with the blood
Of fair King Richard, scrap'd from Fond stones;
Derives from heaven his quarrel and his can.
Tells them he doth bestride a bleeding land,
Gasping for life under great Bolingbroke;
And more and less do flock to follow him.

North. I knew of this before; but, to spe truth,
This present grief had wip'd it from my mind.
Go in with me; and counsel every man
The aptest way for safety and revenge:
Get posts and letters, and make friends w speed:
Never so few, nor never yet more need. Exe.
Enter the Lord Chief Justice and Servant.

Page. Sir, here comes the nobleman that comitted the prince for striking him about Barliph.

Fal. Wait close; I will not see him.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there?

Serv. Falstaff, an't please your lordship.

Ch. Just. He that was in question for the livery?

Serv. He, my lord; but he hath since done od service at Shrewsbury, and, as I hear, is going with some charge to the Lord John Lancaster.

Serv. Sir John Falstaff!

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Page. You must speak louder, my master is deaf.

Ch. Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of my thing good. Go, pluck him by the elbow; must speak with him.

Serv. Sir John!

Fal. What! a young knave, and beg! Is there of wars? is there not employment? doth not the king lack subjects? do not the rebels want oldiers? Though it be a shame to be on any de not one, it is worse shame to beg than to be on the worst side, were it worse than the name of rebellion can tell how to make it.

Serv. You mistake me, sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? setting my knighthood and my soldiership aside, I had lie in my throat if I had said so.

Serv. I pray you, sir, then set your knighthood and your soldiership aside, and give me leave to tell you you lie in your throat if you say I am any other than an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so! I lay aside that which grows to me! If thou gettest any leave of me, hang me: if thou takest leave, thou wert better be hanged. You hunt-counter: hence! avaint!

Serv. Sir, my lord would speak with you.

Ch. Just. Sir John Falstaff, a word with you.

Fal. My good lord! God give your lordship good time of day. I am glad to see your lordship abroad; I heard say your lordship was sick: I hope your lordship goes abroad by advice. Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltiness of time; and I most humbly beseech your lordship to a reverent care of your health.

Ch. Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. An't please your lordship, I hear his majesty is returned with some discomfort from Wales.

Ch. Just. I talk not of his majesty. You would not come when I sent for you.

Fal. And I hear, moreover, his highness is fallen into this same whoreson apoplexy.

Ch. Just. Well, God mend him! I pray you, let me speak with you.

Fal. This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling.

Ch. Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath its original from much grief, from study and perturbation of the brain. I have read the cause of his effects in Galen: it is a kind of deafness.

Ch. Just. I think you are fallen into the disease, for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well, my lord, very well: rather, an't please you, it is the disease of not listening, the malady of no marking, that I am troubled withal.

Ch. Just. To punish you by the heels would amend the attention of your ears; and I care not if I do become your physician.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient: your lordship may minister the potion of imprisonment to me in respect of poverty; but how I should be your patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or indeed a scruple itself.

Ch. Just. I sent for you, when there were matters against you for your life, to come speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned counsel in the laws of this land-service, I did not come.

Ch. Just. Well, the truth is, Sir John, you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my belt cannot live in less.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

Ch. Just. Your means are very slender, and your waste is great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise: I would my means were greater and my waist slenderer. 129

Ch. Just. You have misled the youthful prince.

Fal. The young prince hath misled me: I am the fellow with the great belly, and he my dog.

Ch. Just. Well, I am loath to gall a new-healed wound: your day's service at Shrewsbury hath a little gilded over your night's exploit on Gadshill: you may thank the unquiet time for your quiet o'er-posting that action.

Fal. My lord!

Ch. Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping wolf. 170

Fal. To wake a wolf is as bad as to smell a fox.

Ch. Just. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A wassail candle, my lord; all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ch. Just. There is not a white hair on your face but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gray, gray, gray.

Ch. Just. You follow the young prince up and down, like his ill angel. 131

Fal. Not so, my lord; your ill angel is light, but I hope he that looks upon me will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects, I grant, I cannot go, I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these costermongers times that true value is turned bear-hed; pregnancy is made a tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving reckonings: all the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry. You that are old consider not the capacities of us that are young; you do measure the heat of our livers with the bitterness of your galls; and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are wags too.

Ch. Just. Do you set down your name in the scroll of youth, that are written down old with all the characters of age? Have you not a moist eye, a dry hand, a yellow cheek, a white beard, an increasing leg, an increasing belly? Is not your voice broken, your wind short, your chin double, your wit single, and every part about you blasted with antiquity, and will you yet call yourself young? Fie, fie, fie, Sir John! 205

Fal. My lord, I was born about three of the clock in the afternoon, with a white head, and something a round belly. For my voice, I have lost it with hollaining and singing of anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not: the truth is I am only old in judgment and understanding; and he that will caper with me for a thousand marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him! For the box o' the ear that the prince gave you, he gave it like a rude prince, and you took it like a sensible lord. I have checked him for it, and the young lion repents; marry, not in ashes and sackcloth, but in new silk and old sack.

Ch. Just. Well, God send the prince a better companion!

Fal. God send the companion a better prince! I cannot rid my hands of him.

Ch. Just. Well, the king hath severed you and Prince Harry. I hear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster against the archbishop of the Earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yea; I thank your pretty sweet wit it. But look you pray, all you that kiss my Peace at home, that our armies join not in a day; for, by the Lord, I take but two shirts with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinary if it be a hot day, and I brandish any thing a bottle, I would I might never spit white age. There is not a dangerous action can peep out but I am thrust upon it. Well, I can last ever. But it was alway yet the trick of an English nation, if they have a good thing, make it too common. If ye will needs say I, an old man, you should give me rest. I went to God my name were not so terrible to an enemy as it is: I were better to be eaten to death with rust than to be scour'd to nothing with perpetual motion.

Ch. Just. Well, be honest, be honest; and God bless your expedition!

Fal. Will your lordship lend me a thousand pound to furnish me forth?

Ch. Just. Not a penny; not a penny; you too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well, we commend me to my cousin Westmoreland.

Exeunt Chief Justice and Servants.

Fal. If I do, fillip me with a three-man beat. A man can no more separate age and covetousness than a can part young limbs and lecher but the gout galls the one, and the pox pinn'd the other, and so both the degrees prevent curses. Boy!

Page. Sir!

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Page. Seven groats and twopence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse: borrowing only lingers a lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Bear this letter to my Lord of Lancaster; tell to the prince; this to the Earl of Westmoreland and this to old Mistress Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry since I perceived the flow of white hair on my chin. About it: you know where to find me. Exit Page.

A pox of this gout! or, a gout of this pois! the one or the other plays the rogue with a great to. Tis no matter if I do halt; I have the wars for my colour, and my pension she seen the more reasonable. A good wit would make use of any thing; I will turn diseases commodity.

Enter the Archbishop of York, the Lords Harington, Mowbray, and Bardolph.

Arch. Thus have you heard our cause as known our means:

And, my most noble friends, I pray you all, Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes: And first, lord marshal, what say you to it? Mowbray. I well allow the occasion of our arm But gladly would be better satisfied How in our means we should advance ourselv To look with forehead bold and big enough Upon the power and prudence of the king. Hast. Our present musters grow upon the To five-and-twenty thousand men of choice;
In three divided, and his coffers sound
With hollow poverty and emptiness.
Arch. That he should draw his several strengths together
And come against us in full praisance,
Need not be dreaded.
Hast. If he should do so,
He levies his back unarm'd, the French and Welleaving him at the heels: never fear that.
E. Bard. Who is it like should lead his forces
hither?
Hast. The Duke of Lancaster and Westmore-
land;
Against the Welsh, himself; and Harry Mumsmouth:
But who is substituted against the French
I have no certain notice.
Arch. Let us on
And publish the occasion of our arms.
The commonwealth is sick of their own choice;
Their over-greedy love hath surfeited.
An habitation giddy and unsafe
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
O thou fond many! with what loud applause
Didst thou beat heaven with blessing Bolingbroke
Before he was what thou would'st have him be:
And being now trium'd in thine own desires,
Thou, beastly feeder, art so full of him
That thou provok'st thyself to cast him up.
So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
Thy glutton bosom of the royal Richard,
And now thou would'st eat thy dead vomit up,
And howl'st to find it.
What trust is in these times?
They that, when Richard liv'd, would have him die,
Are now become enamour'd on his grave:
Thou, that threw'st dust upon his goodly head,
When through proud London he came sighing on
After the admired heels of Bolingbroke,
Cry'st now, 'O earth! yield us that king again,
And take thou this.' O thoughts of men accurst!
Past and to come seems best; things present worst.
Moeb. Shall we go draw our numbers and set on?
Host. We are time's subjects, and time bids
be gone.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—London. A Street.
Enter Mistress Quickly, Fang, and his Boy, with her; and Snare following.
Quick. Master Fang, have you entered the action?
Fang. It is entered.
Quick. Where's your yeoman? Is't a lusty yeoman! will a' stand to't?
Fang. Sirrah, where's Snare?
Quick. O Lord, ay! good Master Snare.
Snare. Here, here.
Fang. Snare, we must arrest Sir John Falstaff.
Quick. Yea, good Master Snare; I have entered him and all.
Snare. It may chance cost some of us our lives,
for he will stab.
Quick. Alas the day! take heed of him: he stabbed me in mine own house, and that most beastly. In good faith, he cares not what mischief he doth if his weapon be out: he will foin like any devil; he will spare neither man, woman, nor child.

Fang. If I can close with him I care not for his thrust.

Quick. No, nor I neither: I'll be at your elbow.

Fang. An I but fist him once; an n' come but within my vice,—

Quick. I am undone with his going; I warrant you, he's an infinitive thing upon my score. Good Master Fang, hold him sure; good Master Snare, let him not 'scape. A comes contumably to Pie-corner—saving your manhoods—to buy a saddle; and he's invited to dinner to the Lumber's head in Lumbert street, to Master Smooth's the silkman: I pray ye, since my exion is entered, and my case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred mark is a long one for a poor lone woman to bear; and I have borne, and borne, and borne; and have been fatted off, and fatted off, and fubbed from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing; unless a woman should be made an ass, and a beast, to bear every knave's wrong. Yonder he comes; and that arrant malmsay-nose knave, Bardolph, with him. Do your offices, do your offices, Master Fang and Master Snare: do me, do me, do me your offices.

Enter Sir John Falstaff, Page, and Bardolph.

Fal. How now! whose mare's dead? what's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mistress Quickly.

Fal. Away, varlets! Draw, Bardolph: cut me off the villain's head; throw the quen in the channel.

Quick. Throw me in the channel! I'll throw thee in the channel. Wilt thou wilt thou? thou bastardly rogue! Murder, murder! Ah! thou honey-suckle villain! wilt thou kill God's officers and the king's? Ah! thou honey-seed rogue! thou art a honey-seed, a man-queller, and a woman-queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolph.

Fang. A rescue! a rescue!

Quick. Good people, bring a rescue or two. Thou wot, wot thou? thou wot, wot ta? do, do, thou rogue! do, thou hemp-seed!

Fal. Away, you scullion! you rampallian! you rustilarian! I'll tickle your catastrophe.

Enter the Lord Chief Justice, attended.

Ch. Just. What is the matter? keep the peace here, ho!

Quick. Good my lord, be good to me! I beseech you, stand to me!

Ch. Just. How now, Sir John! what! are you brawling here?

Doth this become your place, your time and business?

You should have been well on your way to York.

Stand from him, fellow: wherefore lang'st upon him?

Quick. O my most worshipful lord, an't please your grace, I am a poor widow of Eastecheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what sum?

Quick. It is more than for some, my lord; it is for all, all I have. He hath eaten me out house and home; he hath put all my substa into that fat belly of his: but I will have s of it out again, or I will ride thee o' nights the mare.

Fal. I think I am as like to ride the man I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John! what man of good temper would endure tempest of exclamation? Are you not asham to enforce a poor widow to so rough a course come by her own!

Fal. What is the gross sum that I owe thee?

Quick. Marry, if thou wert an honest self and the money too. Thou didst set to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a coal fire, upon Wednesday in Wheeson when the prince broke thy head for liking father to a singing-man of Windsor, thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy w to marry me and make me my lady thy Canst thou den it? Did not goodwife Ke the butcher's wife, come in then and call gossip Quickly? coming in to borrow a mes vinegar; telling us she had a good dial prawns; whereby thou didst desire to eat so whereby I told thee they were ill for a g wound? And didst thou not, when she gone down stairs, desire me to be no more familiar with such poor people; saying ere long 'they should call me madam? didst thou not kiss me and bid me fetch thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy b oath; deny it if thou canst.

Fal. My lord, this is a poor mad soul; she says up and down the town that her ch son is like you. She hath been in good and the truth is, poverty hath distracted. But for these foolish officers, I beseech you, may have redress against them.

Ch. Just. Sir John, Sir John, I am wel quainted with your manner of wrangling true cause the false way. It is not a con brow, nor the throng of words that come more such more than impudent sauciness from can thrust me from a level consideration; have, as it appears to me, practised upon easy-yielding spirit of this woman, and her serve your uses both in purse and perso

Quick. Yea, in troth, my lord.

Ch. Just. Prithee, peace. Pay her the owe thee her, and unpay the villain you done with her; the one you may do with stern money, and the other with current repentat

Fal. My lord, I will not undergo this s without reply. You call honourable bold impudent sauciness: if a man will make coin and say nothing, he is virtuous. No, my lord, my humble duty remembered, I will not be so. I say to you, I do desire deliverance from these officers, being upon hasty em in the king's affairs.

Ch. Just. You speak as having power to wrong: but answer in the effect of your rep tion, and satisfy the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither, hostess.

Enter Gower.

Ch. Just. Now, Master Gower! what new
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

Scene II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter the Prince and Poins.

Prince. Before God, I am exceeding weary.

Poins. Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attached one of so high blood.

Prince. Faith, it does me, though it discours the complexion of my greatness to acknowledge it. Doth it not show vilely in me to desire small beer?

Poins. Why, a prince should not be so loosely studied as to remember so weak a composition.

Prince. Belike then my appetite was not princely got; for, by my troth, I do now remember the poor creature, small beer. But, indeed, these humble considerations make me out of love with my greatness. What a disgrace is it to me to remember thy name, or to know thy face to-morrow! or to take note how many pair of silk stockings thou hast; viz. these, and those that were thy peach-coloured ones! or to bear the inventory of thy shirts; as, one for superfluity, and one other for use! But that the tennis-court-keeper knows better than I, for it is a low ebb of linen with thee when thou keepest not racket there; as thou hast not done a great while, because the rest of thy low countries have made a shift to eat up thy Holland: and God knows whether those that bawl out the ruins of thy linen shall inherit his kingdom; but the midwives say the children are not in the fault; whereupon the world increases, and kindreds are mightily strengthened.

Poins. How ill it follows, after you have laboured so hard, you should talk so idly! Tell me, how many good young princes would do so, their fathers being so sick as yours at this time is!

Prince. Shall I tell thee one thing, Poins?

Poins. Yes, faith, and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prince. It shall serve among wits of no higher breeding than thine.

Poins. Go to; I stand the push of your one thing that you will tell.

Prince. Marry, I tell thee, it is not meet that I should be sad, now my father is sick: albeit I could tell to thee, as to one it pleases me for fault of a better, to call my friend, I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

Poins. Very hardly upon such a subject.

Prince. By this hand, thou thinkest me as far in the devil's book as thou and Falstaff for obduracy and persistency; let the end try the man. But I tell thee my heart bleeds inwardly that my father is so sick; and keeping such vile company as thou art hath in reason taken from me all ostentation of sorrow.

Poins. The reason?

Prince. What would'st thou think of me if I should weep?

Poins. I would think thee a most princely hypocrite.

Prince. It would be every man's thought; and thou art a blessed fellow to think as every man thinks: never a man's thought in the world keeps the roadway better than thine: every man would think me an hypocrite indeed. And what accites your most worshipful thought to think so?
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

Enter BARDOLPH and Page.

Prince. And the boy that I gave Falstaff: a' had him from me Christian; and look, if the fat villain have not trans-form'd him ape.

Bard. God save your grace!

Prince. And yours, most noble Bardolph.

Bard. To the Page. Come, you virtuous ass, you bashful fool, must you be blushing? wherefore blush you now? What a maidenly man-at-arms are you become! Is it such a matter to get a potle-pot's maidenhead?

Page. A' calls me e'en now, my lord, through a red lattice, and I could discern no part of his face from the window: at last I spied his eyes, and methought he had made two holes in the ale wife's new petticoat, and peeped through.

Prince. Hath not the boy profited?

Bard. Away, you whoreson upright rabbit, away!

Page. Away, you rascally Althea's dream, away!

Prince. Instruct us, boy; what dream, boy?

Page. Marry, my lord, Althea dreamed she was delivered of a firebrand; and therefore I call him her dream.

Gives him money.

POINS. O! that this good blossom could be kept from cankers. Well, there is sixpence to preserve thee,

Bard. An you do not make him be hanged among you, the gallows shall have wrong.

Prince. And how doth thy master, Bardolph?

Bard. Why, my lord. He heard of your grace's coming to town: there's a letter for you.

Page. Delivered with good respect. And how doth the martlemas, your master?

Bard. In bodily health, sir.

POINS. Marry, the immortal part needs a physician; but that moves not him: though that be sick, it dies not.

Prince. I do allow this wen to be as familiar with me as my dog; and he holds his place, for look you how he writes.

POINS. John Falstaff, knight,—every man must know that, as oft as he has occasion to name himself; even like those that are kin to the king, for they never prick their finger but they say 'There's some of the king's blood spilt.' 'How comes that?' says he that takes upon him not to conceive. The answer is as ready as a borrower's cap; 'I am the king's poor cousin, sir.'

Prince. Nay, they will be kin to us, or they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the letter:

POINS. Sir John Falstaff, knight, to the son of the king, nearest his father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting. Why, this is a certificate.

Prince. Peace!

POINS. I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity: he sure means brevity in breath, short-winded. I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Pois for he winces the favours so much that he usest thou art to marry his sister Nell. Repent at times as thou mayest, and so farewell.

Thine, by yea and no, which is as much to say, as thou uset him, Jack Falstaff: my favourites, John with my brothers a sisters, and Sir John with all Europe.

My lord, I'll steep this letter in sack and make him eat it.

Prince. That's to make him eat twenty words. But do you use me thus, Ned? must marry your sister?

POINS. God send the wench no worse fortun but I never said so.

Prince. Well, thus we play the fools with time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the closet and mock us. Is your master here in London?

Bard. Yes, my lord.

Prince. Where sups he? doth the old boar feast in the old frank?

Bard. At the old place, my lord, in Eastcheap.

Prince. What company?

Page. Ephesians, my lord, of the old churc

Prince. Sup any women with him?

Page. None, my lord, but old Mistress Quick and Mistress Doll Tearseet.

Prince. What pagan may that be?

Page. A proper gentlewoman, sir, and a kin woman of my master's.

Prince. Even such kin as the parish heap are to the town bull. Shall we steal upon the Ned, at supper?

POINS. I am your shadow, my lord; I'll fol low you.

Prince. Sirrah, you boy, and Bardolph; word to your master that I am yet come to tow there's for your silence.

Bard. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, sir, I will govern it.

Prince. Fare ye well; go.

EXECUT BARDOLPH AND PAGE.

This Doll Tearseet should be some road.

POINS. I warrant you, as common as the way between Saint Albin's and London.

Prince. How might we see Falstaff bestow his self to-night in his true colours, and not ourselves be seen?

POINS. Put on two leathern jerkins and apron and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

Prince. From a god to a bull! a heavy decla sion! it was Jove's case. From a prince to prentice! a low transformation! that shall mine; for in every thing the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned.

EXECUT.

SCENE III. — Warkworth. Before NORTHUM BERLAND'S Castle.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, Lady NORTHUM BERLAND, and Lady PERCY.

North. I pray thee, loving wife and gentle daughter, Give even way unto my rough affairs: Put not you on the visage of the times, And be like them to Percy trouble-ome.

Lady N. I have given over, I will speak no mor Do what you will; your wisdom be your guid North. Alas! sweet wife, my honour is at paw And, but my going, nothing can redeem it.
Scene IV.—London. A Room in the Boy's Head Tavern in Eastcheap.

Enter two Drawers.

Second Draw. Mass, thou sayest true. The prince once set a dish of apple-johns before him, and told him there were five more Sir Johns; and, putting off his hat, said 'I will now take my leave of these six dry, round, old, withered knights.' It angered him to the heart; but he hath forgot that.

First Draw. Why then, cover, and set them down; and see if thou canst find out Sneak's noise; Mistress Teasheet would fain hear some music. Dispatch: the room where they supped is too hot; they'll come in straight.

Second Draw. Sirrah, here will be the prince and Master Poins anon; and they will put on two of our jerkins and aprons; and Sir John must not know of it: Bardolph hath brought word.

First Draw. By the mass, here will be o'd utis: it will be an excellent stratagem.

Second Draw. I'll see if I can find out Sneak.

Exit.

Enter Mistress Quickly and Doll Teasheet.

Quick. I'faith, sweetheart, methinks now you are in an excellent good temperamcy; your pulisidge beats as extraordinarily as heart would desire; and your colour, I warrant you, is as red as any rose, in good truth, la! But, 'faith, you have drank too much canaries, and that's a marvellous searching wine, and it perfumes the blood one can say 'What's this?' How do you now?

Doll. Better than I was: hem!

Quick. Why, that's well said; a good heart's worth gold. Lo! here comes Sir John.

Enter Falstaff, singing.

Fal. When Arthur first in court.—Empty the jordan.—And was a worthy king.

Exit First Drawer.

How now, Mistress Doll!

Quick. Sick of a calm: yea, good sooth.

Fal. So is all her sect; an they be once in a calm they are sick.

Doll. You muddy rascal, is that all the comfort you give me?

Fal. You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll.

Doll. I make them! gluttony and d. cases make them; I make them not.

Fal. If the cook help to make the glutton— you help to make the disea-es, Doll: we catch of you, Doll, we catch of you; grant that, my poor virtue, grant that.

Doll. Ay, marry; our chains and our jewels.

Fal. 'Your brooches, pearls, and o'vches: for to serve braverly is to come halting off you know; to come off the breach with his pike bent bravely, and to surgery bravely; to venture upon the charged chambers bravely.—

Doll. Hang yourself, you muddy conger, hang yourself!

Quick. By my troth, this is the old fashion; you two never meet but you fall to some discord: you are both, in good troth, as rheumatic as two dry toasts; you cannot one bear with another's confirmities. What the good-year! one must bear, and that must be you: you are the weaker vessel, as they say, the emptier vessel.

Doll. Can a weak empty vessel bear such a huge full hogshad? there's a whole merchant's venture of Bordeaux stuff in him: you have not seen a hulk better stuffed in the hold. Come, I'll be friends with thee, Jack: thou art going to the wars; and whether I shall ever see thee again or no, there is nobody cares. 71

Re-enter First Drawer.

First Draw. Sir, Ancient Pistol's below, and would speak with you.

Doll. Hang him, swaggering rascal! let him not come hither: it is the foul-mouthedest rogue in England.

Quick. If he swagger, let him not come here: no, by my faith; I must live among my neighbours; I'll no swaggerers: I am in good name and fame with the very best. Shut the door; there comes no swaggerers here: I have not lived all this while to have swaggering now: shut the door, I pray you.

Fal. Dost thou hear, hostess?

Quick. Pray you, pacify yourself, Sir John: there comes no swaggerers here.

Fal. Dost thou hear it? it is mine ancient.

Quick. Tilly-fally, Sir John, never tell me: your ancient swaggerer comes not in my doors. I was before Master Tisick, the deputy, 't other day; and, as he said to me, 'twas no longer ago than Wednesday last. 'Neighbour Quickly,' says he; Master Dunbe, our minister, was by then; 'Neighbour Quickly,' says he, 'receive those that are civil; for,' said he, 'you are in an ill name: now a said so, I can tell whereupon; 'for,' says he, 'you are an honest woman, and well thought on; therefore take heed what guests you receive; receive,' says he, 'no swaggering companions.' There comes none here: you would bless you to what he said. No, I'll no swaggerers.

Fal. He's no swaggerer, hostess; a tame cheater, I' faith; you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound: he will not swagger with a Barbary hench hen if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance. Call him up, drawer.

Exit First Drawer.

Quick. Cheater, call you him? I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater; but I do not love swaggering, by my troth; I am the worse, when one says swagger. Feel, masters, how I shake; look you, I warrant you.

Doll. So you do, hostess.

Quick. Do I! yea, in very truth do I, an 'twere an aspen-leaf. I cannot abide swaggerers.

Enter Pistol, Bardolph, and Page.

Pist. God save you, Sir John!

Fal. Welcome, Ancient Pistol. Here, Pistol, I charge you with a cup of sack: do you discharge upon mine hostess.

Pist. I will discharge upon her, Sir John, with two bullets.

Fal. She is pistol-proof, sir; you shall hardly offend her.

Quick. Come, I'll drink no proofs nor no bullets: I'll drink no more than will do me good, for no man's pleasure, I.

Pist. Then to you, Mistress Dorothy; I charge you.

Doll. Charge me! I scorn you, scurvy companion. What! you poor, base, rascally, che- ing, lack-linen mate! Away, you moudly rog away! I am meat for your master.

Pist. I know you, Mistress Dorothy.

Doll. Away, you cut-purse rascal! you fill bung, away! By this wine, I'll thrust my kn in your mouldy chaps an you play the sea cuttle with me. Away, you bottle-ale rase you basket-hilt stale juggler, you! Since wh I pray you, sir! God's light! with two pol on your shoulder! much!

Pist. God let me not live, but I will mull your ruff for this!

Fal. No more, Pistol: I would not have you go off here. Discharge yourself of our comap pistol.

Quick. No, good Captain Pistol; not he sweet captain.

Doll. Captain! thou abominable damn cheater, art thou not ashamed to be call captain? An captains were of my mind, I would truncheon you out for taking their nau upon you before you have earned them. Yo captain, you slave! for what? for tearing a whose ruff in a bawdy-house? He a capta hang him, rogue! he lives upon mouldy stew prunes and dried cakes. A captain! God's lig these villains will make the word as odious the word 'occupy,' which was an excellent go word before it was ill sorted: therefore capta had need look to't.

Bard. Pray thee, go down, good ancient.

Fal. Hark thee hither, Mistress Doll.

Pist. Not I: I tell thee what, Corporal B dolph; I could tear her. I'll be revenged of her.

Page. Pray thee, go down.

Pist. I'll see her damned first; to Flat damned lake, to the infernal deep, with Ere and tortures vile also. Hold hook and line, I. Down, down, dogs! down, fates! Have not Hiren here?

Quick. Good Captain Peessel, be quiet; 'tis we late, 't faith. I beseech you now, aggrav your choler.

Pist. These be good humours, indeed! St pack-horses, And hollow pamper'd jades of Asia, Which cannot go but thirty miles a day, Compare with Cesars, and with Cannibals, And Troyan Greeks? ray, rather damn them w King Cerberus; and let the welkin roar. Shall we fall foul for toys?

Quick. By my troth, captain, these are w bitter words.

Bard. Be gone, good ancient: this will gr to a brawl anon.

Pist. Die men like dogs! give crown pins! Have we not Hiren here!

Quick. O' my word, captain, there's none st here.

What the good-year! do you think I would deny her?

For God's sake! be quiet.

Pist. Then feed, and be fat, my fair Calippo Come, give's some sack.

Si forte me tormentas, sperato me contento. Fear we broadsides? no, let the fiend give fit
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

Fal. Peace, good Doll! do not speak like a cat's head: do not bid me remember mine end.

Doll. Sirrah, what humour's the prince of?

Fal. A good shallow young fellow: a' would have made a good pantler, a' would ha' chipped bread well.

Doll. They say Poins has a good wit.

Fal. He a good wit! hang him, baboon! his wit's as thick as Tewksbury mustard: there's no more conceit in him than is in a mallet.

Doll. Why does the prince love him so, then?

Fal. Because their legs are both of a bigness, and a' plays at quoits well, and eats congr and fennel, and drinks off candles' ends for flaps, and rides the wild mare with the boys, and jumps upon joint-stools, and swears with a good grace, and wears his boot very smooth, like unto the sign of the leg, and breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories; and such other gambol faculties a' has, that show a weak mind and an able body, for the which the prince admits him: for the prince himself is such another; the weight of a hair will turn the scales between their avoidupos.

Prince. Would not this navel of a wheel have his ears cut off?

Poins. Let's beat him before his whore.

Prince. Look, whether the withered elder hath not his poll clawed like a parrot.

Poins. Is it not strange that desire should so many years outlive performance?

Fal. Kiss me, Doll.

Prince. Saturn and Venus this year in conjunction! what says the almanac to that?

Poins. And, look, whether the fiery Trigon, his man, be not lying to his master's old tables, his note-book, his counsel-keeper.

Fal. Thou dost give me flattering busses.

Doll. By my troth, I kiss thee with a most constant heart.

Fal. I am old, I am old.

Doll. I love thee better than I love e'er a curvy young boy of them all.

Fal. What stuff wilt have a kirtle of? I shall receive money o' Thursday; shalt have a cap tomorrow. A merry song! come: it grows late; we'll to bed. Thou'lt forget me when I am gone.

Doll. By my troth, thou'lt set me a-weeping an thou sayest so: prove that ever I dress myself handsome till thy return. Well, hearken at the end.

Fal. Some sack, Francis!

Prince, Poins. Anon, anon, sir.

Coming forward.

Fal. Ha! a bastard son of the king's. And art not thou Poins his brother?

Prince. Why, thou globe of sinful continents, what a life dost thou lead!

Fal. A better than thou: I am a gentleman; thou art a drawer.

Prince. Very true, sir; and I come to draw you out by the ears.

Quick. O! the Lord preserve thy good grace; by my troth, welcome to London. Now, the Lord bless that sweet face of thine! O Jesu! are you come from Wales?

Fal. Thou whoreson mad compound of majesty, by this light flesh and corrupt blood, thou art welcome.

Doll. How, you fat fool! I scorn you.

Poins. My lord, he will drive you out of your revenge and turn all to a merriment, if you take not the heat.

Prince. You whoreson candle-mine, you, how vilely did you speak of me even now before this honest, virtuous, civil gentlewoman!

Quick. God's blessing of your good heart! and so she is, by my troth.

Fal. Didst thou hear me?

Prince. Yea, and you knew me, as you did when you ran away by Gadshill: you knew I was at your back, and spoke it on purpose to try my patience.

Fal. No, no, no; not so; I did not think thou wast within hearing.

Prince. I shall drive you then to confess the wilfulabuse; and then I know how to handle you.

Fal. No abuse, Hal; o' mine honour; no abuse.

Prince. Not to dispraise me, and call me pantler and bread-chipper and I know not what?

Fal. No abuse, Hal.

Pois. No abuse!

Fal. No abuse, Ned, i' the world; honest Ned, none. I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him; in which doing I have done the part of a careful friend and a true subject, and thy father is to give me thanks for it. No abuse, Hal; none, Ned; none: no, faith, boys, none.

Prince. See now, whether pure fear and entire cowardice doth not make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us? Is she of the wicked? Is thine hostess here of the wicked? Or is the boy of the wicked? Or honest Bardolph, whose zeal burns in his nose, of the wicked?

Pois. Answer, thou dead elm, answer.

Fal. The fiend hath picked down Bardolph irrecoverable; and his face is Lucifer's privy-kitchen, where he doth nothing but roast maltworms. For the boy, there is a good angel about him; but the devil outbids him too.

Prince. For the women?

Fal. For one of them, she is in hell already, and burns poor souls. For the other, I owe her money, and whether she be damned for that, I know not.

Quick. No, I warrant you.

Fal. No, I think thou art not; I think thou art quit for that. Marry, there is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law; for the which I think thou wilt howl.

Quick. All victuallers do so: what's a joint of mutton or two in a whole Lent?

Prince. You, gentlewoman,—

Doll. What says your grace?

Fal. His grace says that which his flesh rebels against.

Quick. Who knocks so loud at door? Look to the door there, Francis.

Enter PETO.

Prince. Peto, how now! what news?

Peto. The king your father is at Westminster; And there are twenty weak and wearied posts. Come from the north: and, as I came along, I met and overtook a dozen captains.

Bare-headed, sweating, knocking at the taverns, And asking every one for Sir John Falstaff.

Prince. By heaven, Poins, I feel me much to blame,

So idly to profane the precious time, When tempest of commotion, like the south, Borne with black vapour, doth begin to melt And drop upon our bare unarmed heads.

Give me my sword and cloak Fal-taff, goodnight.

Quick. Fal. Now comes in the sweetest morsel of the night, and we must hence and leave it unpicked.

More knocking at the door!

Re-enter BARDOLPH.

How now! what's the matter?

Bard. You must away to court, sir, presently A dozen captains stay at door for you.

Fal. To the Page. Pay the musicians, sirral Farewell, hostess; farewell, Doll. You see, a good wenches, how men of merit are souled after: the undeserver may sleep when the man of action is called on. Farewell, good wenches. If I be not sent away post, I will see you again ere I go.

Doll. I cannot speak; if my heart be not read to burst,—well, sweet Jack, have a care of thyself.

Fal. Farewell, farewell.

Quick. Falstaff and BARDOLPH.

Quick. Well, fare thee well: I have know the these twenty-nine years, come peacod-time but an honest and truer-hearted man,—well fare thee well.

Bard. Within. Mistress Tearsheet!

Quick. What's the matter?

Bard. Within. Bid Mistress Tearsheet con to my master.

Quick. O! run, Doll, run; run, good Doll.

Exit Page.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Westminster. A Room in the Palace Inter King Henry in his night-gown, with A Page.

K. Hen. Go call the eunuchs of Surrey and Warwick;

But, ere they come, bid them o'erread these letters,

And well consider of them. Make good speed.

Exit Page.

How many thousand of my poorest subjects Are at this hour asleep! O sleep! O gentle sleep Nature's soft nurse, how have I fretted thee, That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down And steep my senses in forgetfulness! Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs, Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee, And hun'st with buzzing night-flies to th' slumber, Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great, Under the canopies of costly state, And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody? 0 thou dull god! why liest thou with the vile In loathsome beds, and leavest the kindly coo A watch-case or a common 'lairn bell? Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brain In cradle of the rude imperious surge, And in the visitation of the winds, Who take the rattian billows by the top, Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging then ith deafling clamour in the slippery clouds, at with the hurly death itself awakes!

nst thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose
the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude,
d in the calmest and most stillest night,
ith all appliances and means to root,
ny to a king! Then happy low, lie down!

ey lies the head that wears a crown.

Enter Warwick and Surrey.

K. Hen. Why then, good morrow to you all, my lords, we you read o' the letters that I sent you? War. We have, my liege.
K. Hen. Then you perceive the body of our kingdom our it is; what rank diseases grow,
d with what danger, near the heart of it. 40
War. It is but as a body yet distemper'd, d his to former strength may be restor'd
th good advice and little medicine:
ord Northumberland will soon be cool'd.

Y. Hen. O God! that one might read the book of fate,
d s e the revolution of the times be mountains level, and the continent
ary of solid firmness, melt itself o the sea! and, other times, to see beachy girdle of the ocean wide for Neptune's hips; how chances mock,
d changes fill the cup of alteration
h divers liquors! Oh! if this were seen, ahappiest youth, viewing his progress through,
at perils past, what crosses to ensue,
uld shut the book, and sit him down and die.
not ten years gone
Richard and Northumberland, great friends, feast, and in two years after re they at wars: it is but eight years since Percy was the man nearest my soul, like a brother toil'd in my affairs laid his love and life under my foot;
, for my sake, even to the eyes of Richard ve him defiance. But which of you was by,—

Warwick. You, cousin Nevil, as I may re-

when Richard, with his eye brimful of tears, en check'd and rated by Northumberland, speak these words, now prov'd a prophecy?
thumberland, thou ladder by the which cousin Bolingbroke ascends my throne;
ough then, God knows, I had no such intent,
that necessity so bow'd the state
I and greatness we compell'd to kiss:
ue shall come, thus did he follow it,
ime will come, that foul sin gathering head,
d break into corruption: so went on,
telling this same time's condition
he division of our amity.

War. There is history in all men's lives, uring the nature of the times deceas'd;
which observ'd, a man may prophesy.
ll a near aim, of the main chance of things yet not come to life, which in their seeds weak beginnings lie treasured.
ch things become the hatch and brood of time;
by the necessary form of this

King Richard might create a perfect guess
That great Northumberland, then false to him,
Would of that seed grow to a greater falseness,
Which should not find a ground to root upon,
Unless on you.

K. Hen. Are these things then necessities?
Then let us meet them like necessities;
And that same word even now cries out on us.
They say the bishop and Northumberland
Are fifty thousand strong.

War. It cannot be, my lord:
Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo,
The numbers of the fear'd. Please it your grace
To go to bed: upon my life, my lord,
The powers that you already have sent forth
Shall bring this prize in very easily.
I comfort you the more, I have receiv'd
A certain instance that Glendower is dead.
Your majesty hath been this fortnight i,1,
And these unseason'd hours performe must add
Upto your sickness.

K. Hen. I will take your counsel:
And were these inward wars once out of hand,
We would, dear lords, unto the Holy Land.

Exeunt.

Scene II.—Court before Justice Shallow's
House in Gloucestershire.

Enter Shallow and Silence, meeting; Mouldy, Shadow, Wart, Feeble, Bullcalf, and Servants, behind.

Shal. Come on, come on, sir; give me your hand, sir, give me your hand, sir:
early stirrer, by the rood! And how doth my good cousin Silence?

Sil. Good morrow, good cousin Shallow.

Shal. And how doth my cousin, your bedfellow? and your fairest daughter and mine, my god-daughter Ellen?

Sil. Alas! a black osel, cousin Shallow.

Shal. By yea and nay, sir, I dare say my cousin William is become a good scholar. He is at Oxford still, is he not?

Sil. Indeed, sir, to my cost.

Shal. A' must then to the inns o' court shortly.
I was once of Clement's Inn; where I think they will talk of mad Shallow yet.

Sil. You were called 'lusty Shallow' then, cousin.

Shal. By the mass, I was called any thing; and I would have done any thing indeed too, and roundly too. There was I, and little John Doit of Staffordshire, and black George Barnes, and Francis Pickbone, and Will Squel, a Cotswood man; you had not four such swinge-bucklers in all the inns o' court again: and I may say to you, we knew where the bona-robas were, and had the best of them all at commandment.
Then was Jack Falstaff, now Sir John, a boy, and page to Thomas Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk.

Sil. This Sir John, cousin, that comes hither anon about soldiers!

Shal. The same Sir John, the very same.
I saw him break Skogan's head at the court gate, when a' was a crack not thus high: and the very same day did I fight with one Sampson Stockfi-s, a fruitor, behind Gray's Inn. Jesu! Jesu! the mad days that I have spent; and to see how many of mine old acquaintance are dead!
Sil. We shall all follow, cousin.

Shal. Certain, 'tis certain; very sure, very sure; death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair!

Sil. Truly, cousin, I was not there.

Shal. Death is certain. Is old Double of your town living yet?

Sil. Dead, sir.

Shal. Jesu! Jesu! dead! a' drew a good bow; and dead! a' shot a fine shoot: John a Gaunt loved him well, and betted much money on his head. Dead! a' would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score; and carried you a forehand shaft a fourteen and fourteen and a half, that it would have done a man's heart good to see. How a score of ewes now?

Sil. Thereafter as they be: a score of good ewes may be worth ten pounds.

Shal. And is old Double dead?

Sil. Here come two of Sir John Falstaff's men, as I think.

Enter BARDOLPH, and One with him.

Bard. Good morrow, honest gentlemen: I beseech you, which is Justice Shallow?

Shal. I am Robert Shallow, sir; a poor esquire of this county, and one of the king's justices of the peace: what is your good pleasure with me?

Bard. My captain, sir, commends him to you; my captain, Sir John Falstaff: a tall gentleman, by heaven, and a most gallant leader.

Shal. He greets me well, sir: I knew him a good backword man. How doth the good knight? may I ask how my lady his wife doth?

Bard. Sir, pardon; a soldier is better accommodated than with a wife.

Shal. It is well said, in faith, sir; and it is well said indeed too. Better accommodated! it is good; yea, indeed, is it: good phrases are surely, and ever were, very commendable. Accommodated! it comes of accommodate: very good; a good phrase.

Bard. Pardon me, sir; I have heard the word. 'Phrase' call you it? By this good day, I know not the phrase; but I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated; that is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated; or when a man is, being, whereby a may be thought to be accommodated, which is an excellent thing.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Shal. It is very just. Look! here comes good Sir John. Give me your good hand, give me your worship's good hand. By my troth, you like well and bear your years very well: welcome, good Sir John.

Fal. I am glad to see you well, good Master Robert Shallow. Master Surecard, as I think?

Shal. No, Sir John; it is my cousin Silence, in commission with me.

Fal. Good Master Silence, it well befits you should be of the peace.

Sil. Your good worship is welcome.

Fal. Fie! this is hot weather, gentlemen. Have you provided me here half-a-dozen sufficient men?

Shal. Marry, have we, sir. Will you sit?

Fal. Let me see them, I beseech you.

Shal. Where's the roll? where's the roll where's the roll? Let me see, let me see, I me see: so, so, so, so, so, so: yea, marry, sir: Ralph Mouldy! Let them appear as I call, let them do so, let them do so. Let me see where is Mouldy!

Mould. Here, an't please you.

Shal. What think you, Sir John? a good-limb fellow; young, strong, and of good friends.

Fal. Is thy name Mouldy?

Mould. Yea, an't please you.

Fal. 'Tis the more time thou wert used.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! most excellent, i' faith! things that are moldy lack use: very singular good! In faith, well said, Sir John; very well said.

Fal. Prick him.

Mould. I was prick'd well enough before: you could have let me alone: my old dame w' be undone now for one to do her husbandry at her drudgery: you need not to have prick'd me: there are other men fitter to go out than I.

Fal. Go to: peace, Mouldy! you shall g

Mouldy, it is time you were spent.

Mould. Spent!

Shal. Peace, fellow, peace! stand aside, know you where you are? for the other, Sir John: let me see. Simon Shadow!

Fal. Yea, marry, let we have him to sit undr he's like to be a cold soldier.

Shal. Where's Shadow?

Shad. Here, sir.

Fal. Shadow, whose son art thou?

Shad. My mother's son, sir.

Fal. Thy mother's son! like enough, and thy father's shadow: so the son of the female is't shadow of the male: it is often so, indeed; b much of the father's substance.

Shal. Do you like him, Sir John?

Fal. Shadow will serve for summer; pri him, for we have a number of shadows to fill the muster-book.

Shal. Thomas Wart!

Wart. Where's he?

Fal. Wart. Here, sir.

Fal. Is thy name Wart?

Wart. Yea, sir.

Fal. Thou art a very ragged wart.

Wart. Shall I prick him, Sir John?

Fal. It were superfluous; for his apparel built upon his back, and the whole frame stand upon pins: prick him no more.

Shal. Ha, ha, ha! you can do it, sir; you c do it: I commend you well. Francis Feeble Fee. Here, sir.

Fal. What trade art thou, Feeble?

Fee. A woman's tailor, sir.

Shal. Shall I prick him, sir?

Fal. I you may; but if he had been a ma tailor he'd ha' prick'd you. Wit thou ma as many holes in an enemy's battle as thou ha done in a woman's petticoat?

Fee. I will do my good wil', sir: you can do no more.

Fal. Well said, good woman's tailor! well so courageous Feeble! Thou wilt be as valiant the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mou Prick the woman's tailor: well, Master Shal deo, Master Shallow.
Fec. I would Wart might have gone, sir.
Fal. I would thou wert a man's tailor, that on might'st mend him and make him fit to go, cannot put him to a private soldier that is the ider of so many thousands; let that suffice, o't forcible Feeble.

Fec. It shall suffice, sir.
Fal. I am bound to thee, reverend Feeble, ho is next!
Shal. Peter Bullcalf o' the green!
Fal. Yea, marry, let's see Bullcalf.
Bull. Here, sir.
Fal. 'Fore God, a likely fellow! Come, prick e Bullcalf till he roar again.

Bull. O Lord! good my lord captain.—
Fal. What dost thou roar before thou art liked?
Bull. O Lord! sir, I am a diseased man.
Fal. What disease hast thou?
Bull. A whoreson cold, sir; a cough, sir; thicke I caught with ringing in the king's affairs, and his coronation-day, sir.

Fal. Come, thou shalt go to the wars in a won; we will have away thy cold; and I will, he will such order as thy friends shall ring for. Is there all here?

Shal. Here is two more called than your mother; you must have but four here, sir: and I pray you, go in with me to dinner.
Fal. Come, I will go drink with you, but I must tarry dinner. I am glad to see you, by your troth, Master Shallow.

Shal. O, Sir John, do you remember since we y all night in the windmill in Saint George's ays?
Fal. No more of that, good Master Shallow, more of that.
Shal. Ha! 'twas a merry night. And is Jane rightwork alive?
Fal. She lives, Master Shallow.
Shal. She never could away with me.
Fal. Never, never; she would always say she old not abide Master Shallow.
Shal. By the mass, I could anger her to the art. She was then a bona-roba. Doth she jild her own self?
Fal. Old, old, Master Shallow.
Shal. Nay, she must be old; she cannot choose at be old; certain she's old; and had Robin rightwork by old Nightwork before I came to lement's Inn.
Sil. That's fifty-five year ago.
Shal. Ha! cousin Silence, that thou hadst seen at that knight and I have seen. Ha! if John, said I well?
Fal. We have heard the chimes at midnight, faster Shallow.
Shal. That, that we have, that we ave; in faith, Sir John, we have. Our watchword was 'Hem, boys!' Come, let's to dinner; come, let's to dinner: Jesus, the days that we ave seen! Come, come.

Exeunt FALSTAFF, SHALLOW, and SILENCE.

Bull. Good Master Corporate Bardolph, stand my friend, and here's four Harry ten shillings i French crowns for you. In very truth, sir, had as lieve be hanged, sir, as go: and yet, or mine own part, sir, I do not care; but rather, 'cause I am unwilling, and, for mine own part, have a desire to stay with my friends: else, sir, I did not care, for mine own part, so much.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Mow. And good Master corporal captain, for my old dame's sake, stand my friend: she has nobody to do anything about her when I am gone; and she is old and cannot help herself. You shall have forty, sir.

Bard. Go to; stand aside.

Fec. By my troth, I care not; a man can die but once; we owe God a death. I'll ne'er bear a base mind: ain't be my destiny, so; ain't be not, so. No man's too good to serve's prince; and let it go which way it will, he that dies this year is quit for the next.

Bard. Well said; thou 'rt a good fellow.
Fec. Faith, I'll bear no base mind.

Re-enter FALSTAFF and the Justices.

Fal. Come, sir, which men shall I have?

Shal. Four, of which you please.

Bard. Sir, a word with you: I have three pound to free Mouldy and Bullcalf.

Fal. Go to; well.

Shal. Come, Sir John, which four will you have?

Fal. Do you choose for me.

Shal. Marry then, Mouldy, Bullcalf, Feeble, and Shadow.

Fal. Mouldy and Bullcalf: for you, Mouldy, stay at home till you are past service: and for your part, Bullcalf, grow till you come unto it: I will none of you.

Shal. Sir John, Sir John, do not yourself wrong: they are your likeliest men, and I would have you served with the best.

Fal. Will you tell me, Master Shallow, how to choose a man? Care I for the limb, the thewes, the stature, bulk, and big assemblance of a man! Give me the spirit, Master Shallow. Here's Wart; you see what a ragged appearance it is: a' shall charge you and discharge you with the motion of a pewterer's hammer, come off and on swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket. And this same half-faced fellow, Shadow; give me this man: he presents no mark to the enemy; the foeman may with as great aim level at the edge of a penknife. And for a retreat; how swiftly will this Feeble the woman's tailor run off! O! give me the spare men, and spare me the great ones. Put me a caliver into Wart's hand, Bardolph.

Bard. Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus.

Fal. Come, manage me your caliver. So: very well: go to: very good, exceeding good. Oh! give me always a little, lean, old, chapped, bald shot. Well said, 'faith, Wart; thou'rt a good scab: hold, there's a tester for thee.

Shal. He is not his craft's master, he doth not do it right. I remember at Mile-end Green, when I lay at Clement's Inn, I was then Sir Dagonet in Arthur's show, there was a little quiver fellow, and a' would manage you his piece thus: and a' would about and about, and come you in, and come you in: 'rah, tah, tah,' would a' say; 'bunce' would a' say; and away again would a' go, and again would a' come: I shall ne'er see such a fellow.

Fal. These fellows will do well, Master Shallow.
God keep you, Master Silence: I will not use many words with you. Fare you well, gentlemen both: I thank you; I must a dozen mile to-night. Bardolph, give the soldiers coats.

Shall. Sir John, the Lord bless you! God prosper your affairs! God send us peace! At your return visit our house. Let our old acquaintance be renewed: peradventure I will with ye to the court.

Ful. 'Fore God, I would you would, Master Shallow.

Shall. Go to; I have spoke at a word. God keep you.

Ful. Fare you well, gentle gentlemen.

Exeunt Shallow and Silence.

On, Bardolph; lead the men away.

Exeunt Bardolph, Renivps, etc.

As I return I will fetch off these justices: I do see the bottom of Justice Shallow. Lord, Lord! how subject we old men are to this vice of lying. This same starved justice hath done nothing but prate to me of the wildness of his youth and the feats he hath done about Turnbull-street; and every third word a lie, dier paid to the nearer than the Turk's tribute. I do remember him at Clement's Inn like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring: when a' was naked he was for all the world like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife: a' was so forlorn that his dimensions to any thick sight were invincible: a' was the very genius of famine; yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him mandrake: a' came ever in the rearward of the fashion, and sung those tunes to the over-scutched huswivnes that he heard the carmen whistle, and 'ware they were his fancies or his good-nights. And now is this Vice's dagger become a squire, and talks as familiarly of John a Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn a' ne'er saw him but once in the Tilt-yard, and then he burst his head for crowding among the marshal's men. I saw it and told John a Gaunt he beat his own name; for you might have thrust him and all his apparel into an eel-skin; the case of a treble hautboy was a manion for him, a court; and now has he land and bowes. Well, I'll be acquainted with him if I return; and it shall go hard but I will make him a philo-sopher's two stones to me. If the young dace be a bait for the old pike, I see no reason in the law of nature but I may snap at him. Let time shape, and there an end.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Forest in Yorkshire.

Enter the Archbishop of York, Mowbray, Hastings, and Others.

Arch. What is this forest called?

Hast. 'Tis Gaultree Forest, an' shall please your grace.

Arch. Here stand, my lords, and send discoverers forth
To know the numbers of our enemies.

Hast. We have sent forth already.

Arch. 'Tis well done.

My friends and brethren in these great affairs, I must acquaint you that I have receiv'd
New-dated letters from Northumberland;
Their cold intent, tenour and substance, thus:

Here doth he wish his person, with such pow'r
As might hold sortance with his quality;
The which he could not levy; whereupon
He is retir'd, to ripe his growing fortunes,
To Scotland; and concludes in hearty prayer
That your attempts may overlive the hazard
And fearful meeting of their opposite.

Mowbr. Thus do the hopes we have in his touch ground
And dash themselves to pieces.

Enter a Messenger.

Hust. Now, what news?

Mess. West of this forest, scarcely off a mile
In goodly form comes on the enemy;
And, by the ground they hide, I judge the number
Upon or near the rate of thirty thousand.

Mowbr. The just proportion that we gave the out.
Let us sway on and face them in the field.

Arch. What well appointed leader fronts here?

Enter Westmoreland.

Mowbr. I think it is my Lord of Westmoreland.

West. Health and fair greeting from our general,
The prince, Lord John and Duke of Lancaster.

Arch. Say on, my Lord of Westmoreland, peace,
What doth concern your coming.

West. Then, my lord,
Unto your grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech. If that rebellious Came like itself, in base and abject routs,
Laid on by bloody youth, guarded with rags,
And comtempn'd by boys and beggary;
I say, if dam'd commotion so appear'd,
In his true, native, and most proper shape,
You, reverence father, and these noble lords
Had not been here, to dress the ugly form
Of base and bloody insurrection
With your fair honours. You, lord archbishop!
Whose se is by a civil peace maintain'd,
Whose beard the silver hand of peace hath touch'd,
Whose learning and good letters peace hath tutor'd,
Whose white investments figure innocence,
The dove and very blessed spirit of peace,
Wherefore do you so ill translate yourself
Out of the speech of peace that bears such grace
Into the harsh and boisterous tongue of war;
Turning your books to graves, your ink to blood
Your pens to lances, and your tongue divine
To a loud trumpet and a point of war?

Arch. Wherefore do I this? so the question stands.
Briefly to this end: we are all diseas'd;
And with our surfeiting and wanton hours
Have brought ourselves into a burning fever,
And we must bleed for it: of which disease
Our late king, Richard, being infected, died.
But, my most noble Lord of Westmoreland,
I take not on me here as a physician,
Nor do I as an enemy to peace
Troop in the thrones of military men;
But rather show awhile like fearful war,
To diet rank minds sick of happiness
I purge the obstructions which begin to stop very veins of life. Hear me more plainly: we in equal balance justly weigh'd at wrongs our arms may do, what wrongs we suffer, I find our griefs heavier than our offences.

See which way the stream of time doth run, I am enforce'd from our most quiet sphere at the rough torrent of occasion.
I have the summary of all our griefs, and time shall serve to show in articles, ich long ere this we offer'd to the king,

Might by no suit gain our audience.
If we are wrong'd and would unfold our griefs,
Are denied access unto his person
By those men that most have done us wrong,

Dangers of the days but newly gone,

If memory is written on the earth
Yet appearing blood, and the examples
Every minute's instance, present now,

Put us in these ill-beaming arms;
To break peace or any branch of it,
To establish here a peace indeed,
Carrying both in name and quality.

West. When ever yet was your appeal denied?

Mowbray, you have been galled by the king!
At peer hath been suborn'd to grante on you,
You should seal this lawless bloody book
Org'd rebellion with a seal divine,

Consecrate commotion's bitter edge!

Mowb. My brother general, the commonwealth,
Brother born an household cruelty,
The quarrel in particular.

West. There is no need of any such redress;
If there were, it not belongs to you.

Westmoreland. Why not to him in part, and to us all
We feel the bruises of the days before.

Suffer the condition of these times
A heavy and unequal hand
Of our honours?

West. O! my good Lord Mowbray,
True to the times to their necessities,

You shall see indeed, it is the time,
But not the king, that doth you injuries.
For your part, it not appears to me
From the king or in the present time
You should have an inch of any ground
Build a grief on: were you not restor'd

All the Duke of Norfolk's signories,

Noble and right well remember'd father's?

West. What thing, in honour, had my father lost,

I need to be reviv'd and breath'd in me!
King that lov'd him, as the state stood then,

Force perfuse compell'd to bani-h him:
Then that Harry Bolingbroke and he,

Mounted and both roused in their seats,
Being neighing courser daring of the spur.

Armed in staves in charge, their beavers down,

Breeves of fire sparkling through sights of steel,

The loud trumpet blowing them together;

Then, then, when there was nothing could have stay'd
Father from the breast of Bolingbroke,
When the king did throw his warder down,

Own life hung upon the staff he throw'd;

Threw he down himself and all their lives
By indictment and by dint of sword
Since miscarried under Bolingbroke.

West. You speak, Lord Mowbray, now you

The Earl of Hereford was reputed then
In England the most valiant gentleman:
Who knows on whom fortune would then have Smil'd?

But if your father had been victor there,
He ne'er had borne it out of Coventry;
For all the country in a general voice

Cried hate upon him; and all their prayers and love

Were set on Hereford, whom they doted on
And bless'd and grac'd indeed, more than the king.

But this is mere digression from my purpose.
Here come I from our princely general
To know your griefs; to tell you from his grace
That he will give you audience; and wherein
It shall appear that your demands are just,
You shall enjoy them; every thing set off
That might so much as think you enemies.

Mowb. But he hath forc'd us to compel this offer,

And it proceeds from policy, not love.

West. Mowbray, you overween to take it so;
This offer comes from mercy, not from fear:

For, lo! within a ken our army lies,

Upon mine honour, all too confident
To give admittance to a thought of fear.
Our battle is more full of names than yours,
Our men more perfect in the use of arms,
Our armour all as strong, our cause the best;
Then reason will our hearts should be as good:
Say you not then our offer is compell'd.

Mowb. Well, by my will we shall admit no parley.

West. That argues but the shame of your offensive:

A rotten case abides no handling.

Hast. Hatti the Prince John a full commission,

In very ample virtue of his father,
To hear and absolutely to determine
Of what conditions we shall stand upon?

West. That is intended in the general's name.

I muse you make so slight a question.

Arch. Then take, my Lord of Westmoreland,

This schedule,

For this contains our general grievances:

Each several article herein restor'd;

All members of our cause, both here and hence,

That are insinu'd to this action,

Acquitted by a true substantial form

And present execution of our wills

To us and to our purposes consign'd;

We come within our awful banks again

And knit our powers to the arm of peace.

West. This will I show the general. Please you, lords,

In sight of both our battles we may meet;

And either end in peace, which God so frame!

Or to the place of difference call the swords

Which must decide it.

Arch. My lord, we will do so.

Westmoreland.

Mowb. There is a thing within my bosom tells me

That no conditions of our peace can stand.

Hast. Fear you not that: if we can make our peace

Upon such large terms and so absolute
As our conditions shall consist upon,
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.

Mowb. Yea, but our valuation shall be such
That every slight and false-derived cause,
Yea, every idle, nice, and wanton reason
Shall to the king taste of this action;
That, were our royal faiths martyrs in love,
We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff
And good from bad find no partition.

Arch. No, no, my lord. Note this; the king is weary
Of dainty and such picking grievances:
For he hath found to end one doubt by death
Revives two greater in the heirs of life;
And therefore will he wipe his tables clean,
And keep no tell-tale to his memory
That may repeat and history his loss
To new remembrance; for full well he knows
He cannot so precisely weed this land
As his misdoubts present occasion:
His foes are so enrooted with his friends
That, plucking to unfix an enemy,
He doth unfasten so and shake a friend:
So that this land, like an offensive wife
That hath enrag'd him on to offer strokes,
As he is striking, holds his infant up
And hangs resolv'd correction in the arm
That was uprear'd to execution.

Hast. Besides, the king hath wasted all his rods
On late offenders, that he now doth lack
The very instruments of chastisement;
So that his power, like to a fangless lion,
May offer, but not hold.

Arch. 'Tis very true:
And therefore be assur'd, my good lord marshal,
If we do now make our atonement well,
Our peace will, like a broken limb united,
Grow stronger for the breaking.

Mowb. Be it so.
Here is return'd my Lord of Westmoreland.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

West. The prince is here at hand: pleaseth your lordship
To meet his grace just distance 'tween our armies?

Mowb. Your grace of York, in God's name then, set forward.

Arch. Before, and greet his grace: my lord,
we come.

Scene II.—Another Part of the Forest.

Enter, from one side, MOWBRAY, the Archbishop,
HASTINGS, and others: from the other side,
JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND,
Officers, and Attendants.

Lanc. You are well encounter'd here, my cousin
Mowbray:
Good day to you, gentle lord archbishop; And so to you, Lord Hastings, and to all.
My Lord of York, it better show'd with you,
When that your flock, assembled by the bell,
Encircled you to hear with reverence
Your exposition on the holy text
Than now to see you here an iron man, Cheering a rout of rebels with your drum,
Turning the word to sword and life to death. 10

That man that sits within a monarch's heart
And ripens in the sunshine of his favour,
Would he abuse the countenance of the king
Alack! what mischief might he set abroad
In shadow of such greatness. With you, ho, bishop,
It is even so. Who hath not heard it spoken:
How deep you were within the books of God
To us the speaker in his parliament;
To us the imagin'd voice of God himself;
The very opener and intelligencer
Between the grace, the sanctity of heaven,
And our dull workings: O! who shall believe
But you misuse the reverence of your place,
Employ the countenance and grace of heaven
As a false favourite doth his prince's name,
In deeds dishonourable? You have ta'en up
Under the counterfeit zeal of God,
The subjects of his substitute, my father;
And both against the peace of heaven and he Have here upswarm'd them.

Arch. Good my Lord of Lancaster
I am not here against your father's peace;
But, as I told my Lord of Westmoreland,
The time disorder'd doth, in common sense,
Crowd us and crush us to this monstrous for
To hold our safety up. I sent your grace
The parcels and particulars of our grief,
The which hath been with scorn shov'd in the court,
Whereon this Hydra son of war is born;
Whose dangerous eyes may well be charm'd as
With grant of our most just and right desire
And true obedience, of this madness cur'd,
Stoop tamely to the foot of majesty.

Mowb. If not, we ready are to try our fort
To the last man.

Hast. And though we here fall do
We have supplies to second our attempt:
If they miscarry, theirs shall second them;
And so success of mischief shall be born,
And heir from heir shall hold this quarrel un
While England shall have generation.

Lanc. You are too shallow, Hastings, m too shallow,
To sound the bottom of the after-times.
West. Pleaseth your grace to answer the directly
How far forth you do like their articles?

Lanc. I like them all, and do allow them with
And swear here by the honour of my blood,
My father's purposes have been mistook,
And some about him have too lavishly
Wrested his meaning and authority.
My lord, these griefs shall be with speed redressd
Upon my soul, they shall. If this may please Discharge your powers unto their several count.
As we will ours: and here between the army
Let's drink together friendly and embrace,
That all their eyes may bear those tokens of
Of our restored love and amity.

Arch. I take your princely word for these dresses.

Lanc. I give it you, and will maintain my word.
And thereupon I drink unto your grace.

Hast. Go, captain, and deliver to the arm
This news of peace: let them have pay, and if
I know it will well please them: hie to captain.

Exit Officer

Arch. To you, my noble Lord of Westmoreland

Vest. I pledge your grace: an if you knew what pains we bestow'd to breed this present peace,
I would drink freely; but my love to you will show itself more openly hereafter.

reh. I do not doubt you.

Vest. I am glad of it.

Vest. Ith to my lord and gentle cousin Mowbray.

lowb. You wish me health in very happy season;
I am, on the sudden, something ill.

reh. Against ill chances men are ever merry, heaviness foreruns the good event.

Vest. Therefore be merry, coz; since sudden sorrow res to say thus, 'Some good thing comes to-morrow.'

reh. Believe me, I am passing light in spirit, lowb. So much the worse if your own rule be true.

anc. The word of peace is render'd: hark,
how they shout!

lowb. This had been cheerful after victory.
reh. A peace is of the nature of a conquest;
then both parties nobly are subdued,
I neither party loser.

anc. Go, my lord,
I let our army be discharged too.

Exit WESTMORELAND.

lowb. This cousin, wherefore stands our army still?
Vest. The leaders, having charge from you to stand,
not go off until they hear you speak.

anc. They know their duties.

Re-enter WESTMORELAND.

Vest. My lord, our army is dispers'd already:
the youthful steers unyok'd, they take their courses
west, north, south; or, like a school broke up, hurries to toward his homeland sporting place.

Vest. Good tidings, my Lord Hastings; for the which
I arrest thee, traitor, of high treason:
I, you lord archbishop, and you, Lord
Mowbray,
capital treason I attach you both.

lowb. Is this proceeding just and honourable?
Vest. Is your assembly so?

reh. Will you thus break your faith?

L. Lane. I pawn'd thee none.
rems'd you redress of these same grievances hereof you did complain; which, by mine honour, ill perform with a most Christian care.
For you, rebels, look to taste the due for rebellion and such acts as yours.
The shallowly did you these arms commence,
udly brought here and foolishly sent hence.

Strike up our drums! pursue the scatter'd stray:
God, and not we, hath safely fought to-day.

Some guard these traitors to the block of death;
Treason's true bed, and yielder up of breath.

Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Forest.

alarums. Excursions. Enter FALSTAFF and COLEVILE, meeting.

Fal. What's your name, sir? of what condition are you, and of what place, I pray?
Cole. I am a knight, sir; and my name is Colevile of the dale.

Fal. Well then, Colevile is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the dale: Colevile shall still be your name, a traitor your degree, and the dungeon your place, a place deepenough:
so shall you be still Colevile of the dale.

Cole. Are not you Sir John Falstaff?

Fal. As good a man as he, sir, who'er I am.
Do ye yield, sir, or shall I swear for you? If I do sweat, they are the drops of thy lovers, and they weep for thy death; therefore rouse up fear and trembling, and do observance to my mercy.

Cole. I think you are Sir John Falstaff, and in that thought yield me.

Fal. I have a whole school of tongues in this belly of mine, and not a tongue of them all speaks any other word but my name. An I had but a belly of any indifferency, I were simply the most active fellow in Europe: my womb, my womb, my womb undoes me. Here comes our general.

Enter JOHN OF LANCASTER, WESTMORELAND,
BLUNT, and Others.

Lane. The heat is past, follow no further now.
Call in the powers, good cousin Westmoreland.

Exit WESTMORELAND.

Now, Falstaff, where have you been all this while?
When every thing is ended, then you come:
These tardy tricks of yours will, on my life,
One time or other break some gallows' back.

Fal. I would be sorry, my lord, but it should be thus: I never knew yet but rebuke and check was the reward of valour. Do you think me a swallow, an arrow, or a bullet? have I, in my poor and old motion, the expedition of thought?
I have speeded hither with the very extremest inch of possibility; I have foundered nine score and odd posts; and here, travel-tainted as I am,
have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Colevile of the dale, a most furious knight and valorous enemy. But what of that?
he saw me, and yielded; that I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome, 'I came,
saw, and overcame.'

Lane. It was more of his courtesy than your deserving.

Fal. I know not: here he is, and here I yield him; and I beseech your grace, let it be booked with the rest of this day's deeds; or, by the Lord, I will have it in a particular ballad else, with mine own picture on the top on 't, Colevile kissing my foot. To which course if I be enforced, if you do not all show like gilt two-pences to me, and I in the clear sky of fame o'er-shine you as much as the full moon doth the cinders of the element, which show like pins heads to her, believe not the word of the noble.
Therefore let me have right, and let desert mount.
Lanc. Thine's too heavy to mount.
Fal. Let it shine then.
Lanc. Thine's too thick to shine.

Fal. Let it do something, my good lord, that may do me good, and call it what you will.
Lanc. Is thy name Coleville?
Cole. It is, my lord.
Lanc. A famous rebel art thou, Coleville.
Fal. And a famous true subject took him.
Cole. I am, my lord, but as my betters are That led me hither: had they been rul'd by me You should have won them dearer than you have.
Fal. I know not how they sold themselves: but thou, like a kind fellow, gavest thyself away gratis, and I thank thee for thee.

Re-enter Westmoreland.

Lanc. Now, have you left pursuit?
West. Retreat is made and execution stay'd.
Lanc. Send Coleville with his confederates
To York, to present execution.
Blunt, lead him hence, and see you guard him sure.

Exeunt Blunt and Others with Coleville, guarded.

And now dispatch we toward the court, my lords.
I hear the king my father is sore sick:
Our news shall go before us to his majesty,
Which, cousin, you shall bear to comfort him;
And we with sober speed will follow you.
Fal. My lord, I beseech you, give me leave to go Through Gloucestershire; and when you come to court Stand my good lord, pray, in your good report.

Lanc. Fare you well, Falstaff: I, in my condition,
Shall better speak of you than you deserve.

Exeunt all but Falstaff.

Fal. I would you had but the wit: 'twere better than your dukedom.
Good faith, this same young sober-blooded boy doth not love me; nor a man cannot make him laugh; but that's no marvel, he drinks no wine. There's never none of these demure boys come to any proof; for thin drink doth so over-cool their blood, and making many fish-meals, that they fall into a kind of male green-sickness; and then, when they marry, they get wenches. They are generally fools and cowards, which some of us should be too but for inflammation. A good sherris-sack hath a two-fold operation in it. It ascends me into the brain; dries me there all the foolish and dull and crude vapours which environ it; makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble fiery and delectable shapes; which, delivered o'er to the voice, the tongue, which is the birth, becomes excellent wit. The second property of your excellent sherris is, the warming of the blood; which, before cold and settled, left the liver white and pale, which is the badge of pusillanimity and cowardice: but the sherris warms it and makes it course from the inwards to the parts extreme. It illumineth the face, which, as a beacon, gives warning to all the rest of this little kingdom, man, to arm; and then the vital commoners and inland petty spirits must me all to their captain, the heart, who, great and puffed up with this retinue, doth any deed of courage; and this valour comes of sherris. So that skill in a weapon is nothing without sack, for that set a-work; and learning, a mere hoard of gold

By a devil till sack commences it and sets it
And use. Hereof comes it that Prince Hal is valiant; for the cold blood he did natural inherit of his father, he hath, like lean, stern and bare land, manured, husbanded, and till with excellent endeavour of drinking good a good store of fertile sherris, that he is beco very hot and valiant. If I had a thousand so the first human principle I would teach th should be, to forswear thin potations and addict themselves to sack.

Enter Bardolph.

How now, Bardolph!

Bard. The army is discharged all and gone.
Fal. Let them go. I'll through Gloucestershire; and there will I visit Master Rob Shallow, esquire: I have him already tempi between my finger and my thumb, and shor will I seal with him. Come away.

Exeunt.

Scene IV.—Westminster. The Jerusalem Chamber.

Enter King Henry, Clarence, Gloucester, Warwick, and Others.

K. Hen. Now, lords, if God doth give succe ful end
To this debate that bleedeth at our doors,
We will our youth lead on to higher fields
And draw no swords but what are sanctified.
Our navy is address'd, our power collected,
Our substitutes in absence well invested,
And every thing lies level to our wish:
Only, we want a little personal strength;
And pause us, till these rebels, now afoot,
Come underneath the yoke of government.
War, Both which we doubt not but your majes
Shall soon enjoy.

K. Hen. Humphrey, my son of Gloucester:
Where is the prince your brother?

Glow. I think he's gone to hunt, my lord, Windor.

K. Hen. And how accompanied?

Glow. I do not know, my lord.

K. Hen. Is not his brother, Thomas of Clarence
with him?

Glow. No, my good lord; he is in presence he Clar. What would my lord and father?

K. Hen. Nothing but well to thee, Thomas Clarence.

How chance thou art not with the prince t
brother?

He loves thee, and thou dost neglect him, Thomo
Thou hast a better place in his affection
Than all thy brothers: cherish it, my boy,
And noble offices thou may'st effect
Of mediation, after I am dead,
Between his greatness and thy other brethren
Therefore omit him not; blunt not his love,
Nor lose the good advantage of his grace
By seeming cold or careless of his will;
For he is gracious, if he be observ'd:
He hath a tear for pity and a hand
Open as day for melting charity;
Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's fill
As humorous as winter, and as sudden
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

K. Hen. Which ever in the hauchof winter sings
The lifting up of day.

Enter Harcourt.

Har. From enemies heaven keep your majesty;
And, when they stand against you, may they fall
As those that I am come to tell you of!
The Earl Northumberland and the Lord Bardolph,
With a great power of English and of Scots,
Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown.
The manner and true order of the fight
This packet, please it you, contains at large.

K. Hen. And wherefore should these good news make me sick?

Will fortune never come with both hands full
But write her fair words still in foulest letters?
She either gives a stomach and no food;
Such are the poor, in health; or else a feast
And takes away the stomach; such are the rich,
That have abundance and enjoy it not.
I should rejoice now at this happy news,
And now my sight fails, and my brain is giddy.
O me! come near me, now I am much ill.

Glo. Comfort, your majesty!

Clar. O my royal father! West. My sovereign lord, cheer up yourself:
look up!

War. Be patient, princes; you do know these fits are with his bigness very ordinary:
Stand from him, give him air; he'll straight be well.

Clar. No, no; he cannot long hold out these pangs:
The incessant care and labour of his mind
Hath wrought the mure that should confine it in
So thin that life looks through and will break out.

Glo. The people fear me; for they do observe
Unfather'd heirs and loathly births of nature:
The seasons change their manners, as the year
Had found some months asleep and leapt'd them over.

Clar. The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between;
And the old folk, time's doting chronicles,
Say it did so a little time before
That our great-strings Edward, sick'dand died.

War. Speak lower, princes, for the king recovers.

Glo. This apoplexy will certain be his end.

K. Hen. I pray you, take me up, and bear me hence
Into some other chamber: softly, pray. Exeunt.

Scene V.—Another Chamber.

King Henry lying on a bed: Clarence, Gloucester, Warwick, and Others, in attendance.

K. Hen. Let there be no noise made, my gentle friends;
Unless some dull and favourable hand
Will whisper music to my weary spirit.

War. Call for the music in the other room.

K. Hen. Set me the crown upon my pillow here.

Clar. His eye is hollow, and he changes much.

War. Less noise, less noise!

Enter the Prince.

Prince. Who saw the Duke of Clarence?

Clar. Who am here, brother, full of heaviness.
Prince. How now! rain within doors, and none abroad!

How doth the king?

Glo. Exceeding ill.

Prince. Heard he the good news yet?

Tell it him.

Glo. He alter'd much upon the hearing it.

Prince. If he be sick with joy, he'll recover without physic.

War. Not so much noise, my lords. Sweet prince, speak low;
The king your father is dispos'd to sleep.

Clar. Let us withdraw into the other room.

War. Will 't please your grace to go along with us?

Prince. No; I will sit and watch here by the king.

Exit all but the PRINCE.

Why doth the crown lie there upon his pillow,
Being so troublesome a bedfellow? 20
O polish'd perturbation! golden care!
That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide
To many a watchful night! sleep with it now!
Yet not so sound and half so deeply sweet
As he whose brow with homely biggin bound Snores out the watch of night. O majesty!
When thou dost pinch thy bearer, thou dost sit
Like a rich armour worn in heat of day,
That scalds with safety. By his gates of breath
There lies a downy feather which stirs not:
Did he suspect, that light and weightless down
Perforce must move. My gracious lord! my father!
This sleep is sound indeed; this is a sleep
That from this golden rigol hath divorce'd
So many English kings. Thy due from me
Is tears and heavy sorrows of the blood,
Which nature, love, and filial tenderness
Shall, O dear father! pay thee plenteously:
My due from thee is this imperial crown,
Which, as immediate from thy place and blood,
Derives itself to me. Lo! here it sits, 41
Putting it on his head.

Which heaven shall guard; and put the world's whole strength
Into one giant arm, it shall not force
This lineal honour from me. This from thee
Will I to mine leave, as 'tis left to me. Exit.

K. Hen. Warwick! Gloucester! Clarence!

Re-enter Warwick, Gloucester, Clarence, and the rest.

Clar. Dost the king call?

War. What would your majesty? How fares your grace?

K. Hen. Why did you leave me here alone,
My lords?

Clar. We left the prince my brother here, my liege,
Who undertook to sit and watch by you.

K. Hen. The Prince of Wales! Where is he? I let me see him:
He is not here.

War. This door is open; he is gone this way.
Glo. He came not through the chamber where we stay'd.

K. Hen. Where is the crown? who took it from my pillow?

War. When we withdrew, my liege, we left it here.

K. Hen. The prince hath ta'en it hence: go seek him out.

Is he so hasty that he doth suppose
My sleep my death?

Find him, my Lord of Warwick; chide him hither.

Exit WARWICK.

This part of his conjoins with my disease,
And helps to end me. See, sons, what thing you are!

How quickly nature falls into revolt
When gold becomes her object!

For this the foolish over-careful fathers
Have broke their sleep with thoughts,
Their brains with care, their bones with industry.

For this they have engrossed and pill'd up
The canker'd heaps of strange-achieved gold;
For this they have been thoughtful to invest
Their sons with arts and martial exercises:
When, like the bee, culling from every flower
The virtuous sweets,
Our thighs packed with wax, our mouths with honey,
We bring it to the hive, and like the bees,
Are murder'd for our pains. This bitter taste
Yield his engrossments to the ending father.

Re-enter WARWICK.

Now, where is he that will not stay so long
Till his friend sickness hath determin'd me?

War. My lord, I found the prince in the next room,
Washing with kindly tears his gentle checks,
With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow
That tyranny, which never quaff'd but blood,
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knaps
With gentle eye-drops. He is coming hither.

K. Hen. But wherefore did he take away his crown?

Re-enter the PRINCE.

Lo! where he comes. Come hither to me, Han
Depart the chamber, leave us here alone.

Exeunt WARWICK and the rest.

Prince. I never thought to hear you speak so.

K. Hen. Thy wish was father, Harry, to th' thought:
I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.
Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair
That thou wilt needs invest thee with my honours
Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth!
Thou seek'st the greatness that will overweigh thee.
Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind
That it will quickly drop: my day is dim.
Thou hast stol'n that which after some few hours
Were thine without offence; and at my death
Thou hast seal'd up my expectation:
Thy life did manifest thou low'dst me not;
And thou wilt have me die assur'd of it.
Thou bid'st a thousand daggars in thy thought,
Which thou hast whetted on thy stony heart.
To stab at half an hour of my life.
What! canst thou not forbear me half an hour
Then get thee gone and dig my grave thyself
And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear
That thou art crowned, not that I am dead.
Let all the tears that should bedew my hear's
Be drops of balm to sanctify thy head:
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

...my compound me with forgotten dust;
e that which gave thee life unto the worms,
c. down my officers, break my decrees;
now a time is come to mock at form.
Try the Fifth is crown'd! Up, vanity!
wn, royal state! all you sage counsellors,
d to the English court assemble now,
on every region, apes of idleness!
w, neighbour-confinings, purge you of your scum:
ev you a rufian that will swear, drink,dance,el the night, rob, murder, and commit;
olest sins the newest kind of ways?
happy, he will trouble you no more:
gland shall double gild his treble guilt, gland shall give him office, honour, might;
the fifth Harry from cur'd license plucks
a muzzle of restraint, and the wild dog ill flesh his tooth on every innocent.
my poor kingdom! sick with civil blows.
then that my care could not withhold thy riots,
at wilt thou do when riot is thy care?
though wilt be a wilderness again,
bled with wolves, thy old inhabitants.
Prince. O! pardon me, my liege; but for my ears, impediments unto my speech, and forestall'd this dear and deep rebuke
you with grief had spoke and I had heard a course of it so far. There is your crown;
d he that wears the crown immortality and guard it yours! If it affect me more as your honour and as your renown,
t me no more from this obedience rise, rich my most true and inward duteous spirit
ucheth, this prostrate and exterior bending.
d witness with me, when I here came in, d found no course of breath within your majesty,
wo cold it struck my heart! If I do feign, let me in my present wildness die d never live to show the incredulous world noable change that I have purposed.
sing to look on you, thinking you dead,
I dead almost, my liege, to think you were,
pake unto this crown as having sense,
d thus upbraid'd it: 'The care on thee depending
th fed upon the body of my father;
erefore, thou best of gold art worst of gold:
her, less fine in carat, is more precious;
serving life in medicine potable:
t thou, most fine, most honour'd, most renown'd, st eat thy bearer up.' Thus, my most royal liege,
caus't it, I put it on my head,
y with it, as with an enemy
at had before my face murder'd my father,
the quarrel of a true inheritor.
it if it did infect my blood with joy,
swell my thoughts to any strain of pride;
any rebel or vain spirit of mine with the least affection of a welcome ve entertainment to the might of it.
Here God for ever keep it from my head,
'd make me as the poorest vassal is at doth with awe and terror kneel to it!
K. Hen. O my son!
'd put it in thy mind to take it hence,
at thou might'st win the more thy father's love,
Pleading so wisely in excuse of it.
Come hither, Harry: sit thou by my bed;
and, hear, I think, the very latest counsel
That ever I shall breathe. God knows, my son, by what by-paths and indirect crook'd ways
I met this crown; and I myself know well
How troublesome it set upon my head:
To thee it shall descend with better quiet,
Better opinion, better confirmation;
For all the soil of the achievement goes
With me into the earth. It seem'd in me
But as an honour snatch'd with boisterous hand,
And I had many living to upbraid
My gain of it by their assistances;
Which daily grew to quarrel and to bloodshed.
Wounding supposed peace. All these bold fears
Thou seest with peril I have answered;
For all my reign hath been but as a scene
Acting that argument; and now my death
Changes the mode: for what in me was purchas'd,
Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort;
So thou the garland wear'st successively.
Yet, though thou stand'st more sure than I could do,
Thou art not firm enough, since griefs are green;
And all my friends, which thou must make thy
friends,
Have but their stings and teeth nowly ta'en out;
By whose fell working I was first advance'd,
And by whose power I well might lodge a fear
To be again displac'd: which to avoid,
I cut them off; and had a purpose now
To lead out many to the Holy Land,
Lest rest and lying still might make them look Too near unto my state. Therefore, my Harry,
Be it thy course to busy giddy minds
With foreign quarrels; that action, hence borne out,
May waste the memory of the former days.
More would I, but my lungs are wasted so
That strength of speech is utterly denied me.
How I came by the crown, O God forgive!
And grant it may with thee in true peace live.
Prince. My gracious liege,
You won it, wore it, kept it, gave it me;
Then plain and right must my possession be:
Which I with more than with a common pain
'Gainst all the world will rightfully maintain.

Enter John of Lancaster.

Lanc. Health, peace, and happiness to my royal father!

K. Hen. Thou bring'st me happiness and peace, son John;

But health, alack, with youthful wings is flown
From this bare wither'd trunk: upon thy sight
My worldly business makes a period.

Where is my Lord of Warwick?

Prince. My Lord of Warwick!

Re-enter Warwick with Others.

K. Hen. Dost any name particular belong
Unto the lodging where I first did swoon?
War. 'Tis call'd Jerusalem, my noble lord.

K. Hen. Land be to God! even there my life must end.
I had been prophesied to me many years
I should not die but in Jerusalem,
Which vainly I suppos'd the Holy Land.
But bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie:
In that Jerusalem shall Harry die.

Exeunt.

ACT V.

Enter SHALLOW, FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, and PAGE.

Shal. By cock and pie, sir, you shall not away to-night. What! Davy, I say.

Fol. You must excuse me, Master Robert

Shall. I will not excuse you; you shall not be excused; excuses shall not be admitted; there is no excuse shall serve; you shall not be excused. Why, Davy!

Enter Davy.

Davy. Here, sir.

Shal. Davy, Davy, Davy, Davy, let me see,

Davy; let me see: yea, marry, William cook, bid him come hither. Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Marry, sir, thus; those precepts cannot be served: and, again, sir, shall we sow the headland with wheats!

Shal. With red wheats, Davy. But for William cook: are there no young pigeons?

Davy. Yes, sir. Here is now the smith's note for shoeing and plough-irons.

Shal. Let it be cast and paid. Sir John, you shall not be excused.

Davy. Now, sir, a new link to the bucket must needs be had; and, sir, do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Hinckley fair?

Shal. A' shall answer it. Some pigeons, Davy,

a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kicksbaws, tell William cook.

Davy. Doth the man of war stay all night, sir?

Shal. Yea, Davy. I will use him well. A friend i' the court is better than a penny in purses. Use his men well, Davy, for they are arrant knaves, and will backbite.

Davy. No worse than they are backbitten, sir:

for they have marvellous foul linens.

Shal. Well conceited, Davy: about thy business, Davy.

Davy. I beseech you, sir, to countenance Wiliam Visor of Wincot against Clement Perkes of the hill.

Shal. There are many complaints, Davy, against that Visor: that Visor is an arrant knave, on my knowledge.

Davy. I grant your worship that he is a knave, sir; but yet, God forbid, sir, but a knave should have some countenance at his friend's request. An honest man, sir, is able to speak for himself, when a knave is not. I have served your worship truly, sir, this eight years; and if I cannot once or twice in a quarter bear out a knave against an honest man, I have but a very little credit with your worship. The knave is mine honest friend, sir; therefore, I beseech your worship,

let him be countenanced.

Shal. Go to; I say he shall have no wrong.

Look about, Davy.

Exit Davy.

Where are you, Sir John? Come, come, com-

Bardolph.

Bard. I am glad to see your worship.

Ch. Just. I hope not dead.

War. He's walk'd the way of nature. And

Ch. Just. I know he doth not, and do arm's war. Here comes the prince.

Enter King Henry the Fifth, attended.

Ch. Just. Good morrow, and God save your majesty!

K. Hen. V. This new and gorgeous garment,

majesty,

not so easy on me as you think.

thers, you mix your sadness with some fear:

is the English, not the Turkish court;

Amurath an Amurath succeeds,

Harry Harry. Yet be sad, good brothers, by my faith, it very well becomes you:

row so royally in you appears at I will deeply put the fashion

d wear it in my heart. Why then, be sad;

t entertain no more of it, good brothers,

an a joint burden laid upon us all.

r me, by heaven, I bid you be assur'd,

be your father and your brother too;

m me but bear your love, I'll bear your cares:

t weep that Harry's dead, and so will I;

t Harry lives, that shall convert those tears number into hours of happiness.

lane, etc. We hope no other from your majesty.

K. Hen. V. You all look strangely on me: To

The Chief Justice. And you most;

are, I think, assur'd I love you not.

Ch. Just. I am assur'd, if I be measur'd rightly, war majesty hath no just cause to hate me.

K. Hen. V. No!

ow might a prince of my great hopes forget great indignities you laid upon me?

hat! rate, rebuke, and roughly send to prison immediate heir of England! Was this easy?

ay this be wash'd in Lethe, and forgotten?

Ch. Just. I then did use the person of your
father;

The image of his power lay then in me:

And, in the administration of his law,

While I was busy for the commonwealth,

Your highness pleased to forget my place,

The majesty and power of law and justice,

The image of the king whom I presented,

And struck one in my very seat of judgment;

Whereon, as an offender to your father,

I gave bold way to my authority,

And did commit you. If the deed were ill,

Be you contented, wearing now the gurland,

To have a son set your decrees at nought,

To pluck down justice from your awful bench,

To trip the course of law, and blunt the sword

That guards the peace and safety of your person:

Nay, more, to spurn at your most royal image

And mock your workings in a second body.

Question your royal thoughts, make the case
yours;

Be now the father and propose a son,

Hear your own dignity so much profan'd,

See your most dreadful laws so loosely slighted,

Behold yourself so by a son disdain'd;

And then imagine me taking your part,

And in your power soft silencing your son:

After this cold consideration, sentence me;

And, as you are a king, speak in your state

What I have done that misbecame my place, 100

My person, or my liege's sovereignty.

K. Hen. V. You are right, justice; and you weigh this well;

Therefore still bear the balance and the sword:

And I do wish your honours may increase

Till you do live to see a son of mine

Offend you and obey you, as I did.

So shall I live to speak my father's words:

'Happy am I, that have a man so bold

That dares do justice on my proper son;

And not less happy, having such a son, 110

That would deliver up his greatness so

Into the hands of justice.' You did commit me:

For which, I do commit into your hand

The unstained sword that you have used to bear;

With this remembrance, that you use the same

With the like bold, just, and impartial spirit

As you have done 'gainst me. There is my hand:

You shall be as a father to my youth;

My voice shall sound as you do prompt mine ear

And I will stoop and humble my intents

To your well-practis'd wise directions.

And, princes all, believe me, I beseech you;

My father is gone wild into his grave,

For in his tomb lie my afflictions;

And with his spirit sadly I survive,

To mock the expectation of the world,

To frustrate prophecies, and to raze out

Rotten opinion, who hath writ me down

After my seeming. The tide of blood in me

Hath proudly flow'd in vanity till now:

Now doth it turn and ebb back to the sea,

Where it shall mingle with the state of floods

And flow henceforth in formal majesty.

Now call we our high court of parliament;

And let us show such limbs of noble counsel,

That the great body of our state may go

In equal rank with the best govern'd nation;

That war, or peace, or both at once, may be

As things acquainted and familiar to us; 130
In which you, father, shall have foremost hand. Our coronation done, we will accite, As I before remember'd, all our state: And, God consigning to my good intents, No prince nor peer shall have just cause to say, God shorten Harry's happy life one day.

Scene III.—Gloucestershire. The Garden of Shallow's House.

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Silence, Davy, Bardolph, and the Page.

Shal. Nay, you shall see mine orchard, where, in an arbour, we will eat a last year's pippin of my own grafting, with a dish of caravans, and so forth; come, cousin Silence; and then to bed. Fal. 'Fore God, you have here a goodly dwelling and a rich. Shal. Barren, barren, barren; beggars all, beggars all, Sir John: marry, good air. Spread, Davy; spread, Davy: well said, Davy. Fal. This Davy serves you for good uses: he is your servingman and your husband. Shal. A good varlet, a good varlet, a very good varlet, Sir John: by the mass, I have drunk too much sack at supper: a good varlet. Now sit down, now sit down. Come, cousin.

Sil. Ah! sirrah, quoth a', we shall

Do nothing but eat, and make good cheer,
And praise heaven for the merry year;
When flesh is cheap and females dear,
And lusty lads room here and there,
So merrily,
And ever among so merrily.

Fal. There's a merry heart! Good Master Silence, I'll give you a health for that anon. Shal. Give Master Bardolph some wine, Davy. Davy. Sweet sir, sit; I'll be with you anon: most sweet sir, sit. Master page, good Master page, sit. Proface! What you want in meat we'll have in drink: but you must bear: the heart's all. Exit. 20

Shal. Be merry, Master Bardolph; and my little soldier there, be merry.

Sil. Be merry, be merry, my wife has all;
For women are shrews, both short and tall:
'Tis merry in hall when boards wag all,
And welcome merry Shrove-tide.

Be merry, be merry.

Fal. I did not think Master Silence had been a man of this mettle.

Sil. Who, I? I have been merry twice and once ere now.

Re-enter Davy.

Davy. There's a dish of leather-coats for you. Setting them before BARDOLPH.

Shal. Davy!

Davy. Your worship! I'll be with you straight.

A cup of wine, sir?

Sil. A cup of wine that's brisk and fine,
And drink unto the lemon wine:
And a merry heart lives long-a.

Fal. Well said, Master Silence.

Sil. An we shall be merry, now comes in the sweet o' the night.

Fal. Health and long life to you, Master Silence.

Sil. Fill the cup, and let it come;
I'll pledge you a mile to the bottom.

Shal. Honest Bardolph, welcome: if the wantest any thing and wilt not call, beshrew th' air. To the Page. Welcome, my little tin thief; and welcome indeed, too. I'll drink, Master Bardolph and to all the cavaliers at London.

Davy. I hope to see London once ere I die. Bard. An I might see you there, Davy,— Shal. By the mass, you'll crack a quart together: ha! will you not, Master Bardolph?

Bard. Yea, sir, in a potte-pot.

Shal. By God's liggens, I thank thee. Th' knave will stick by thee, I can assure thee that a' will not out; he is true bred.

Bard. And I'll stick by him, sir.

Shal. Why, there spoke a king. Lack nothing be merry. Knocking within.

Look who's at door there. Ho! who knocks

Exit Davy.

Fal. To SILENCE, who drinks a bumper. When you have done me right.

Sil. Do me right,
And dub me knight:
Samingo.

Is't not so?

Fal. 'Tis so.

Sil. Is't so? Why then, say an old man do somewhat.

Re-enter Davy.

Fal. Now, Pistol!

Pist. Sir John, God save you! sir.

Fal. What wind blew you hither, Pistol?

Pist. Not the ill wind which blows no man good. Sweet knight, thou art now one of the greatest men in this realm.

Sil. By'r lady, I think a' be, but goodman Po of Barson.

Pist. Puff!

Puff in thy teeth, most recreant coward base! Sir John, I am thy Pistol and thy friend, And helter-skelter have I rode to thee, And tidings do I bring and lucky joys And golden times and happy news of price. Fal. I prithee now, deliver them like a man of this world.

Pist. A fourtare for the world and worldling base!
I speak of Africa and golden joys.

Fal. O base Assyrian knight, what is thy new Let King Cophetua know the truth thereof.

Sil. And Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John.

Pist. Shall dunghill curs confront the Helicon And shall good news be baffled? Then, Pistol, lay thy head in Furies' lap. Shal. Honest gentleman, I know not you breeding.

Pist. Why then, lament therefore.

Sil. Give me pardon, sir: if, sir, you can with news from the court, I take it there's but two ways, either to utter them, or to concea
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

Scene V.—A public Place near Westminster Abbey.

Enter two Grooms, straining rushes.

First Groom. More rushes, more rushes!

Second Groom. The trumpets have sounded twice.

First Groom. 'Twill be two o'clock ere they come from the coronation. Dispatch, dispatch.

Enter Falstaff, Shallow, Pistol, Bardolph, and the Page.

Fal. Stand here by me, Master Robert Shallow; I will make the king do you grace. I will leer upon him as a' comes by; and do but mark the countenance that he will give me.

Pist. God bless thy lungs, good knight.

Fal. Come here, Pistol; stand behind me. O! if I had had time to have made new liveries, I would have bestowed the thousand pound I borrowed of you. But 'tis no matter; this poor show doth better: this doth infer the zeal I had to see him.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. It shows my earnings of affection.

Shal. It doth so.

Fal. My devotion.

Shal. It doth, it doth, it doth.

Fal. As it were, to ride day and night; and not to deliberate, not to remember, not to have patience to shift me.

Shal. It is most certain.

Fal. But to stand stained with travel, and sweating with desire to see him; thinking of nothing else; putting all affairs else in oblivion, as if there were nothing else to be done but to see him.

Pist. 'Tis semper idem, for absque hoc nihil est.

'Tis all in every part.

Shal. 'Tis so, indeed.

Pist. My knight, I will inflame thy noble liver, And make thee rage.

Thy Doll, and Helen of thy noble thoughts, Is in base durance and contiguous prison;
Haul'd thither
By most mechanical and dirty hand:
Rouse up revenge from ebon den with fell
Alecto's snake.

For Doll is in: Pistol speaks nought but truth.

Fal. I will deliver her.

Shouts within; and trumpets sound.

Pist. There roar'd the sea, and trumpet-clanger sounds.

Enter King Henry the Fifth and his Train, the Lord Chief Justice among them.

Fal. God save thy grace, King Hal! my royal Hal!

Pist. The heavens' thee guard and keep, most royal imp of fame!

Fal. God save thee, my sweet boy!
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY IV.

K. Hen. V. My lord chief justice, speak to that vain man.

Ch. Just. Have you your wits? know you what 'tis you speak?

Fal. My king! my Jove! I speak to thee, my heart!

K. Hen. V. I know thee not, old man: fall to thy prayers:

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester!
I have long dream'd of such a kind of man; so surfeit-swell'd, so old, and so profane;
But, being awk'ard, I do despise my dream.
Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace;
Leave gormandizing; know the grave doth gape
For thee thrice wider than for other men.

Reply not to me with a fool-born jest:
Presume not that I am the thing I was;
For God doth know, so shall the world perceive,
That I have turn'd away my former self; so will I those that kept me company.

When thou dost hear I am as I have been,
Approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast,
The tutor and the feeder of my riots:
Till then, I banish thee, on pain of death,
As I have done the rest of my misleaders,
Not to come near our person by ten mile.

For competence of life I will allow you,
That lack of means enforce you not to evil:
And, as we hear you do reform yourselves,
We will, according to your strength and qualities,
Give you advancement. Be it your charge, my lord,

To see perform'd the tenour of our word.

Set on.

Fal. Master Shallow, I owe you a thousand pound.

Shal. Ay, marry, Sir John; which I beseech you to let me have home with me.

Fal. That can hardly be, Master Shallow.
Do not you grieve at this: I shall be sent for in private to him. Look you, he must seem thus to the world. Fear not your advancements; I will be the man yet that shall make you great.

Shal. I cannot well perceive how, unless you should give me your doublet and stuff me out with straw. I beseech you, good Sir John, let me have five hundred of your thousand.

Fal. Sir, I will be as good as my word: this that you heard was but a colour.

Shal. A colour that I fear you will die in, Sir John.

Fal. Fear no colours: go with me to dinner.

Come, Lieutenant Pistol; come, Bardolph: I shall be sent for soon at night.

Re-enter JOHN OF LANCASTER, the Lord Chief Justice; Officers with them.

Ch. Just. Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the Fleet;
Take all his company along with him.

Fal. My lord, my lord!

Exit.

SCENE I.—London. An Antechamber in the King’s Palace.

Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of Ely.

Cant. My lord, I’ll tell you; that self bill is urg’d,
Which in the eleventh year of the last king’s reign
Was like, and had indeed against us pass’d,
But that the scuffling and unquiet time
Did push it out of further question.
Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now?
Cant. It must be thought on. If it pass against us,
We lose the better half of our possession;
For all the temporal lands which men devout by testament have given to the church
Would they strip from us; being valued thus:
As much as would maintain, to the king’s honour,
Full fifteen earls and fifteen hundred knights,
Six thousand and two hundred good esquires;
And, to relief of lamas and weak age,
Of indigent faint souls past corporal toil,
A hundred almshouses right well supplied;
And to the coffers of the king beside,

427
A thousand pounds by the year. Thus runs the bill.

Ely. This would drink deep.

Cant. 'Twould drink the cup and all. 20

Ely. But what prevention?

Cant. The king is full of grace and fair regard.

Ely. And a true lover of the holy church.

Cant. The courses of his youth promis'd it not.

The breath no sooner left his father's body
But that his wildness, mortified in him,
Seem'd to die too; yea, at that very moment,
Consideration like an angel came,
And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him,
Leaving his body as a paradise,
To envelop and contain celestial spirits.
Never was such a sudden scholar made;
Never came reformation in a flood,
With such a heady curance, scouring faults;
Nor never Hydra-headed wildness
So soon did lose his seat and all at once
As in this king.

Ely. We are blessed in the change.

Cant. Hear him but reason in divinity,
And, all-admiring, with an inward wish
You would desire the king were made a prelate:
Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs.
You would say it hath been all in all his study:
List his discourse of war, and you shall hear
A fearful battle render'd you in music:
Turn him to any cause of policy,
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garter; that, when he speaks,
The air, a charter'd libertine, is still,
And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears
To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences;
So that the art and practic part of life
Must be the mistress to this theoretic:
Which is a wonder how his grace should glean it,
Since his addiction was to courses vain;
His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow;
His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports;
And never noted in him any study,
Any retirement, any sequestration
From open haunts and popularity.

Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle,
And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best
Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality:
And so the prince obscure'd his contemplation
Under the veil of wildness; which, no doubt,
Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,
Unseen, yet crescive in his faculty.

Cant. It must be so; for miracles are ceas'd;
And therefore we must needs admit the means
How things are perfected.

Ely. But, my good lord,
How now for mitigation of this bill
Urg'd by the commons? Doth his majesty
Incline to it, or no?

Cant. He seems indifferent,
Or rather swaying more upon our part
Than cherishing the exhibitors against us;
For I have made an offer to his majesty,
Upon our spiritual convocation,
And in regard of causes now in hand,
Which I have open'd to his grace at large,
As touching France, to give a greater sum
Than ever at one time the clergy yet
Did to his predecessors part withal.

Ely. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my lord?

Cant. With good acceptance of his majesty.
Save that there was not time enough to hear
As I perceiv'd his grace would fain have done
The severs and hidden passages
Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms,
And generally to the crown and seat of Fran.
Deriv'd from Edward, his great-grandfather.

Ely. What was the impediment that bro't this off?

Cant. The French ambassador upon that inst.
Cra'ved audience; and the hour I think is co'
To give him hearing: is it four o'clock?

Ely. It is.

Cant. Then go we in to know his embassy
Which I could with a ready guess declare
Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.

Ely. I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear

SCENE II.—The Same. The Presence Chamber.

Enter King Henry, Gloucester, Bedford,
Exeter, Warwick, Westmoreland, &c.
Attendants.

K. Hen. Where is my gracious lord of Cant
bury?

Exe. Not here in presence.

K. Hen. Send for him, good uncle West.
Shall we call in the ambassador, my liege?
K. Hen. Not yet, my cousin: we would resolv'd,
Before we hear him, of some things of weight
That task our thoughts, concerning us a France.

Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury
And the Bishop of Ely.

Cant. God and his angels guard your sacred throne,
And make you long become it!

K. Hen. Sure, we thank y

My learned lord, we pray you to proceed,
And justly and religiously unfold
Why the law Salique that they have in Fran
Or should, or should not, bar us in our claim
And God forbid, my dear and faithful lord,
That you should fashion, wretst, or bow your reading,
Or nicely charge your understanding soul
With opening titles miscreate, whose right
Suits not in native colours with the truth;
For God doth know how many now in health
Shall drop their blood in approbation
Of what your reverence shall incite us to.
Therefore take heed how you impawn our pers
How you awake our sleeping sword of war;
We charge you, in the name of God, take he
For never two such kingdoms did contend
Without much fall of blood; whose guilti drops
Are every one a woe, a sore complaint
'Gainst him whose wrongs give edge unto swords
That make such waste in brief mortality.
Under this conjuration speak, my lord,
And we will hear, note, and believe in heart
That what you speak is in your conscience writ.
As pure as sin with baptism.

Cant. Then hear me, gracious sovereign, a you peers,
towe yourselves, your lives, and services his imperial throne. There is no bar make against your highness' claim to France
this, which they produce from Pharamond, \textit{etiam Salicem nullius re succedant,} woman shall succeed in Salique land:
ch Salique land the French unjustly gloze 40
the realm of France, and Pharamond founder of this law and female bar.
their own authors faithfully affirm
the land Salique is in Germany, ween the floods of Sala and of Elbe;
re Charles the Great, having subdued
the Saxons,
left behind and settled certain French;
holding in disdain the German women
some dishonest manners of their life, publish'd then this law; to wit, no female 50
uld be inheritial in Salique land;
ch Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala, t this day in Germany call'd Meisen.
ndo it well appear the Salique law not devised for the realm of France;
did the French possess the Salique land four hundred and twenty years
r defunction of King Pharamond, suppos'd the founder of this law;
nded within the year of our redemption 69 undred twenty-six; and Charles the Great ded the Saxons, and did seat the French ond the river Sala, in the year hundred five. Besides, their writers say,
 Pepin, which deposed Childeric, as heir general, being descended ithild, which was daughter to King Clothair, claim and title to the crown of France.
Capet also, who usur'd the crown 69
charles the Duke of Lorraine, sole heir male true line and stock of Charles the Great,
nd his title with some shows of truth,
ugh, in pure truth, it was corrupt and naught,
'd himself as heir to the Lady Lingare,
chter to Charlemain, who was the son
 Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son
Charles the Great. Also King Lewis the Tenth, was sole heir to the usurper Capet,
ld not keep quiet in his conscience,
ring the crown of France, till satisfied 80 fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother, elineal of the Lady Ermenengar, chter to Charles the foresaid Duke of Loraine:
the which marriage the line of Charles the re-united to the crown of France.
that, as clear as is the summer's sun, g Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim,
 Lewis his satisfaction, all appear hold in right and title of the female:
the kings of France unto this day;
beit they would hold up this Salique law bar your highness' claiming from the female;
ather choose to hide them in a net amply to imbar their crooked titles up'd from you and your progenitors.
May I with right and conscience make this claim?
the sin upon my head, dread sovereign!
in the book of Numbers is it writ:
the man dies, let the inheritance
Descend unto the daughter.' Gracious lord,
Stand for your own; unwind your bloody flag;
Look back into your mighty ancestors:
Go, my dread lord, to your great-grand sire's tomb,
From whom you claim; invoke his war-like spirit,
And your great-uncle's, Edward the Black Prince,
who on the French ground play'd a tragedy,
Making defeat on the full power of France;
Whiles his most mighty father on a hill
Stood smiling to behold his lion's whelp
Forage in blood of French nobility.
O noble English! that could entertain
With half their forces the full pride of France,
And let another half stand laughing by,
All out of work, and cold for action.
Ely. Awake remembrance of these valiant dead,
And with your puissant arm renew their feats:
You are their heir, you sit upon their throne,
The blood and courage that renowned them
Runs in your veins; and my thrice-puissant liege
Is in the very May-morn of his youth,
Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises.
Exe. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth
Do all expect that you shoule yourself,
As did the former lions of your blood.
West. They know your grace hath cause and means and might;
So hath your highness; never king of England
Had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects,
Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England
And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.
Cant. O! let their bodies follow, my dear liege,
With blood and sword and fire to win your right;
In aid whereof we of the spirituality
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors.
K. Hen. We must not only arm to invade the French,
But lay down our proportions to defend
Against the Scot, who will make road upon us
With all advantages.
Cant. They of those marches, gracious sovereign,
Shall be a wall sufficient to defend
Our inland from the pilfering borderers.
K. Hen. We do not mean the coursing snatchers only;
But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us;
For you shall read that my great-grandfather
Never went with his forces into France
But that the Scot on his unfurnish'd kingdom
Came pouring, like the tide into a breach,
With ample and brim fulness of his force,
Galling the gleaned land with hot essays,
Girding with grievous siege castles and towns;
That England, being empty of defence,
Hath shoke and trembled at the ill neighbourhood.
Cant. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege;
For hear her but examplified by herself:
When all her chivalry hath been in France
And she a mourning widow of her nobles,
She hath herself not only well defended,
But taken and impounded as a stray
The King of Scots; whom she did send to France,
To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner kings,
And make her chronicle as rich with praise
As is the ooze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wreck and sunless treasures.

West. But there's a saying very old and true;
If that you will France win,
Then with Scotland first begin:
For once the eagle England being in prey,
To her unguarded nest the weasel Scot
Comes sneaking and so sucks her princely eggs,
Playing the mouse in absence of the cat,
To tear and havoc more than she can eat.

Exc. It follows then the cat must stay at home:
Yet that is but a crush'd necessity,
Since we have locks to safeguard necessities
And pretty traps to catch the petty thieves.
While that the armed hand doth fight abroad
The advised head defends itself at home:
For government, though high and low and lower,
Put into parts, doth keep in one consent,
Congreasing in a full and natural close,
Like music.

Cant. Therefore doth heaven divide
The state of man in divers functions,
Setting endeavour in continual motion;
To which is fixed, as an aim or butt,
Obedience: for so work the honey-bees,
Creatures that by a rule in nature teach
The act of order to a peopled kingdom.
They have a king and officers of sorts;
Where some, like magistrates, correct at home,
Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad,
Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings,
Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds;
Which pillege they with merry march bring home
To the tent-royal of their emperor:

Who, busied in his majesty, surveys
The singing masons building roofs of gold,
The civil citizens kneading up the honey,
The poor mechanic porters crowding in
Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate,
The sad-ey'd justice, with his surly hum,
Delivering o'er to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. I this infer,
That many things, having full reference
To one consent, may work contrarily;
As many arrows, loosed several ways,
Come to one mark; as many ways meet in one town;
As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea;
As many lines close in the dial's centre;
So may a thousand actions, once afoot,
End in one purpose, and be all well borne
Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege.
Divide your happy England into four;
Whereof take you one quarter into France,
And you shall make all Gallia shake.
If we, with thrice such powers left at home,
Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,
Let us be worried and our nation lose
The name of hardiness and policy.

K. Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin.

Exit an Attendant.

Now are we well resolv'd; and by God's help,
And yours, the noble sinews of our power,
France being ours, we'll bend it to our awe
Or break it all to pieces: or there we'll sit,
Ruling in large and ample empery
O'er France and all her almost kingly dukedoms,
Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn,
Tombless, with no remembrance over them:
Either our history shall with full mouth
Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless most
Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph.

Enter Ambassadors of France.

Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure
Of our fair cousin Dauphin; for we hear
Your greeting is from him, not from the king
First Amb. May 't please your majesty to gi us leave
Freely to render what we have in charge;
Or shall we sparingly show you far off
The Dauphin's meaning and our embassy?
K. Hen. We are no tyrant, but a Christian king
Unto whose grace our passion is as subject
As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons:
Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plai
ness
Tell us the Dauphin's mind.

First Amb. Your highness, lately sending into France,
Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right
Of your great predecessor, King Edward's Third.
In answer of which claim, the prince our master
Says that you savour too much of your youth,
And bids you be advis'd there's nought in France
That can be with a nimble galliard won;
You cannot revel into dukedoms there.
He therefore sends you, meeter for your spirit
This tunic of treasure; and, in lieu of this,
Hopes you the dukedoms that you claim
Held to more of you. This the Dauphin spea K. Hen. What treasure, uncle?
Exc. Tennis-balls, my liege
K. Hen. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleas
with us;
His present and your pains we thank you for
When we have match'd our rackets to these balls
We will in France, by God's grace, play a set
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard
Tell him he hath made a match with such a wrangler
That all the courts of France will be disturb'd
With chases. And we understand him well,
How he comes o'er us with our wilder days,
Not measuring what use we made of them.
We never valu'd this poor seat of England;
And therefore, living hence, did give ourself
To barbarous license; as 'tis ever common
That men are merriest when they are from home
But tell the Dauphin I will keep my state,
Be like a king and show my sail of greatness
When I do rouse in my throne of France
For that I have laid by my majesty
And plodded like a man for working-days,
But I will rise there with so full a glory
That I will dazzle all the eyes of France,
Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us.
And tell the pleasant prince this mock of his Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones; and his so Shall stand sore charg'd for the wasteful vengeance
That shall fly with them: for many a thou widows
Shall this his mock mock out of their de husbands;
Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles down.
To give you gentle pass; for if we may, 40
We'll not offend one stomach with our play.
But, till the king come forth and not till then,
Unto Southampton do we shift our scene. Exit.

Enter Nym and Bardolph.

Bard. Well met, Corporal Nym.

Nym. Good morrow, Lieutenant Bardolph.

Bard. What, are Ancient Pistol and you friends yet?

Nym. For my part, I care not: I say little;
but when time shall serve there shall be smiles;
but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight;
but I will wink and hold out mine iron. It is a simple one; but what though? it will toast cheese, and it will endure cold as another man's word will: and there's an end.

Bard. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends, and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France: let it be so, good Corporal Nym.

Nym. Faith, I will live so long as I may, that's the certain of it; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may: that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.

Bard. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly; and certainly she did you wrong, for you were troth-plight to her.

Nym. I cannot tell; things must be as they may: men may sleep, and they may have their threats about them at that time; and some say knives have edges. It must be as it may; though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. There must be conclusions. Well, I cannot tell.

Enter Pistol and Hostess.

Bard. Here comes Ancient Pistol and his wife.
Good corporal, be patient here. How now, mine host Pistol!

Pist. Base tike, call'st thou me host?

Now, by this hand I swear, I scorn the term;
Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

Host. No, by my troth, not long; for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentle-women that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdyhouse straight.

Nym and Pistol draw. O well-a-day, Lady! if he be not drawn now: we shall see wilful adultery and murder committed.

Bard. Good lieutenant! good corporal! offer nothing here.

Nym. Pish!

Pist. Pish for thee, Iceland dog! thou prick-
'erd cur of Iceland!

Host. Good Corporal Nym, show thy valour and put up your sword.

Nym. Will you shog off? I would have you solus.
Pist. Solus, egregious dog? O viper vile!
The solus in thy most mervaulous face;
The solus in thy teeth, and in thy throat;
And in thy hateful lungs, yea, in thy maw, perdy;
And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth!
I do retort the solus in thy bowels;
For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up,
And flashing fire will follow.

Nym. I am not Barbason; ye cannot conjure me.
I have an humour to knock you indifferently well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms:
if you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may; and that's the humour of it. 62

Pist. O bragart vile and damned furious wight! The grave doth gape, and doting death is near; Therefore exhale.

Bard. Hear me, hear me what I say: he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hills, as I am a soldier.

Draws.

Pist. An oath of mickle might; and fury shall abate.

Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give; Thy spirits are most tall.

Nym. I will cut thy throat, one time or other, in fair terms; that is the humour of it.

Pist. Coupe la gorge!

That is the word. I thee defy again. O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get? No; to the spital go, And from the powdering-tub of infamy Fetch forth the lazar kites of Cressid's kind, Doll Tearsheet she by name, and her espouse I have, and I will hold, the quondam Quickly For the only she; and—pauca, there's enough. Go to.

Enter the Boy.

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master, and your hostess: he is very sick, and would to bed. Good Bardolph, put thy face between his sheets and do the office of a warming-pan. Faith, he's very ill.

Bard. Away, you rogue! 89

Host. By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days. The king has killed his heart. Good husband, come home presently.

Exeunt Hostess and Boy.

Bard. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together. Why the devil should we keep knives to cut one another's throats?

Pist. Let floods o'erswell, and fiends for food bowl on!

Nym. You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting?

Pist. Base is the slave that pays.

Nym. That now I will have; that's the humour of it.

Pist. As manhood shall compound: push home. They draw.

Bard. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him; by this sword, I will.

Pist. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course.

Bard. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends: an thou wilt not, why then, be enemies with me too. Prithee, put up.

Nym. I shall have my eight shillings I won of you at betting? 110

Pist. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay; And liquor likewise will I give to thee, And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood: I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me. Is not this just? for I shall sluter be Unto the camp, and profits will accrue. Give me thy hand.

Nym. I shall have my noble?

Pist. In cash most justly paid.

Nym. Well then, that's the humour of't. 120

Re-enter Hostess.

Host. As ever you came of women, come in quickly to Sir John. Ah! poor heart, he is shaken of a burning quotidian tertian, that is most lamentable to behold. Sweet men, come to him.

Nym. The king hath run bad humours on knight; that's the even of it.

Pist. Nym, thou hast spoke the right; His heart is fractured and corroborate.

Nym. The king is a good king: but it must As it may; he passes some humours and cares.

Pist. Let us condole the knight; for, lambkin we will live.

Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Southampton. A Council Chamber.

Enter EXETER, BEDFORD, and WESTMORELAND.

Bed. 'Fore God, his grace is bold to trust these traitors.

Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by.

West. How smooth and even they do themselves!

Bed. As if allegiance in their bosoms sat, Crowned with faith and constant loyalty.

Exe. The king hath note of all that they inter By interception which they dream not of.

Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfello Whom he hath duld and cloy'd with grad favour, That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell His sovereign's life to death and treachery! 110

Trumpets sound. Enter King HENRY, SCROOP, CAMBRIDGE, GREY, LORDS, and ATTENDANTS.

K. Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we aboard.

My Lord of Cambridge, and my kind Lord Masham, And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts: Think you not that the powers we bear with Will cheat their passage through the force France, Doing the execution and the act For which we have in head assembled them? Scroop. No doubt, my liege, if each man his best.

K. Hen. I doubt not that; since we are persuaded We carry not a heart with us from hence That grows not in a fair consent with ours; Nor leave not one behind that doth not wish Success and conquest to attend on us.

Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd a lov'd Than is your majesty: there's not, I think subject That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness Under the sweet shade of your government. Gre. True: those that were your fathers enemies Have steep'd their galls in honey, and do set you With hearts create of duty and of zeal.

K. Hen. We therefore have great cause thankfulness, And shall forget the office of our hand, Sooner than quittance of desert and merit According to the weight and worthiness. Scroop. So service shall with steeled sin toil, i labour shall refresh itself with hope, do your grace incessant services.

. Hen. We judge no less. Uncle of Exeter, arge the man committed yesterday rail’d against our person: we consider was excess of wine that set him on;

on his more advice we pardon him.

scoop. That’s mercy, but too much security: him be punish’d, sovereign, lest example’d, by his suff erence, more of such a kind.

. Hen. O! let us yet be merciful.

am. So may your highness, and yet punish too.

rey. Sir, I show great mercy, if you give him life, or the taste of much correction.

. Hen. Alas! your too much love and care of me heavy orisons ’gainst this poor wretch. tile faults, proceeding on destemper, ill not be wink’d at, how shall we stretch our eye on capital crimes, chew’d, swallow’d, and digested, dear before us? We’ll yet enlarge that man, ough Cambridge, Scoop, and Grey, in their dear care tender preservation of our person, had him punish’d. And now to our French causes:

are the late commissioners!

am. I one, my lord: your highness bade me ask for it to-day.

scoop. So did you, me, my liege.

rey. And I, my royal sovereign.

. Hen. Then, Richard Earl of Cambridge, there is yours;

re yours, Lord Scoop of Masham; and, sir knight, of Northumberland, this same is yours:

thou, and know, I know your worthiness.

Lord of Westmoreland, and uncle Exeter, will aboard to-night. Why, how now, gentle-den men! see you in those papers that you lose much complexion? Look ye, how they change!

ir cheeks are paper. Why, what read you there, I hath so cowarded and chas’d your blood of appearance?

am. I do confess my fault, I do submit me to your highness mercy.

rey. Scoop. To which we all appeal.

. Hen. The mercy that was quick in us but long in your own counsel is suppress’d and kill’d: so must not dare, for shame, to talk of mercy; your own reasons turn into your bosoms, dogs upon their masters, worrying you.  you, my princes and my noble peers, as English monsters! My Lord of Cambridge here, know how apt our love was to accord furnish him with all appetitens longing to his honour; and this man, H. for a few light crowns, lightly conspir’d, I sworn unto the practices of France, I kill us here in Hampton: to the which a knight, no less for bounty bound to us

Than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn. But O! What shall I say to thee, Lord Scoop? thou cruel, Ingrateful, savage and inhuman creature! Thou that didst bear the key of all my counsels, That knew’st the very bottom of my soul, That almost might’st have coin’d me into gold Would’st thou have practis’d on me for thy use! May it be possible that foreign hire Could out of thee extract one spark of evil That might annoy my finger? 'tis so strange That, though the truth of it stands off as gross As black and white, my eye will scarcely see it. Treason and murder ever kept together, As two yoke-devils sworn to either’s purpose, Working so grossly in a natural cause That admiration did not whoop at them: But thou, ’gainst all proportion, didst bring in Wonder to wait on treason and on murder; And whatsoever cunning fiend it was That wrought upon thee so preposterously Hath got the voice in hell for excellence: All other devils that suggest by treasons Do botch and bungle up damnation With patches, colours, and with forms, being fetch’d From glistening semblances of piety; But he that temper’d thee bade thee stand up, Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason, Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor. If that same demon that hath gull’d thee thus Should with his lion gait walk the whole world, He might return to vasty Tartar back, And tell the legions: ’I can never win A soul so easy as that Englishman’s.’ O! how hast thou with jealousy infected The sweetness of alliance. Show men dutiful! Why, so didst thou: seem they grave and learned? Why, so didst thou: come they of noble family? Why, so didst thou: seem they religious? Why, so didst thou: or are they spare in diet, Free from gross passion or of mirth or anger, Constant in spirit, not swerving with the blood, Garnish’d and deck’d in modest compliment, Not working with the eye without the ear, And but in purged judgment trusting neither? Such and so finely boited didst thou seem: And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot, To mark the full-fraught man and best inducd With some suspicion. I will weep for thee; For this revolt of thine, methinks, is like Another fall of man. Their faults are open: Arrest them to the answer of the law; And God avert them of their practices!

Eye, I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry

Lord Scoop of Masham.

I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas

Grey, knight, of Northumberland.

Scoop. Our purposes God justly hath discover’d.

And I repent my fault more than my death; Which I beseech your highness to forgive, Although my body pay the price of it.
'Cam. For me, the gold of France did not succeed.
Although I did admit it as a motive
The sooner to effect what I intended:
But God be thanked for prevention;
Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoice,
Beseeching God and you to pardon me. 159
Grey. Never did faithful subject more rejoice
At the discovery of most dangerous treason
Than I do at this hour joy 'o' myself,
Prevented from a damned enterprise.
My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.

K. Hen. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence.
You have conspir'd against our royal person, Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers
Receiv'd the golden earnest of our death;
Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter,
His princes and his peers to servitude,
His subjects to oppression and contempt,
And his whole kingdom into desolation.
Touching our person seek we no revenge;
But we our kingdom's safety must so tender,
Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws
We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence,
Poor miserable wretches, to your death;
The taste whereof, God of his mercy give you
Patience to endure, and true repentance
Of all your dear offences! Bear them hence.

EXECUT CAMBRIDGE, SCROOP, and
GREY, guarded.

Now, lords, for France; the enterprise whereof
Shall be to you, as us, like glorious.
We doubt not of a fair and lucky war,
Since God so graciously hath brought to light
This dangerous treason lurking in our way
To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now
But every rub is smoothed on our way.
Then forth, dear countrymen: let us deliver
Our puissance into the hand of God,
Putting it straight in expedition.
Cheerily to sea; the signs of war advance:
No king of England, if not king of France.

EXECUT.

SCENE III.—London. Before a Tavern
in Eastcheap.

Enter PistOL, Hostess, Nym, Bardolph and Boy.

Host. Prithee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.

Pist. No; for my manly heart doth yearn.

Bardolph, be blithe; Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins:

Boy, bristle thy courage up; for Falstaff he is dead,

And we must yearn therefore.

Bard. Would I were with him, whereso'er he is, either in heaven or in hell!

Host. Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. 'A made a finer end and went away an it had been any christom child; 'a parted even just between twelve and one, even at the turning o' the tide: for after I saw him fumble with the sheets and play with flowers and smile upon his fingers' ends, I knew there was but one way;

for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and a babblo'
of green fields. 'How now, Sir John!' quo
I: 'what, man! be o' good cheer.' So a' cri'
at 'God, God, God!' three or four times: no
I, to comfort him, bid him a' should not thin of God, I hoped there was no need to troubl himself with any such thoughts yet. So a' bat me lay more clothes on his feet: I put my han into the bed and felt them, and they were cold as any stone; then I felt to his knees, a so upward, and upward, and all was as cold any stone.

Nym. They say he cried out of sack.

Host. Ay, that a' did.

Bard. And of women.

Host. Nay, that a' did not.

Boy. Yes, that a' did; and said they we devils incarnate.

Host. A' could never abide carnation: 'twa colour he never liked.

Boy. A' said once, the devil would have h about women.

Host. A' did in some sort, indeed; hang women; but then he was rheumatic, and talk of the whore of Babylon.

Boy. Do you not remember a' saw a flea sti upon Bardolph's nose, and a' said it was a bl soul burning in hell-fire?

Bard. Well, the fuel is gone that maintain that fire: that's all the riches I got in his serv Nym. Shall we shog? the king will be go from Southampton.

Pist. Come, let's away. My love, give met lips.

Look to my chattels and my moveables:
Let senses rule, the word is 'Pitch and pay;
Trust none;

For oaths are straw, men's faiths are waf
cakes,

And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck
Therefore, caw, caw be thy counsellor.

Go, clear thy crystals. Yoke-fellows in arm,
Let us to France; like horse-leeches, my bo
To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck!

Boy. And that's but unwholesome food, it say.

Pist. Touch her soft mouth, and march.

Bard. Farewell, hostess. Kisses!

Nym. I cannot kiss, that is the humour of but adieu.

Pist. Let housewifery appear: keep close thee command.

Host. Farewell; adieu.

EXECUT.

SCENE IV.—France. An Apartment in the French King's Palace.

Flourish. Enter the French King, attended;
Dauphin, the Dukes of Berri and B
tagne, the Constable, and Others.

Fr. King. Thus comes the English with p power upon us;

And more than carefully it us concerns
To answer royally in our defences.

Therefore the Dukes of Berri and of Bretag
Of Brabant and of Orleans, shall make forth,
And you, Prince Dauphin, with all swift disp
To line and new repair our towns of war
With men of courage and with means defend
For England his approaches makes as fierce waters to the sucking of a gulf.
for us then to be as provident fear may teach us out of late examples by the fatal and neglected English on our fields.

My most redoubted father, I most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe;
peace itself should not so dull a kingdom, ugh war nor no known quarrel were in question,
that defences, musters, preparations,uld be maintain'd, assembled, and collected,
were a war in expectation.
before, I say 'tis meet we all go forth view the sick and feeble parts of France:
let us do it with no show of fear with no more than if we heard that England be busied with a Whitson morris-dance my good liege, she is so idly king'd, sceptre so fantastically borne vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth, t fear attends her not.

O peace, Prince Dauphin! are too much mistaken in this king.
stion your grace the late ambassadors,
th what great state he heard their embassy,
t well supplied with noble counsellors,
t modest in exception, and withal terrible in constant resolution, you shall find his vanities foreshort'e
but the outside of the Roman Brutus, cring discretion with a coat of folly;
ardeners do with ordure hide those roots shall first spring and be most delicate.

Well, 'tis not so, my lord high constable;
though we think it so, it is no matter:
asces of defence 'tis best to weigh enemy more mighty than he seems be proportions of defence are fill'd;
nch of a weak and niggardly projection like a miser, spoil his coat with scanting ide cloth.

Think we King Harry strong princes, look you strongly arm to meet him.
cindred of him hath been flesh'd upon us,
he is bred out of that bloody strain haunted us in our familiar paths:
less our too much memorable shame
Cressy battle fatally was stuck, all our princes captiv'd by the hand hat black name, Edward, Black Prince of Wales;
les that his mountain sire, on mountain standing,
in the air, crown'd with the golden sun,
his heroidal seed, and smil'd to see him,
gle the work of nature, and defiance patterns that by God and by French fathers years been made. This is a stem hat victorious stock; and let us fear native mightiness and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

ambassadors from Harry King of England brave admittance to your majesty.

King. We'll give them present audience.
Go, and bring them.

Exeunt Messenger and certain Lords.

see this chase is hotly follow'd, friends.

Dau. Turn head, and step pursuit; for coward dogs Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten
Runs far before them. Good my sovereign,
Take up the English short, and let them know
Of what a monarchy you are the head:
Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with Exeter and Train.

Fr. King. From our brother England? Exe. From him; and thus he 'grees, your majesty.
He wills you, in the name of God Almighty,
That you divest yourself, and lay apart
The borrow'd glories that by gift of heaven,
By law of nature, and of nations, 'long
To him and to his heirs; namely, the crown
And all wide-stretched honours that certain
By custom and the ordinance of times Unto the crown of France. That you may know
'Tis no sinister nor no awkward claim.
Pick'd from the worm-holds of long-vanish'd days,
Nor from the dust of old oblivion rak'd,
He sends you this most memorable line,
Gives a pedigree.

In every branch truly demonstrative;
Willing you overlook this pedigree;
And when you find him evenly deriv'd
From his most fam'd of famous ancestors,
Edward the Third, he bids you then resign
Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
From him the native and true challenger.

Fr. King. Or else what follows?

Exe. Bloody constraint; for if you hide the crown
Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it:
Therefore in fierce tempest is he coming,
In thunder and in earthquake like a Jove,
That, if requiring fail, he will compel;
And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the crown, and to take mercy
On the poor souls for whom this hungry war
Opens his vasty jaws; and on your head
Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,
The dead men's blood, the pining maidens' groans,
For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers,
That shall be swallow'd in this controversy,
This is his claim, his threatening, and my message;

Unless the Dauphin be in presence here,
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this further:
To-morrow shall you bear our full intent
Back to our brother England.

Dau. For the Dauphin,
I stand here for him: what to him from England?

Exe. Scorn and defiance; slight regard, contempt,
And any thing that may not misbecome
The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus says my king: an if your father's hightness
Do not, in grant of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty.
He'll call you to so hot an answer of it,
That caves and wormy vaultages of France
Shall chide your trespass and return your mock
In second accent of his ordinance.

Dau. Say, if my father render fair return,
It is against my will; for I desire
Nothing but odds with England: to that end,
As matching to his youth and vanity,
I did present him with the Paris balls.

Eze. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake for it,
Were it the mistress-court of mighty Europe:
And, be assur'd, you'll find a difference,
As we his subjects have in wonder found,
Between the promise of his greener days
And these he masters now. Now he weighs time
Even to the utmost grain; that you shall read
In your own losses, if he stay in France.

Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind at full.

Eze. Dispatch us with all speed, lest that our king
Come here himself to question our delay;
For he is footed in this land already.

Fr. King. You shall be soon dispatch'd with fair conditions:
A night is but small breath and little pause
To answer matters of this consequence.

Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter Chorus.

Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies
In motion of no less celerity
Than that of thought. Suppose that you have seen
The well-appointed king at Hampton piers
Embark his royalty; and his brave fleet
With silken streamers the young Phoebus fanning:
Play with your fancies, and in them behold
Upon the hempen tackle ship-boys climbing;
Hear the shrill whistle which doth order give
To sounds confus'd; behold the threaden sails,
Borne with the invisible and creeping wind,
Draw the huge bottoms through the furrowed sea,
Breasting the lofty surge. O! do but think
You stand upon the rinse and behold
A city on the inconstant billows dancing;
For so appears this fleet majestical,
Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow!
Grapple your minds to sternness of this navy,
And leave your England, as dead midnight still,
Guarded with grannies, babies, and old women,
Either past or not arrived to Youth and palms:
For who is he, whose chin is but enriched
With one appearing hair, that will not follow
These eul'sd and choice-drain cavaliers to France?
Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege;
Behold the ordnance on their carriages,
With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur.
Suppose the ambassador from the French comes back;
Tells Harry that the king doth offer him
Katharine his daughter; and with her, to dowry,
Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms:
The offer likes not; and the nimble gunner
With linstock now the devilish cannon touches,
Alarum, and chambers go off.
And down goes all before them. Still be kind,
And eke out our performance with your mind.

Exit.
Enter Fluellen.

"Up to the breach, you dogs! avant, you sons! Driving them forward.

1st. Be merciful, great duke, to men of mould! te thy rage, abate thy manly rage; te thy rage, great duke! d bawcock, bate thy rage; use lenity, sweet chuck!

ym. These be good humours! your honour's bad humours.

Exit. Re-enter Fluellen, Gower following.

1st. Captain Fluellen, you must come prest to the mines; the Duke of Gloucester old speak with you.

29. To the mines! tell you the duke it is not good to come to the mines. For look ye, the concavities of war; the concavities of it is not sufficient; look you, th' athesary, you may discuss o' the duke, look you, is digt himself four under the countermines. By Cheshu, I ak' will ploow up all if there is not better actions.

30. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the king, the master of the siege is given, is altogether directed an Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, 't faith.

31. It is Captain Macmorris, is it not?

32. I think it be.

33. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world: ill verify as much in his peard: he has no re directions in the true disciplines of the rs, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than a puppy-dog.

Enter Macmorris and Jamy, at a distance.

34. Here a' comes; and the Scots captain, ptain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous falarious gentleman, that is certain; and of great expedi- tion and knowledge in th' amnient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his direc- tions: by Cheshu, he will maintain his argu- ment as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.

91. Jamy. I say gud day, Captain Fluellen.

35. God-den to your worship, good Captain James.

Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris! have you the mines! have you the pioneers given o'er?

36. By Chrish, la! tish ill done: the work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear; and my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over: I would have blew up the town, so Chrish save me, la! in an hour: O! tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill done.

37. Flu. Captain Macmorris, I pesezech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputa- tions with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly to satisfy my opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline: that is the point.

112. Jamy. It shall be vary gud, gud feith, gud captains bath; and I shall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion; that sail I, marry.

38. Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me: the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes: it is no time to discourse. The town is beseecch, and the trumpet call us to the breach; and we talk, and, be Chrish, do nothing: 'tis shame for us all; so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still; it is shame, by my hand; and there is threats to be cut, and works to be done; and there is nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la!

39. Jamy. By the mess, ere these eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, aile de gud service, or aile lig' the grund for it; ay, or go to death; and aile pay it as valorously as I may, that sail I surely do, that is the breff and the long. Marry, I wad full fain hear some question 'tween you tway.

40. Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation—

41. Mac. Of my nation! What ish my nation! Ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal. What ish my nation! Who talks of my nation?

42. Flu. Look you, if you take the matter other- wise than is meant, Captain Macmorris, perad- venture I shall think you do not use me with that aflability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you; being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of wars, and in the deri- vation of my birth, and in other particularities.

43. Mac. I do not know you so good a man as my- self: so Chrish save me, I will cut off your head. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

45. Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more
To-night in Harfleur we will be your guest;
To-morrow for the march we are address'd.

Flourish. King Henry and his train enter the town.

Scene V.—The Same. Another Room in the Same.

Fr. King. 'Tis certain he hath pass'd the river Somme. Con. And if he be not fought withal, my lord, we not live in France; let us quit all, d give our vineyards to a barbarous people. 40 O Diu virum! shall a few sprays of us, emptying our father's luxury, recions, put in wild and savage stock, rt up so suddenly into the clouds, d overlook their grafters! Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards! 9 or de ma vie! if they march along fought withal, but I will sell my dukedom, buy a slobbery and a dirty farm that nook-shotten isle of Albion. Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle? not their climate foggy, raw and dull, whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale, lling their fruit with frowns? Can sodden water, trench for sur-rein'd jades, their barley-broth, coot their cold blood to such valiant heat? 20 d shall our quick blood, spirited with wine, em frosty? O! for honour of our land, t us not hang like roping icicles on our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people eat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields; or we may call them in their native lords. Dow. By faith and honour, madams mock at us, and plainly say mettle is bred out; and they will give our bodies to the lust of English youth new-store France with bastard warriors. Bour. They bid us to the English dancing-schools, teach lavoltes high and swift corantes; ying our grace is only in our heels, that we are most lofty runaways. Fr. King. Where is Montjoy the herald? speed him hence: at him greet England with our sharp defiance, p, princes! and, with spirit of honour edg'd ore sharper than your swords, hie to the field: arles Delabreth, high constable of France; 49 on Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berri, leron, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy; aches Chatillon, Ramures, Vaudemont, eumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Faunconberg, ox, Lestrale, Bouciquot, and Charollos; nine dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights, of your great seats now quit you of great shames, as Harry England, that sweeps through our land nth penmons painted in the blood of Harleur: ugh on his host, as doth the melted snow pon the valleys, whose low vassal seat he Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon: Go down upon him, you have power enough, And in a captive chariot into Roan Bring him our prisoner. Con. This becomes the great. Sorry am I his numbers are so few, His soldiers sick and famish'd in their march, For I am sure when he shall see our army He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear, And for achievement offer us his ransom. Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjoy, And let him say to England that we send To know what willing ransom he will give. Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Roan. Dow. Not so, I do beseech your majesty. Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain with us. Now forth, lord constable and princes all, And quickly bring us word of England's fall. Exeunt.

Scene VI.—The English Camp in Picardy.

Enter Gower and Fluellen.

Gow. How now, Captain Fluellen! come you from the bridge?

Flu. I assure you there is very excellent services committed at the bridge.

Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The Duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my living, and my uttermost power: he is not, God be praised and praised! any hurt in the world, but keeps the bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an auncient lieutenant there at the bridge; I think in my very conscience he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony; and he is a man of no estimation in the world; but I did see him do as gallant service.

Gow. What do you call him?

Flu. He is called Aunchient Pistol. Gow. I know him not.

Enter Pistol.

Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours: The Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Ay, I praise God; and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier firm and sound of heart, And of buxom valour, hath, by cruel fate And giddy Fortune's furious hickle wheel, That goddess blind, That stands upon the rolling restless stone,— 30

Flu. By your patience, Aunchient Pistol. Fortune is painted plind, with a muffler afore her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is plind: and she is painted also with a wheel, to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning, and inconstant, and mutability, and variation and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls: in good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it: Fortune is an excellent moral. Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him;

For he hath stol'n a pax, and hanged must a be.
A damned death!
Let gallows gape for dog, let man go free
And let not hemp his wind-pipe suffocate.
But Exeter hath given the doom of death
For pax of little price.
Therefore, go speak; the duke will hear thy voice;
And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut
With edge of penny cord and vile reproach:
So speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee requite.

Flu. Alicant Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist. Why then, rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, alicant, it is not a thing to rejoice at; for if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the duke to use his good pleasure and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be used.

Pist. Die and be damned; and figo for thy friendship!

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain!

Exit.

Flu. Very good.

Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal:
I remember him now; a bawd, a cut-purse,
I'll assure you a' uttered as prave words
at the pridge as you shall see in a summer's day.
But it is very well; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve.

Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then and goes to the wars to grace himself at his return into London under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names, and they will learn you by rote where services were done; at such and such a scone, at such a breach, at such a convoy; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on; and this they can perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths; and what a beard of the general's cut and a horrid suit of the camp will do among foaming bottles and ale-washed wits, is wonderful to be thought on. But you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower; I do perceive he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is: if I find a hole in his coat I will tell him my mind.

Drum heard.

Hark you, the king is coming, and I must speak with him from the pridge.

Enter King Henry, Gloucester, and Soldiers.

Flu. God plesse your majesty!

K. Hen. How now, Fluellen! cam'st thou from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintained the pridge; the French is gone off, look you, and there is gallant and most prave passages. Marry, th' athersyver was have possession of the pridge, but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the pridge. I can tell your majesty the duke is a brave man.

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th' athersyver hath been very great, reasonable great: marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church; one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man: his face is all bubbukes, and wheko and knobs, and flames of fire; and his lips blow at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes blue and sometimes red; but his nose is execute and his fire's out.

K. Hen. We would have all such offenders cut off: and we give express charge that in marches through the country there be nothi compell'd from the villages, nothing taken be paid for, none of the French upprisedit or abuse any thing in disdainful language; for when lenity an cruelty play for a kingdom, the gentler gamest is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter Montjoy.

Mont. You know me by my habit.

K. Hen. Well then I know thee: what shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my king: Say thou to Har of England: Though we seemed dead, we did not sleep: advantage is a better soldier than rashness. Tell him we could have rebuked him at Harfleur, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe; now speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperia England shall repent his folly, see his weakness and admire our sufferance. Bid him therefore consider of his ransom; which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which weight to re-answer, his pettiness would be under. For our losses, his exchequer is too poor for the effusion of our blood, the master of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person, kneeling at our feet, be a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this advance: and tell him, for conclusion, he has betrayed his followers, whose condemnation pronounced. So far my king and master, so much my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

Mont. Montjoy.

K. Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee back,
And tell thy king I do not seek him now,
But could be willing to march on to Calais
Without impeachment; for, to say the sooth,
Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much Unto an enemy of craft and vantage,
My people are with sickness much eneefled,
My numbers lessen'd, and those few I have Almost no better than so many French;
Who when they were in health, I tell thee, herd
I thought upon one pair of English legs
Did march three Frenchmen. Yet, forgive me,

God,

That I do brag thus! this your air of France
Hath blown that vice in me; I must repent.
Go therefore, tell thy master here I am;
My ransom is this frail and worthless trunk,
My army but a weak and sickly guard;
Yet, God before, tell him we will come on,
Though France himself and such another neighour.

ACT VII.—The French Camp, near Agincourt.

oe the Constable of France, the Lord RAM-URES, the Duke of Orleans, the Dauphin, nd Others.

on. Tut! I have the best armour of the
id. Would it were day!

rd. You have an excellent armour; but let horse have his due.

on. It is the best horse of Europe.

rd. Will it never be morning?

dau. My lord of Orleans, and my lord high stable, you talk of horse and armour—

rd. You are as well provided of both as any ace in the world.

dau. What a long night is this! I will not nge my horse with any that treads but on r pasterns. Ca, ha! He bounds from the th as if his entrails were hairs; le cheval volant, pegasus, qui a marins de feu! When I ride him, I soar, I am a hawk: he trots the

the earth sings when he touches it; the best horn of his hoof is more musical than the of Hermes.

rd. He’s of the colour of the nutmeg.

dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a ist for Persians: he is pure air and fire; and dull elements of earth and water never appear him but only in patient stillness while his er mounts him: he is indeed a horse: and other jades you may call beasts.

on. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute excellent horse.

dau. It is the prince of palfreys; his neigh like the bidding of a monarch and his coun-ance enforces homage.

rd. No more, cousin.

dau. Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot, on the rising of the lark to the lodging of the ab, vary deserved praise on my palfrey: It is theme as fluent as the sea; turn the sands eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument them all. ‘Tis a subject for a sovereign to son on, and for a sovereign’s sovereign to ride;
and for the world, familiar to us and un-own, to lay apart their particular functions wonder at him. I once write a sonnet in his also and began thus: ‘Wonder of nature!’

rd. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one’s stress.

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I composed to my courser; for my horse is my mistress.

Orl. Your mistress bears well.

Dau. Me well; which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress.

Con. Nay, for methought yesterday your mis-trress shrewdly shook your back.

Dau. So perhaps did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled.

Dau. O! then belike she was old and gentle;
and you rode, like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your strand strossers.

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.

Dau. Be warned by me, then: they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bags. I had rather have my horse to my mistress.

Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.

Dau. I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears his own hair.

Con. I could make as true a boast as that if I had a sow to my mistress.

Dau. Le chien est retourné à son propre vomi-ement, et la truie lavelle au bourbier: thou makest use of any thing.

Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mis-stress; or any such proverb so little kin to the purpose.

Ram. My lord constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars or suns upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord.

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau. That may be, for you bear a many super-finously, and ‘twere more honour some were away.

Con. Even as your horse bears your praises; who would trot as well were some of your brags dismounted.

Dau. Would I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot tomorrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces.

Con. I will not say so for fear I should be faced out of my way. But I would it were orning, for I would fain be about the ears of the English.

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty prisoners?

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them.

Dau. ’Tis midnight; I’ll go arm myself.

Orl. The Dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he’s a gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.

Orl. He is simply the most active gentleman of France.

Con. Doing is activity, and he will still be doing.

Orl. He never did harm, that I heard of.

Con. Nor will he do none to-morrow: he will keep that good name still.

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Con. I was told that by one that knows him better than you.
KING HENRY V.

Enter Messenger.

Mess. My lord high constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents. Con. Who hath measured the ground? Mess. The Lord Grandpré. Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman. Would it were day! Alas! poor Harry of England, he longs not for the dawning as we do.

Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this king of England, to mope with his fat-brained followers so far out of his knowledge! Con. If the English had any apprehension they would run away.

Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures; their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage.

Orl. Foolish curs! that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear and have their heads crushed like rotten apples. You may as well say that's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives: and then give them great meals of beef and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves and fight like devils.

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.

Con. Then shall we find to-morrow they have only stomachs to eat and none to fight. Now is it time to arm; come, shall we about it?

Orl. It is now two o'clock; but, let me see, by ten

We shall have each a hundred Englishmen.

Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Enter Chorus.

Now entertain conjecture of a time
When creeping murmur and the pining dark
Fills the wide vessel of the universe.
From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night,
The hum of either army stillly sounds,
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch:

Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames
Each battle seeks the other's unber'd face;
Steed threatens steel, in high and boastful neigh
Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the ten
The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.

The country cooks do crow, the clocks do toil,
And the third hour of drowsy morning name.
Proud of their numbers, and secure in soul,
The exultant and over-lusty French
Do the low-rated English play at dice,
And chide the cripple tardy-gaited knight
Who, like a fool and ugly witch, doth limp
So tedious away. The poor condemned English
Like sacrifice, by their watchful fires
Sit patiently, and only ruminate
The morning's danger, and their gesture sad.
Investing land-lean cheeks and war-worn coats
Present them unto the gazing moon
So many horrid ghosts. O! now, who will beak
The royal captain of this ruin'd band
Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent,
Let him cry 'Praise and glory on his head!'
For forth he goes and visits all his host,
Bids them good-morrow with a modest smile,
And calls them brothers, friends and countrymen
Upon his royal face there is no note
How dire an army hath enrol'd him;
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour
Unto the weary and all-watch'd night;
But freshly looks and overbears attain
With cheerful semblance and sweet majesty;
That every wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks.
A largess universal like the sun
His liberal eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear. Though mean and gentle all,
Behold, as may unworthiness define,
A little touch of Harry in the night,
And so our scene must to the battle fly:
Where, O for pity! we shall much displace
With four or five most vile and ragged foils,
Right ill-dispos'd in brawl ridiculous,
The name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see;
Minding true things by what their mockery be.

SCENE I.—The English Camp at Agincourt.

Enter King Henry, Bedford, and Gloucester.

K. Hen. Gloucester, 'tis true that we are great danger;
The greater therefore should our courage be.
Good morrow, brother Bedford. God Almighty
There is some soul of goodness in things evil
Would men observingly distil it out;
For our bad neighbour makes us early stirre
Which is both healthful and good husbandry.
Besides, they are our outward consciences,
And preachers to us all; admonishing
That we should dress us fairly for our end,
Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself.

Enter Erpingham.

Good morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham:
A good soft pillow for that good white head
Were better than a churlish turf of France.
Gow. Why, the enemy is loud; you hear him all night.

Plu. If the enemy is an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass and a fool and a prating coxcomb? in your own conscience now?

Gow. I will speak lower.

Plu. I pray you and beseech you that you will.

Exit GOWER and FLUELLEN.

K. Hen. Though it appear a little out of fashion, There is much care and valour in this Welshman.

Enter John Bates, Alexander Court, and Michael Williams.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder?

Bates. I think it be; but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.

Will. We see yonder the beginning of the day but I think we shall never see the end of it. Who goes there?

K. Hen. A friend.

Will. Under what captain serve you?

Will. A good old commander and a most kind gentleman: I pray you, what thinks he of our estate?

K. Hen. Even as men wrecked upon a sand, that look to be washed off the next tide.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the king?

K. Hen. No; nor it is not meet he should. For, though I speak it to you, I think the king is but a man as I am: the violet smells to him as it doth to me; the element shows to him as it doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions: his ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing. Therefore when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are: yet, in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should disheart his army.

Bates. He may show what outward courage he will, but I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he could wish himself in Thames up to the neck, and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here.

K. Hen. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the king: I think he would not wish himself any where but where he is.

Bates. Then I would he were here alone; so should he be sure to beransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved.

K. Hen. I dare say you love him not so ill to wish him here alone, howsoever you speak this to feel other men's minds. Methinks I could not die any where so contented as in the king's company, his cause being just and his quarrel honourable.

Will. That's more than we know.

Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after; for we know enough if we know we are the king's subjects. If his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us.

Will. But if the cause be not good, the king
KING HENRY V.

Act I, Scene 2

King: himself hath a heavy reckoning to make; when all those legs and arms and heads, chopped off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day, and cry all 'We died at such a place;' some swearing, some crying for a surgeon, some upon their wives left poor behind them, some upon the debts they owe, some upon their children rawly left. I am afraid there are few die well that die in a battle; for how can they charitably dispose of any thing when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it, whom to disobey were against all proportion of subjection.

K. Hen. So, if a son that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him: or if a servant, under his master's command, transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers and die in many irreconciled iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation. But this is not so: the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant; for they purpose not their death when they purpose their services. Besides there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbietment of swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers. Some, peradventure, have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bur- wark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God: war is his beadle, war is his vengeance; so that here men are punished for before-breach of the king's laws in now the king's quarrel: where they feared the death they have borne life away, and where they would be safe they perish. Then, if they die unpunished, no more is the king guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every mote out of his conscience; and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost wherein such preparation was gained: and in him that escapes, it were not sin to think that, making God so free an offer, he let him outlive that day to see his greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head; the king is not to answer it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me; and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

K. Hen. I myself heard the king say he would not be ransomed.

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheer- fully; but when our throats are cut he may be ransomed, and we ne'er the wiser.

K. Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. You pay him then. That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun, that a poor and priv- deplaire can do against a monarch. You as well go about to turn the sun to ice warring in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! come, 'tis foolish saying.

K. Hen. Your reproach is something too rough.

I should be angry with you if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you'll let.

K. Hen. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again?

K. Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I'll wear it in my bonnet: then, if ever thou dost acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove: give me another thing.

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap: if ever thou come to me and say after to-morrow, 'Tis my glove,' by this hand I will take thee a blow on the ear.

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge thee.

Will. Thou darest as well be hanged.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take it in the king's company.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be friends, you English fools, friends: we have French quarrels enough, if ye could tell how to reckon.

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twen- French crowns to one, they will beat us; they bear them on their shoulders: but if no English treason to cut French crowns, a to-morrow the king himself will be a clipper.

Exeunt Soldie

Upon the king! let us our lives, our souls, Our debts, our careful wives, Our children, and our sins lay on the king! We must bear all. O hard condition! SCENE II.—The French Camp.

Enter the DAUPHIN, OrléANS, RAMBURES, and Others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour: up, my lords! Dau. Montez à cheval! My horse! valet! laequis ! ha!

Orl. O brave spirit! Dau. Via / les eaux et la terre!

Enter Constable.

Now, my lord constable! Con. Hark, how our steeds for present service neigh! Dau. Mount them, and make incision in their hides, That their hot blood may spin in English eyes, And dout them with superfluous courage, ha! 11

Ram. What! will you have them weep our horses' blood? How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The English are embattail'd, you French peers.

Con. To horse, you gallant princes! straight to horse!

Do but behold you poor and starved band, And your fair show shall suck away their souls, Leaving them but the shales and husks of men, There is not work enough for all our hands; Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins 29 To give each naked curtal-axe a stain, That our French gallants shall to-day draw out, And sheathe for lack of sport: let us but blow on them, The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them. 'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords, That our superfluous lackeys and our peasants, Who in unnecessary action swarm About our squares of battle, were now To purge this field of such a hilding foe, Though we upon this mountain's basis by 39 Took stand for idle speculation: But that our honours must not. What's to say? A very little let us do, And all is done. Then let the trumpets sound The tucket sonance and the note to mount: For our approach shall so much dare the field That England shall cough down in fear, and yield.

Enter Grandpré.

Grond. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France? You island carriages, desperate of their bones, Ill-favour'dly become the morning field: Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose, And our air shakes them passing scornfully: Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host, And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps: The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks, With torch-staves in their hand; and their poor jades Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and hips. The gum down-roping from their pale-dead eyes, And in their pale dull mouths the gimbal bit Lies foul with chew'd grass, still and motionless; And their executors, the knavish crows, Fly o'er them, all impatient for their hour. Description cannot sinit itself in words To demonstrate the life of such a battle In life so lifeless as it shows itself. Con. They have said their prayers, and they stay for death. Dau. Shall we go send them dinners and fresh suits,
And give their fasting horses provender;
And after fight with them!

Con. I stay but for my guidon : to the field!
I will the banner from a trumpet take,
And use it for my haste. Come, come, away!
The sun is high, and we outwear the day. Exit.

Scene III.—The English Camp.

Enter the English Host; Gloucester, Bedford, Exeter, Salisbury, and Westmoreland.

Glou. Where is the king?
Bed. The king himself is rode to view their battle.
West. Of fighting men they have full three-score thousand.

Exe. There's five to one; besides, they all are fresh.

Sal. God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful odds.
God be wi'you, princes all; I'll to my charge:
If, we no more meet till we meet in heaven,
Then, joyfully, my noble Lord of Bedford,
My dear Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord Exeter,
And my kind kinsman, warriors all, adieu!
Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury; and good luck go with thee!

Exe. Farewell, kind lord. Fight valiantly to-day:
And yet I do thee wrong to mind thee of it,
For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour.

Exit Salisbury.

Bed. He is as full of valour as of kindness;
Princely in both.

Enter King Henry.

West. O! that we now had here
But one ten thousand of those men in England
That do no work to-day.

K. Hen. What's he that wishes so?
My cousin Westmoreland! No, my fair cousin:
If we are mark'd to die, we are enow;
To do our country's loss; and if to live,
The fewer men, the greater share of honour.

God's will! I pray thee, wish not one man more.
By Jove, I am not covetous for gold,
Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost;
It yearns me not if men my garments wear;
Such outward things dwell not in my desires:
But if it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive.

No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England:
God's peace! I would not lose so great an honour
As one man more, methinks, would share from me.
For the best hope I have. O! do not wish one more:
Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,
That he which hath no stomach to this fight,
Let him depart; his passport shall be made,
And crowns for convoy put into his purse:
We would not die in that man's company
That fears his fellowship to die with us.
This day is call'd the feast of Crispian:
He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,
And rouse him at the name of Crispian.
He that shall live this day, and see old age,
Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours,
And say 'To-morrow is Saint Crispian':

Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars.
And say 'These wounds I had on Crispin's day;
Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot,
But he'll remember with advantages
What feats he did that day. Then shall our name
Familiar in his mouth as household words,
Harry the king, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester
Be in their flowing cups freshly remembered.
This story shall the good man teach his son;
And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by,
From this day to the ending of the world,
But we in it shall be remembered;
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers;
For he to-day that sheds his blood with me
Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile
This day shall gentle his condition:
And gentlemen in England now a-bed
Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not here,
And hold their handmaunds cheaply-wiles any shean.
That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day.

Re-enter Salisbury.

Sal. My sovereign lord, bestow yourself wi's speed:
The French are bravely in their battles set,
And will with all expedience charge on us.

K. Hen. All things are ready, if our minds be:
West. Perish the man whose mind is backward now!

K. Hen. Thou dost not wish more help from England, coz?

West. God's will! my liege, would you and alone,
Without more help, could fight this royal battle.

K. Hen. Why, now thou hast unwis'd fit thousand men;
Which likes me better than to wish us one.
You know your places: God be with you all!

Tucket. Enter Montjoy.

Mont. Once more I come to know of the King Harry,
If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound,
Before thy most assured overthrow:
For certainly thou art so near the gulf
Thou need'st must be engluttled. Besides, in mercy
The constable desires thee thou wilt mind
Thy followers of repentance; that their souls
May make a peaceful and a sweet retire
Frail off these fields, where, wretches, the poor bodies
Must lie and fester.

K. Hen. Who hath sent thee now?

Mont. The Constable of France.

K. Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer:
Bid them achieve me and then sell my bones.
Good God! why should they mock poor fellow thus?
The man that once did sell the lion's skin
While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him;
A many of our bodies shall no doubt
Find native graves; upon the which, I trust,
Shall witness live in brass of this day's work;
And those that leave their valiant bones in France
Dying like men, though buried in your dunghill
They shall be fam'd; for there the sun shall greet them, draw their honours reeking up to heaven, draw their earthly parts to choke your clime, smell whereof shall breed a plague in France. f then abounding valour in our English, father, like to the bullet's grazing, cut you into a second course of mischief, in relapse of mortality.

me speak proudly: tell the constable are but warriors for the working-day; my gayness and our gait are all besmirch'd by rainy marching in the painful field; re's not a piece of feather in our host—
d argument, I hope, we will not fly— time hath worn us into slovenry:
by the mass, our hearts are in the trim; my poor soldiers tell me, yet ere night y'll be in fresher robes, or they will pluck gay new coats o'er the French soldiers' heads, I turn them out of service. If they do this, if God please, they shall, my ransom then I soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour; I thou no more for ransom, gentle herald: y shall have none, I swear, but these my joints; ich if they have as I will leave 'em them, I'll yield them little, tell the constable.

Enter YORK.

York. My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg leading of the vaward.

Hen. Take it, brave York. Now, soldiers, march away: I how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day!

Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Field of Battle.

ist. Yield, curf!

fr. Sold. Je pense que vous estes gentilhomme de ne qualité.

ist. Quality? Calen o custume me! Art thou a gentleman?

ist is thy name? discuss.

fr. Sold. O Seigneur Dieu!

Pist. O, Signieur Dew should be a gentleman: lend my words, O Signieur Dew, and mark: signieur Dew, thou diest on point of fox, cept, O signieur, thou do give to me region ransom.

fr. Sold. O, prenez misericorde! ayes pité de y!
Pist. Moy shall not serve; I will have forty moys: I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat drops of crimson blood.

fr. Sold. Est il impossible d'eschapper la force ton bras?

Pist. Brass, curf!
ou damned and luxurious mountain goat, 20 fer'st me brass?

fr. Sold. O pardonnez moy!

Pist. Say'st thou me so? is that a ton of moys?

Come hither, boy: ask me this slave in French: What is his name.

Boy. Escoutez: comment estes vous appelé?

Boy. He says his name is Master Fer.

Pist. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and firk him, and ferret him. Discuss the same in French unto him.

Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firk.

Pist. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.

fr. Sold. Que dit-il, monsieur?

Boy. Il me commande à vous dire que vous prenez; car ce soldat ici est disposé tout à cette heure de couper votre gorge.

Pist. Owy, cuppede gorge, permafau, Peasant, unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns;

Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.

Pist. What are his words?

Boy. He prays you to save his life: he is a gentleman of a good house; and for his ransom he will give you two hundred crowns.

Pist. Tell him my fury shall abate, and I 50 The crowns will take.

fr. Sold. Petit monsieur, que dit-il?

Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurément de par- donner aucun prisonnier; neant-moins, pour les escus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, le francissement.

fr. Sold. Sur mes genoux je vous donne mille re- merciements: et je m'estime heureux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et tres-distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.

Pist. Expound unto me, boy.

Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks; and he esteems himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of one, as he thinks, the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signeur of England.

Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy show, Follow me!

Boy. Suivez vous le grand capitaine.

Exeunt PISTOL and French Soldier.

I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart: but the saying is true, 'The empty vessel makes the greatest sound.' Bardolph and Nym had ten times more value than this roaring devil i' the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger; and they are both hanged; and so would this be if he durst steal any thing adventurously. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp: the French might have a good prey of us if he knew of it; for there is none to guard it but boys.

Exit.

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

alarums. Enter the DAUPHIN, ORLEANS, BOUR- BON, Constable, RAMBURES, and Others.

Con. O diable!
Orl. O seigneur! le jour est perdu! tout est perdu! Dau. Mort de ma vie! all is confounded, all! Reproach and everlasting shame Sit mocking in our plumes. O mechant fortune!
Do not run away.

Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.

Dau. O perdurable shame! let's stab ourselves.
Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for?

Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom?

Bour. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame!

Let us die in honour! Once more back again;
And he that will not follow Bourbon now,
Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand,
Like a base pandar, hold the chamber-door
Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog,
His fairest daughter is contaminated.

Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us now!

Let us on heaps go offer up our lives.

Orl. We are enough yet living in the field
To smoother up the English in our throns.
If any order might be thought upon.

Bour. The devil take order now! I'll to the thron:
Let life be short, else shame will be too long.

_Exeunt._

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter King Henry and Forces; Exeunt, and Others.

K. Hen. Well have we done, thrice-valiant countrymen:
But all's not done; yet keep the French the field.

_Exe._ The Duke of York commends him to your majesty.

K. Hen. Lives he, good uncle? thrice within this hour
I saw him down, thrice up again and fighting;
From helmet to the spur all blood he was.

_Exe._ In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie,
Lording the plain; and by his bloody side,
Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds,
The noble Earl of Suffolk also lies.

Suffolk first died; and York, all haggled over,
Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteep'd,
And takes him by the beard, kisses the gashes
That bloodily did yawn upon his face;
And cries aloud, 'Tarry, dear cousin Suffolk! My soul shall thine keep company to heaven;
Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly abreast,
As in this glorious and well-foughten field
We kept together in our chivalry!'

Upon these words I came and cheer'd him up;
He snarl'd me in the face, rangeth me his hand,
And, with a feebile gripe, says 'Dear my lord,
Command my service to my sovereign,'
So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck
He threw his wounded arm, and kiss'd his lips;
And so espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd
A testament of noble-enduring love.
The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd
Those waters from me which I would have stopp'd;
But I had not so much of man in me,
And all my mother came into mine eyes
And gave me up to tears.

K. Hen. I blame you not;
For hearing this, I must perforce compound
With misteful eyes, or they will issue too.

_But, hark! what new alarum is this same?_
Enter Montjoy.

Exeunt Montjoy, Fluellen, and Others.

Exe. Soldier, you must come to the king.

K. Hen. Soldier, whyarest thou that glove in thy cap?

Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

K. Hen. An Englishman?

Will. An't please your majesty, a rascal that swaggered with me last night; who, if a' live and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear: or if I can see my glove in his cap, which he swore as he was a soldier he would wear if alive, I will strike it out soundly.

K. Hen. What think you, Captain Fluellen? is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an't please your majesty, in my conscience.

K. Hen. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as good a gentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary, look your grace, that he keep his vow and his oath. If he be perjured, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jack-sauce as ever his black shoe trod upon God's ground and his earth, in my conscience, la!

K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meetest the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.

K. Hen. Who servest thou under?

Will. Under Captain Gower, my liege.

Flu. Gower is a good captain, and is good knowledge, and literatured in the wars.

K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier.

Will. I will, my liege.

Exit. K. Hen. Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favour for me and stick it in thy cap. When Alençon and myself were down together I plucked this glove from his helm: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon, and an enemy to our person; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost me love.

Flu. Your grace does me as great honours as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man that has but two legs that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove, that is all; but I would fain see it once, and please God of his grace that I might see.
And touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder,
And quickly will return an injury:
Follow and see there be no harm between them.
Go you with me, uncle of Exeter.

Scene VIII.—Before King Henry's Pavilion.

Enter Gower and Williams.

Flu.  I warrant it is to knight you, captain.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu.  God's will and his pleasure, captain, I peasech you now come apace to the king: there is more good toward you peradventure than is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will.  Sir, know you this glove?

Flu.  Know the glove!  I know the glove is a glove.

Will.  I know this; and thus I challenge it.

Strike him.

Flu.  'Sblood! an arrant traitor as any's in the universal 'orld, or in France, or in England.

Gow.  How now, sir! you villain!

Will.  Do you think I'll be forsworn?

Flu.  Stand away, Captain Gower: I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.

Will.  I am no traitor.

Flu.  That's a lie in thy throat. I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him: he's a friend of the Duke Alençon's.

Enter Warwick and Gloucester.

War.  How now, how now! what's the matter?

Flu.  My Lord of Warwick, here is, praised be God for it! a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day.  Here is his majesty.

Enter King Henry and Exeter.

K. Hen.  How now! what's the matter?

Flu.  My liege, here is a villain and a traitor, that, look your grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alençon.

Will.  My liege, this was my glove; here is the fellow of it; and he that I gave it to in change promised to wear it in his cap: I promised to strike him if he did.  I met this man with my glove in his cap, and have been as good as my glove.

Flu.  Your majesty hear now, saving your majesty's manhood, what an arrant, rascally, beegarly, lousy knife it is. I hope your majesty is pear me testimony and witness, and will avouchment that this is the glove of Alençon that your majesty is give me; in your consciencenow!

K. Hen.  Give me thy glove, soldier: look,
here is the fellow of it.
'Twas I, indeed, thou promised'st to strike;
And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

Flu.  An't please your majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the 'orld.

K. Hen.  How canst thou make me satisfaction?

Will.  All offences, my lord, come from the heart: never came any from mine that might offend your majesty.

K. Hen.  It was ourself thou didst abuse.

Will.  Your majesty came not like yourself:
you appeared to me but as a common man; witness the night, your garments, your lowlines and what your highness suffered under that shape, I beseech you, take it for your own fa-and not mine: for had you been as I took y for I made no offence; therefore, I besee your highness, pardon me.

K. Hen.  Here, uncle Exeter, fill this gla crown with,
And give it to this fellow. Keep it, fellow;
And wear it for an honour in thy cap
Till I do challenge it. Give him the crowns.
And, captain, you must needs be friends with hi
Flu.  By this day and this light, the fellow mettle enough in his pelly. Hold, there twelve pence for you, and I pray you to see God, and keep you out of pr aws, and prabbs and quarrels, and dissensions, and, I warn you, it is the better for you.

Will.  I will none of your money.

Flu.  It is with a good will; I can tell you will serve you to mend your shoes: come, whe are should you be so pasful? your shoes is so good; 'tis a good silling, I warrant you, o will change it.

Enter an English Herald.

K. Hen.  Now, herald, are the dead number.
Her.  Here is the number of the slain
French.

Deliver a pay

K. Hen.  What prisoners of good sort are tak e uncle?

Ees.  Charles Duke of Orleans, nephew to
king;
John Duke of Bourbon, and Lord Bouciqualt
Of other lords and barons, knights and squir
Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.
K. Hen.  This note doth tell me of ten thou
French
That in the field lie slain: of princes, in t number,
And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead
One hundred twenty-six: added to these,
Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen,
Eight thousand and four hundred: of the wh
Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knig
So that, in these ten thousand they have lost
There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries:
The rest are princes, barons, lords, knight
squires,
And gentlemen of blood and quality,
The names of those their nobles that lie dead
Charles Delabreth, high constable of France
Jacques de Chatillon, admiral of France;
The master of the cross-bows, Lord Rambur
Great-master of France, the brave Sir Guis
Dauphin;
John Duke of Alençon; Anthony Duke
Brabant,
The brother to the Duke of Burgundy;
And Edward Duke of Bar: of lasty caris,
Grandpré and Roussi, Fauconberg and Fox
Beaumont and Marie, Vaudemont and Lestr
Here was a royal fellowship of death!

Herald presents another pay

Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffo
Sir Richard Ketly, Davy Gam, esquire;
None else of name; and of all other men
But five-and-twenty. O God! thy arm was he
And not to us, but to thy arm alone,
There must we bring him; and myself have play'd
The interim, by remembering you 'tis past.
Then brook abridgment, and your eyes advance,
After your thoughts, straight back again to France.
Exit.

SCENE I.—France. An English Court of Guard.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gow. Nay, that's right; but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davy's day is past.

Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things: I will tell you, asse my friend, Captain Gower. The rascally, scald, beggarly, lousy, pragging knave, Pistol, which you and yourself and all the 'orld know to be no better than a fellow, look you now, of no merits, he is come to me and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek. It was in a place where I could not preed no contention with him; but I will be so pold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Gow. Why, he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock.

Enter Pistol.

Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings nor his turkey-cocks. God pless you, Anochient Pistol! you scurry, lousy knave, God pless you!

Pist. Ha! art thou bedlam? dost thou thirth, base Troyan,
To have me fold up Parca's fatal web?
Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu. I peseech you heartily, scurry lousy knave, at my desires and my requests and my petition to eat, look you, this leek; pecase, you look, you do not love it, nor your affections and your appetites and your digestion doth not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwallard and all his goats.

Flu. There is one goat for you. Strikes him.
Will you be so good, scald knave, as eat it?

Pist. Base Troyan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scald knave, when God's will is. I will desire you to live in the mean time and eat your victuals: come, there is sauce for it.

Pist. Strikes him again.
You called me yesterday mountain-squire, but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to: if you can mock a leek you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain: you have astonished him.

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days. Bite, I pray you; it is good for your green wound and your bloody coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes, certainly, and out of doubt and out of question too and ambiguities.

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge. I eat and eat, I swear—

Flu. Eat, I pray you. Will you have some more sauce to your leek? there is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel; thou dost see I eat.

Flu. Much good do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay, pray you, throw none away; the skin is good for your broken coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you, mock at 'em; that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. Ay, leeks is good. Hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a groat!

Flu. Yes, verily and in truth, you shall take it; or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy groat in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you any thing I will pay you in cudgels: you shall be a woodmanger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God be wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate. Exit. 72

Pist. All hell shall stir for this.

Guv. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predecessed value, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words?
I have seen you gleekey and gallowing at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb,
he could not therefore handle an English cudgel:
you find it otherwise; and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. Fare ye well.

Pist. Doth Fortune play the huswife with me
now?

News have I that my Neil is dead i' the spital
Of malady of France; And there my rendezvous is quite cut off.
Old I do wax, and from my weary limbs
Honour is cudgelled. Well, bawd I'll turn,
And something lean to cut-purse of quick hand.
To England will I steal, and there I'll steal:
And patches will I get unto these cudgell'd scars,
And swear I got them in the Gallia wars. Exit.

SCENE II.—Trojans in Champagne. An Apartment in the French King's Palace.

Enter, at one door, King Henry, Bedford,
Gloucester, Exeter, Warwick, Westmoreland, and other Lords; at another, the French King, Queen Isabel, the Princess
Katharine, Alice, and other Ladies, the Duke of Burgundy, and his Train.

K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met!

Unto our brother France, and to our sister,
Health and fair time of day; joy and good wishes
To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine;
And, as a branch and member of this royalty,
By whom this great assembly is contriv'd,
We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy;
And all princes French, and peers, health to you all!
Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face.

Most worthy brother England; fairly met:
So are you, princes English, every one.

Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England,
Of this good day and of this gracious meeting,
As we are now glad to behold your eyes;
Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them
Against the French, that met them in their bent,
The fatal balls of murdering basilisks:
The venom of such looks, we fairly hope,
Have lost their quality, and that this day
Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love.
urwick and Huntingdon, go with the king;
d take with you free power to ratify, gment, or alter, as your wisdoms best all see advantageous for our dignity,
y thing in or out of our demands,
d we'll consign thereto. Will you, fair sister,
with the princes, or stay here with us?
K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here
with us:
e is our capital demand, compr'nd thin the fore-rank of our articles.

\textit{Exeunt all but King Henry, Katharine,} and Alice.

K. Hen. Fair Katharine, and most fair, il you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms
ch as will enter at a lady's ear
d plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?
yath. Your majesty sail mock at me; I can speak your England.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine! if you will love soundly with your French heart, I will be d to hear you confess it brokenly with your glish tongue. Do you like me, Kate?
Kath. Pardonnez-moi, I cannot tell vat is 'like K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate, and you like an angel.

Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable à les Alice. Ouy, vrayement, sauf vostre grace, ainsi K. Hen. I said so, dear Katharine, and I must blush to affirm it.
Kath. O bon Dieu! les langues des hommes sont nes de tromperies.

\textit{K. Hen.} What says she, fair one? that the ques of men are full of deceits?
Alice. Ouy; dat de tongues de mens is be of deceits: dat is de princes.
\textit{K. Hen.} The princess is the better English-nan. I faith, Kate, my wooling is fit for thy derstanding: I am glad thou canst speak no der English; for if thou could'st, thou culd'st find me such a plain king that thou culd'st think I had sold my farm to buy my own. I know no ways to mince it in love, but dectly to say 'I love you'; then if you urge urther than to say 'Do you in faith?'
I ar out my suit. Give me your answer; i'
th, do: and so clap hands and a bargain.
yw say you, lady?
Kath. Sauf vostre honneur, me understand well.
K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses, to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid for the one, I have neither words nor asure, and for the other, I have no strength
ure, yet a reasonable measure in strength.
I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting
my saddle with my armour on my back, der the correction of bragging be it spoken, should quickly learn into a wife. Or if I might set for my love, or bound my horse for her sours, I could lay on like a butcher and sit jack-an-apes, never off. But, before God,
I cannot look greenly nor gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation;
only downright oaths, which I never use till ured, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sun-burning, that never looks in his glass for love of any thing he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier: if thou canst love me for this, take me;
if not, to say to thee that I shall die, is true;
but for thy love, by the Lord, no; yet I love y thee too. And while thou livest, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoined constancy, for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places; for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rime them-themselves into ladies' favours, they do always reason themselves out again. What! a speaker is but a prater; a rime is but a ballad. A good leg will fall, a straight back will stoop, a black beard will turn white, a curled pate will grow bald, a face fair will wither, a full eye will wax hollow;
but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon;
or rather the sun, and not the moon; for it shines bright and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me; and take me, a soldier; take a soldier, take a king. And what sayest thou then to my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it possible dat I sould love de enemy of France?

K. Hen. No; it is not possible you should love the enemy of France, Kate; but, in loving you, you should love the friend of France, for I love France so well that I will not part with a village of it; I will have it all mine: and Kate, when France is mine and I am yours, then yours is France and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat.

K. Hen. No, Kate! I will tell thee in French, which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off. Je qued sur le possession de France, et quand vous avez le possession de me—let me see, what then? Saint Denis be my speed!—donc vostre est France, et vous estes minee.
It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom as to speak so much more French: I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf vostre honneur, le Francois que vous parles est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel je parle.

K. Hen. No, faith, is't not, Kate; but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly false, must needs be granted to be much at one.
But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much
English? Canst thou love me?

Kath. I cannot tell.

K. Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate?
I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me;
and at night when you come into your closet
you'll question this gentlewoman about me;
and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart: but, good Kate, mock me mercifully; the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly. If ever thou be'st mine, Kate, as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt, I get thee with scrambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder. Shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French, half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? shall we not? what sayest thou, my fair flower-de-luce? 224

Kath. I do not know dat.

K. Hen. No; 'tis hereafter to know, but now to practise: do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy, and for my English moiety take the word of a king and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus belle Katharine du monde, mon très cher et divin déesse? 222

Kath. Your majesty ave fausse French enough to deceive demost soigne damoisele dat is en France.

K. Hen. Now, fie upon my false French! By mine honour, in true English, I love thee, Kate: by which honour I dare not swear thou lovest me; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage. Now beshrew my father's ambition! he was thinking of civil wars when he got me: therefore was I created with a stubbbon outside, with an aspect of iron, that when I come to woo ladies I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax the better I shall appear: my comfort is, that old age, that ill layer-up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face: thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better. And therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress; take me by the hand, and say 'Harry of England, I am thine': which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal, but I will tell thee aloud 'England is thine, Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine'; who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music; for thy voice is music, and thy English broken; therefore, queen of all, Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English: wilt thou have me?

Kath. Dat is as it sall please de roy mon père.

K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Den it sall also content me.

K. Hen. Upon that I kiss your hand, and I call you my queen. 271

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez!

Ma, voy, je ne veux point que vous abaissez votre grandeur, en baisant le main d'une votre indigne serviteur: excuses moy, je vous supplie, mon très puissant seigneur.

K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Kath. Les danses et damoiselles, pour être baisées devant leur noce, il n'est pas le coutume de France.

K. Hen. Madam my interpreter, what says she?

Alice. Dat it is not be fashion pour les ladies of France—I cannot tell vat is baiser en English.

K. Hen. To kiss.

Alice. Your majesty entendre bettre que moy.

K. Hen. It is not a fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say?

Alice. Ouy, vraiment.

K. Hen. O Kate! nice customs court'ry be great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak list of a country fashion: we are the makers of manners, Kate and the liberty that follows our places stops the mouth of all find-faults, as I will do yours, to upholding the nice fashion of your country; denying me a kiss: therefore, patiently an yielding.

Kisses her.

You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them than in the tongues of the French council; and the should sooner persuade Harry of England than a general petition of monarchs. Here come your father.

Re-enter the French King and Queen, Burgundy, Bedford, Gloucester, Exeter, Westmoreland, and other French and English Lords.

Bur. God save your majesty! My royal cousin teach you our princess English?

K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin how perfectly I love her; and that is goo English.

Bur. Is she not apt?

K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my con- dition is not smooth; so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in he that he will appear in his true likeness.

Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth if answer you for that. If you would conjure me, her, you must make a circle; if conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear make and blind. Can you blame her then, being maid yet rose over with the virgin crimson modesty, if she deny the appearance of a make blind boy in her naked seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to

K. Hen. Yet they do wink and yield, as love is blind and enforcing.

Bur. They are then excused, my lord, who they see not what they do.

K. Hen. Then, good my lord, teach your cousi to consent winking.

Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: if maids, well summered and warm kept, are little flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though the have their eyes; and then they will endure hangling, which before would not abide looking on.

K. Hen. This moral ties me over to time at a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, you come, in the latter end, and she must I blind too.

Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves.

K. Hen. It is so: and you may, some of yo thank love for my blindness, who cannot so many a fair French city for one fair French ma that stands in my way.

Fr. King. Yes, my lord, you see them perspec- tively, the cities turned into a maid; for th are all girdled with maiden walls that war hat never entered.

K. Hen. Shall Kate be my wife?

Fr. King. So please you.

K. Hen. I am content; so the maiden city you talk of may wait on her: so the maid th d in the way for my wish shall show me the path to my will.

r. King. We have consented to all terms of thine.

I. Hen. Is't so, my lords of England?
est. The king hath granted every article:
didst daughter first, and then in sequel all,

ordring to their firm proposed natures.

r. Only he hath not yet subscribed this:

ere your majesty demands, that the King of France,
having any occasion to write for matter

rant, shall name your highness in this form, with this addition in French, Notre très cher Henry, Roy d'Angleterre, Héritier de France;

thus in Latin, Praeclarissimus filius nostet

ricus, Rex Anglie, et Hares Franciae. 370

r. King. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied,
your request shall make me let it pass.

I. Hen. I pray you then, in love and dear alliance,

that one article rank with the rest;

thereupon give me your daughter.

r. King. Take her, fair son; and from her blood raise up
e to me; that the contending kingdoms

France and England, whose very shores look pale
h envy of each other's happiness, cease their hatred, and this dear conjunction of neighbourhood and Christian-like accord their sweet bosoms, that never war advance bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair

France.

ll. Amen!

l. Hen. Now welcome, Kate: and bear me witness all,

That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen.

Flourish.

Q. Isa. God, the best maker of all marriages,

Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one!

As man and wife, being two, are one in love,

So be there 'twixt your kingdoms such a spousal

That never may ill office, or fell jealousy,

Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage,

Thrust in between the pactions of these kingdoms,

To make divorce of their incorporate league;

That English may as French, French Englishmen,

Receive each other! God speak this Amen!

All. Amen!

K. Hen. Prepare we for our marriage: on which day,

My Lord of Burgundy, we'll take your oath,

And all the peers', for surety of our leagues.

Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me;

And may our oaths well kept and prosperous be!

Sennet. Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

Thus far, with rough and all-unable pen,

Our boding author hath pursu'd the story;

In little room confining mighty men,

Mangling by starts the full course of their glory.

Small time, but in that small most greatly liv'd

This star of England: Fortune made his sword,

By which the world's best garden he achiev'd,

And of it left his son imperial lord.

Henry the Sixth, in infant bands crown'd King

Of France and England, did this king succeed;

Whose state so many had the managing,

That they lost France and made his England bleed:

Which oft our stage hath shown; and, for their sake,

In your fair minds let this acceptance take.

THE FIRST PART OF KING HENRY
THE SIXTH.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

King Henry the Sixth.
Duke of Gloucester, Uncle to the King, and Protector.
Duke of Bedford, Uncle to the King, Regent of France.
Thomas Beaufort, Duke of Exeter, Great-uncle to the King.
Henry Beaufort, Great-uncle to the King, Bishop of Winchester, and afterwards Cardinal.
John Beaufort, Earl, afterwards Duke, of Somerset.
Earl of Warwick.
Earl of Salisbury.
Earl of Suffolk.
Lord Talbot, afterwards Earl of Shrewsbury.
John Talbot, his Son.
Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March.

Lords, Warders of the Tower, Heralds, Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and Attendants.

SCENE.—Partly in England, and partly in France.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Westminster Abbey.

Dead March. Enter the Funeral of King Henry the Fifth; attended on by the Dukes of Bedford, Gloucester, and Exeter; the Earl of Warwick, the Bishop of Winchester, Heralds, etc.

Bed. Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!
Comets, importing change of times and states,
Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky,
And with them scourge the bad revolting stars
That have consented unto Henry's death!
King Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long!
England ne'er lost a king of so much worth.

Glou. England ne'er had a king until his time.

Virtue he had, deserving to command:
His brandish'd sword did blind men with his beams;
His arms spread wider than a dragon's wings;
His sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire,
More dazzled and drove back his enemies
Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces.

What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech.
He ne'er lift up his hand but conquered.

Exe. We mourn in black; why mourn we in blood?

Henry is dead and never shall revive.
Upon a wooden coffin we attend,
And death's dishonourable victory
We with our stately presence glorify,
Like captives bound to a triumphant car.
What! shall we curse the planets of mishap
That plotted thus our glory's overthrow?
Or shall we think the subtle-witted French
 Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him,
By magic verses have contriv'd his end?

Win. He was a king bless'd of the King kings.

Unto the French the dreadful judgment-day
So dreadful will not be as was his sight.
The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought:
The church's prayers made him so prosperous.

Glou. The church! where is it? had it

The churchmen pray'd
His thread of life had not so soon decay'd:
None do you like but an effeminate prince,
Whom, like a school-boy, you may over-awe

Enter a third Messenger.

Third Mess. My gracious lords, to add to your laments,

Wherewith you now bedew King Henry’s hearse,
I must inform you of a dismal fight
Betwixt the stout Lord Talbot and the French.

Win. What! wherein Talbot overcame? Is’t so?

Third Mess. O, no! wherein Lord Talbot was o’erthrown:
The circumstance I’ll tell you more at large.
The tenth of August last this dreadful lord,
Retiring from the siege of Orleans,
Having full scarce six thousand in his troop,
By three and twenty thousand of the French
Was round encompassed and set upon.
No leisure had he to enrank his men;
He wanted pikes to set before his archers;
Instead whereof sharp stakes pluck’d out of hedges
They pitched in the ground confusedly,
To keep the horsemen off from breaking in.
More than three hours the fight continued;
Where valiant Talbot above human thought
Enacted wonders with his sword and lance.
Hundreds he sent to hell, and none durst stand him;
Here, there, and everywhere, enrag’d he flew.
The French exclaim’d the devil was in arms;
All the whole army stood agazed on him.
His soldiers, spying his undaunted spirit,
A Talbot! a Talbot! cried out amain,
And rush’d into the bowels of the battle.
Here had the conquest fully been seal’d up,
If Sir John Fastolfe had not play’d the coward.
He, being in the vaward, plac’d behind
With purpose to relieve and follow them,
Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke.
Hence grew the general wreck and massacre:
Enclosed were they with their enemies.
A base Walloon, to win the Dauphin’s grace,
Thrust Talbot with a spear into the back;
Whom all France, with their chief assembled strength,
Durst not presume to look once in the face.

Bed. Is Talbot slain? then I will slay myself,
For living idly here in pomp and ease
Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,
Unto his dastard foe men is betray’d.

Third Mess. O, no! he lives; but I took prisoner,
And Lord Scales with him, and Lord Hungerford:
Most of the rest slaughter’d or took likewise.

Bed. His ransom there is none but I shall pay:
I’ll hale the Dauphin headlong from his throne;
His crown shall be the ransom of my friend;
Four of their lords I’ll change for one of ours.
Farewell, my masters; to my task will I; But fires in France forthwith I am to make, To keep our good Saint George’s feast withal; Ten thousand soldiers with me I will take, Whose bloody deeds shall make all Europe quake.

Third Scene. So you had need; for Orleans is besieged; The English army is grown weak and faint; The Earl of Salisbury craveth supply, And hardly keeps his men from mutiny, Since they, so few, watch such a multitude.

Exc. Remember, lords, your oaths to Henry sworn, Either to quell the Dauphin utterly, Or bring him in obedience to your yoke.

Bed. I do remember it; and here take my leave, To go about my preparation. Exit.

Glou. I’ll to the Tower with all the haste I can, To view the artillery and munition; And then I will proclaim young Henry king. Exit.

Exc. To Eltham will I, where the young king is, Being ordain’d his special governor; And for his safety there I’ll best devise. Exit.

Win. Each hath his place and function to attend: I am left out; for me nothing remains. But long I will not be Jack-out-of-office. The king from Eltham I intend to steal, And sit at chiefest stern of public weal. Exeunt.

Scene II.—France. Before Orleans.

Flourish. Enter CHARLES, with his Forces; ALENCON, REGNIER, and Others.

Cha. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens
So in the earth, to this day is not known. Late did he shine upon the English side; Now we are victors; upon us he smiles. What towns of any moment but we have! At pleasure here we lie near Orleans; Otherwhiles the famish’d English, like pale ghosts, Faintly besiege us one hour in a month.

Alen. They want their porridge and their fat bull-beeves:
Either they must be dieted like mules 30 And have their provender tied to their mouths, Or pitious they will look, like drowned mice.

Regi. Let’s raise the siege: why live we hither here? Talbot is taken, whom we wont to fear: Remaineth none but mad-brain’d Salisbury, And he may well in fretting spend his gall; Nor men nor money hath he to make war.

Cha. Sound, sound alarum! we will rush on them.

Now for the honour of the forlorn French! Him I forgive my death that killeth me 20 When he sees me go back one foot or fly.

Exeunt.

Alerums. Excursions; afterwards a retreat. Re-enter CHARLES, ALENCON, REIGNIER, and Others.

Cha. Who ever saw the like? what men have I! Dogs! cowards! dastards! I would ne’er have fled
But that they left me ’midst my enemies.

Regi. Salisbury is a desperate homicide;
He fighteth as one weary of his life: The other lords, like lions wanting food, Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

Alen. Froidseart, a countryman of ours, record England all Oliviers and Rowlands bred; During the time Edward the Third did reign, More truly now may this be verified; For none but Samsons and Goliases It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten! Lean raw-bon’d rascals! who would e’er suppose They had such courage and audacity?

Cha. Let’s leave this town; for they are mad brain’d slaves, And hunger will enforce them to be more eage. Of old I know them; rather with their teeth The walls they’ll tear down than forsake the siege. Regi. I think, by some odd gimmals or devil Their arms are set like clocks, still to strike or Else ne’er could they hold out so as they do. By my consent, we’ll e’en let them alone.

Alen. Be it so.

Enter the Bastard of Orleans.

Cha. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us. Bast. Methinks your looks are sad, your che appall’d: Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence Be not dismay’d, for succour is at hand: A holy maid hither with me I bring, Which by a vision sent to her from heaven Ordained is to raise this tedious siege, And drive the English forth the bounds of France The spirit of deep prophecy she hath, Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome; What’s past and what’s to come she can desc. Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my words, For they are certain and unfallible.

Cha. Go, call her in. Exit Bastard.

But first, to try her skill, Regnier, stand thou as Dauphin in my place: Question her proudly; let thy looks be stern, By this means shall we sound what skill she hath.

Retire

Re-enter the Bastard of Orleans, with JOAN L PUCELLE and Others.

Regi. Fair maid, is’t thou wilt do these wondrous feats? Joan. Regnier, is’t thou that thinkest to beguile me? Where is the Dauphin? Come, come from behind; I know thee well, though never seen before. Be not amaz’d, there’s nothing hid from me: In private will I talk with thee apart. Stand back, you lords, and give us leave awhile. Regi. She takes upon her bravely at first call Joan. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd’s daughter, My wit untrain’d in any kind of art. Heaven and our Lady gracious hath it pleas’d To shine on my contemptible estate: Lo! whilst I waited on my tender lambs, And to sun’s parching heat display’d my cheeks God’s mother deigned to appear to me, And in a vision full of majesty Will’d me to leave my base vocation And free my country from calamity:
and she promised and assur’d success;
plete glory she reveal’d herself;
whereas I was black and swart before,
it these clear rays which she infus’d on me,
beauty am I bless’d with which you see.
re what question thou canst possible will answer unpremeditated:
young try by combat, if thou dar’st,
shall find that I exceed my sex.
ave on this, thou shalt be fortunate me for thy war-like mate.
Theo hast astonish’d me with thy high this proof I’ll of thy valour make,
gle combat thou shalt buckle with me,
if thou vanquishest, thy words are true;
wise I renounce all confidence.
I am prepar’d: here is my keen-edg’d
’d with five flower-de-locus on each side;
which at Touraine, in Saint Katharine’s
if a great deal of old iron I chose forth.
Then come, o’ God’s name; I fear no
And while I live, I’ll ne’er fly from a man.
Here they fight, and JOAN LA PUCCELL E overcomes.
Stay, stay thy hands! thou art an Amazon, fightest with the sword of Deborah.
Christ’s mother helps me, else I were me thy servant and not sovereign be:
the French Dauphin sueth to thee thus:
I must not yield to any rites of love,
your profession’s sacred from above:
I have chased all thy foes from hence,
ill think upon a recompense.
Meantime look gracious on thy prostrate Hail.
My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.
Doubtless he shrives this woman to her ne’er could he so long protract his speech.
Shall we disturb him, since he keeps no mean?
He may mean more than we poor men do know:
women are shrewd tempters with their
tongues.
My lord, where are you? what devise you on?
If we give over Orleans, or no?
Why, no, I say: distrustful recreants!
 till the last gasp; I shall be your
What she says I’ll confirm; we’ll fight it out.
Assign’d am I to be the English scourge.
ights the siege assuredly I’ll raise:
Saint Martin’s summer, helicon days,
I have entered into these wars.
ry is like a circle in the water, never ceaseth to enlarge itself
by broad spreading it disperse to nought.
Henry’s death the English circle ends;
Dispersed are the glories it included.
Now am I like that proud insulting ship
Which Cesar and his fortune bare at once.
Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?
Thou with an eagle art inspired then.
Helen, the mother of great Constantine,
Nor yet Saint Philip’s daughters were like thee.
Bright star of Venus, fall’n down on the earth,
How may I reverently worship thee enough?
Leave off delays and let us raise the siege.
Woman, do what thou canst to save our honours;
Drive them from Orleans and be immortaliz’d.
Presently we’ll try. Come, let’s away about it:
No prophet will I trust if she prove false.

SCENE III.—London. Before the Tower.
Enter, at the gates, the Duke of Gloucester, with his Servicingmen, in blue coats.
Glou. I am come to survey the Tower this day;
Since Henry’s death, I fear, there is conveyance.
Where be these warders that they wait not here?
Open the gates! ’Tis Gloucester that calls.
First Ward. Within. Who’s there that knocks so imperiously?
First Serv. It is the noble Duke of Gloucester.
Second Ward. Within. Who’s he, you may not be let in.
First Serv. Villains, answer you so the lord protector?
First Ward. Within. The Lord protect him!
so we answer him:
We do no otherwise than we are will’d.
Glou. Who willed you? or whose will stands but mine?
There’s none protector of the realm but I.
Break up the gates, I’ll be your warrantize.
Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms?

GLOUCESTER’S Men rush at the Tower gates, and WOODVILE the Lieutenant speaks
within.
Wood. What noise is this? what traitors have we here?
Glou. Lieutenant, is it you whose voice I hear?
Open the gates! here’s Gloucester that would enter.
Wood. Have patience, noble duke; I may not open:
The Cardinal of Winchester forbids:
from him I have express commandement
That thou nor none of thine shall be let in.
Glou. Faint-hearted Woodvile, prizest
me?
Arrogant Winchester, that haughty prelate, Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne’er could brook?
Thou art no friend to God or to the king:
Open the gates, or I’ll shut thee out shortly.
First Serv. Open the gates unto the lord
protector,
Or we’ll burst them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter WINCHESTER, attended by Servingmen in tawny coats.
Win. How now, ambitious Humphrey! what means this!
Glou. Peeld priest, dost thou command me to be shut out?
Win. I do, thou most usurping proditor, and not protector, of the king or realm.
Glou. Stand back, thou manifest conspirator, thou that contriv'est to murder our dead lord; thou that giv'st whores indulgences to sin: I'll canvass thee in thy broad cardinal's hat, if thou proceed in this thy insolence.
Win. Nay, stand thou back; I will not budge a foot:
This be Damascan, be thou cursed Cain, to slay thy brother Abel, if thou wilt.
Glou. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back:
Thy scarlet robes as a child's bearing-cloth I'll use to carry thee out of this place.
Win. Do what thou dar'st; I beard thee to thy face.
Glou. What! am I dar'd and bearded to my face? Draw, men, for all this privileged place; blue coats to tawny coats. Priest, beware your beard!
Gloucester and his Men attack the Cardinal. I mean to tug it and to cuff you soundly. Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat, in spite of pope or dignities of church; here by the cheeks I'll drag thee up and down.
Win. Gloucester, thou 'lt answer this before the pope.
Glou. Winchester goose! I cry, a rope! a rope! Now beat them hence; why do you let them stay? Thee I'll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep's array. Out, tawny coats! out, scarlet hypocrite!
Here Gloucester's Men beat out the Cardinal's Men, and enter in the hurly-burly the Mayor of London and his Officers.
May. Fie, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates, thus contumeliously should break the peace!
Glou. Peace, mayor! thou know'st little of my wrongs.
Here's Beaufort, that regards nor God nor king, hath here distrain'd the Tower to his use.
Win. Here's Gloucester, a foe to citizens; one that still motions war and never peace, overcharging your free purses with large fines, that seeks to overthrow religion. Because he is protector of the realm, and would have armour here out of the Tower, to crown himself king and suppress the prince.
Glou. I will not answer thee with words, but blows. Here they skirmish again.
May. Nought rests for me in this tumultuous strife
But to make open proclamation. Come, officer; as loud as e'er thou canst, cry.
Off. All manner of men, assembled here in arms this day against God's peace and the king's, we charge and command you, in his highness' name, to repair to your several dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle, or use any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of death.
Glou. Cardinal, I'll be no breaker of the law; but we shall meet and break our minds at large.
Win. Gloucester, we will meet; to thy cost, be sure:
Thy heart-blood I will have for this day's work.
May. I'll call for clubs if you will not arm: This cardinal's more haughty than the devil.
Glou. Mayor, farewell: thou dost but wish thou may'st.
Win. Abominable Gloucester! guard thy head, for I intend to have it ere long.
Exeunt severally, Gloucester and Win.
May. See the coast clear'd, and then we depart.
Good God! these nobles should such storms bear; I myself fight not once in forty year.
Scene IV. — France. Before Orleans.
Enter, on the walls, the Master-Gunner and his lad.
M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'st how Orleans besieged, and how the English have the suburbs won. Boy. Father, I know; and oft have shot them, Howe'er unfortunate I miss'd my aim.
M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be told by me: Chief master-gunner am I of this town; something I must do to procure me grace. The prince's espials have informed me how the English, in the suburbs close intrenched, Wont through a secret grate of iron bars In yonder tower to overpeer the city, and thence discover how with most advanta They may vex us with shot or with assault. To intercept this inconvenience, a piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac'd; and fully even these three days have I watered If I could see them. Now, boy, do thou wait For I can stay no longer. If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word; and thou shalt find me at the governor's. Boy. Father, I warrant you; take you no care; I'll never trouble you if I may spy them. Exeunt.
Enter, on the turrets, the Lords Salisbury a Talbot; Sir William Glansdale, Thomas Gargrave, and Others.
Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy! again return How wert thou handled being prisoner, or by what means gott'st thou be released? Discourse, I prithee, on this turret's top.
Tal. The Duke of Bedford had a prisoner Called the brave Lord Ponton de Santrailles; for him I was exchange'd and ransomed. But with a baser man of arms by far once in contempt they would have barter'd in Which I disdain'd scorn'd, and craved death. Rather than I would be so vile-esteem'd. In fine, redeem'd I was as I desir'd. But, O! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my heart: Whom with my bare fists I would execute If I now had him brought into my power. Sal. Yet tell'st thou not how thouwert enta'd? Tal. With scoffs and scorns and contumelious taunts. In open market-place produc'd they me, To be a public spectacle to all: Here, said they, is the terror of the French,
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord! the French have gather'd head:

The Dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd,

A holy prophetess new risen up

Is come with a great power to raise the siege.

Here Salisbury lifteth himself up and groans,

Tal. Hear, hear, how dying Salisbury doth groan!

It irrits his heart he cannot be reveng'd.

Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you;
Pucelle or puzzel, dolphin or dogfish,
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels
And make a quagmire of your mingled brains.
Convey me Salisbury into his tent,
And then we'll try what these dastard Frenchmen dare.

Exeunt, bearing out the bodies.

Scene V.—The Same. Before one of the Gates.

Alarum. Skirmishings. Talbot pursues the Dauphin, drives him in and exit; then enter Joan la Pucelle, driving Englishmen before her, and exit after them. Then re-enter Talbot.

Tal. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them;
A woman clad in armour chaseth them.

Re-enter Joan la Pucelle.

Here, here she comes. I'll have a bout with thee;
Devil, or devil's dam, I'll conjure thee:
Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a witch,
And straightforward give thy soul to him thou serv'st.

Joan. Come, come; 'tis only I that must disgrace thee.

They fight.

Tal. Heavens, can you suffer hell so to prevail?
My breast I'll burst with straining of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
But I will chastise this high-minded strumpet.

They fight again.

Joan. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet come:
I must go victual Orleans forthwith.

A short alarum: then enter the town with soldiers.

O'ertake me if thou canst; I scorn thy strength.
Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men;
Help Salisbury to make his testament:
This day is ours, as many more shall be. Exit.

Tal. My thoughts are whirled like a potter's wheel;
I know not where I am, nor what I do:
A witch, by fear, not force, like Hannibal,
Drives back our troops and conquers as she lists:
So becs with smoke, and doves with noisome stench,
Are from their hives and houses driven away.
They call'd us for our fierceness English dogs;
Now, like to wholes, we crying run away.

A short alarum.

Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight
Or tear the lions out of England's coat;
Renounce your soil, give sheep in lions' stead:
Sheep run not half so treacherous from the wolf,
Or horse or oxen from the leopard,
As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.

Alarum. Another skirmish.
It will not be: retire into your trenches:
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,
For none would strike a stroke in his revenge.
Pucelle is enter'd into Orleans.
In spite of us or aught that we could do,
O! would I were to die with Salisbury.
The shame hereof will make me hide my head.
Allarum. Retreat. Exeunt Talbot and his Forces.

SCENE VI.—The Same.

Flourish. Enter, on the walls, Joan la Pucelle, Charles, Reignier, Alençon, and Soldiers. Joan. Advance our waving colours on the walls;
Rescu'd is Orleans from the English.
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.
Cha. Divinest creature, Astarte's daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this success?
Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next.
France, triumph in thy glorious prophetess!
Recover'd is the town of Orleans:
More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state.
Reig. Why ring not out the bells aloud throughout the town?
Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires
And feast and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the joy that God hath given us.
Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy,
When they shall hear how we have play'd the men.
Cha. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won:
For which I will divide my crown with her;
And all the priests and friars in my realm Shall in procession sing her endless praise.
A statelier pyramid to her I'll rear Than Rhodope's or Memphis' ever was:
In memory of her when she is dead, Her ashes, in an urn more precious Than the rich-jewell'd cof fer of Darius, Transported shall be at high festivals Before the kings and queens of France. No longer on Saint Denis will we cry, But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint. Come in, and let us banquet royally After this golden day of victory.

Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Before Orleans.

Enter to the gates, a French Sergeant, and two Sentinels.

Serg. Sirs, take your places and be vigilant.
If any noise or soldier you perceive
Near to the walls, by some apparent sign
Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.
First Sent. Sergeant, you shall. Exit Sergeant.

Thus are poor sentinels,
When others sleep upon their quiet beds, Constrain'd to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundy, and Forces, with scaling-ladders; their drums beating a dead march.

Tal. Lord Regent, and redoubted Burgundy, By whose approach the regions of Artois, Walloon, and Picardy, are friends to us,
Call ye the war-like Talbot, for his acts
So much applauded through the realm of France?
_Tal._ Here is the Talbot: who would speak with him?

_Mess._ The virtuous lady, Countess of Auvergne,
With modesty admiring thy renown,
By me entreats, great lord, thou would'st vouchsafe
To visit her poor castle where she lies,
That she may boast she hath beheld the man
Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

_Bur._ Is it even so? Nay, then, I see our wars
Will turn unto a peaceful comic sport,
When ladies crave to be encounter'd with.
You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit.

_Tal._ Ne'er trust me then; for when a world of men
Could not prevail with all their oratory,
Yet hath a woman's kindness over-rul'd,
And therefore tell her, I return great thanks,
And in submission will attend on her.
Will not your honours bear me company?

_Bed._ No, truly, it is more than manners will;
And I have heard it said, unbidden guests
Are often welcomest when they are gone.

_Tal._ Well then, alone, since there's no remedy,
I mean to prove this lady's courtesy.
Come hither, captain.

_Whippers._

You perceive my mind.

_Cap._ I do, my lord, and mean accordingly.

Exeunt.

Scene III. — Auvergne. Court of the Castle.

_Enter the Countess and her Porter._

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge;
And when you have done so, bring the keys to me.

Port. Madam, I will.

_Exit._

Count. The plot is laid: if all things fall out right,
I shall as famous be by this exploit
As Scythian Tomyris by Cyrus' death.
Great is the rumour of this dreadful knight,
And his achievements of no less account:
Fain would mine eyes be witness with mine ears,
To give their censure of these rare reports.

_Enter Messenger and Talbot._

Mess. Madam,
According as your ladyship desir'd,
By message crav'd, so is Lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome. What? is this the man?

Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the scourge of France?
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad
That with his name the mothers still their babes?
I see report is fabulous and false:
I thought I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect,
And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.
Alas! this is a child, a silly dwarf:
It cannot be this weak and writhed shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies.

_Tal._ Madam, I have been bold to trouble you;
But since your ladyship is not at leisure,
I'll sort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now? Go ask him whither he goes.
Scene IV.—London. The Temple Garden.

Enter the Earls of Somerset, Suffolk, a Warwick; Richard Plantagenet, Vernon, and a Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords and gentlemen, what means this silence?

Dare no man answer in a case of truth?

Suf. Within the Temple hall we were too loud.
The garden here is more convenient.

Plan. Then say at once if I maintain'd the truth,
Or else was wrangling Somerset in the error?
Suf. Faith, I have been a traitor in the law,
And never yet could frame my will to it;
And therefore frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my Lord of Warwick, the between us.

War. Between two hawks, which flies to higher pitch;
Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth;
Between two blades, which bears the better temper;
Between two horses, which doth bear him best.
Suf. How say you, madam? are you now persuaded
That Talbot is but shadow of himself?

This are his substance, sinews, arms, and strength,
With which he yoketh your rebellious necks,
Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns,
And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victory to Talbot, pardon my abuse;
I find thou art no less than fame hath bruited,
And more than may be gather'd by thy shape.
Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath;
For I am sorry that with reverence
I did not entertain thee as thou art.
